practice of truthfulness, continence, abstention from greed and the exploitation of others for one's own gain; niyama, mental and physical purity, contented acceptance of one's lot in life, performance of ritual worship, practice of japam, devotion to God, study of the scriptures; asana, choice of a suitable place and a correct posture for meditation; pranayama, control of the vital energy through the practice of breathing exercises; pratyahara, withdrawal of the mind from sense-objects; dharana, holding the mind within a centre of spiritual consciousness inside the body or fixing it upon a divine form; dhyana, an unbroken flow of thought toward the object of concentration (this is often compared to pouring oil from one vessel to another in an unbroken stream); samadhi, the superconscious state in which man experiences his identity with the Atman.

Samadhi is the goal of the Vedantist and of many other practising mystics; Buddhists call it Nirvana and Christians the Mystic Union (see MYSTICISM). There are degrees of samadhi – in the lower samadhi, some sense of duality still remains – but samadhi is always a state of superconsciousness in which, to quote Patanjali, 'the true nature of the object shines forth, not distorted by the mind of the perceiver'.

For convenience, the yogas have to be described one by one, but of course they are not to be thought of as mutually exclusive. Indeed nobody can practise any one yoga to the absolute exclusion of the others. To call oneself a bhakti, a jnani, a karma or a raja yogi is merely to define one's general approach to yoga. But discrimination without devotion is ultimately sterile, devotion without discrimination must degenerate into shallow emotionalism, some meditation is necessary even for the most active, and no human being can avoid action altogether. A classical simile likens man's character to a bird in flight: love and knowledge are its two wings, meditation is its tail.

(See also BREATH; HINDUISM; YOGA.)

CHRISTOPHER ISHERWOOD

Vedas

Hindu sacred texts, consisting primarily of the Rig-Veda, Yajur-Veda, Sama-Veda and Atharva-Veda; incorporating three main strata, in order of date, the Samhitas (hymns), the Brahmanas (manuals of ritual and prayer) and the Upanishads (philosophical treatises); the language of the Vedas is Vedic, a form of Sanskrit; the word veda means 'wisdom' or 'knowledge'.
See HINDUISM; INDIA; VEDANTA.

VEDDAS

THE VEDDAS, a primitive forest tribe of Ceylon, and the numerous ethnic groups of similar physical appearance represent one of the most archaic surviving racial types of Asia. They are of slight build and small stature, with dark brown skin colour and wavy or curly black hair. The forehead is low, the eyes are deep set under heavy ridges, the nose is short and broad and often depressed at the root, the lips are full and the chin tends to be receding. Some of the jungle tribes of Southern India closely resemble the Veddas, and it can be safely assumed that all these populations are remnants of an ethnic stratum which during the late Stone Age extended over large parts of Asia.

When at the end of the 19th century the Veddas were first studied by Western scholars, they were found to live solely by hunting and collecting, dwelling in caves surrounded by jungle. Excavations proved that these caves had been inhabited by people of the late Stone Age, and much points to the assumption that the Veddas are the direct descendants of the Stone Age cave-dwellers whose roughly flaked stone implements lie only a few inches below the surface. The cultural evidence from these cave deposits coincides largely with what is known about the style of life of the modern Veddas, and this too suggests that in the wooded highlands of Ceylon there was an unbroken cultural sequence from the Stone Age to the present time.

The traditional style of Vedda life persisted until the first quarter of the 20th century, when the British anthropologist C. G. Seligman undertook a study of this ancient people. The majority of Veddas had already been partly assimilated to the Sinhalese peasantry, but there were still groups of Veddas who led a semi-nomadic life in the forest and used rock shelters as habitations. The average Vedda community consisted then of about five families, who shared the rights of hunting over a tract of land within which they gathered honey, edible roots and tubers, fished in streams and used natural rock shelters. But the whole of the community did not commonly move about its territory as one band.

Each group exercised property rights over a clearly defined territory, and there was a tradition that in the old times an intruder entering the land of another group without the owners' permission would have faced death. Membership of a group descended through the female line, and it was customary for a man to join his wife's group on marriage and live in their territory. As the membership and size of a group changed from generation to generation territorial boundaries also changed, and the whole system of land holding was extremely elastic.

As the inroads of peasant cultivators restricted the hunting grounds of the Veddas, many of them had to seek new means of subsistence. Most took to a simple form of shifting cultivation, clearing small patches in the forest and planting millet, maize and various vegetable crops. They also acquired some cattle, and gradually adapted themselves to the way of life of small-scale cultivators. Today there are no true forest Veddas left, and the Ceylonese government has provided facilities to aid the process of transition from semi-nomadic hunting and food-gathering to settled agriculture. But although there is no longer an essential difference between the economies of the Veddas and other backward rural communities, the Veddas remain culturally outside the society of the Buddhist Sinhalese.

Corpses Left in Caves

When they were first studied, more than half a century ago, the religious practices and beliefs of the various groups of Veddas proved to be of great complexity. It was impossible to isolate any body of beliefs which could be regarded as the original Vedda religion: while the material aspects of Vedda life seemed to reflect a fairly accurate picture of conditions among South Asian food-gatherers of the Stone Age, the same could hardly be claimed of the religious phenomena met among the Veddas. Some customs, however, are certainly of considerable antiquity. For instance, the funeral practices of the forest Veddas present a striking contrast to Sinhalese practice. When a man or woman died from natural causes the body was left in the cave or rock shelter where the death occurred, and was covered with leaves and branches. The cave was then abandoned for some time but could be reoccupied later, when the remaining bones were thrown out unceremoniously. An alternative method of disposal of corpses was burial in a simple grave dug by the brothers or other close kinsmen of the deceased. While most graves were not marked and no objects of any kind were buried with the departed, the spirits of the dead were treated with great respect and were given offerings of food.

There is a belief, still current among Veddas, that for a short time the spirit of a dead man remains near the site where he died, but later on joins the company of the ancestor spirits. These spirits are known as yakku, the same term which the Sinhalese employ for demons. The Veddas believe that life in the realm of the yakku remains the same for all time: that is, they are not reborn in a different shape. Although there are male and female spirits they are 'like the wind' and do not have sexual relations. Some Veddas say that all yakku lead a more or less similar life, but others believe that even among the yakku 'good people' occupy a higher and 'bad people' a lower position. The good yakku are helpful towards the living, while bad yakku are liable to harm their surviving kinsmen. Acts of violence, even the harsh treatment of a dog, annoy the ancestor spirits and endanger those who have aroused their wrath.

Distinct from the ancestor spirits are spiritual beings also described as yakku but named according to localities. These yakku have the character of local deities and are associated with certain features of the landscape. Some of them are believed to control wild animals; when Veddas were still mainly hunters, they used to cut off the head of whatever game they had killed and leave it in the forest as an offering to the gods of the chase.

In most Vedda communities there is one man who has the power and the knowledge to establish contact with the ancestor spirits and the nature deities. At ceremonies when the spirits of the dead are given offerings of food, one of them may possess this priest and, speaking through his mouth in hoarse guttural accents, declare that he approves the offerings and that he will assist his kinsmen in hunting, often stating the direction in which a hunting party should go. Each priest trains his

The Veddas are one of the oldest surviving racial types of Asia, preserving elements of the culture of their cave-dwelling ancestors

Jeffry Craig

Seligman: The Veddas, 1911

Seligman: The Veddas, 1911

Illustrations from C. G. Seligman's The Veddas (1911) Left To determine the cause of an illness, a Vedda recites an invocation: when the spirit causing the sickness is named the bow should swing to and fro Below left Group of Veddas: semi-nomadic hunters, they would offer a portion of each kill to the spirits successor, and the pupil learns to repeat the invocations of spirits recited at ceremonies.

The method of invoking spirits is essentially the same in all Vedda ceremonies: an invocation is sung by the priest and often by the onlookers, while the priest dances round the offering prepared for the spirits. Special veneration is accorded to two spirits, known by individual names, who are believed to exercise control over other spirits and who must sanction any assistance which those under their authority give to men. These two spirits were specially invoked in order to obtain game, and when hunters had been successful, pieces of flesh from the neck and chest of the animal were roasted in the ashes of a fire and offered to them before being consumed by the Veddas. It was believed that if part of the meat was not presented to the spirits, the hunters would experience bad luck in future and might even be attacked by wild animals.

Contacts between Veddas and Sinhalese must occasionally have occurred ever since the latter, emigrants from Northern India, settled in Southern Ceylon in the 6th century BC. As free hunters the Veddas were accorded a high status by a society which greatly valued martial qualities, and traditions tell of various unions between members of the Sinhalese nobility and Vedda girls. The memory of such associations is reflected also in Sinhalese mythology. Kataragama, one of the most renowned Sinhalese deities, who presides over an important temple and centre of pilgrimage, is said to have fallen in love with Valliamma, the daughter of a Vedda chief; to this day Valliamma is worshipped as Kataragama's mistress and has a shrine of her own in the temple grounds, which is not inferior to the shrine of Kataragama's legitimate divine consort. Thus the Veddas, though gradually losing their tribal identity and merging with the Sinhalese peasantry, continue to figure in folk beliefs and mythology as the oldest indigenous inhabitants of the island.

C. VON FÜRER-HAIMENDORF

Within the darkness of the pharaohs' tombs, 'mummies' filled with Nile mud and planted with corn sprouted with new life: the decay and resurrection of the seed-corn, personified in a vegetation god, was invested by ancient man with a deep religious significance

VEGETATION SPIRITS

THE EARLIEST human beings known to us, those of the Paleolithic or Old Stone Age (c 30,000 to 10,000 BC), are generally designated 'food gatherers' by anthropologists; for they either found their food in the form of nuts, berries and roots, or they hunted animals for it. During the succeeding Neolithic or New Stone Age a great transformation of economic activity occurred, which has aptly been called the 'Neolithic Revolution'. Man gradually changed from being a 'food gatherer' to being a 'food producer'. The two basic factors in this change were the invention of agriculture and the domestication of animals. The origins of agriculture have been much debated by scholars; but no generally agreed conclusions have yet been established about how and where this momentous change in human economy was first achieved. We can only speculate about the likely places (for example, the ancient Near East), where wild corn-bearing grasses might first have been purposely planted and tended by man.

This revolution in his economy had a profound effect upon man's life and thought. It led to the establishment of settled communities, from which emerged the first towns and cities; it prompted the formation of the first calendars, since seed-time and harvest had to be predicted; and it promoted the invention of writing and a scribal class, as agrarian transactions grew more complicated and required the keeping of accounts and records. The beginnings of all these institutions have been discerned in the ancient Near East.

But the change to an agrarian way of life also deeply affected man's religious ideas. As an agriculturist, he became intimately involved with the annual cycle of Nature's life. He realized that his existence and well-being depended upon the yearly miracle of the germination of the seed-corn, upon its steady growth and the increase of its fruits until harvest. The process of the seasons took on a new significance for him. He saw it as an annual drama of life and death. For in the Near Eastern lands the cycle of Nature's year has the aspect of a dramatic contest between the forces of life and death. Spring comes quickly, clothing the landscape in verdant green, bedecked by flowers. Under the increasing power of the sun the corn quickly ripens to harvest. But as summer advances and no rain falls, vegetation withers and dies, and the ground seems cursed with sterility and death. Yet from this seeming death, vegetation awakens again next spring to a new life, and the miracle of Nature's resurrection provides mankind once more with food.

Son and Lover

But the early peoples of this area saw in the annual rebirth of vegetation a significance deeper than that of the assurance of their food. For them the truth it intimated was twofold, and inevitably they interpreted it in mythic imagery. The idea of a 'Great Goddess', who was the source of all living things, seems already to have found expression in the Paleolithic era in the many carvings of the female form, showing the maternal attributes grossly exaggerated while the facial features were undelineated (see EARTH; FACELESS GODDESSES; MOTHER GODDESS). This primitive conception of the 'Great Goddess' was naturally associated with the earth, from which all forms of vegetation grew and within which the dead were laid. The vegetation was thus the offspring of the Earth Mother, and it was easily personified as a divine spirit that manifested itself in the trees and grass, and in the corn.

Hence developed the idea of a divine couple who embodied the fecundity of the earth and the crops which it bore, and upon which man's life depended. But the imagery of mother and son did not completely portray the whole complex of Nature's annual cycle. To give birth to vegetation, the Earth Mother had to be impregnated. A variety of imagery suggested itself: the plunging blade of the plough or the fall of rain. Some lines from the Danaids of the Athenian dramatist Aeschylus (c 499–458 BC) significantly portray the anthropomorphic images in which the ancient Greeks envisaged the process: 'Love moves the pure Heaven to wed the Earth; and Love (Eros) takes hold on Earth to join in marriage. And the rain, dropping from the husband Heaven, impregnates Earth, and she brings forth for men pasture for flocks and corn, the life of men.'

From such sexual imagery emerged the concept of a virile god who impregnated the Earth Mother with his seed. The form of this deity could vary between the animal and the human. The bull provided an obvious type-figure, and at Catal Hüyük, the oldest known sanctuary (c 6000 BC) of the Great Goddess, frescoes of bulls and bulls' horns signified the incorporation into her cult of the principle of male virility. In Greek mythology Zeus, in the form of a bull, carried off Europa, and the Minotaur (half-man and half-bull) was the offspring of the Queen of Crete, Pasiphae, and a divine bull. In these 'faded myths' were probably preserved folk-memories of the associated cults of 'Great Goddesses' and sacred bulls. (See BULL.)

Mythic thought is characteristically imprecise, and it easily embraces ambivalent or contradictory ideas. So it is not surprising to find, in many myths of the ancient Near East, a male deity who is both the son and the lover of a fertility goddess. An example of such complex imagery is succinctly expressed in a title of the Egyptian god Amun-Re, descriptive of his relation to the goddess Nut. 'Bull of his Mother, the first on his field', he impregnated the goddess who gave him birth.

In his role of vegetation god, the offspring of the Earth Mother, this ambivalent male deity was also a 'dying and rising god' (see DYING GOD). For he personified the annual death of vegetation in the fierce summer heat and drought of the Near Eastern lands, and its resurrection in the spring. As such he became the subject of a complex of myth and ritual. Lamentations commemorated his death as the vegetation withered and died; ceremonies were performed to ensure his return from death; and joyous festivals acclaimed his resurrection as the new green of reviving vegetation appeared in the spring. From this basic drama of death and resurrection, manifest in Nature each year, there stemmed a rich tradition of idea and fantasy which embodied some of the deepest of human emotions – the instinct for life and the fear of death, sexual love and motherhood, the pathos of early death, aversion from the withering touch of time, aspiration for the assurance of immortality.

Life in the Tomb

The ancient Egyptian god Osiris (see OSIRIS) has been regarded by some scholars, most notably by Sir J. G. Frazer, as the classic example of the dying and rising god of vegetation. Subsequent research has not endorsed the view that this was the original character of Osiris; but the deity certainly became closely associated with fertility and the death and resurrection of the corn. This association was graphically portrayed in Egyptian art and ritual. The dead Osiris was frequently depicted lying supine, with phallus erect and plants sprouting from his body. A similar idea inspired other scenes representing the goddess Isis, in the form of a falcon, impregnating herself on the phallus of the dead Osiris. The meaning of such depictions seems clear: Osiris, as the deification of Nature's life-cycle, retained his fertility even in death, from which he triumphantly rose again.

A more spiritually significant idea motivated the making of 'corn-mummies', which were placed in tombs. The specimen found in the tomb of Tutankhamen consisted of an image of Osiris, constructed of wood and linen, which had been filled with mud from the Nile and planted with corn. It was bandaged like a mummy and placed in a wooden

Ronald Sheridan

Ronald Sheridan

Ronald Sheridan

The 'foliate heads' in many medieval churches, depicting a human head covered with foliage, or with leaves and tendrils sprouting from the mouth and ears, are evidence of our ancestors' concern for the spirit of vegetation. 'No inscriptions explain their meaning; doubtless they needed none for people whose lives were so closely bound up with the fields and woods': painted roof bosses from Canterbury Cathedral

box. Enclosed in bandages and coffin, the seeds in this particular example could not have germinated as they did in less elaborate versions, which sprouted with corn in the warm darkness of the tomb, symbolizing the renewal of life after death. But it is probable that they were intended also to assist, by means of imitative magic, in achieving the resurrection of the dead person, buried in the tomb, to a new life.

The significance which the death and rebirth of the seed-corn, personified in a vegetation god, had for man's hope for immortality, invested the annual drama of the alternation of life and death in Nature with a deep emotive significance. The hope which the corn-mummies signified to the ancient Egyptians was presented anew for Christians in the well-known words of St Paul: 'But some one will ask, "How are the dead raised? with what kind of body do they come?" You foolish man! What you sow does not come to life unless it dies. And what you sow is not the body which is to be, but a bare kernel, perhaps of wheat or of some other grain . . . So it is with the resurrection of the dead. What is sown is perishable, what is raised is imperishable . . . It is sown a physical body, it is raised a spiritual body' (1 Corinthians, chapter 15).

Baal Avenged

The mystique of the annual death and resurrection of vegetation is seen in its clearest and most dramatic form in the cult of Osiris. But the mythologies of other ancient Near Eastern dying and rising gods better illustrate the connection between the god of vegetation and the fertility goddess: those of Adonis (see APHRODITE), Tammuz (see TAMMUZ), Baal and Attis.

'Baal' was a title meaning, in Hebrew, 'possessor' or 'lord' of the land (see BAAL). It was used to designate the Amorite god Hadad ('the thunderer'), who personified the winter rains and their accompanying storms. Since the rain was recognized by the Canaanites as an essential factor in the fertility of the fields and the growth of vegetation, Baal was identified with vegetation in its annual cycle of life and death. The mythology of Baal has become known through the discovery of texts, inscribed on clay tablets, at the site of the ancient city of Ugarit, on the Syrian coast north of Beirut. In these texts, which date from the latter half of the second millennium BC, a triad of deities is concerned in the drama of Nature's year. Baal's sister and lover is the fertility goddess Anat, who is generally depicted nude, with the sexual attributes emphasized. The enemy of Baal is Mot, who is the

The worship of the god of vegetation was associated in many agricultural communities with that of the goddess of fertility or Earth Mother; the god might be thought of as both her son and lover, issuing from her womb, to die and rise again in due season Left Aztec Earth Goddess, Coatlicue Right Head of an Aztec maize god, the 'flayed god' Xipe Totec, a form of Tezcatlipoca, who died by being skinned alive so that men might receive the maize; his priests wore the flayed skins of their victims to symbolize the rebirth of the crops personification of drought and sterility, and hence of death.

Michael Holford

Owing to the fragmentary state of the tablets, it is difficult to reconstruct with certainty the myth which described the relations of these deities. It would seem that Baal, for some obscure reason, had to descend into the realm of Mot. Before departing, he had intercourse with a heifer, from which a bull-calf was born: this bestial act may perhaps relate to the association of a bull cult with Baal, which was a feature of the fertility rites of the Great Goddess, already noted.

The disappearance of Baal caused sterility: 'the furrows in the fields are cracked with drought'. Anat took vengeance on Mot for the death of her lover. Seizing Mot, she 'ripped him open with a sword, winnowed him in a sieve, burnt him in the fire, ground him with two mill-stones, sowed him in a field'. This punishment inflicted on Mot has a curious significance; for it parallels the fate of the corn – some being ground into flour for bread; some being sown as seed. What the action signified in the myth is uncertain; but consequent on it, Baal returns to life. It is possible that since Mot had apparently devoured Baal, the sowing of fragments of Mot, intermixed with Baal, caused the resurrection of the dead god of vegetation. The revival of Baal is symbolized in the myth by poetic imagery: 'the heavens rained oil, the ravines ran with honey'. These myths probably served as a kind of libretto to fertility rites, performed each year to assist the germination of the seed-corn and ensure a good harvest. The licentious nature of such Canaanite rites, involving as they did sacred prostitution, was vehemently denounced by the Hebrew prophets.

Youthful Lover

Attis was the youthful lover of Cybele, the great mother goddess of ancient Phrygia (see CYBELE). The spring festival of the goddess was mainly a ritual commemoration of the death and resurrection of Attis. There are variant versions of the myth accounting for his death, which seems to have resulted from self-castration. It is difficult to make out a coherent myth and ritual complex from these versions and the rites associated with the cult of Cybele and Attis. The fact that the pine was sacred to the young god might indicate that originally he was a tree spirit; it is interesting in this connection to note that an episode in the legend of Osiris concerns a marvellous tree that quickly grew and enshrined his body. Cybele was served by eunuch priests called galli, who were reported to have buried their severed parts in the earth, perhaps to promote the fertility of the Earth Mother. Similarly suggestive are the repulsive rites of the criobolium and the taurobolium, in which a ram and bull, symbols of male virility, were sacrificed, their blood providing a regenerating baptism for initiates into the mysteries of the goddess (see BAPTISM).

Some scholars have claimed to find in many religions of the ancient Near East a definite 'myth and ritual' pattern connected with the life-and-death cycle of vegetation. According to them, the king represented the vegetation god at the New Year festival, in which the death and resurrection of the deity was ritually enacted in a series of related episodes. These comprised, besides a dramatic representation of the death and resurrection of the god of vegetation, the recitation or symbolic representation of the myth of creation; a ritual combat, in which the triumph of the god over his enemies was portrayed; a sacred marriage; and a triumphant procession, with the king playing the part of the god, followed by a train of lesser gods.

This 'myth-and-ritual' complex, so it is explained, originated from a primitive custom of killing the king when his physical vigour began to diminish; for, since the fertility of the land was magically connected with his virility, it would be disastrous to have an aged impotent monarch. His youthful successor ensured the continuance of the fecundity of the soil by his marriage with the queen or high priestess. These barbaric rites, it is argued, had been gradually transformed into a ritual death and resurrection of the king, which was celebrated each year. In the subsequent sacred marriage, the queen or priestess represented the fertility goddess. The case for the existence of this 'myth and ritual' pattern has not been generally accepted by scholars as proven. But much evidence concerning the reaction of the ancient peoples of the Near East to the death and rebirth of vegetation does suggest that their kings were deeply involved in the annual fertility rites.

Return of the Corn Maiden

In ancient Greece, the famous Mystery cult of Eleusis witnesses to the mystic significance that men there found in the annual drama of the seed-corn (see DEMETER; ELEUSIS). The two deities connected with this cult differed notably, however, from those of the Near Eastern cults. Instead of a naturally interdependent pair of fertility goddess and vegetation god, the Eleusinian divinities were related as mother and daughter. Demeter, the corn goddess, was the mother of Persephone, the corn maiden. The myth of the abduction of Persephone by Plouton, the lord of the underworld, provided the rationale or explanation of the secret rites performed at Eleusis (see PERSEPHONE; PLUTO). Distracted by the loss of her daughter, Demeter forgot her task as the corn goddess. So the ground grew sterile and famine afflicted the race of men, until the supreme god Zeus was obliged to intervene and bid Plouton restore the corn maiden to her mother. But the restoration could not be complete, because Persephone had tasted a morsel of food in the underworld. Zeus ruled, in consequence, that Persephone should spend two parts of the year above ground with Demeter and one part in Hades with Plouton. The return of Persephone brought fruitfulness again to the fields, which soon waved 'with long ears of corn, and its rich furrows were loaded with grain'. There has been much speculation as to the exact significance of this division of the year between Persephone's stay with her mother and with Plouton, but it is generally agreed that the division relates to the life cycle of the seed-corn – perhaps to the time the seed lies buried in the ground until its emergence in the fresh vigorous upsurge of life in the following spring.

Michael Holford

In the Eleusinian Mysteries the death and resurrection of the seed-corn was undoubtedly interpreted as presaging a rebirth to a new and immortal life for those who were initiated. Very little is known of the rites which were performed in the great Telesterion or Hall of the Mysteries at Eleusis; but there is evidence that the culminating revelation made to the initiate, who had been subjected to experiences simulating death, was that of 'a reaped cornstalk'. The meaning of the symbol must surely have then been apparent to him, and perhaps that meaning implied an insight similar to that ascribed to Christ in St John's gospel (12.24): 'unless a grain of wheat falls into the earth and dies, it remains alone; but if it dies, it bears much fruit'. However that may be, the Homeric Hymn to Demeter, which records the Eleusinian myth, ends with the assurance: 'Happy is he among men upon earth who has seen these mysteries; but he who is uninitiate and who has no part in them, never has lot of like good things once he is dead, down in the darkness and gloom.'

It was Sir James George Frazer who first showed, in The Golden Bough, the enormous influence that agriculture has had upon religion. The titles of some of the volumes that make up the work significantly indicate aspects of the theme: The Dying God; Adonis, Attis, Osiris; Spirits of the Corn and of the Wild. In the first volume of the series, The Magic Art, Frazer evokes, in a masterly passage, the memory of the mysterious priest-king who served the goddess Diana in her sacred grove at Nemi (see KING). This sinister being bore the title Rex Nemorensis, the 'King of the Wood'. Whoever was bold or desperate enough to challenge the 'ghastly priest', proclaimed his challenge by breaking off a bough of the sacred tree – the 'golden bough', according to certain ancient writers.

The Green One

Frazer set himself the task of explaining this strange institution. After a long and involved investigation of ancient literature and folklore, he conclude that 'at Nemi the King of the Wood personated the oak-god Jupiter and mated with the oak-goddess Diana in the sacred grove'. Originally this priest-king was named Virbius, which Frazer translated as 'the Green One'. The sacred union of Virbius and Diana, or the priestess who impersonated the goddess, was intended 'to make the earth gay with the blossoms of spring and the fruits of autumn, and to gladden the hearts of men and women with healthful offspring'. Frazer identified the mystic Golden Bough with the mistletoe which, growing on the oak, was believed by ancient peoples to be the life or soul of the tree (see MISTLETOE).

In his quest for the origins of the priest-king of Nemi, Frazer was led to investigate a widespread cult of tree spirits which has been practised in northern lands to make the corn grow. The custom of the Harvest May, observed by various peasant peoples of Europe, is particularly notable. A large branch of may or hawthorn was brought home with the last load of harvest, and decorated with ears of corn. Sometimes it was fastened to the roof of the farmhouse, remaining there for a year, or planted in the cornfield, with the last sheaf tied to it. To those who made it, the Harvest May evidently embodied or represented the spirit of vegetation, upon whose fructifying influence next year's harvest depended.

It was from this primitive belief in vegetation spirits that the custom of the maypole took its origins. The maypole, which the Puritan writer Phillip Stubbes perceptively, if humourlessly, condemned as a 'stinking idol', was the symbol of the vegetation god. The institution of the May Queen, so essentially associated with the maypole, preserves an ancient folk-memory of the sacred marriage to promote the fertility of the herds and fields. In the May Day customs the spirit of vegetation was also represented by the Green Man or Jack in the Green. At Knutsford in Cheshire, the Green Man still leads the annual procession of the May Queen –

The growth of vegetation was often interpreted in human terms, as the result of a cosmic sexual act: human fertility continues to be associated with the fertility of Nature, in a modern Chinese poster showing the prosperity to be expected under Communism a strange and somewhat eerie figure, completely enveloped in greenery (see GREEN; MAY DAY).

Frazer collected a mass of evidence from the folklore of many lands expressive of a sense of tragedy at the time of harvest. Sometimes the last sheaf of corn has been ritually threshed and treated as a sacrificial victim, recalling perhaps a human sacrifice that was once made on the harvest field to the god of vegetation. The fate of the corn in its transformation to bread has also been seen as the passion of the Corn Spirit. A Danish folktale describes the sufferings of the rye: 'In the autumn you will be sown, deeply buried in earth; in the spring you will rise; in the summer you will be parched in the sun, drenched in the rain, then cut and dried, carted to the barn and threshed; then, carted to the mill and ground.'

Today in many medieval churches the so-called 'foliate heads' still witness to our ancestors' concern for the spirit of vegetation. These strange emblems, carved in wood or stone, depict a human head with leaves and tendrils sprouting from the mouth and ears.

There are no inscriptions to explain their meaning; doubtless they needed none for people whose lives were so closely bound up with the fields and woods. A faint memory of these old beliefs lingers on in the 'corn dollies' made for harvest festivals (see HARVEST). They are the last relics of a tradition that reaches far back to the dying and rising gods of the ancient Near East.

(See also FERTILITY; TREES.)

S. G. F. BRANDON

FURTHER READING: J. G. Frazer, The Golden Bough (St Martin's Press, 1980 reprint); E. O. James, The Cult of the Mother Goddess: Seasonal Feasts and Festivals (Barnes and Noble, 1959 and 1963 respectively); E. O. James, The Tree of Life (Brill, Leiden, 1966); S. H. Hooke ed., Myth Ritual and Kingship (Oxford Univ. Press, 1958); John C. Gibson, Canaanite Myths and Legends (Attic Press, 1978); G. E. Mylonas, Eleusis and the Eleusinian Mysteries (Princeton Univ. Press, 1961); Findhorn Foundation, Findhorn Garden (Harper & Row, 1975).

VENUS

C. M. Dixon

The Italian Venus was identified with the Greek goddess of love, Aphrodite, who was the mother of Aeneas and so an ancestress of the Roman people: the 'Venus of Rhodes', Greek sculpture of the 1st century BC

THE WORD Venus is related to English 'wish' and, more remotely, 'win'. The Latin common noun means 'charm', 'attraction', 'delight'. Its derivative verb venerari, which in antiquity also meant 'venerate', primitively signified the sacral act of alluring or enticing something from beyond mankind's power. Thus a famous literary echo of an old prayer reports the formal enticement of willingness from the god Quirinus (veneror moram Quirini). The goddess who sprang from the abstract venus forever kept the skill of wheedling.

Rome's foremost expert in religious history, Varro, was struck by the absence of Venus's name in the oldest records. Indeed Venus could not boast an old priesthood or festival or shrine at Rome. Further, Venus was unique in Italy. Etruscans spoke of Turan, 'Lady'. In the Oscan dialect the comparable goddess was Herentas, very similar in concept because the name is related to the aforementioned Latin 'willingness' and to English 'yearn'. There is reason to believe that Venus had not even been universal to the Latins of central Italy. She seems especially Roman and thus contrasts with Jupiter whom all the Indo-European speakers knew, or with Mars who, though native to Italy, was shared by all peninsular inhabitants (see JUPITER; MARS).

Most of Venus's cult remains unknown to us. Some Romans insisted that the month of April was named after Aphrodite, her Greek equivalent. However, this folk etymology was based on the cult of Venus on behalf of vegetable gardens. As early as the late 3rd century her name signified the garden produce itself. The Romans consecrated gardens to Venus on 19 August, and vegetable gardeners kept the day holy.

There is no certain answer as to why Venus was related to the Vinalia, two wine ceremonies in the civil calendar on 23 April and 19 August. These festivals belonged to the sky god Jupiter. Aside from the coincidence of their worship on days of the Roman Vinalia, there is some Campanian evidence of a state cult of Venus Jovia. This worship can be construed in one of two ways. Either Venus is already identified as Aphrodite whom Zeus (Jupiter) fathered according to one Greek myth (see APHRODITE), or the goddess originated as the sky god's venus or, to use the local term, herentas. Of course, vineyards do not greatly differ from gardens. Also, in a sense, all plants need to be coaxed or wheedled to put forth their fruits. Such coaxing may be enacted by sexual representation. Be that as it may, no clear and direct evidence of such religious practice emerges from the ancient evidence on Venus.

Produce and Prostitution

At least as early as 290 BC, Venus was somehow associated with the August Vinalia because her first temple was dedicated on that day by a patrician, Fabius, who had built it with fines exacted for ladies' debauchery. Although it stood at least 600 years, this temple's activities are rarely mentioned. Venus's epithet Obsequens, 'compliant', and the source of the building funds point to an already existing identification of the goddess with the Greek Aphrodite and the Etruscan Turan, who were definitely goddesses of female sexuality. Despite the sexual aspects of both the cult title and the ladies' misbehaviour, Fabius had a personal reason for the choice of his piety. He claimed that Venus had submitted to the wishes (obsequi) of his father and himself. The two Fabii had fought together in several campaigns against the Samnites and after the last Samnite war Venus Obsequens received her temple. Unfortunately, we do not know whether the Samnite Venus was worth conciliating in war.

Venus perhaps exercised some political sway among the Latins, for there existed two large precincts a few miles south-west of Rome where Aphrodite or Frutis, sometimes called Venus, were annually worshipped by all the Latins. One or both shrines, purportedly of great age, may have actually been related in cult to the widely renowned goddess of Mt Eryx on the western tip of Sicily. The Erycine sexual goddess was variously identified with Aphrodite and the Phoenician Ishtar (see ISHTAR). The Latin Frutis was said to have received her cult statue from Erycina.

One tradition explicitly equated Venus Erycina to the Aphrodite who bore Aeneas. Accordingly, the Trojan hero gratefully transported her cult to Cyprus, to Sicily and to Latium. Aphrodite occasionally had the epithet Aineia, which was interpreted to commemorate her maternity. The maritime route of Aeneas's legendary wanderings can be traced from one to another of Aphrodite's shrines. Some place-names of the western Italian coast preserved indications of Aphrodite in her role as protector of seafarers. Venus inherited these places as Roman rule spread.

After successive humiliations from Carthage's great general Hannibal, a direct descendant of the two Fabii observed what seems a family tradition and dedicated a temple to the true Venus Erycina in 215 BC. By this gift Fabius and the Romans placated a deity who had protected Carthage during the earlier Punic war and who was also an ancestress of the Roman people, through Aeneas who came to Latium and founded Romulus's line (see FOUNDING OF ROME). Venus Obsequens had received her temple at roughly the same time as the Romans first reared a statue group of

Ronald Sheridan

Left Gold votive figure of a Mycenean love goddess, with birds; doves were sacred to Venus Right A goddess of gardens and pot vegetables, Venus became the embodiment of female allure and sexuality: Venus by Titian

Romulus and Remus being suckled by the she-wolf. Venus Erycina had been integrated into the Roman tradition of their non-Italian ancestry. Consequently Rome's Capitoline Hill, reserved for truly Roman gods, allowed a site for Venus of Eryx.

Venus is certainly connected with the month of April by the dedication in 181 BC of a third temple on the earlier Vinalia of 23 April. This Venus, another Erycina, had been promised a temple during a war with the Ligurians of northern Italy, whom the Romans reckoned distant relatives of the Sicilians. Situated just outside the city, the new shrine reproduced the very temple on Mt Eryx where temple prostitution still thrived. Rome's Erycine precinct attracted the city's less savoury residents. On 23 and 25 April prostitutes and the offspring of prostitution and pimping kept their holy days here. Late April and early May had become holidays given over to sexual promiscuity and stage plays. Since the 3rd century such rites, introduced under the influence of the Greek Sibylline Books, had been consecrated to Flora, spirit of blossoming. They had their likely model in the cult of Aphrodite Antheia (Flora in Latin). For centuries the Floral Games provided notorious spectacles of sexual licence. Venus herself was not directly worshipped with Flora; nevertheless as divinity of produce and prostitution Venus belongs to the same kind of religious mentality.

The Sibylline Books reinforced the association in 114 BC, when the Romans were prompted to dedicate a temple to Venus Verticordia, 'Turner of Hearts'. Her name was intended to commemorate the acquittal of two Vestal Virgins charged with breaking their vows. Whatever the intent of the title, which is supposed to suggest the conversion from lust to chastity, Venus clearly retained her latent power of coaxing.

Political Promotion

Through Cornelius Sulla, who briefly engrossed the Republican government by his dictatorship of 82–79 BC, Venus entered the realm of personal politics. Sulla, also her devotee in other ways, adopted the style Epaphroditos, 'Aphrodite's darling', which he rendered Felix in Latin. The latter style, which he may also have applied to a Roman Venus, comprised all notions of fertility, prosperity, success and good luck. At Pompeii a coastal colony of Sulla's veterans accorded Venus unusual prominence. The Pompeian cult perhaps combined Sulla's patroness with the town's continuing adoration of Venus Physica, Venus of Nature (physis), which preserved the Greek idea of growth.

In 55 BC Pompey the Great dedicated a temple to Venus Victrix 'the Winner', atop his theatre, which was the first permanent theatre in Rome. Opposition to its construction was probably blunted by the consecration to Venus. At about the same time, Rome's great poet Lucretius published his philosophical poem on Nature, in which he invoked for poetic inspiration Venus, ancestress of the Aenead race, and which he dedicated to Memmius whose clan corporately worshipped Venus.

The patrician clan of Julii asserted ever stronger proprietary rights of ancestral cult for Venus since they claimed direct descent from Iulus, the Trojan son of Aeneas. Julius Caesar surprised no one by emphasizing his clan's rise to power in his own person by vowing a temple to Venus Genetrix during the battle of Pharsalus, at which Pompey was defeated. Caesar raised the temple (perhaps the first built entirely of marble at Rome) in his new forum and dedicated it in 46 BC, although his adopted son Augustus completed the work. Beside the statue of his ancestress Caesar set a golden statue of Cleopatra.

In the Greek East subject provincials joined Aphrodite with deified Rome in a religious demonstration of loyalty to the Empire and to the imperial house which Caesar had generated. Ultimate expression of the catholic loyalty of the Empire is met during the reign of Hadrian (117–128 AD). This emperor of Spanish birth devoted himself to the adornment of Rome, Italy and the Empire, whose ideal he generously cultivated with lovely and magnificent buildings. Hadrian did much to accord the provincials a sense of merit for their role in the Empire's government. To amplify his notion of imperial unity Hadrian built Rome's largest and handsomest temple to Venus and Roma, which he situated beside the Colosseum. Adoration of Roma, a provincial concept, remained unique to this temple. Each goddess had her own precinct placed back to back. By universal usage this double temple was referred to as the City's Shrine. Hadrian chose to dedicate the temple on 21 April, the feast of Parilia, in order to honour Venus in her month and Roma on her birthday in the city's 888th year.

At Rome Venus was worshipped under other cult names. Most of these are easily understandable; Placida, 'pleasing'; Alma, 'nurturing'; Pudica, 'demure'. A few are most obscure, for instance Calva, 'bald'. The goddess's popularity extended throughout Italy and the Latin-speaking western Empire. She invited identification with lesser local divinities and found herself acquainted with universal notions. Thus she provides other examples of the Roman capacity to enlarge the concept and identity of their gods.

The Dead and the Sewers

Near the great cemetery on the Esquiline Hill once stood a holy grove called Libitina where corpses were prepared for burial. The profession of undertaker was also libitina. Cult for and in groves was quite common but a grove cult for the dead was extraordinary. By the Imperial age the Grove of Libitina was no more than an address, and very probably just the name of a street. From the name of the grove, or from that of its tutelary deity, the Romans thought up a goddess Libitina. At some later point they could not intellectually tolerate the plethora of insignificant divinities. Perhaps the very distaste for the subject of funerals had prepared the Romans to believe Libitina governed sexual desire (libido); thence the easy next step carried them to apply Libitina to Venus and to rear a temple to this goddess of lust. The word Libitina seems to have entered Latin from Etruscan, where it meant 'dead'. Libitina was not necessarily an Etruscan goddess, but a euphemism for death and its sequel.

The myths associated with Venus were taken from the Greek myths of Aphrodite: Venus is caught in bed with Mars by her husband Vulcan, in a 15th century Flemish illustration from The Romance of the Rose

Another example of a latterday Venus can be derived from a known locality. In early times the Romans knew the Little Aventine Hill as Mt Murcus. The valley between the Aventine and Palatine Hills was named the Murcia and was ultimately given over to the construction of the enormous Circus Maximus; this embraced a number of old religious sites, among which was an altar to Murcia. Murcia shared her name with the turning posts at that end of the racecourse. Being overwhelmed physically by the affairs and structures of the Circus and her link with the locality having been forgotten, Murcia became the subject of learned speculation. Her name was derived from the Greek myrtea, 'myrtle'. Since this shrub was sacred to Aphrodite, Murcia came to be another name for Venus. With the discovery of her new identity Murcia's cult seems to have perished.

Next and more perplexing is the case of Venus Cloacina. Cloaca is the Latin word for sewer. In uniformity with the need for a deity to oversee every place and structure a shrine to Cloacina was put up in the Forum over the Cloaca Maxima, the town's main sewer. The Romans fancied that cloaca was derived from a verb of cleansing. Further, they supposed that the goddess of cleansing must be Venus, because the local plant used for sacral cleansing was the same as the myrtle. Finally, both Cloacina's shrine and Murcia's altar were situated over running water. This Venus was humanly represented and her statue held a flower of some kind. By involutions peculiar to the ancient mind Venus became mistress of funerals, racecourse turning posts and sewers.

A last instance of Venus's acquisition of alien functions illustrates another Roman religious peculiarity. When the Romans entered Carthaginian Africa, they readily acknowledged the native goddess Venus Caelestis, 'heavenly' Venus. The existence of an obscure Greek deity, Aphrodite Ourania, perhaps promoted the Romans' acceptance of Caelestis. At any rate the ground was soon prepared for the introduction of the planetary week and the convictions of astrology. In the wake of these innovations Venus lent her name to the sixth day of the new week which still keeps alive Mesopotamian astrology in Italy, France and Spain, where Ishtar's planet is commemorated in Venus's day. Our own Friday is just a further step in the equation. 'Friday's child is loving and giving!'

The Roman Venus exhibits different modes of divinity. From first to last her state cult contributed to the grandeur of the Empire and the glory of certain élite clans. Venus goddess of pot-vegetables gave way to the Venus of female sexuality, whose myth and cult are based upon Greek and oriental precedents that became peculiarly Roman only insofar as they included accounts of Aphrodite as the mother of Aeneas. Whatever else the cult of the abstract venus had once contained, the aspect of charm and allure was transferred to a female goddess of procreation.

R. E. A. PALMER

Venus the Planet

The Babylonians connected the morning and evening star with the goddess of love, and so did the Greeks and Romans, possibly because its appearances mark the limits of night, the time of love-making. Venus is the only planet named for a female deity and its astrological symbol is widely used outside astrology as a symbol of the female, the corresponding male symbol being that of Mars, the god who was the lover of Venus in classical mythology.

In astrology Venus is traditionally the ruler of love and desire, beauty and relationships – not confined to sexual partnerships but extending to relationships with friends and in business. It is also considered essentially beneficent, a force making for harmony, reconciliation, peace, affection, love of beautiful things, physical attractiveness. The position of Venus in your birth chart is thought to affect all these matters, but especially your ability to enter into relationships with other people and your attitudes to beauty, the arts, and the pleasures of life. If Venus is fortunately placed, it should tend to produce a warm, gentle, sympathetic, graceful and artistic person, contented, tactful and probably rather sentimental. The planet is particularly associated with music and is said to produce composers and musicians.

If not so fortunately placed, the influence of Venus may be less harmonious. The old belief was that Venus in conjunction with Saturn and Mercury in a horoscope threatened death by the treachery of a woman or by poison, traditionally the woman's weapon, but this has been reinterpreted by at least one modern authority to mean the threat of being dominated by a woman, or women, in life. It is often said that a man born when Venus is close to the Sun in the zodiac is likely to be effeminate, his character (Sun) being unduly influenced by the feminine planet. Saturn square to Venus, as in Hitler's horoscope, is supposed to indicate selfishness and egotism.

The influence of Venus on love-life varies with its placing in the zodiac. According to Margaret Hone's Modern Text Book of Astrology, a person who has Venus in Taurus will be 'steadfast in love, but possessive' and 'slow to make partnership but reliable when once settled'. Venus in Gemini, however, means that 'affection is changeable and often for more than one at a time', and if Venus is in Scorpio 'love tends to be more intense, more sexual, more secretive and passionate'. Venus in the eighth house, incidentally, is a good sign, traditionally foretelling an easy death.

In magic the force of Venus is connected primarily with love and sex, and with fertility and the teeming life of Nature. Copper, as the metal of Venus, is useful in love charms, and operations of love, lust, pleasure and friendship should be timed in the hour and day of Venus (see CORRESPONDENCES; DAYS; FORCES).

FURTHER READING: For the Roman goddess, see G. K. Galinsky, Aeneas, Sicily and Rome (Princeton Univ. Press, 1969).

In 1901, visiting the Petit Trianon – a building in which the ill-fated Marie Antoinette, Queen of France, had lived before the French Revolution – Miss Moberly and Miss Jourdain apparently stepped back in time to the year 1770

VERSAILLES ADVENTURE

THE STORY published under the title An Adventure in 1911 has been described by one of its critics as 'the arch ghost story of all time'. It is the account of the experiences of two English women, Miss C. A. E. Moberly and Miss E. M. Jourdain, who were both of academic standing and unimpeachable integrity.

The story began in 1901. While they were staying together in Paris for a short visit, they went on 10 August to see, for the first time, the Petit Trianon at Versailles. They knew very little about the place, beyond the fact that Marie Antoinette had lived there for some years before 1789. They came away that afternoon having seen in the garden persons and features, seemingly real at the time, but afterwards found to have been inappropriate to the circumstances of 1901.

They did not discuss the matter until a week had elapsed, when they came to the conclusion that the place was haunted. Three months later they discovered, on talking over the events of the August visit, that their recollections did not in all respects agree with one another. They accordingly decided to write independent accounts and these, with minor alterations and additions, constitute the main narratives of An Adventure. Both accounts are commendably brief, occupying only some five pages and four and a half pages respectively.

About the same time, November 1901, Miss Jourdain heard from a French friend that Marie Antoinette was regularly seen on a certain day in August sitting outside the garden front of the Petit Trianon. The conclusion was quickly reached that the haunting had to do with Marie Antoinette, and all later researches and visits were directed to the task of reconciling their recollections of the 1901 visit with what was known of the background of Marie Antoinette's time.

There have been five editions of An Adventure, and each one has elicited from reviewers and others fresh solutions of the mystery. For instance, it has been suggested that the two visitors on 10 August 1901 failed to take in their surroundings at all accurately, because they were too much engrossed in conversation, or overcome by unaccustomed French food and wine. They may have seen men in long coats of old-fashioned appearance, who were really Robert de Montesquiou and his friends, who were alive in 1901, holding a costume party in the garden of the Petit Trianon, and have mistaken them for 18th century gardeners.

One critic expressed surprise that people still paid any attention to the story, considering that Miss Moberly had confessed on her death-bed that it was a hoax. But this allegation was never substantiated and Dr Joan Evans, who knew both the ladies well, denied that any such confession had been made.

Time Out of Joint

Whatever influences may have been at work to bemuse or mislead the two visitors on 10 August 1901, the fact remains that their descriptions of what they saw on that afternoon cannot, without making extravagant assumptions, be reconciled with the surroundings as they were either in 1901, or in the time of Marie Antoinette. Their descriptions may, of course, have been pure fantasy. But it is a curious fact that the visitors, apparently without realizing the significance of what they saw, described some garden features characteristic of the period of the 'Anglo-Chinese garden', a fashion which was at its height in the early 1770s. A first attempt by the present writer to date the visions from internal evidence put the year at 1774, but later research by A. O. and M. E. Gibbons pointed to an earlier date for them, 1770.

Briefly, the visitors, in the course of a walk of a few hundred yards, saw and described eight features which were manifestly 'wrong' for 1901, and can be shown by pictures and plans to have been 'wrong'

What They Saw

From Miss Jourdain's description:
'We walked for some distance down a wooded alley, and then came upon the buildings of the Grand Trianon, before which we did not delay. We went on in the direction of the Petit Trianon, but just before reaching what we knew afterwards to be the main entrance I saw a gate leading to a path cut deep below the level of the ground above, and as the way was open and had the look of an entrance that was used, I said, "Shall we try this path? it must lead to the house," and we followed it . . .

'. . . there was a feeling of depression and loneliness about the place. I began to feel as if I were walking in my sleep; the heavy dreaminess was oppressive. At last we came upon a path crossing ours, and saw in front of us a building consisting of some columns roofed in, and set back in the trees. Seated on the steps was a man with a heavy black cloak round his shoulders, and wearing a slouch hat. At that moment the eerie feeling which had begun in the garden culminated in a definite impression of something uncanny and fear inspiring. The man slowly turned his face, which was marked by smallpox, his complexion was very dark. The expression was very evil and though I did not feel he was looking particularly at us, I felt a repugnance to going past him.'

Earlier, Miss Moberly and Miss Jourdain had asked the way from two men in greenish clothes and three-cornered hats. They saw a cottage with stone steps, a woman and a little girl. They saw the man in the dark cloak, his face marked with smallpox. Then a man with long dark hair directed them to another path and they crossed a stream by a rustic bridge. When they reached the Petit Trianon, Miss Moberly saw a woman in a large shady white hat with sketching paper.

for 1789. All eight features, as shown by garden plans and documents, make sense in relation to the surroundings of the year 1770.

The idea that the two visitors may have had a 'glimpse of the historic past' does not rest solely upon the Adventure story. There are a few stories of a similar kind which have so far defied attempts to explain them away. Each story, taken separately, can be criticized on grounds of deferred reporting, poor documentation and lapses of memory. But if, as here, the person who has had the experience has thereby acquired knowledge about the past which could only have been acquired normally by research, it is unreasonable to assume that research had been previously carried out but had been forgotten.

The alternative hypothesis, that the correspondences between vision and fact were due entirely to chance, seems implausible in a case where there were so many 'hits' on the target and no manifest 'misses'.

It is disappointing that so little is known about the day-to-day life at the Petit Trianon in the years 1770–74, and there is no certain clue to the identity of any of the persons who were seen on that August afternoon. But to the lover of beautiful buildings there is some compensation in the thought that the two visitors may have seen the Petit Trianon in its perfection, as it came from the hand of the architect, before its surroundings had been marred by the demands and whims of a later generation. The reader's verdict, however, should be founded not on sentiment but on the evidence of the visions themselves, examined against the recorded history of the house and garden.

G. W. LAMBERT

FURTHER READING: The 5th edition of An Adventure was published by Faber & Faber in 1955, with a useful preface by Dr Joan Evans. For the 'dating', see A. O. Gibbons ed, The Trianon Adventure (Museum Press, 1958). See also Lucille Iremonger, The Ghosts of Versailles (Faber & Faber, 1957); Andrew Mackenzie, The Unexplained (Arthur Barker, 1966).

R. G. Foord

VERVAIN

WHAT WE CALL vervain today is Verbena officinalis, an insignificant plant. But vervain is also identified with a plant, now unknown, which was important in classical times. Pliny called it sacra herba, the sacred herb, and other classical names applied to 'verbena' included Cerealis, Demetria, Persephonion, Mercury's Blood, Tears of Juno or of Isis, all of which suggest a close link with fertility ceremonies. Besides using it in religious rites, the Romans kept evil spirits from their homes with it, and made it into charms to ward off bodily harm. Ambassadors and heralds parleyed with enemies wearing a 'verbena' crown. Roman witches employed it too, as the poet Virgil notes.

In ancient Persia 'vervain' branches were carried in rites associated with sun worship, while its juice was used by magicians: smeared on the body, it enabled one to gain the affection even of an enemy. Cutting of vervain was done when neither sun nor moon were visible, and honey was poured on the ground as an offering in exchange. Similar observances are recorded of the Druids, who made special use of the plant in prophecy. During the 18th century revival of interest in Druids, the finding of vervain anywhere near a stone circle convinced antiquarians of the monument's druidical past.

In medieval times, when Verbena officinalis took over from the unknown classical plant, its religious importance diminished in relation to its use by herbalists and sorcerers. Charms of all kinds, including love potions, were made with vervain. It was something of a cure-all, used as an amulet, especially against snake-bite and accident, and recommended for dozens of different ailments from cancer to plague, the 'bloody flux' to piles. Tumours could be dealt with by cutting a vervain root in two, hanging one round the sufferer's neck and smoking the other over a fire. As this shrivelled the tumour was supposed to do likewise. If the smoke-shrivelled part was retained by an ill-disposed person and placed in water, the tumour would return as the root swelled up.

Vervain kept away witches and their works, as many authors testify, and was frequently used in conjunction with dill, and also rue. This did not stop witches from themselves making use of vervain, so much so that it was called the Enchanter's Plant. It was one of the plants supposed to open locks magically: a thief would embed a fragment of the leaf in a cut made in his hand, and would then only have to touch a locked or bolted door or chest to open it.

Vervain was associated with St John's Eve, 23 June (see ST JOHN'S WORT), when bonfires were lit while, to quote a contemporary poem,

> . . . young men round about with maids
> do dance in every street,
> With garlands wrought of Mother-wort,
> or else with Vervain sweet.

Frazer relates how in Germany, in the 16th century, the chaplets of mother-wort (mugwort) and vervain were finally thrown onto the St John's Eve bonfires. On this night also, protective garlands of vervain, often mixed with flax, were hung in houses.

The use of vervain as a love philtre and securer of affection has been recorded within the last century, together with its use against illness. In Germany a wreath or hat of vervain was placed on a bride's head, harking back to classical times when the plant was sacred to Venus and the bridal wreath was picked by the bride herself. In the Victorian language of flowers, vervain stands appropriately enough for enchantment.

Vesta
Roman goddess of the hearth, equivalent of the Greek Hestia: worshipped at home as the deity of the family hearth, her public cult was conducted in a circular shrine, the 'hearth' of the community, where a perpetual fire burned, tended by the Vestal Virgins; her favourite animal was the ass.
See HEARTH.

Vestal Virgins
Priestesses of the sacred fire of Vesta in Rome; probably the successors of the King's daughters who originally tended the fire on the royal hearth; if they let the fire go out, they were beaten; chosen as small girls, they served for 30 years, during which time they had to remain chaste.
See FOUNDING OF ROME; HEARTH.

That our lives are influenced by mysterious universal vibrations has become a common notion, largely based on the taking over into occultism and astrology of theories drawn from 19th century science

VIBRATION

IN THE PAST a few rationalists have gone so far as to allege that all those who claimed to have experienced 'occult phenomena' were, quite literally, mad. Today, few would openly admit to such an extreme point of view, but it is true that occultists and schizophrenics have always shared a tendency to attempt to explain the interior experiences they have undergone in terms of the generally accepted beliefs of the societies in which they lived. Thus in the 17th and 18th centuries a schizophrenic would usually attribute his peculiar mental state either to the activities of spirits and witches or to the punishment of a jealous Calvinistic deity.

With the decline of popular belief in witchcraft such rationalizations were replaced by others of a more 'scientific' type, and the schizophrenic tended to blame his condition on the activities of evilly disposed individuals broadcasting 'death rays' or mysterious 'telepathic radiations'. The recent occult revival has brought signs of a reversion to earlier modes of explanation and a surprisingly large number of seriously disturbed patients in mental hospitals claim to be the victims of either black magic or 'astral attacks'.

Like the schizophrenic, the occultist of the last century attempted to explain his beliefs and experiences in the light of the science of his own day; the astral light of Eliphas Levi, for example, showed much more resemblance to the luminiferous ether of 19th century physics than to the astral light of Paracelsus. Similarly, the prominence which the concept of vibration assumed in the occult theorizing of the last quarter of the 19th century owed much to the importance of vibrational frequency in the wave theory of light. Spiritualists took over the idea and explained the invisibility of the spirit world (supposed to interpenetrate the ordinary world of matter) to ordinary individuals as being the result of varying 'rates of vibration'. Mediums, so it was claimed, were those who were able partially to adjust their vibrational rates to those of the spirit world.

'The universe visible to man can be likened to a web of tiny interlacing octaves of vibrations': one source of this analogy is the old Pythagorean theory of the 'music of the spheres', that the motions of the heavenly bodies create a harmony of musical sounds; 17th century diagram of the planetary spheres

Madame Blavatsky and her theosophical following were particularly prone to use vibration as an explanation of supernormal events; indeed they seem to have seen it as the bridge which would eventually link up the dogmas of the physicists with their own syncretistic brand of oriental occultism (see BLAVATSKY; THEOSOPHY). They held that there existed a mysterious 'inter-etheric force' which could be controlled by the use of the vibrations of sound and would ultimately provide mankind with a free source of energy, enabling a complete control over its physical environment.

The theosophists seem to have derived this idea from a charlatan named John Worrell Keely, 'inventor' of the notorious Keely motor, of which its creator wrote: 'In the conception of any machine heretofore constructed, the medium for inducing a neutral centre has never been found. If it had, the difficulties of perpetual-motion seekers would have ended, and this problem would have become an established and operating fact. It would only require an introductory impulse of a few pounds, on such a device, to cause it to run for centuries. In the conception of my vibratory engine, I did not seek to attain perpetual motion but a circuit is formed that actually has a neutral centre, which is in a condition to be vivified by my vibratory ether, and, while under operation by said substance, is really a machine that is virtually independent of the mass (or globe), and it is the wonderful velocity of the vibratory circuit which makes it so. Still, with all its perfection, it requires to be fed with the vibratory ether to make it an independent motor . . .'

Ronan Picture Library/E. P. Goldschmidt & Co. Ltd

Madame Blavatsky appears to have been much impressed by Keely. In the Secret Doctrine she referred to him as 'a natural-born magician' and quoted with approval a description of him as being 'great . . . in soul, wise . . . in mind, and sublime . . . in courage . . . the greatest discoverer and inventor in the world . . .' He was, in reality, a fraud who managed for many years to enjoy a comfortable existence on the money he had extracted from those gullible enough to invest in his 'Vibrational Self-Motor'. After his death it was discovered that the working model of his motor which, seemingly set in motion by the vibration of a violin string, had so impressed visitors to his laboratory was in reality powered by a secret supply of compressed air. In spite of this fiasco theosophists and other occultists continued to attach great importance to 'vibrational energy', and to the Keely motor; even today there are those who defend Keely as a great occultist and physicist.

Music of the Universe

In the present century vibration has ceased to occupy an important place in the theoretical framework of most occult systems and its place has been taken by other, more fashionable, scientific (or pseudo-scientific) concepts. Thus some 19th century astrologers attempted to provide a rationale for their art by arguing that each planet had its own vibrational frequency which, transmitted by radiation through the ether, blended with the vibrations of the other planets to influence the child at birth; today such theories have been largely abandoned by astrologers in favour of Jungian 'synchronicity' – the belief that everything done at a certain moment of time has the qualities of that moment of time.

Nevertheless, vibrational theories have survived, and indeed have been developed much further in attempts to provide a semi-physical explanation for the phenomena of dowsing and radiesthesia (see DOWSING; RADIESTHESIA). Such explanations often involve a belief that the vibrational frequencies of the ordinary musical scale have an occult significance of cosmic importance. Dr H. Tomlinson, an Australian radiesthetic and homoeopathic practitioner, has claimed that: '. . . the notes of the tonic sol-fa system are a universal constant . . . The universe visible to man can be likened to a web of tiny interlacing octaves of vibrations. These octaves are of two sorts, ascending and descending. A descending octave is progress from matter of higher vibrating rate to matter of lower vibratory rate . . . An ascending octave is progress from denser matter to more spiritual matter . . . The diviner . . . is operating in a web of interlacing celestial octaves . . . Every substance, when tested by radiesthetic methods, can be found to react to one of the notes of the octave . . .'

On the whole, those who follow what has sometimes been called the Western Esoteric Tradition – largely MacGregor Mathers's personal synthesis of the Christian Cabala, occidental ritual magic and certain elements derived from Madame Blavatsky's theosophy – are not particularly concerned with such semi-physical, semi-spiritual theories of vibration, for in the Cabalistic doctrines regarding emanation they have available to them a much more sophisticated conceptual framework (see CABALA; GOLDEN DAWN). Western occultists have, however, been concerned with vibration as a mode of pronunciation, used as a means of inducing religious ecstasy. In an unpublished Golden Dawn document written by Wynn Westcott c 1893 four modes of spiritual development are described; one of these is 'the procuring of the influence of Divine Powers through the peculiar modes taught in our Order of Vibrating the Divine Names'.

This method of vibration was described in detail in the second part of another Golden Dawn document, Flying Roll XII:

> In vibrating the Divine Names the Operator should first of all rise as high as possible towards the idea of the Divine White Brilliance, keeping the mind raised to the plane of the loftiest spiritual aspiration. Unless this is done, it is dangerous to vibrate only with the astral forces, because the vibration attracts a certain force to the operator, and the nature of the force attracted rests largely on the condition of mind in which the operator is.
>
> The ordinary mode of vibrating is as follows: Take a deep and full inspiration and concentrate your consciousness in your heart, which answers to Tiphareth. (Having first, as already said, ascended to your Kether, you should endeavour to bring down the white Brilliance into you heart, prior to centering your consciousness there).
>
> Then formulate the letters of the Name required in your heart, in white, and feel them written there. Be sure to formulate the letters in brilliant white light, not merely in dull whiteness as the colour of the Apas Tattwa. Then, emitting the breath, slowly pronounce the Letters so that the sound vibrates within you, and imagine that the breath, while quitting the body, swells you so as to fill up space. Pronounce the Name as if you were vibrating it through the whole Universe, and as if it did not stop until it reached the further limits.
>
> All practical work which is of any use, tires the operator or withdraws some magnetism, and therefore, if you wish to do anything that is at all important, you must be in perfect magnetic and nervous condition, or else you will do evil instead of good.
>
> When you are using a Name and drawing a Sigil from the Rose, you must remember that the Sephira to which the Rose and the Cross are referred, is Tiphareth, whose position answers to the position of the heart, as if the Rose were therein. It is not always necessary to formulate before you in space the telesmatic angelic figure of the Name. As a general rule, pronounce the Names as many times as there are letters in it.

Ronan Picture Library/E. P. Goldschmidt & Co. Ltd

Two diagrams from Utriusque Cosmi Historia by Robert Fludd, concerned with the universe as a harmony of musical vibrations Left The relationship of the harmonies and notes of a monochord Above The different spheres which make up the macrocosm are shown to produce a universal harmony

From this brief instruction it is not clear whether the magicians of the early Golden Dawn regarded the vibrations they created as physical, mental or spiritual. Probably they were supposed to partake of all three. In any case it seems likely that each practitioner had his or her own private interpretation of the vibratory process.

Trembling With Energy

Certainly at the present day, those occultists who are devotees of either the original Golden Dawn magical system or of one or other of its many derivatives – mostly greatly inferior to the original – give widely varying descriptions of both what is actually done and what is subjectively experienced when a Divine Name is vibrated. The best descriptions – which ultimately seem to derive from Aleister Crowley (see CROWLEY) – take it for granted that the experiences undergone are subjective in nature but that, nevertheless, a psychologically real vibration is felt. One occultist has described himself as having his consciousness so filled with the spiritual essence of the Divine Name he is vibrating that not only his body but 'the universe itself seems to be shaking, trembling and vibrating with the energy of the God-name invoked'.

In the sense that the word vibration is interpreted by contemporary Western magicians its use is likely to continue. It seems at least possible, however, that the semi-physical theories of vibration associated with radiesthesia will slowly die out and that practitioners of radionics will turn towards a more traditional terminology and philosophy in future attempts to explain their science.

(See also NAMES.)

FRANCIS KING

FURTHER READING: H. P. Blavatsky, The Secret Doctrine (Theosophical Publishing House, 1980); S. L. MacGregor Mathers, Astral Projection, Ritual Magic and Alchemy (Spearman, London, 1971).

Tate Gallery

Vigil

A watch by night: in early Christianity, a service celebrated during the night before a festival, surviving in the midnight Mass on Christmas Eve; later, the eve of a festival; a candidate for knighthood would keep a night's vigil of prayer and dedication in a church before being initiated.

Mansell Collection

Villa of the Mysteries

Cult centre of Dionysus at Pompeii, the town which was overwhelmed by eruptions of Vesuvius in 63 and 79 AD; murals depict the rituals of the cult.

See DIONYSUS.

Vine

Through its connection with intoxicating wine, often linked with life-energy and a state of closeness to the divine: plant of Dionysus as god of wine; in the Old Testament God's people are the vine which he brought out of Egypt and tended (Psalm 80, Isaiah, chapter 5); Jesus said, 'I am the true vine, and my Father is the vinedresser . . . I am the vine, you are the branches' (John, chapter 15).

See DIONYSUS; SYMBOLISM.

Virgil

Publius Vergilius Maro (70–19 BC), author of the Aeneid, the Eclogues and the Georgics; in the Middle Ages his fourth eclogue, predicting the birth of a child who would usher in a new Golden Age, was taken to refer to Christ, and in legend he became a master magician; he guides Dante through the afterworld in the Divine Comedy.

British Museum

'Divine parentage was claimed for famous men, well into historical times': Alexander the Great was said to have been born to Olympias, Philip of Macedon's wife, after Zeus embraced her in the form of a serpent; 14th century miniature of Alexander with his horse Bucephalus

'There are not many pre-Christian stories of virgin births, and there are perhaps none in which virginity is the main point'

VIRGIN BIRTHS

WHEREVER CHRISTIANITY is the official religion, the phrase 'virgin birth' carries a special meaning. It does not refer to a theme of myth or folklore, or to a biological hypothesis, but to a single, unique event: the birth of Jesus Christ to the Virgin Mary. Jesus's miraculous origin, setting him apart from the rest of mankind, has seldom been publicly questioned by professed Christians until fairly recent years.

Of the four canonical gospels, only Matthew and Luke contain a birth narrative; no clear allusions to any such narrative occur elsewhere in the New Testament. The scriptural basis of the Virgin Birth doctrine is confined to Matthew 1. 18–25 and Luke 1. 26–38. Other accounts are given in apocryphal writings, but the Church rejected these as devoid of authority.

Matthew relates that Mary, when engaged to her future husband Joseph, was found to be pregnant. Joseph planned to proceed with the marriage and divorce her quietly afterwards. But an angel appeared to him in a dream and told him to keep her as his wife. Her child was not due to any sexual union, but to divine action, immaterial and mysterious: 'that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Spirit'. Luke gives Mary's side of the story. Before the events recorded in Matthew, the angel Gabriel came to her at Nazareth and prophesied that she would bear the promised Messiah. She protested that she was a virgin. Gabriel replied that God alone was responsible for what would happen and Mary consented to her destiny.

Virgin birth is often alleged to be a recurrent theme in mythology, so that material for comparison should be plentiful. Objective study, however, has been rare. Most

C. M. Dixon

Other religious leaders besides Christ have been credited with miraculous births. The conception of the Buddha was immaculate, although his mother was not a virgin but a married woman: Queen Maya dreams that the Buddha enters her womb as a little white elephant writers who accept the Christian dogma discuss it in isolation. Conversely, writers on comparative religion tend to hunt out 'parallels' that are not parallel, and distort the facts in the process.

Actually there are not many pre-Christian stories of virgin births, and there are perhaps none in which virginity is the main point. Goddesses occasionally conceive without male assistance. The Great Mother of the ancient Mediterranean world may have initiated life in this way. Certainly Neith, an Egyptian form of the Great Mother, gives birth to the sun god Re by her own power. In a much later age the divine Sophia (Wisdom) of Gnosticism was regarded, by some, as a virgin-mother. One gnostic sect even gave her a child named Jesus. But here Christian influence is apparent, and in any case this 'Jesus' is another spiritual entity, not a human one; the birth does not take place in the world we know.

Impregnation by a Flower

When we descend to that world, we do not find a distinct 'virgin birth' motif before Christianity. What we do find is an 'abnormal impregnation' motif. A woman is said to have achieved motherhood in some extraordinary way. She may or may not have been a virgin, usually not, but it is seldom of any consequence to the story.

Such legends fall into two classes. The first is the more important – the 'divine begetting' type of legend, which confers honour on a hero by making out that his father was a god. Sometimes the deity appears to the future mother in his own person, taking a shape, generally but not always human, which permits sexual intercourse. This is a popular Hindu theme. Several heroes in the epic Mahabharata are the sons of gods who came to their mothers undisguised. Or the god may impersonate a mortal – the woman's husband, for instance, as when Zeus fathers Hercules by assuming the likeness of Amphitryon (see HERCULES). Or the god may cause pregnancy by a means which is not frankly sexual but remains material, as when Zeus enters Danae in a shower of gold.

Divine parentage was claimed for famous men well into historical times. Pythagoras and Plato were allegedly sons of Apollo. Alexander the Great was born to Olympias, Philip of Macedon's wife, after Zeus embraced her in the form of a serpent. An Indian legend tells more cryptically how Buddha projected himself into the womb of Maya, his chosen earthly mother, and she dreamed that she conceived a white elephant (see GAUTAMA). The story exists in several versions, some of which add fantastic details, but there is no claim that Maya was a virgin. Like the mothers of most of the other famous men, she lived as a married woman in normal relations with a husband.

The second, more primitive type of legend concerns pregnancies induced by magic. Here the father is apt to be secondary, or wholly absent, and the stress is on the magic. The remote inspiration of all such tales is to be sought in an early phase of society when conception was imperfectly understood, and the sexual act was not recognized as the cause, or as the sole cause. Generation might be ascribed to the wind, to certain foods, to unseen spirits. Even when the process was better grasped, magical objects or substances might still be used to make women bear children.

Stories reflecting this naive state of mind are numerous. Sometimes the heroine conceives when a man looks at her. More often she does it alone, through swallowing a pebble, a blade of grass or some other potent object. Fo-hi, the legendary founder of the Chinese Empire, was conceived by a girl who ate a flower which clung to her garment as she bathed. In such tales there is no working of divine power, no miracle in the religious sense. Impregnation occurs by material means; only the means are non-sexual, and probably suggested by ancient misinformation. Virginity, even when it is part of the story (as it is with Fo-hi), is incidental.

The orthodox Christian statement is that Jesus, an historical person, was conceived through a divinely-ordained exception to the laws of Nature. God's Holy Spirit caused an embryo to exist in Mary's womb. The gospels – though, unavoidably, they use sexual metaphors – do not describe a physical act or a material means; and the virginity is crucial. To equate what happens with the various 'divine begettings' is to obscure a profound difference of idea.

Christ's Family Tree

Nor are the origins of the story at all obvious. Theories of a gradual growth of legend, long after everyone who knew the truth was dead, are hard to sustain. The gospels of Matthew and Luke were composed within the lifetime of many of Christ's younger contemporaries. The two narratives are different, but not contradictory. Both seem to reflect an early and widespread belief.

Biblical scholars have claimed to detect a contrast in style between the opening passages of Luke and the rest. This could suggest interpolation, but it could also suggest that the author incorporated a memoir by someone close to Mary herself.

The strongest counter-argument is that the two genealogies, Matthew 1. 1–16, and Luke 3. 23–38, tracing Jesus's descent from David through Joseph, his nominal father, would be pointless if Joseph were not his true father; so that their Christian compilers must have thought he was. But this does not follow. The relations with Joseph would have established the legal Davidic lineage which was a mark of the Messiah, even if it were only adoptive. Here for once a pre-Christian case is helpful: Alexander's being the son of Zeus did not prevent his being counted also as a descendant of Hercules through Philip. Joseph's status as an adoptive parent is likewise enough to account for the references to him in the gospels as the father of Jesus.

The Virgin Birth seems, then, to have been a Christian tenet well before the close of the 1st century AD. There is no reliable trace of its being challenged as an innovation, except by one sect, the Ebionites (see EBIONITES). Nor is there any trace of Divine parentage was claimed for many heroes of legend. Perseus was the son of the supreme god Zeus, who visited his mother Danae in the form of a shower of gold: painting by Charles Natoire (right). It was prophesied that the child would kill his grandfather, so Danae and the young Perseus were put into a chest and cast adrift: drawing by Arthur Rackham (below)

Chris Barker

Girauldon

C. M. Dixon

Ikon illustrating the story of Christ's nativity, from the Church of the Virgin at Potamies, Crete. The belief that Jesus was born of a virgin as a result of divine action was accepted by the Church well before the end of the 1st century AD; earlier, non-Christian accounts of divine births generally do not claim that the mother was a virgin a rival tradition outside the Church. Jews said that Jesus was conceived through Mary's misconduct; but since they gave her seducer's name as Pantheros – which is variously spelt and corrupted, but originally merely an anagram of parthenos, 'virgin' – the rumour is a scandal without historical substance (see JESUS).

Catholic tradition adds that Mary stayed a virgin always, with Joseph living in voluntary celibacy, accepting that she belonged to no man. If she did, several references to Jesus's 'brothers' in the Bible and in the historian Josephus have to be explained away. The vagueness of relation-words among Jews at that time would allow the 'brothers' to be cousins. But an established Christian belief in Mary's perpetual virginity is hard to trace in the early centuries, though several Fathers of the Church endorse it. Misunderstanding of the further dogma of the Immaculate Conception (which states that Mary was conceived sinless, as the chosen and predestined vessel) has fostered a mistaken notion that she too, in Catholic belief, was born of a virgin. This is an error.

Queries have been raised as to whether the Virgin Birth might have happened without a miracle. Parthenogenesis in mammals is not impossible. It has been induced in rabbits, though all the offspring were female. Cases are cited of women conceiving after bathing in the same water as a man; and of a twin being 'born' as an embryo inside the other twin and eventually expelled. If a rationalization of the Christian story is wanted, it could be argued that Jesus was the child of an abnormal pregnancy sincerely regarded as miraculous, and that this helped to invest him with a supernatural aura. But such a theory cannot be more than speculative.

(See also MARY.)

GEOFFREY ASHE

FURTHER READING: Thomas Boslooper, The Virgin Birth (S.C.M. Press, 1962).

Virginity

State valued in various religious and magical traditions, because it implies innocence, or concentration on spiritual things, or because it implies a reservoir of untapped force; the taking of a woman's virginity is frequently hedged about with taboos; in legend, only a virgin can tame a unicorn; objects used in ritual magic are required to be 'virgin'.

See RITUAL MAGIC; SELF-DENIAL; SEX; UNICORN; WOMAN.

Virgin Mary

The mother of Jesus; numerous legends grew up about her, and in popular Christian belief she was elevated to the level of a goddess; her cult demonstrates 'the importance of the female in the thought and feelings of ordinary people when expressed in religious faith and practice'.

See MARY; VIRGIN BIRTHS.

MAN, MYTH & MAGIC

The Illustrated Encyclopedia of Mythology, Religion and the Unknown

1994

Digitized by the Internet Archive
in 2013

http://archive.org/details/manmythmagici20cave

SAUSALITO PUBLIC LIBRARY
2-28-95

3 1111 01487 6914

REFERENCE LIBRARY USE ONLY

For Reference

Not to be taken from this room

MAN, MYTH & MAGIC

VOLUME 20

Virg-Zurv

MAN, MYTH & MAGIC

The Illustrated Encyclopedia of Mythology, Religion and the Unknown

Editor-in-Chief
Richard Cavendish

Editorial Board
C. A. Burland; Professor Glyn Daniel;
Professor E. R. Dodds; Professor Mircea Eliade;
William Sargant; John Symonds;
Professor R. J. Zwi Werblowsky;
Professor R. C. Zaehner.

New Edition edited and compiled by Richard Cavendish and Brian Innes

MARSHALL CAVENDISH
NEW YORK, LONDON, TORONTO, SYDNEY

Sausalito Public Library
Sausalito, California 94965

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor-in-Chief	Richard Cavendish
Editorial Board	C. A . Burland Glyn Daniel E. R. Dodds Mircea Eliade William Sargant John Symonds R. J. Zwi Werblowsky R. C. Zaehner
Special Consultants	Rev. S. G. F. Brandon Katherine M. Briggs William Gaunt Francis Huxley John Lehmann
Deputy Editor	Isabel Sutherland
Assistant Editors	Frank Smyth Malcolm Saunders Tessa Clark Julie Thompson Polly Patullo
Art Director	Brian Innes
Art Editor	Valerie Kirkpatrick
Design Assistant	Andrzej Bielecki
Picture Editors	John McKenzie Ann Horton

REVISED 1985

Executive Editor	Yvonne Deutch
Editorial Consultant	Paul G. Davis
Editors	Emma Fisher Mary Lambert Sarah Litvinoff

REVISED 1995

Editors	Richard Cavendish Brian Innes
Assistant Editor	Amanda Harman

Frontispiece: The Vision, by Chagall: a census in 1899 suggested that one person in sixteen sees an apparition once in the course of a lifetime, and that one in thirty of these is of a religious, exalted or highly poetic nature (John Webb)

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication Data

Man, myth and magic: the illustrated encyclopedia of mythology, religion and the unknown / editor in chief, Richard Cavendish

Rev. ed. of Man, myth & magic.
Includes bibliographical references and index
ISBN 1-85435-731-X (set)
1. Occultism – Encyclopedias. 2. Mythology – Encyclopedias. 3. Religion – Encyclopedias.
I. Cavendish, Richard. II. Man, myth & magic.
BF 1407.M34 1994
133'.03 – dc20

94-10784
CIP

Published by Marshall Cavendish Corporation
2415 Jerusalem Avenue
North Bellmore, New York 11710

© Marshall Cavendish Corporation 1995
© Marshall Cavendish Ltd 1983, 1985
© B. P. C. Publishing Limited 1970

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced or utilized in any form or by any means electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system, without permission from the copyright holders.

Printed and Bound in Italy by L.E.G.O. S.p.a. Vicenza.

CONTENTS Volume 20

Virgo	2743
Vishnu	2744
Visions	2747
Voodoo	2751
Wagner	2757
A.E.Waite	2759
Waldenses	2759
Walsingham	2763
Walworth Jumpers	2764
Wand	2765
Wandering Bishops	2767
Wandering Jew	2770
Water	2771
Weather Magic	2777
Thomas Weir	2779
Werewolf	2779
Western Mystery Tradition	2784
Whale	2787
Wheel	2788
White	2791
White Magic	2792
Whitsun	2796
Widdershins	2796
Wild Hunt	2796
Wildwood	2797
Mrs Willett	2804
Will-o-the-Wisp	2805
Willow	2805
Wings	2806
Winter	2809
Wisdom Literature	2814
Wish	2814
Wish-Bone	2814
Wishing-Well	2814
Witchcraft	2815
Wolf	2819
Woman	2822
Women's Mysteries	2832
Woodpecker	2836
Wraith	2836
Wreath	2836
Wren	2837
J.M.H.-Wronski	2838
Wryneck	2839
Yahweh	2839
W.B.Yeats	2842
Yew	2845
Yggdrasil	2846
Yin and Yang	2846
Yoga	2846
Zealots	2852
Zen	2854
Zeus	2862
Zion	2867
Zodiac	2867
Zombies	2868
Zoroastrianism	2870
Zulu	2876
Zurvan	2880

VIRGO

THIS is one of the 'mutable' signs in traditional astrology (the others being Gemini, Sagittarius and Pisces), so termed because the Sun is 'in' them at times of the year when one season is changing into another. In Virgo's case the dates are 23 August to 22 September, when summer gives way to autumn, and the effect on you, if Virgo is important in your birth chart, is to give you a strong impulse to be of service to others, as a parallel to the way in which the old season is making way for the new to further the progress of the year. Astrologers also say that you will be changeable and adaptable, but this is modified by the fact that Virgo is associated with the element of earth, which in terms of personality analysis is translated into 'keeping one's feet on the ground'.

Those born under the sign of the Virgin do not, of course, necessarily have defective love-lives as a result, but they are expected to be quiet and undemonstrative in affairs of the heart. They may be genuinely affectionate but not fully involved with their partners, and in general they tend to keep themselves to themselves and to shrink away from very close relationships with other people. Unassuming and retiring, they are modest, prudent, and possessed of considerable cool charm. Strong Virgo influence is said to produce a personality that is spinsterish in the bad sense.

The influence of Mercury, the sign's ruling planet, brings intelligence, excellent communicative abilities, possibly a knack for languages. The Virgo person is likely to be logical and tidy-minded, suspicious of abstract ideas and emotional attitudes, fond of exactitude, perhaps pedantic.

Sensible, reliable, busy, cautious, careful with money, the Virgo person's preference for practical concerns is not a mark of materialism but is harnessed to his genuine and idealistic bent for service. Natives of Virgo are said to make good doctors, teachers, accountants and secretaries.

Those born under Virgo are destined to be of service to others, unassuming and retiring, modest and prudent: representation of Virgo from a 15th-century astrological treatise

British Museum

In early Hindu mythology Vishnu was relatively unimportant, but through coalescing with other gods he achieved – with Shiva – a supreme place in the Hindu pantheon

VISHNU

THE HINDUS are not monotheists, strictly speaking, but they all agree that there is one supreme and eternal Principle, one abiding reality behind the whole phenomenal universe which is in a state of perpetual flux. This belief is central to Hinduism and because neither the Buddhists nor the Jains (see JAINS) believe in such a Principle, the Hindus call them nastikas, 'heretics', or more literally, 'people who do not believe in Being', that is to say in immutable Being beyond all becoming. This 'Being' is the Absolute, and in theology it is called Brahman or simply the 'Self' (see BRAHMAN). Brahman is beyond all attributes and all characterization: but if you conceive of it as possessing attributes such as omnipotence, omniscience, and sovereignty, then it is God.

Hinduism, however, started as a polytheistic religion and only gradually came to an awareness of Brahman as the eternal ground of all existence. Later still it arrived at the idea that the ground of existence is also the Lord of existence – is God. In an early hymn the question is asked: 'What god shall we revere with the oblation?' The answer is 'Prajapati, the Lord of Creatures.' But this solution was really no solution at all, for it implies the further question, 'Which of the many gods mentioned in the early scriptures is the Lord of Creation? Which of the many gods is the one true God?' For a time Prajapati enjoyed this honour, but Prajapati came to be identified with the sacrifice, both sacrifice as it is performed in ritual and with the cosmic sacrifice of Prajapati himself which was said to have resulted in the manifestation of this multiple world out of an original unity. At about the same period we find Vishnu too being identified with the sacrifice and therefore with Prajapati, 'the Lord of Creatures'.

In the earliest Hindu scripture, the Rig-Veda, Vishnu turns up from time to time but he is quite unimportant. He is the faithful companion of Indra who, during the period of the Rig-Veda, was the greatest of the gods, the patron of the Aryans as they swept into India and the chastizer of the aboriginal inhabitants, the god of the storm and of war (see INDIA). The only action attributed separately to Vishnu is his striding out three paces:

> I will proclaim the manly powers of Vishnu
> Who measured out earth's broad expanses,
> Propped up the highest place of meeting:
> Three steps he paced, the widely striding!
>
> Though one, in threefold wise he has propped up Heaven and earth, all beings and all worlds . . .
>
> There indeed the widely striding Bull's > Highest footstep, copious, downward shines.

From this hymn it is clear that Vishnu's three paces represent the 'measuring out', that is, the creation of the universe; and his highest step seems to be the sky. Later it was to be identified with Being itself, that is, Brahman or the Absolute.

Creator, Sustainer, Destroyer

The seed from which Vishnu developed to his full stature as the supreme deity is already here; but it is a very small seed from which so immense a tree should have grown. It was, however, not the only seed, for the full-fledged Vishnu is clearly the result of the coalescence of many gods, none of which belong to the oldest mythology of the Veda. In the course of time he coalesced with Narayana, who appears in a rather later Vedic text as a divine sage who offers sacrifice and 'becomes this whole universe'. In the Great Epic, the Mahabharata, Narayana dwells, though invisible himself, in a mythical 'White Island' where he is surrounded by his devotees – strange beings by any standards, since their heads are like umbrellas and they each have four testicles – who revere him alone as the one God and thereby partake of his eternal essence. The cult of Narayana in conjunction with Vishnu is made real to his worshippers through his ten incarnations Right Vishnu in his aspect as man-lion Below left Vishnu as Rama, hero of the Rama Yana who was cheated of his throne Below right Vishnu as Krishna, the youth whose affairs with the cowherd's daughters are held to be an analogy of the love affair between God and the soul

G. L. Carlisle

G. L. Carlisle

William MacQuitty

William MacQuitty

'For the protection of the good, for the destruction of evil-doers . . . I come into being age after age': Vishnu, in carvings from the magnificent rock temple of Mahabalipuram, south India, 7th century AD

Vasudeva is attested by an inscription from the 2nd century BC.

But who was Vasudeva? In the Epic and the Puranas (300 BC – 1000 AD) Vasudeva is the patronymic of Krishna (see KRISHNA) whose father was Vasudeva; and this adds a new complication, for the origins of the Krishna cult are even more obscure than the cult of Vishnu himself. By the time of the Epic in which the man Krishna plays a leading part, he is already identified with Vishnu and is his incarnation on earth. As such he delivers the most celebrated of all the Hindu scriptures, the Bhagavad Gita (see BHAGAVAD GITA), in which he explains his own nature as God, reveals himself in a quite terrifying vision as all-consuming Time, shows how he is not only identical with Brahman, the Absolute, but actually transcends it, explains the supreme merit and efficacy of loving devotion to the one God, and also explains the purpose of God's incarnation as man. 'Whenever the law of righteousness withers away,' he says, 'and lawlessness arises, then do I generate myself on earth. For the protection of the good, for the destruction of evil-doers, for the setting up of the law of righteousness I come into being age after age.'

In the Great Epic, Krishna is Vishnu incarnate, but Vishnu himself, though he appears in most of this enormous poem as the supreme deity, is not undisputedly so. He is Bhagavan, 'the Lord', but in the background there lurks disconcertingly Mahadeva, the 'Great God' Shiva (see SHIVA), whose supremacy Krishna himself acclaims on occasion. The two gods are still clearly rivals, but a compromise is reached whereby the one true God is invoked as Hari-Hara, hari, the 'tawny' or 'he who takes away (sin)', being one of the stock epithets of Vishnu, and hara the 'seizer' being one of Shiva's. For from the time of the Great Epic until today God has been worshipped by the Hindus either in the form of Vishnu or of Shiva: for the worshippers of Vishnu, Vishnu (and his incarnations) alone is God, for the worshippers of Shiva the same is true of Shiva. In the so-called Hindu Trinity (the Trimurti or 'three-form' of God, consisting of Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva) Brahma is associated with creation, Vishnu with sustaining, and Shiva with destruction, just as in Christianity, the Father came to be associated with creation, the Son with redemption, and the Holy Spirit with sanctification. This, however, is a purely theological device and in no way influenced the actual practice of the two dominant trends of Hinduism for which either Vishnu or Shiva is the one God who creates, sustains, and destroys the universe in unending cycles of ever-revolving time.

The Creation myth associated with Vishnu is rather naive. At the end of each cosmic cycle Vishnu falls asleep on the cosmic serpent Shesha. When he wakes up, a lotus grows out of his navel and in the middle of the flower Brahma is seated, and Brahma then proceeds with the creation of the universe. Meanwhile the wrathful Shiva emerges from his forehead ready to destroy all that Brahma has created.

Among the followers of Shiva, Shiva is worshipped directly or in the form of his erect phallus; but for the devotees of Vishnu, Vishnu is made real to them through his incarnations or avatars, as they are called in most Indian languages (from the Sanskrit avatara meaning a 'descent'). These avatars are either a full incarnation of the supreme God or a partial one. The number of incarnations varies but the generally accepted number is ten. These are incarnations as fish, as tortoise, as boar, as man-lion, as dwarf, as Parashurama ('Rama with the axe'), as Rama-candra, as Krishna, as the Buddha, and as Kalkin who is yet to come.

Heroic Incarnations

The first four incarnations need not detain us although some of them have a respectable antiquity. Vishnu became incarnate as Rama 'with the axe' in order to extirpate the warrior class who had come to challenge the supremacy of the Brahmins, but this Rama is a purely literary character with no cultic significance. Vishnu's incarnation as the Buddha, however, is very surprising and the orthodox explanation that the Buddha's function was to lead astray many from the true faith as formulated in the Vedas is even more surprising. In actual practice Vishnu is worshipped either in his incarnation as Krishna or as Rama(candra), the heroes of the Mahabharata and the Rama Yana respectively. Of the two cults, that of Krishna is the more emotional, for the object of worship is not so much the Krishna of the Mahabharata or the Bhagavad Gita as of the youthful and wayward Krishna of the Puranas whose love affairs with the cowherds' daughters in Vrindavan are held to be an analogy of the love affair between God and the soul.

The history of the elevation of Rama-(candra) to the rank of an incarnation of Vishnu is no less obscure. In the Rama Yana (except in the first and last books which are generally regarded as being a later addition) Rama is simply the virtuous hero, the heir-apparent cheated of his throne by a vindictive queen, the faithful husband, and the just destroyer of the demon king who had carried off his wife. But by the time that the Rama Yana was refashioned in Hindi by the 17th century poet Tulsi Das, Rama had for long been accepted as an incarnation of Vishnu, and his earthly life (almost entirely mythical) was held up as a model for the ordinary man to follow. Rama had become quite as much an incarnation of Vishnu as had Krishna, and the Hindi form of his name, Ram, had come to mean God. And so it was that Mahatma Gandhi, assassinated by an 'orthodox' Hindu fanatic, died with the name 'Ram' on his lips.

(See also HINDUISM.)

R. C. ZAEHNER

FURTHER READING: Alain Daniélou, Hindu Polytheism (Routledge, 1964).

At Limpias in Spain, in 1919, a girl said that she had seen the figure of Christ in the parish church perspire visibly and move its eyes, and between 1930 and 1950 the Roman Catholic Church investigated 300 cases of apparitions to children and 30 sets of appearances of the Virgin Mary: but 'the wisdom of the Church and the teaching of its greatest intellects and holiest saints has made it circumspect'

VISIONS

THE WORD vision is used in the religious sphere to mean what elsewhere is called an apparition. The percipient of an apparition has the experience of 'seeing' (in some sense or other) something which is not present in the same way as ordinary physical objects are. Sir Francis Galton (1822–1911), in his researches into human faculties, encountered a perfect example of an apparition. A lady novelist assured him that she once saw the principal character of one of her novels come through the door and glide towards her. As the character was fictional there was no possibility that the apparition corresponded to any external cause. The experience thus originated within the lady's mind and can be described as endogenic (caused from within).

Apparitions are sometimes loosely called hallucinations (from Latin hallucinatio – I dream) bearing the implication that they are endogenic. This is because apparitions commonly result from drugs, fever, exhaustion or mental illness. The present writer prefers to reserve the term hallucination for endogenic hallucinations, and to use the word apparition or vision for an appearance whose cause may be internal or external.

Are there in fact any apparitions which are exogenic (with an external cause)? Religious visions are difficult to interpret but psychical research provides good evidence of exogenic apparitions (see GHOSTS; HAUNTED HOUSES; SPONTANEOUS PSI EXPERIENCES). Occasionally, at a time of death or crisis the likeness of the person concerned appears in recognizable form to a friend or relative, perhaps on the other side of the world. The apparitions are sometimes clearly unreal, being transparent or appearing in a 'pool of light' or in a 'picture frame', but quite often they are natural enough to be mistaken for the actual person. Theories differ as to how these crisis apparitions come about. Some writers claim that the person whose apparition is seen has an 'astral body' which is a duplicate of his physical body (including clothes) and is 'projected' to the vicinity of the percipient (see ASTRAL BODY). I prefer an explanation by telepathy or 'thought-transference'; a violent 'thought wave' impinges on some level of the percipient's mind and is translated into a picture of the person in crisis.

The Vision of Father Simon by Francesca Ribalta: Simon was a 16th century Italian aesthete who walked the streets at night meditating on the Road to Calvary; one night he heard trumpets and saw Christ, carrying the cross, turn to look at him

National Gallery

A century ago the Society for Psychical Research carried out a census of apparitions and obtained 17,000 replies to its questionnaire. It appeared that about one person in 16 sees an apparition once in the course of a lifetime. More than one third are of persons living or dead and known to the percipient. It was found also that about one in 30 of all apparitions are of a religious, exalted or highly poetic nature.

A large proportion of apparitions are hypnagogic hallucinations (from Greek hypnos – sleep) and occur on the borderline between sleeping and waking, being very akin to dreams. Like dreams, these apparitions are mainly endogenic but some may, like crisis apparitions, have an external cause, because there is evidence of telepathic or clairvoyant effects both in dreams and in the hypnagogic state.

All the same, many interesting visionary experiences cannot be reliably distinguished from dreams. They contain revived memories, but in new combinations. If the Jungian and Freudian psychologies are true, hallucinations may also contain symbolic representations of unconscious urges, aspirations or anxieties. This is true of normal people and especially true of the hallucinations of the insane.

Emotion certainly is productive of visions. Carl Jung (see JUNG) speaks of a spontaneous vision experienced as a child while in a choking fit. He saw above him a glowing blue circle about the size of the full moon. Within it there moved golden figures which he took to be angels. Once, when my own father, a sea-captain, was trying to extricate his vessel from a whirlpool and debating whether to change course, my mother's apparition appeared before him on the ship's bridge and told him, with emphasis, 'You will get out if you change course!' – as in fact he did.

A Wavering Rose

Many hallucinations are extremely vivid and lifelike so that, as with some crisis apparitions, the percipient may think he is actually seeing in the ordinary way. But with many visions, particularly in the religious sphere, it is hard to decide from the visionary's words exactly in what sense the vision was 'seen'. Roman Catholic theorists such as St Thomas Aquinas (1226-74) recognized three types of vision; the intellectual vision, the imaginative vision and the corporeal vision. The theory of the corporeal vision was akin to the modern astral body explanation of crisis apparitions. If one had a vision of Jesus, it might be a corporeal vision; one was actually seeing either the resurrection body of the Christ or alternatively a kind of wraith fashioned by the angels. On the other hand, it might be that the percipient received only an imaginative vision – a purely mental image, though a vivid one and induced by the action of God. St Thomas, of course, like all reputable theologians, reserved the possibility of a vision being an endogenic hallucination not divinely caused.

Some people have a remarkable power of mental visualization, so that what they 'see in the mind's eye' can be as vivid as things actually seen. Such exceptionally clear imagery is described as eidetic (from Greek eidos – form), and is sometimes aided by looking at a plain or dark background. When Goethe shut his eyes and thought of a rose he would clearly see a rosette for as long as he wished, though it wavered a little and moved its petals.

Galton came across a few visionaries who said that they received their visions in two entirely distinct ways. Thus one informant could experience eidetic images at conscious command, but these were vague and shadowy in comparison with his spontaneous visions, which occurred unexpectedly and quite outside his mental control. These visions were of landscapes more strange and beautiful than any he had ever seen in the ordinary way. Such visions which arise, as it were, of their own motion can be called autonomous, but they are not necessarily exogenic. The visions of people with a poetic or literary bent, like their dreams, have an intellectual and idyllic content. In 1944 Jung, who was recovering after a heart attack, would awake at midnight and spend an hour or so in 'an utterly transformed state' as if 'in ecstasy', as he watched unfolding before him various mythical occurrences such as the wedding of the cabalistic beings Malkhuth and Tifereth in the 'garden of pomegranates'.

Ecstasy is a peculiar state which is sometimes entered spontaneously or in the course of prayer or meditation on sublime themes (see ECSTASY). During it the ecstatic person consciously experiences any or all of a variety of thoughts and feelings. Visions are common but there can be also a sense of bliss or of union with the deity or a benign cosmic power. Contact with the surroundings is not always completely lost. Jung could eat his supper and comment to the night nurse on his visions.

One of the most remarkable visionaries of all time, Emanuel Swedenborg (see SWEDENBORG), spoke of three distinct kinds of 'spiritual sight' (apart from dreams). There was vision 'with the eyes closed, which is as vivid as with the eyes open'. At other times, when wide awake and walking in the city streets, Swedenborg would be 'in vision, seeing groves, rivers, palaces and men'. He described his third type of experience as differing entirely from 'the common imagination of men' and as a state 'when those things which are in heaven, such as spirits and other objects, are represented'. Swedenborg believed that he had some kind of direct sight of actual spirits and divine beings in these latter visions which, he said, came to him only when in ecstasy or 'trance'.

The English poet and painter William Blake (see BLAKE) was erroneously regarded by some as mad because of his visions, which he described in poems and epics. Chastised by his mother for seeing the prophet Ezekiel in the garden, at the age of eight he saw 'a tree filled with angels; bright angelic wings bespangled every bough like stars'. It is likely that children experience eidetic imagery and autonomous visions more commonly than adults realize. In Blake's case his visionary faculty expanded to cosmic proportions in adulthood. Once, by the seashore, everything in the world appeared as 'men seen afar'. Eventually all objects fused and combined into 'One Man, the Christ' on whose bosom Blake reposed. When asked about the reality of his visions he replied that he saw them 'in imagination' and, pointing to his forehead, said that he saw them 'in here'. The visions reported by prophets and saints were, he believed, merely poetic.

Numerous visions of divinity have been described by their recipients as ineffable and incapable of expression in words. The German mystic John Tauler (1300-61) said that, 'sometimes the grace is so manifest that it is impossible to doubt that God has actually shown Himself', but '...no [distinct] idea of what has been seen is retained. We cannot understand what it was. Only we know with certainty that we cannot analyse it.' Tauler's comment suggests not only ineffability but, with visions as with dreams, a tendency to forget them. We may suppose also that some visions, like dreams, are subject to the process of 'secondary elaboration' by which they are modified in the recollection. This is to be suspected in the case of such rhapsodical visionaries as Venerable Marina of Escobar (1554-1633) who found herself before the heavenly Jerusalem, which was encircled by an exceedingly vast river. When interrogated by her confessor, Marina declared that her clearness of perception was not much inferior to St Paul's.

Moving Statues

Other mystics have described their experiences in rather different terms. Blessed Angela of Foligno (1248-1309) said that, 'when the most high God comes into the rational soul... and she [the soul] seeth Him within her, without any bodily form... the eyes of the soul behold a fulness, spiritual not bodily'. Such visions seem to be essentially cases of seeing with 'the mind's eye'. However, St Ignatius Loyola (1491-1556), founder of the Jesuits, whose description of his visions can be relied on, perceived 'the Divine Being, not obscurely but in a vivid and highly luminous brightness'.

Loyola distinguished between visions of this compelling sort and 'intellectual perceptions' (that is, mental imagery) which he also had, particularly when gazing into running water. This recalls the German mystic Jacob Boehme (see BOEHME), who once saw a vision in a shining pewter dish.

The factors that seem to be operative – suggestibility, expectancy and narrowing of attention onto a single object – are perhaps adequate to explain some of the famous cases in which numerous observers have seen statues move or weep. In 1919 at Limpias near Santander in Spain, a girl of 12 said that during the sermon she had seen the figure of Christ on the altar of the parish church perspire visibly and move its eyes. Before long the number of daily pilgrims rose to 4,000. The majority saw nothing, but some saw tears in the Saviour's eyes, others blood on the brow, or the head turning. Significantly, most of these prodigies occurred only after the percipients had stared for long hours at the altar.

The Accuracy of Visions

Literary problems arise with the very extensive writings in which a long series of mystical ladies have reported their revelations received during ecstasies. St Bridget (1302-73), patron saint of Sweden, said that our Lord remarked to her that she retouched her visions through not having properly understood them; but he approved her secretaries for adding 'colour and ornamentation'. St Bridget often saw heaven, earth and hell simultaneously, as did St Lidwine of Schiedam (1330-1433) every night for 28 years. The vision of hell had been, of course, a common literary theme ever since Plato wrote the Phaedo. Visionaries, one suspects, are somewhat at the mercy of what they have read.

St Hildegard, Abbess of Rupertsberg in the Rhineland, received her scientific knowledge from a 'divine light' experienced in ecstasy since the age of four. Her numerous treatises are, unfortunately, replete with just those factual errors prevalent in the 12th century. Confidence in her treatment of the sapphire or the lodestone evaporates on encountering her scientific explanation of the griffin and the unicorn. St Frances of Rome (1384-1440) failed in astronomy. When she visited the celestial regions in her visions she distinctly saw the sky as a hollow sphere of blue crystal, an admissible idea in the 15th century, but tending to be outmoded even in Spain when Blessed Maria of Agreda repeated the same error in her Mystical City of God. Maria, a woman of intellect and good sense, actually doubted the accuracy of her visions, until her faith became absolute after a visit to the throne of God. The Eternal Father produced a richly decorated book which the Blessed Virgin certified to be her own true history. Maria was gratified to find the text in perfect agreement with her own Life of the Virgin. However, the biographical details appear to have been revealed in two earlier books, a Nativity of the Blessed Virgin and the Raptures of Blessed Amadeus.

The greatest of the mystical doctors of the Church, St Francis de Sales (see FRANCIS) and St John of the Cross (see JOHN) were profoundly suspicious of the accuracy of visions. St John used to quote with some relish the posthumous appearance of St Teresa of Avila (see TERESA) to a Carmelite nun. The great foundress and mystic warned the visionary that the vast majority of visions were untrustworthy. Whether the saint actually returned from paradise is uncertain, but her advice was in character. In his old age, Loyola doubted the validity of his own youthful visions.

The wisdom of the Church and the teaching of its greatest intellects and holiest saints has made it circumspect. In the 17th century it denounced more than a score of false visionaries. When it specifically approves an apparition or revelation, it does so in terms of a formula laid down by the learned Pope Benedict XIV (1675-1758). Even approved revelations are accorded only the probability of being true, and have at most the credibility 'of human faith according to the rules of prudence', and any Catholic is at liberty to reject or criticize. Discretion is certainly justified, because in Western Europe between 1930 and 1950 the Church investigated 30 series of apparitions of the Virgin Mary alone, and 300 cases of individual apparitions to children. Only three apparitions have been recognized in the present century: Fatima, Beauraing and Banneux, though the Church sometimes authorizes shrines without officially endorsing the visions which have led to their foundation.

It is clear that visionaries often make gross errors in matters of ascertainable fact. And in questions where the truth is not verifiable they are apt to conflict with the Church, or with scripture or with one another. Are they ever right? It is easy to satirize the poor visionaries. But occasionally, it must be admitted, they gather information by other than normal means. Among the reams of unverifiable material that Catherine Emmerich (1774-1824) dictated concerning the life of Jesus are many accurate topographical details concerning the Holy Land, including place names. In view of the limited knowledge of Palestine available in Europe in her day, it is hard to see how she could have acquired this information by normal means.

The Angels of Mons were the creation of an English journalist, but many British soldiers came to believe that they had actually seen the heavenly warriors hold back the might of the German army at Mons in 1914: French painting of the event, 1920

Photolensens

National Gallery, London

The Vision of the Blessed Gabriele, by Crivelli

But what of the apparitions of Jesus, or the Eternal Father or the Holy Virgin? Do they represent communications from God or from Mary? From theology we know that the visionary cannot be receiving a direct view of God in the same sense that he sees Mr Jones who lives down the road, because God is unlimited and immaterial. The visionary is therefore either seeing a wraith fashioned by the angels or is experiencing a mental image. In the first case the agency would be supernatural, but there is no real evidence that any visions are 'corporeal ones' in the sense of Aquinas. In the second case the image may be purely endogenic. But this cannot be logically proved to be so.

We would be helped in this enquiry if we really knew what value to put on mystic experience in general. The mystic feels a sense of certainty as to the 'truth' of his experiences and a feeling of union with the ultimate power in the universe. These are certainly weights to be thrown into the scales of judgement, but it is difficult to know just what weight to give them. St Teresa, describing some of her feelings of spiritual comfort and assurance while in ecstasy, compared the soul to the silkworm in the cocoon it has spun for itself. And many scholars have wondered if mystical experience is not just this, a comforting illusion which the mind, in spiritual or other travail, spins for itself.

A Matter of Fashion

It cannot be denied that there are 'fashions' in visions. In the Middle Ages visionaries saw saints and martyrs and, in certain limited circles, apparitions of the child Jesus were extremely frequent. Later, visions of the suffering and wounded Jesus or of his Sacred Heart were favoured. In recent times the Virgin Mary has almost monopolized the field. Since Lourdes (see LOURDES) there have been definite series of apparitions occurring at dates announced in advance by the Virgin to her visionaries. On a sceptical view, this conformity of visions to fashion points rather to their being the products of auto-suggestion in harmony with the prevailing climate of religious devotion. But it needs to be said that this argument is something of a two-edged sword if we accept the possibility that a mental impulse, actuated from on high, may be elaborated into a vision from such materials as are available in the mental storehouse of the recipient. Religious psychology is no less replete with subtleties than ordinary psychology, and the present writer would consider it foolish to hasten to a final conclusion concerning the presence or absence of the supernatural in religious visions.

A.R.G. OWEN

FURTHER READING: H. Evans, Visions, Apparitions, Alien Visitors (Aquarian Press, 1984); A. Huxley, The Doors of Perception (Harper & Row, 1970); C. C. Martindale The Message of Fatima (Burns & Oates, 1950); R.C.Zaehner, Mysticism: Sacred and Profane (Oxford University Press, 1980).

Herbert List

VOODOO

Dissociation, possession by and marriage to the gods are the central facts around which the ceremonies and superstitions of Voodoo are organized; Voodoo treats the 'Invisibles' as powerful enemies to be won over and used, and the supernatural as a disease to be turned to good account

THE WORD VOODOO comes from vodun, meaning god, spirit or sacred object in the Fon language of West Africa. It is applied especially to the beliefs and practices found in Haiti, whose inhabitants are, for the most part, descendants of slaves imported from many parts of Africa, and by extension to similar practices in other Caribbean islands, in the Southern states of America, and in Brazil, where plantation slavery was also customary. To Westerners, the word usually denotes black magic and uncouth superstition, such as sticking pins into dolls, casting spells, lighting black candles in cemeteries to Baron Samedi – the lord of the underworld and patron of all black magic – calling up the dead and being familiar with monsters, spirits and zombies. In Jamaica such activities are known as obeah, and certainly Haitians are quite familiar with them. However, Voodoo also refers to a systematic religion in which the gods descend and possess their worshippers, and in which the ancestral spirits are invoked to give oracles and to be a power in the household.

These two aspects of Voodoo make a whole, and it is not easy to distinguish between them because superstitions provide a forcing ground for the religion, which in turn supports and develops their meaning. From the start, children are brought up to be good by being made afraid of the supernatural, and this leaves an indelible imprint on the minds even of highly educated people. They are taught not to get their heads wet, especially with dew, because water is both a solvent and a magnet for spirits, and a man's spirit lives in his head. At night, besides, there are bogies about,

Pocomania ceremonies in Jamaica parallel Haitian Voodoo, with drumming, chanting and dancing for days on end. The initiates collapse in trances in which they experience the world of spirits. These and similar Caribbean and South American cults are based on African religions and doors and windows are carefully closed to keep them at bay. There are some who can get through the thatch: these are the loups-garous or witches who like sucking children's blood, and who are sometimes seen whizzing through the night like fireworks. Midday is another dangerous time, for then no man casts a shadow; which is as much as to say that his soul has temporarily disappeared, and that the air is full of invisible spirits looking for an abode. Children are forbidden to play with their shadows by candlelight, lest they tie them in knots or mislay them. And there is always the tonton macoute, the travelling magician with a satchel over his shoulder containing magical and medicinal plants, dried bits of wild cat, black candles and other paraphernalia. Mothers threaten children that, if they are not good, the tonton will make off with them: it is fitting that the name was given to the bully-boys of the Duvalier regime, who terrorised their political rivals.

In such an atmosphere, obeah is used either to counter such hobgoblins of the mind or to make use of them, and its practitioners are medicine men. A 'medicine' in this sense is something with either magical or pharmacological properties, sometimes both. Consider, for example, the treatment given to a child suffering from the attacks of a loupgarou. It is pale, fretful, wasted, and sometimes goes into convulsions. The medicine man – he may be a tonton macoute, a bokor (sorcerer) or houngan (Voodoo priest) – has thus to kill one bird, and he does it with two stones. He discovers who the witch is – usually a relative or a neighbour who is jealous and resentful of the mother – and works a magic to protect the child and send the magic back to its creator. But he also doses the child with castor oil, because intestinal worms can produce convulsions in young children. The child gets better, the mother is relieved, the witch confesses, and the poisonous atmosphere is dissipated.

Picturepoint London

The Great Good Angel

The object of magic is to affect the soul, either of the victim or of the persecutor. The soul is called the gros bon ange, the great good angel, and is manifested in the shadow and the breath. It coexists with the 'ti bon ange, the little good angel, which is equated with the penumbra, the spirit, the conscience – it is sometimes also called the zombie. Both inhabit the corps cadavre or corpse body. The weak element in this ensemble is the gros bon ange, without which the other two elements lose contact. It is easily infected by emotions, especially those of suspicion, resentment, envy, anger and lust, by sudden shocks such as a death in the family, a failure in business or being jilted. It can also be stimulated by the casting of spells, the use of magical powders or of complicated pieces of apparatus called wanga. For instance, a girl being courted will try to 'hook' her man by serving him dishes in which she has put a piece of bacon she has worn in her shoe for three days running, or her nail and hair clippings, even her menstrual blood. If she is cold towards him, he may discreetly blow on her a powder composed of dried hummingbird flesh and a large number of potent herbs. If she is living with another man, however, he will first use a powder called 'break the household', which causes quarrels. To defeat an enemy he can have recourse to another kind of leaf powder, often containing dead men's bones and cemetery earth, and held to cause paralysis, blindness, impotence or death. Smearing the door of an enemy's house with human dung causes much anxiety; to dig up the bones of his father's corpse (as happened to the late President Duvalier) is even worse, for highly sophisticated kinds of black magic and necromancy can be performed with them.

Magic is nothing less than an underhand intention given symbolic form and used to create an expectation in its victim. There are two dangers in using magic, however. If improperly used, or sent back by a strong magician onto its perpetrator, it can cause what is called a 'shock in return'. On the other hand, it may be so powerful that it needs constant attention. The entity embodying this kind of magic is called a baka, and the owner of this supernatural monster must be prepared to offer it the life of one of his relatives every year unless he is to be devoured by it himself. Bakas are greedy, and are used by greedy men to gain power and money: the service they require shows that paranoia is not far in the offing.

Paranoia is defined as a form of insanity marked by fixed delusions, especially those of grandeur, pride and persecution. On one level it can be said that its most innocuous form is the common sulk, or what Haitians call mauvais sang, bad blood, caused by a failure of expectation and authority, and with a plentiful admixture of suspicious resentment. It sometimes becomes so involuted that a saisissement or seizure results, whereupon a magician or Voodoo priest is called in to diagnose and treat the disorder. The diagnosis is usually straightforward, and the main treatment is to wash the patient's head with water in which seven or 21 leaves of different plants have been shredded. This cools the head and brings the gros bon ange back to its proper place; a counter-magic is employed to influence the person the sulker is involved with.

But sometimes the diagnosis and treatment are both at fault, and the victim is left to his mania until, if he is lucky – which he frequently is – he has a vision in which his malady is personified as a spirit. The spirit prescribes a remedy for the illness, such as a diet of charred maize and water, but remains with the patient even when the cure is completed. For it also gives a formula by which it can be invoked in the future, such as looking at a candle flame, or reciting the Pater Noster backwards seven times; and this allows the patient to set up as a small-time oracular priest or priestess, diagnosing and treating illness and performing black and white magic for a fee.

The case histories of these Voodooists show that disordered emotions of long standing can be precipitated by an apparently trivial incident. A man may smoke a cigarette or drink a cup of coffee given him by a neighbour he has long mistrusted and who has given him a meaningful glance: he goes off in agitation, becomes hysterically dissociated and vomits up such unlikely emblems of his discomfort as lizards, pieces of bark, or a large and poisonous centipede. This is equivalent to a possession, and the vomiting brings him back to himself. He then puts what he has vomited in a bottle and tops it up with rum. It becomes his guardian spirit and oracle, while the liquor can be used as a universal medicine for those in need of treatment. Other sufferers vomit up needles, which they later use in their magical practice, swallowing them when the spirit leaves them in readiness for the next occasion. Still others go sleep-walking and pick up interestingly shaped stones to which the spirit leads them. These stones are placed in saucers, hot rum is poured over them and set aflame, and the liquor again used as a medicine – usually as embrocation. What happens in these and similar cases is that the gros bon ange has externalized its infection, which is then used homoeopathically to treat the infections of other sufferers.

Left Scene from a Voodoo ceremony, photographed at Port au Prince in Haiti: in Voodoo belief, magic and superstition are inextricably enmeshed with a systematic religion Right Baron Samedi, the greedy and lascivious king of the Voodoo cemetery spirits, who is dominant on All Souls' Day, when he possesses women who flock to the graveyards

Popperfoto

Possession by the Loa

Initiation into Voodoo follows a parallel course, under the guidance of a priest and in the context of a traditional rite. There are several reasons for being initiated. The novice may be suffering from a saisissement, or from a series of calamities in his daily life, which the priest diagnoses as coming from the loa (gods), if he has failed to observe his religious duties. Equally, the illness or calamity may be sent on him by his dead parents, whose souls have been 'living in the waters of penitence' and have finished their term there: the duty of their descendant is to bring them up out of the waters and install them upon the family altar. His persecutors are now not the living, who can be countered by black magic, but the dead and the loa: the Invisibles, in fact, who are the principles of grandeur, pride and power, and who are only propitiated by a man changing his own attitude to life. If the Invisibles plague men, therefore, they do so because they also represent the unused faculties and energies which exist in everyone behind the bars of repression, and which make themselves felt when the agent of this repression has died. Initiation into Voodoo not only placates the Invisibles, but transforms them from repressors of desire into helpers for action.

The process of initiation the world over is the undergoing of a mock death followed by the experience of a rebirth (see INITIATION). In Haiti, a not uncommon rider is added, that the death is preceded by an illness, and the rebirth is seen as a cure. The state and future of the novice is diagnosed in terms of the entity plaguing him. If his ancestors are calling upon him to serve them, he can only do so if he serves the loa also.

The problem then is which loa he is to serve. There are for a start several nations of loa, so called because they originated as gods of the various African tribes whose members came to Haiti. Slavery mixed these tribes so well that their descendants all came to be Haitian, and only the gods retained their nationalities. These nations are called Rada from Dahomey, Wangol from Angola, Siniga from Senegal, Congo, Ibo and Naga; there is also an indigenous nation, the revengeful Petro loa, who appear to stem both from the aboriginal Indian population of the island and from the slave population. Families tend to serve the same nation of gods, each of which is a pantheon. The novice may already know which loa destiny has devoted him to, or the priest may have to diagnose it by examining the novice's disorder and matching it to the known character of a suitable loa.

The loa are in fact character patterns which can be seen working both in man and in Nature: Ogoun the blacksmith god, for instance, is a martial demiurge whose hammer is a thunderbolt, and who controls the head of those who are strong-minded. But he may also patronize those who resent strong-mindedness in others, according to the adage: 'The character of the loa is that of his mount.' In either case the loa is invoked to settle a disorder and to lay the foundation for future development, for an initiate may become possessed by many loa during the course of his life.

Once accepted for initiation, the novice has to buy the magical and ritual apparatus for the ceremony, and during one week he goes nightly to the preparatory rites. During these, songs and prayers are intoned which speak of the time of misery which is passing, of the spirit unsheathing itself from the body, of the novices as patients whose cure will benefit the dead, and of the mapou tree, haunt of evil spirits, being felled by the blows of the rite; and interspersed with these songs and prayers is the frequent exclamation: 'There is malice, oh!' On the last evening their heads are washed, and on the Saturday morning they are formally inducted into a room where they will be secluded for another week. The songs at this time speak of the novices being saddled ready for the loa, like a horse for its rider, the usual phrase describing a possession. Strips of palm leaves are shredded to protect and master the novices: these strips are called aizan after a female loa said to be a traitor and a cannibal. A song and a rite to Grand Bois, Great Tree, is performed, the novices are turned brusquely till they are giddy and then thrust into their chamber.

Inside, they lie upon their left sides eating white foods such as are offered to the dead; they learn more passwords and secret gestures, songs and prayers, their heads are again washed with leaves, and everything is done to prepare them for a possession by the loa on whose 'point' they are lying. The next Saturday, fowls are sacrificed and parts of them placed in a govi or ritual pot together with the novice's hair and nail clippings, and his gros bon ange is transferred into the govi. In the temple, cauldrons are set up over small fires and a mixture of flour and oil boiled inside them. The novices are carried out swathed in white sheets, a lump of the boiling mixture is pressed into their hands, and their arms and legs are passed through the flames. They return to their seclusion until the Sunday morning, when they come out barefoot, dressed in white, collars of beads about their necks representing the loa, and hats on their heads to protect them from erring spirits. They are seated at a table under a white sheet, are baptized with a leaf dipped into water and given their new names in Voodoo. The drums strike up, they dance, and the loa possess their new servants.

After 40 days, during which they are forbidden to wash or change their clothes in order to absorb the force of the ritual, they and the priest go into a dark room where he calls up the spirits of those ancestors they wish to serve. Curious flapping sounds are heard as he draws these souls out of the waters of death, and they are made to speak through the ventriloquial medium of the priest, then they are placed in the govis reserved for them, which are also passed through the flames of a fire to heat them and give them life. These govis, together with the one containing the gros bon ange, can either be kept by the initiate or given into the safekeeping of the priest. The novice is now called a hounsi canzo, literally, the initiated spouse of the god.

Initiation by Fire

The novices were brought in. There was a turmoil at the door of the seclusion hut, as the hounsis struggled to get through the crowd – for each novice is hidden under a white sheet and has to be carried on the back of a hounsi, as limp as a corpse...

Idem attended to them in turn. She smeared her hands with cold oil, took the novice's left hand from beneath the sheet and smeared that too. Scooping a handful of the now seething mixture from the zin she pressed it into the novice's hand and closed the fingers over it, for four or five seconds. The père savanne peered anxiously over Idem's shoulder, his candle still alight.

This is the central moment of initiation, when the novice is made to grasp heat without flinching – a heat which will sear the flesh only if the loa are displeased through some lapse on the novice's part. For the nature of the loa themselves is fire, and it requires much courage and preparation to support them.

From one to another of these crouching figures Idem moved, lit by the small fires till all was finished and the novices were humped back through the crowd like unwilling dragons. The pots were now emptied and a mixture of rum and oil brushed onto them, inside and out. Oil was poured into the fires below till ribbons of flame towered into the air, each pot a crucible for some gros-bon-ange. Back the novices were called, still carried by the hounsis, their arms and legs seized and passed through the blaze...

A hounsi called Zett became possessed. Sobgwe, a thunder loa, took her, and she whirled, radiantly good-natured, about the centre post. Idem became possessed: now peering round with staring eyes and nostrils, as Ogoun; now with eyes shut and eyebrows raised, one hand touched the thatch above, as Louis André, the spirit of her grandfather; now as Brave Tonerre Crase, with hunched shoulders and a lengthened jaw working lugubriously under a hollowed face; or as the Baron, an intimate, self-satisfied death.

Francis Huxley The Invisibles

These rites accomplish a number of different things. They emphasize the misery and malice of the world and the sickness of the novice. Seclusion allows this sickness to be incubated, and to hatch out as a loa which becomes the master of the novice's head. His gros bon ange is separated from him and placed in a govi, and so are the spirits of the dead, much as a centipede is put into a bottle of rum: this means that he is protected from further infection and can make use of the spiritual principles involved through ritual forms. He becomes familiar with the complicated rites of Voodoo and becomes one of a congregation. Finally he learns how to endure the fear of dissociation and the pain of possession.

Dissociation at first is not a pleasant experience, being heralded by giddiness, the unstringing of the limbs and the mounting to the head of a nauseating darkness. It can be brought on in an uninitiated person by the atmosphere of a ceremony, and he will stagger about as though in the throes of a saisissement without being fully possessed by a loa. This state is often personified by the loa Grand Bois, a violent and speechless entity who can only grunt and gibber, and is referred to in the song about the felling of the mapou tree with its cargo of evil spirits. In the initiation of priests, the novice is made to stand with his back against the central post of the temple, down which the loa are held to come when they are invoked. This post is sacred to Legba, guardian of the passage between this world and the other, and he is sometimes called Legba Grand Bois Chemin, Legba the Path of the Great Tree. This tree is also equated with the backbone. But for the loa to come down this tree, its guardian, the gros bon ange, must be displaced. In ritual terms it occupies the nape of the neck, and physiologically it is represented by a large number of postural reflexes which affect the eyes, the neck, the spinal column and the heartbeat. Subvert these reflexes by suggestion, theatricality, rhythm, dancing, drumming and strong emotions, and dissociation sets in, the body falling like a felled tree. But after training, the dormant energies represented by the loa can inhabit the place the gros bon ange has vacated, and the body is held upright around the central post sacred to Legba. This is to be possessed by a loa, who though they live in water are fiery by nature; and to test the novice's ability to contain this influx of energy without going mad, he is made to grasp a boiling paste and to have his limbs washed by flame.

Spouse of the God

The term hounsi, spouse of the god, is also significant. In Haiti, lack of social organization starts in the family; women long to be married properly but all they usually achieve is the status of a common law wife, or placée. At regular marriages the bride is received at her husband's home by a group of young girls singing Catholic verses against Voodoo and plaçage whose refrain goes: 'pas placée, pas placée!' – meaning properly married. Some women do not even become placée but turn jeunesses, good-time girls who have a financial understanding with their lovers, or even bousins, prostitutes, and they will often turn to Voodoo to keep their suitors' ardours aflame, to procure abortions, or just to maintain a clientele. They, and womanizing men, excuse their behaviour by saying it is the loa who make them do it, who prevent them from marrying or from keeping a partner more than a week or so. Many of them are overtaken during sleep by erotic dreams in which the loa possess them sexually, with such sweetness that they will have nothing to do with love-making for days afterwards. Curiously enough, women are often made love to by Erzulie, the goddess of love, who comes to them in masculine form – thus it is not surprising to find that many of them indulge in homosexual play as well.

The sexuality of the loa produces saisissements of a particular kind. At ordinary dances, for instance, it is not unknown for a man to be overwhelmed by the sexual advances of the woman dancing with him so that he falls to the floor in an orgasmic dissociation. The proper treatment for this, as for nocturnal visits by the loa, is to set one or two nights apart for them every week, when the sufferer sleeps alone. If he or she is married and the spouse objects to such an interruption of his pleasures, a full-blown saisissement may well erupt with disastrous results. But even if this does not happen the loa may be so pressing in its attentions that it demands to be married in proper style. This occurs at a Voodoo temple where the loa is invoked to possess an attendant, the marriage ceremony is performed with the human spouse, rings are exchanged, and a document drawn up and attested.

These marriages do not always stop the lecherous behaviour of the human spouses – sometimes, indeed, it seems they encourage it, by giving it a religious justification. Priests are certainly not above using sexual magic for their own advantage, for instance by always lying on their backs when they make love, in order to be possessed in the act of possession. It is also said that they sleep with their novices during the initiation rites, though this probably is pure slander. What does often occur is that the priest uses his position to sleep with the women of his congregation, who are by no means averse to his attentions, and that priestesses, who often started in life as jeunesses, use their old arts to enlarge the circle of their faithful. In addition, the hounsis, who have made the temple the centre of their life and attend all the rites as singers and dancers, frequently act as temple prostitutes and indulge in small perversions among themselves. This is logical enough if the hounsi is a spouse of the god, and if the temple is the god's house. A consequence, very much to the advantage of the priest, is that he can bring pressures to bear on those with whom his hounsis sleep, who also provide him with a deal of interesting gossip which he can turn to good advantage when he has to diagnose an illness.

The loa most often concerned in these marriages are perhaps Ogoun and Erzulie. But underlying all these matters is Guede, a collective title for the cemetery spirits whose king is Baron Samedi. The Baron is the first person to be buried in a churchyard – his female counterpart is called Maman Brigit – and Guede was the first soul to be drawn up out of the waters of death by Legba. Though he can and does appear at any ceremony, being a greedy and tricky spirit whose prerogative is to devour the offerings made to any loa before they get at it, he is dominant on All Souls' Day, when he possesses a large number of women who go flocking to the cemeteries in his honour. They dress in black and purple, sing coldly lascivious songs and, using a stick as a mock penis, dance the banda. This dance is highly suggestive and combines sexual fascination with a scorn for pleasure and wilful contempt of love.

Like Voodoo, Brazil's Umbanda cult involves possession by spirits, drum beats, candles and healing: Umbanda worshippers at Copacabana Beach, Rio de Janeiro, on New Year's Eve

Peter Larsen

Peter Larsen

That women are the especial mounts for the Guedes at this moment suggests that they are getting their own back against the men who usually dominate them. It also shows the close and universal connection between death, magic and sexuality. It is one of the priest's duties to control this power, and he does it by means of the asson, a gourd rattle filled with pebbles, snake bones, earth from a cemetery and magical powders, and circled by a network of coloured beads and snake vertebrae. With this instrument he can command the dead and bring them out of the waters, he can inflame and control the Guedes, and he can master the living by beating out the rhythms which the drums then pick up and to which the attendants dance.

In theory, the use of the asson should go together with the gift of a spiritual power known as la prise des yeux, the taking hold of the eyes. This allows the priest to remain conscious while the loa possess themselves of his being, unlike minor initiates who black out when they are ridden and who have no memory of what they did when possessed. The state is marked by a sensation of weight on the neck or shoulders, and a feeling of enormous power: the priest can hear the loa whispering in his ear, and he is endowed with second sight and other paranormal powers. So, at least, say those who have undergone la prise des yeux and those who have witnessed its effects, and it may be that their claims are sometimes justified.

Dissociation, possession, marriage to the gods and la prise des yeux: these are the central facts around which the many and diverse ceremonies of Voodoo are organized, and the superstitions also.

Voodoo treats the Invisibles as enemies to be made friends of and powers to be used, and the supernatural as a disease to be turned to good account. To do so the priest must use his left hand as well as his right; that is, he must know as much about black as about white magic, and keep both in the context of the religion. What he does is sometimes cruel and often alarming, besides being mystifying in the good and bad senses of the word. But then the gods that the magician serves are jealous as well as powerful, and those who enter their mysteries must expect to pay the price.

(See also DAHOMEY; POSSESSION; SOUTH AMERICA; TRANCE; ZOMBIES.)

FRANCIS HUXLEY

FURTHER READING: Wade Davis, The Serpent & the Rainbow (Warner, 1985); Maya Deren, Divine Horsemen (Dell Publishing, 1972); F. Huxley, The Invisibles (Humanities, 1966); A. Metraux, Voodoo in Haiti (Schocken, 1972).

Voodoo has its origins in the spirit possession cults of the old Slave Coast of West Africa Above left Figures of spirits on sale in a Dahomey market Left Pupils emerge from a school of instruction in tribal customs and religions, again in Dahomey

Wagner's operas have exerted a powerful influence on occultists, who have regarded him as a 'natural magician' and a 'Gnostic saint': he has been credited with an intuitive grasp of the principles of sexual magic, and one enthusiast translated the names of Wagner's characters into Hebrew to find important numerological formulas

WAGNER

'LORD OF LIFE and Joy . . . . . though adored of us upon heaths and in woods, on mountains and in caves, openly in the market-places and secretly in the chambers of our houses . . . we worthily commemorate them worthy that did of old adore thee and manifest thy glory unto men, Lao-tze and Siddartha and Krishna and Tahuti . . . and these also . . . Thomas Vaughan, Elias Ashmole, Molinos, Adam Weishaupt, Wolfgang von Goethe, Ludovicus Rex Bavariae, Richard Wagner . . .'

So reads the Collect for the Saints in the Gnostic Catholic Mass written by Aleister Crowley (see CROWLEY) for his followers. At first sight it may seem surprising that Crowley included Richard Wagner in his rag-bag collection of Gnostic 'saints' – others were the Borgia pope, Alexander VI, and a syphilitic and eccentric 15th century Lutheran named Ulrich von Hutten – but Wagner's indebtedness to Nordic myth, legend and mystical interpretations of Christianity has convinced many occultists that the great composer was one of their own number. Sar Péladan, the French magician, novelist and poet, who broke away from the Kabalistic Rose-Croix of Stanislas de Guaita to found his own Catholic Rose-Croix of the Temple and the Grail (see BATTLE OF BEWITCHMENT; ROSICRUCIANS), made a pilgrimage to the Wagner festival at Bayreuth and was so deeply affected by his attendance at a performance of Parsifal that thereafter he not only claimed that Wagner had possessed 'the soul of a natural magician' but insisted that from now on his own novels must be referred to, not as novels, but as wagneriennes. Other occultists have made even more extravagant claims. Aleister Crowley's disciple Frater Achad (Charles Stansfeld Jones) wrote that: '. . . Wagner himself had received Instruction in the great Principles of the Holy Order from certain of the Secret Chiefs and this accounts for the great harmony between his Work and that of other members of the Great Brotherhood.'

Wagner was born at Leipzig in 1813; officially, he was the son of Karl Wagner, a petty bureaucrat who had risen to the command of the Leipzig police. There is some reason to suppose, however, that he was in reality the offspring of an illicit liaison between his mother and Ludwig Geyer, a portrait painter, actor and dramatist who had for some time been a guest in the Wagner household. Karl Wagner died of typhoid six months after the child's birth, and in the following year his widow married Geyer – significantly enough, she gave birth to a daughter only six months later. The young Richard was brought up in Dresden as Geyer's son and did not adopt the surname of Wagner until his confirmation at the age of 14.

As a boy, Wagner seemed more interested in the theatre than he did in music and it was not until 1828 that he began the serious study of composition; just two years later his work achieved its first public performance – a fiasco – when an overture composed by him was played in the Leipzig Hoftheater. This work has not survived, but its most notable characteristic, apart from the unusual physical appearance of the score – brass appeared in black, strings in red and woodwind in green – seems to have been a ludicrously fortissimo drumbeat every fourth bar, productive of intense and, at every repetition, increasingly hysterical laughter from the audience.

Harshness and Compassion

If so many contrary emotions can be brought so intimately into relationship by the music, the implication is that the grievousness and the resignation, the harshness and the compassion, belong to one another. Evil is not a foreign body which some clever surgeon of morals can neatly excise; it is a part of ourselves which we have to learn to live with. Grief is not a poison we can vomit out of the system; it is an ingredient in human experience which we have to assimilate. We can accept all this, and still be in love with life, which we cannot really be if we merely repudiate the darker side of it.

Robert Donington Wagner's 'Ring' and Its Symbols

Politics and Exile

Throughout his life Wagner enjoyed melodramatic fiction and as a young man fell under the spell of English Gothic novels in German translation; even in his last years he re-read with enjoyment the occult thrillers of the English novelist and occultist Bulwer Lytton (see LYTTON). According to Houston Stewart Chamberlain, Wagner was particularly fond of Zanoni and A Strange Story. It was with Rienzi, an opera derived from Lytton's novel of the same name, that Wagner achieved, in 1842, the public acclaim that had eluded him 12 years before. Rienzi was followed by The Flying Dutchman, first produced in 1843 and found perplexing by its audience, and in the same year its composer achieved a temporary financial security as Director of the Dresden Opera.

Wagner, who is sometimes seen, probably incorrectly, as an arch-reactionary and an important formative influence on the ideology of Nazism, was deeply involved in the German revolutionary-democratic movement of 1848–49 in spite of the fact that he was, as Director of the Opera, an official of the Royal Court of Saxony. Wagner's relationship with the Court had become strained in 1847 when he had submitted to the Intendant of the Opera – an amiable aristocratic bureaucrat who had previously been in charge of the Department of Woods and Forests – a memorandum calling for a radical reform of all aspects of Saxon musical life. The memorandum was pigeon-holed for a year and then rejected; simultaneously Wagner was informed that as a mark of royal displeasure the first performance of his new opera Lohengrin was to be indefinitely postponed. Wagner, annoyed that his suggestions should be disregarded, rewrote his memorandum in stronger form, demanded the abolition of the office of Intendant and, in May 1848, joined the Vaterlandsverein, a society whose objects included universal suffrage, a united Germany and the abolition of the Saxon monarchy. Wagner was an enthusiastic advocate of this programme and read a paper to the society, later published in its official journal, calling for a republican Saxony.

In May 1849 civil war broke out; Wagner fought (briefly) on the barricades and a provisional government was declared, but enjoyed only a brief existence before it was snuffed out by the combined efforts of Saxon and Prussian troops. Evidence of Wagner's involvement in (as distinct from his sympathy with) treasonable activities was scanty and it was not until May 1850 that he fled Saxony after a warrant had been issued for his arrest.

For the next 11 years Wagner was an exile, living at various times in Paris, London and Zurich, usually in poverty – for while he earned considerable sums his expenditure always exceeded his income – suffering from violent headaches and the eczema that had plagued him since childhood, and always longing for a return to his beloved Germany. But these unhappy years of exile were also years of great artistic achievement. Das Rheingold, the first part of The Ring, was completed in 1854; Die Walküre in 1856; and Tristan und Isolde in 1859.

Wagner's exile ended in 1861 but, dogged by creditors and unpaid debts, his life was still far from happy. He was actually in hiding from debt collectors when, in 1864, he was summoned to Munich by Ludwig II, then aged 19, the spendthrift, homosexual and half-mad king of Bavaria – another 'saint' of the Gnostic Catholic Church. Within six weeks of his arrival at Munich Wagner was one of the young monarch's principal advisers: '. . . the young King', wrote Wagner, '. . . resolves to give me all that I require in this life; I in return do nothing but compose and advise him. He calls me two and even three times in one day; talks to me for hours, and is . . . devoted heart and soul to me.'

From 1864 until 1876 Wagner received considerable, although often erratic, material support from Ludwig II. The first two parts of The Ring were performed at Munich in 1869 and 1870, and the score of the third part (Siegfried) was completed by the beginning of 1871. By the end of that year Wagner had decided that no existing German theatre was really suitable for the staging of The Ring and that he would himself build one at Bayreuth.

By almost superhuman exertions, supplemented by a loan from Ludwig II, Wagner managed to build his theatre and to stage, in August 1876, all four parts of The Ring: the last part, Götterdämmerung, had been completed in the previous year. In spite of the fact that this performance, the first Bayreuth festival, resulted in a loss, a second festival took place in 1882, and in July and August of that year there were 16 performances of Parsifal, Wagner's last opera, at Bayreuth. Wagner died, of heart failure, in 1883.

Blind Forces

It has been said of Wagner that 'he invented little but adapted much'. Certainly this was true of his plots, and it is his reliance on traditional 'supernatural' material that, coupled with the emotional appeal of his music, largely accounts for the esteem in which he has been held by occultists. Significantly enough, it has been those works in which Wagner drew most heavily from myth and legend – the cycle of The Ring, Tannhäuser and Parsifal – that have held the most fascination for occultists and even a brief examination of them gives some indication of the way in which Wagner managed to transmute unpromising material into great art, and to select those incidents in a story that should be left out in its re-telling.

Radio Times Hulton Picture Library

Richard Wagner at Triebschen, in 1868: the operas in which he drew most heavily on myth and legend are those which have particularly fascinated occultists

Jessie Weston has summed up this selective aspect of Wagner's genius: 'the original stories . . . were too full, too complicated, for dramatic representation . . . Wagner selected those incidents which would tell most effectively on the stage, re-combined them so as to preserve (in some cases restore) the original simplicity of the story, developed the characters, and grasped with unerring instinct hints of his predecessors which, superfluous for the epic, were big with possibilities for the dramatic form . . .'

Wagner took the story of The Ring from a Scandinavian source, the older and so-called 'poetic' Edda. The German version, the Nibelungenlied, is a 13th century compilation derived from material of much earlier date and bearing much the same relationship to subsequent German poetry as the Iliad bore to the literature of classical Greece (see NIBELUNGENLIED). It is odd that Wagner, that most German of musicians, relied principally upon the Icelandic source, making very little use of the Nibelungenlied except in The Twilight of the Gods, the last part of The Ring.

The world of The Ring is the world of the Nordic gods, not the world of Christianity; we are in a doom-laden universe, completely lacking in free will, moving inevitably towards the predestined collapse of order and the triumph of chaos – the veritable Doom of the Gods (see SCANDINAVIA). The primitive feeling that all living things are subject to the mindless play of blind forces is terrifyingly re-created.

The Budding Staff

While Tannhäuser is a much earlier work than The Ring, historically and theologically it comes between The Ring and Parsifal; in the former we are in the world of the old Teutonic gods, in the latter we are in the world of mystical Christianity, and in Tannhäuser we see the conflict between the old faith and the new. There are many surviving medieval ballads of Tannhäuser, and their basic plot is simple enough. Tannhäuser spends a year with Venus in her pleasure-gardens beneath the mountain known as the Venusberg; repents, leaves, goes to confession and is told that only the Pope can absolve him. He travels to Rome on pilgrimage and is told by the Pope that God will not forgive him until his dry pilgrim's staff bursts into leaf; immediately it puts forth buds, leaves and flowers – moral, the forgiveness of God is infinite.

Wagner transformed this simple and trite story into a conflict between earthly love and paganism on the one hand (represented by Venus) and heavenly love and Christianity on the other (represented by Tannhäuser's sweetheart Elizabeth). Only when Tannhäuser, rejected by heaven and earth alike, chooses the dead body of Elizabeth in preference to the delights of Venus does the staff burst into flower – forgiveness is achieved through love and death.

There are many versions of the story of Parsifal, but Wagner relied exclusively on that of Wolfram von Eschenbach (see PARSIFAL) and retold the latter's version of the knight's quest for the Spear and the Grail with great fidelity. Parsifal bears more resemblance to a mystery play, a religious rite, than it does to a conventional opera, and Wagner regarded it as such, refusing to let it be performed except at Bayreuth.

The Swan of Ecstasy

Throughout the present century, Wagner's operas and writings have exerted a considerable, although sometimes hidden, influence on many of the more intellectual occultists. While a few of them have been attracted by the more repellent aspects of Wagner's personal philosophy – the followers of the German mystagogue Lanz von Liebenfels (see NEW TEMPLARS) elevated Wagner to the status of a Teutonic guru and folk-hero, not because of his music but because of his antisemitism – most have found Wagner's use of myth and legend attractive in itself and also surprisingly compatible with their own interpretations of occidental esotericism. Theodor Reuss, a practitioner of sex-magic (he was Crowley's predecessor as chief of the Ordo Templi Orientis) and an ardent Wagnerian, looked upon Wagner as a sort of intuitive sex-magician and attached a sexual symbolism to the Spear and the Grail of Parsifal.

Crowley himself also found much of occult significance in Parsifal and, to give only one example, regarded the swan shot by Parsifal as symbolizing that ecstasy which is the ultimate goal of the magician. He wrote: 'There is a Swan whose name is Ecstasy . . . In all the Universe it alone is motionless . . . Motion is relative: there is Nothing that is still. Against this Swan I shot an arrow; the white breast poured forth blood. Men smote me; then perceiving that I was Pure Fool, they let me pass. Thus and not otherwise I came to the Temple of the Grail.'

Link With the Cabala

The fascination of Parsifal for occultists has been a perennial one: at least one follower of Rudolf Steiner (see STEINER) looks upon it as a brilliant exposition of the doctrines of anthroposophy. But the most ingenious and perhaps the maddest occult exegisis of it was made by C. S. Jones, in his book Chalice of Ecstasy, published in Chicago in 1923. His basic thesis was that Wagner had been either a great cabalist or, quite literally, inspired. In any case the important thing was that Parsifal was a vehicle conveying important cabalistic secrets. When the names of the principal characters were turned into Hebrew (each Hebrew letter has its own numerical value), they added up into important numerical formulas. Thus the name of the evil magician Klingsor added up to 333, the number of 'that mighty devil' Choronzon, whom Aleister Crowley had evoked to visible appearance in the Sahara Desert. Even more important, Monsalvat, the mountain of Salvation, added up to 666 – clear proof of Wagner's inspiration and Aleister Crowley's divine mission. These were only two of Jones's cabalistic discoveries; there were many more, and those who care to read The Chalice of Ecstasy will find out for themselves the answers to such recondite problems as the occult significance of the destruction of Klingsor's garden, and the reason why the flask from which oil is poured on Parsifal's feet should be shaped like a female breast and stoppered with a ruby. (See also TRISTAN.)

FRANCIS KING

FURTHER READING: Derek Watson, Richard Wagner (Schirmer Books, 1981); W. H. Hadow, Richard Wagner (AMS Press reprint). Jessie L. Weston, The Legends of the Wagner Drama (Nutt, London, 1896); for an interpretation of The Ring in Jungian terms, see Robert Donington, Wagner's 'Ring' and Its Symbols (St Martin, rev. edn., 1969).

A. E. WAITE

Mansell Collection

A SELF-PROCLAIMED MYSTIC whose theories have become accepted occult doctrine, Arthur Edward Waite was born in 1857 in the unromantic Brooklyn area of New York. Soon after his birth his mother returned with him to England, where she became a Roman Catholic; and Waite was to remain under the influence of Church ceremony all his life. He considered himself to be a late developer, not having reached 'intellectual puberty' at 21; and he passed through a succession of enthusiasms before arriving at the occult by way of Spiritualism and Mme Blavatsky's book Isis Unveiled (see BLAVATSKY).

In 1881 Waite discovered the writings of the French magus Eliphas Levi (see LEVI), and his first 'occult' work (1885) was a digest and codification of Levi's teaching. The year before had seen the publication of A. P. Sinnett's Occult World, with its account of the miraculous phenomena produced by Mme Blavatsky. Waite joined her Theosophical Society at a time of great fluttering in the occult dovecots and when the newly-converted Annie Besant was in the first flush of her theosophical enthusiasm (see BESANT; THEOSOPHY). In theosophical circles Waite met other prominent occultists, including Edward Maitland of the Hermetic Society, W. B. Yeats, and the writer Arthur Machen who remained a lifelong friend. With the theosophists, Waite's connections became increasingly tenuous until he finally refused the post of Librarian at the Society, because of his inability to accept the existence of Mahatmas (see MAHATMAS; MASTERS).

It is not with Theosophy that Waite's name is chiefly linked, but with ritual magic as practised in the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn under the direction of S. L. Macgregor Mathers and Wynn Westcott (see GOLDEN DAWN). Waite made two ventures into ritual magic, but it was not his true vocation. The first time he entered the Golden Dawn he passed through the grades of the First Order, but resigned on the suspicion of questionable legal practice on the part of his superiors. Some years later he rejoined the Order in a period of dissension among its members, and contrived to gain control of the Golden Dawn's Isis-Urania temple (mother-lodge in London), whose ceremonies he entirely rewrote from the point of view of Christian mysticism.

From his encounter with cabalistic magic, Waite derived one lasting source of inspiration: the idea of the soul ascending the Tree of Life towards the Godhead (see CABALA). But he came more and more to distrust 'occult' practices, and there was little love lost between him and the posturing Mathers, who claimed to admire Waite's poetry, but proved most suspicious of any attempt to encroach on his personal province of the mystical. Waite's chief concerns became Freemasonry and the charting of a 'Secret Tradition' underlying alchemy, masonry and the Cabala, expressed in the 'Hidden Church of the Holy Grail', a mystical body of the elect contained in and concealed by the Christian Church. Whereas his early belief – recorded in 1891 – was that magic could provide the solution to the problems of 'the origin and destiny of Man', his mature conviction of some 20 years later was that the place of the Seeker was within the Church, 'that body in which the work of regeneration takes place'. His poetry is forgotten, his vaunted scholarship seems both tedious and defective, and his chief legacy is his conception of an all-pervasive secret tradition.

JAMES WEBB

For centuries ferociously persecuted by Church and state for their unorthodox interpretation of the Bible, the Waldenses have survived into the 20th century by sheer faith and courage

WALDENSES

A CHRISTIAN COMMUNITY which has had its focus in the Cottian Alps on the borders of France and Italy for nearly 800 years, the Waldenses (also Valdenses, Valdesi, Vaudois) have been given various labels. They have been thought of as the forerunners of St Francis because they were originally mendicant preachers; as the forerunners of the Baptists because of their views on infant baptism; as the forerunners of the Bible-Reading Movement because their founder had the New Testament translated into the vernacular; and as the forerunners of the Reformation because they emphasized the authority of the Bible and vigorously opposed the worldliness of the Roman Church and many of its practices. That they have survived the centuries can be largely attributed to the nature of the territory in which they settled: the mountain valleys which debouch into the plain of Piedmont about 30 miles west of Turin are inhospitable and isolated; thus the region afforded seclusion, assisted flight and hindered attack.

Claiming a geographical derivation (valles densae) for the name of the sect, some historians asserted that the community was founded by St Paul during a pause in a journey from Rome to Spain (see Romans 15.28). This theory was discredited in the middle of the 19th century after critical examination of the available manuscript evidence.

Renouncing a Worldly Life

It is now generally thought that the community was founded towards the end of the 12th century by Peter Waldo, a wealthy Lyonnaise merchant, businessman and money-lender, who was abruptly converted to religion. By one account, he was startled

The Waldensian pastor of Prali walks to church before dawn; Prali is a village high in the Italian Alps and the spiritual capital of the Italian Waldenses, who after suffering some 500 years of persecution are now able to practise their faith in peace into appreciating the uncertainty of life by the sudden death of a friend; by another, the spiritual richness of evangelical poverty was thrust upon his notice by the chance hearing of the legend of St Alexis sung by a wandering minstrel. The son of wealthy Roman parents, St Alexis parted from his wife during the post-nuptial festivities, forwent his inheritance and thereafter lived a life of great piety and extreme asceticism.

Whatever the truth, Peter Waldo asked a pious scholar the surest way to God. He received the answer given by Jesus to the rich young man: 'If you would be perfect, go, sell what you possess and give to the poor . . .' Waldo, too, had great possessions; but he was neither sad nor went away grieved. Only setting aside sufficient money to pay for a translation of the New Testament and other theological writings into the Provençal dialect, he paid his creditors, provided for his wife, portioned his daughters and placed them in the care of the Abbess of Fontrevrault, and spent the last of his money buying food for the starving poor of Lyons. Thereafter, dressed in the manner of the Apostles, he tramped the countryside, preaching wherever he went and begging his daily bread. He studied the New Testament intensively, interpreting it in the light of his private judgement.

Waldo soon attracted followers, who copied his example of penury and evangelism. The literate read the gospels regularly; the illiterate learnt them by heart, sentence by sentence, chapter by chapter, book by book. As their numbers increased Waldo sent them out as wandering preachers, two by two, men and women alike. From their profession of poverty and city of origin they became known as the 'Poor Men of Lyons', and from their custom of wearing sandals, 'Sandaliati', 'Insabbatati', 'Sabbatati' or 'Sabotiers'.

At that time the Church forbade all private translations of the Bible as well as preaching without licence. Inevitably, the Archbishop of Lyons prohibited the activities of the Poor Men of Lyons; whereupon Waldo decided to carry the matter to Rome. The Pope, Alexander III, wavered. At first he received Waldo as a favourite son and gave him a solemn embrace; then he refused to licence him; and finally, in 1179, approving the Waldensian vows of poverty, gave permission to preach, subject to the approval of the archbishop. That approval was withheld, whereupon the Poor Men, declaring proudly that they ought to obey God rather than man, ignored the papal injunction and continued as if nothing had happened. The Church replied with excommunication and in 1184 the Waldenses were anathematized by Pope Lucius III in a decree issued from Verona.

The Waldenses dispersed. Colonies and small cells were established throughout Europe, but the main body of the heretics, as they now were, took refuge in an isolated corner of the Alps. There they found other sects, reported to number 17, who were also opposed to Rome. In 1212 the Waldenses made a second approach to the papacy. It was ineffectual. In 1218 a conference of all the demonimations lurking in the valleys was held at Bergamo, and from it emerged the Valdesian Society or Associates of Valdes. The Waldenses now became known in French as the Vaudois and in Italian as the Valdesi.

Barbarous Cruelty

In 1215 the Fourth Lateran Council decreed the extermination of the Waldenses, together with the Cathars (see CATHARS). In 1230, although thousands of heretics had by then been butchered, Pope Gregory IX initiated a decade of fierce armed attack against the settlements. In 1233, he instituted the Inquisition to destroy the remnants of heresy and appointed the Dominicans as the official Inquisitors for the south of France. Relentless and ruthless, the 'Hounds of God' besmirched their early history by their cruelties.

In the following centuries the persecution of the Waldenses, alternately by the Church, the king of France and the duke of Savoy (the last two urged on by the pope) was in no way abated. Thousands of martyrs were burnt at the stake; French and Irish mercenaries marched into the valleys and slaughtered many hundreds of men, women, and children.

In the 17th century the barbarities reached such a height that international concern was roused and voiced. Cromwell sent letters, written in Latin by Milton who also composed a sonnet On the late Massacre in the Piedmont, to the Duke of Savoy, and sent a special commissioner, Sir Samuel Morland, to investigate the 'Bloudy Massacre, 1655' and 'the barbarous and horrid cruelties'. Despite this, the valleys were depopulated when in 1686 Louis XIV, following the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, ordered the Duke of Savoy to compel the Waldenses to adopt Roman Catholicism. Thousands were carried away and imprisoned in Turin, all their property being confiscated and handed over to Roman Catholics. Four years later a mere handful, under the command of the heroic Henri Arnaud, pastor and historian, struggled back to their homeland.

In the 18th century life in the valleys became easier as physical persecution waned, though spiritual liberty was still all but denied. The kings of England joined with other European monarchs in granting annuities for the support of the pastors and the maintenance of schools. From 1816 onwards gradual concessions were made until 1848, when Charles Albert, King of Piedmont, gave them political and religious rights equal to those of their Roman Catholic fellow subjects.

Rejecting the House of Lies

From the beginning the Waldenses were a missionary society, though with increasing numbers it became impossible for all to preach. They became divided into two classes, on the same pattern as the Cathars, the laity known as the amici or credentes, and the pastorate known as the perfecti. The pastors were all expected to undertake missionary work and, still travelling two by two, they made long journeys, undeterred by the likelihood of martyrdom. Italy was their main, though far from only, field. Congregations were established in all the principal towns and elsewhere in the peninsula, and those in Florence, Rome, Naples and Venice numbered several thousand each. There are thought to have been approximately 40,000 Waldenses in the valleys and Piedmont alone in the middle of the 16th century.

The Waldenses held that the authority of the Bible is supreme, and that anything not authorized by it is fabulous. They further said that the Bible should be understood according to its exact wording and not according to any doctrine or tradition of the Church of Rome or to the glosses of popish scholars.

They maintained the vital doctrine of justification through grace, holding that God bestowed grace because of his nature irrespective of the worthiness of the recipient. Infant baptism they declared to be of no avail. They held that matrimony is freely open to all: for nowhere in the New Testament is it forbidden – some of the Apostles were married – and God has left it to each man's discretion. Some of the pastors married in order to show approval of matrimony; but the greater number remained single because of the hazardous nature of their calling.

They threw off the authority of the Pope and the bishops generally, though good bishops (that is, bishops who modelled their lives on the Apostles) were to be obeyed. They argued that the Church, admittedly originally the true Church, had been seduced by the Donation of Constantine (a document transferring temporal power from the Emperor Constantine to the papacy, which was in the 15th century proved a forgery) and was now corrupt and a house of lies, with the Pope as the 'Head of Error'.

They denied the power of unworthy priests either to consecrate or absolve, holding that in each case the ability to do so lay in the merits, not in the ordination, of the ministrant. They held that a pious layman or laywoman could in the case of necessity administer the sacraments or hear confessions, and that the sacraments could be consecrated in the vulgar tongue since sanctification has the same effect in the vernacular as in Latin.

The Mass, beyond the words of consecration, they thought to be worth nothing because neither Christ nor the Apostles ever

Federico Patellani

The Waldenses held that the authority of the Bible is supreme, and that it should be 'understood according to its exact wording and not according to any doctrine or tradition of the Church of Rome or to the glosses of popish scholars': Waldensian service at Prali sang any liturgy in celebration of the Lord's Supper. They declared that the plainsong of the Church was no more than the barking of dogs and that any merit lay in the words rather than the melody. One Lord's Prayer, they said was of greater efficacy than many Masses.

They abominated all those matters that venal priests turned to personal profit, such as the granting of indulgences, the invocation of the saints, alms, Masses and prayers for the dead. They thought the doctrine of purgatory (see PURGATORY) to be without warrant, saying that after death there were but two roads for the disembodied soul – either heaven or hell. They reprobated all practices not expressly approved by the New Testament, believing the use of crosses and ornaments in churches and the adoration of images to be idolatrous; benedictions, dedications and pilgrimages to be vain and superfluous; and holy water ridiculous. They denied the lawfulness of capital punishment, oaths and the bearing of arms; though on the latter points their views had to be modified later in order to prevent the total destruction of the sect. Some of the Waldenses refused to worship in churches, deriding them as mere heaps of stones, and quoting Acts 18.24: 'God . . . does not live in shrines made by men.'

At the Reformation the Waldenses gravitated towards Calvinism. Their great synod held in 1532 at Chanforans, above the Angrogne valley, at which they decided to join the Reformation and the family of Reformed Churches, was attended by Guillaume Farel, preacher in Geneva and subsequently friend of, and assistant to, Calvin. Also present was the scholar Olivetan, who three years later produced for the Waldenses a second translation of the Bible, this time in French. At a council held in 1559 the Waldenses adopted a new Confession of Faith, of a Calvinistic type.

Today the Waldensian Church is a member of the Reformed and Presbyterian Alliance and the Federal Council of Protestants. It is flourishing, and there are Waldenses in the valleys, throughout Italy (where in 1965 there were about 35,000 members with 115 churches), Switzerland and the south of France, whilst emigrants have carried the faith throughout the world. There are ten overseas congregations, five in Uruguay and two in Argentina with about 20,000 communicants between them, and one each in the states of Texas, Carolina and Missouri. The Church is governed by a synod, and the moderator, who presides over the executive committee, is elected for one year only (though he may be re-elected annually for a maximum term of seven years).

The miracle of the Waldensian survival was undoubtedly grounded in glowing faith and immense physical courage. Ingenuity may have helped. It was argued by Harold Bayley (in A New Light on the Renaissance) that they, with one or two other pre-Reformation Protestant sects, derived great encouragement and strength from their ability to keep in touch with one another without the knowledge of the Inquisition. He maintained that the watermarks in paper were often emblems of religious faith and were used to 'flash signals of hope and encouragement to exiles in far distant countries . . .'

If watermarks were so used, why not other symbols? One tradition suggests that the Waldenses were the originators of the Tarot (see TAROT), the pack of cards with 22 trumps of mysterious design used for fortune telling by many and the game of tarocchi by a few. Whilst its origins are not certainly known, it is worth noticing that the earliest documentary evidence of the Tarot is dated c 1450, that is to say at the very same time when pressure on the Waldenses was at its height. Speculation suggests that these trumps were used by the pastors as visual teaching aids, that they were carried as part of the full pack and in consequence were easily explainable to the Inquisition, and at safe times were brought out as texts for sermons and reminders of points of faith.

ROGER TILLEY

FURTHER READING: Ellen Scott Davidson, Forerunners of St Francis (Houghton, Mifflin, 1927); Henry Charles Lea, A History of the Inquisition (AMS Press reprint); A. Muston, The Israel of the Alps, 2 vols, (AMS Press, 1978, c1875).

Below left Pope Gregory IX (1227–41), the father of the Inquisition, initiated a decade of fierce attack against Waldensian settlements Below right Pope Alexander III, who at first welcomed the Waldensian movement and approved their vows of poverty

Mansell Collection

WALSINGHAM

THE SMALL TOWN of Walsingham in Norfolk, England, was a famous place of pilgrimage in honour of the Virgin Mary all through the Middle Ages, and until the Reformation it rivalled Canterbury in popularity. During the 20th century Walsingham became once again a major place of Christian pilgrimage. The famous scholar Erasmus, who visited Walsingham in 1511, not many years before the shrine was destroyed, found it 'sustained by scarcely anything else but the number of its visitors.' The same is true again today, as devoted pilgrims crowd the narrow streets and buses maneouvre awkwardly in the country lanes.

The fame of Walsingham goes back to the Lady Richelde de Fervaques, widow of one of the Norman lords of the manor. She experienced a series of three dreams in which she was taken to Palestine by the Virgin, and shown the house in Nazareth in which Mary was told by the Archangel Gabriel that she was to be the mother of Jesus and in which Jesus spent his boyhood. The Virgin told Richelde to build a replica of the Holy House in Walsingham.

Richelde gladly obeyed, but everything went wrong with the work and she spent a night in prayer asking for the Virgin's guidance. In the morning she found the little wooden house finished and moved by supernatural means to a spot some 200 feet away. The traditional date for the founding of the shrine is 1061, but this comes from a late 15th-century ballad and it is thought more likely that it was built after 1100.

Walsingham was to have a later rival in Italy, where the Holy House of Loreto on the Adriatic attracted great numbers of pilgrims. This was claimed to be the Virgin's actual home from Nazareth, not a copy as at Walsingham. The Loreto legend was that the house was picked up and transported by angels 1500 miles through the sky to Italy.

Walsingham's Holy House was famous long before Loreto, and miracles of healing were reported. About 1153 an Augustinian priory was founded, whose canons cared for the shrine and the growing number of pilgrims. King Henry III visited Walsingham and was a noted benefactor, and a substantial church was completed in about 1280. It must have towered over the comparatively diminutive Holy House, whose dimensions were later recorded as 23ft 6in by 12ft 10in.

Almost every ruler of England, down to and including Henry VIII himself, made the pilgrimage to 'England's Nazareth'. In the 14th century a chapel was constructed a mile and a half away from the village. This was later called the Slipper Chapel and it was said that the most devout pilgrims used to take off their shoes there before walking the final distance to Walsingham in their bare feet. The priory church was also rebuilt at this time and the Franciscans opened a friary in Walsingham, despite protests by the Augustinians, who feared for their income from the pilgrims. Today both priory and friary are in ruins.

In 1538, when the shrine was closed down on the orders of Henry VIII, Walsingham Priory was the second richest religious house in Norfolk. The Holy House was demolished and the famous image of Our Lady of Walsingham, which generations of pilgrims had venerated ('She hath been the Devil's instrument to bring many, I fear, to eternal fire,' wrote Bishop Hugh Latimer censoriously), was carted ignominiously to London and burnt. The Augustinian canons were pensioned off and Walsingham retreated into obscurity for 350 years.

Spectrum Colour Library

Interior of the Anglican shrine of Our Lady of Walsingham: its fame rivalled that of Canterbury, until its destruction during the Reformation. The new shrine church was built in 1931

The two leading figures in the revival of Walsingham as a pilgrimage centre were a devout spinster named Charlotte Boyd (1838-1906) and a Church of England clergyman, Alfred Hope Patten (1885-1958). Miss Boyd visited Walsingham in the 1890s, and apparently intended to buy the Slipper Chapel, which had been converted into cottages, as a house for Church of England nuns. In 1894, however, she was received into the Roman Catholic Church, bought the chapel and had it restored as a centre of Roman Catholic devotion, in the care of the Benedictine monks of Downside Abbey. An annual Catholic pilgrimage to the Slipper Chapel developed and a new statue of Our Lady of Walsingham was placed there.

In 1934 10,000 of the faithful, led by a cardinal and numerous bishops, made the pilgrimage to the Slipper Chapel, which was now declared a national shrine, and the large-scale pilgrimage to Walsingham dates from that year. In 1968 the Marist Fathers took over the running of the shrine, developing with it a much larger building, the Chapel of Reconciliation, opened in 1981.

The Holy House Resurrected

The Rev. Alfred Hope Patten was appointed vicar of the Church of England parish of Walsingham in 1921. A man of High Church convictions and of vigorous and determined personality, he had been much impressed as a boy when he saw the replica of Lady Richelde's Holy House in the new church in the Sussex village of Buxted, built in 1887. He came to believe that he had a mission from God to revive a Marian shrine, and Walsingham gave him what seemed a heaven-sent opportunity.

Hope Patten soon revived the medieval devotion to the Virgin Mary and organised pilgrimages to Walsingham, which at first centred on the parish church of St Mary & All Saints. In 1931, a new Anglican shrine was opened – not on the site of the original Holy House, where permission was refused, but as close to it as possible, opposite one of the gates of the medieval priory – and was extended in 1937. Patten was its administrator and head of its college of guardians, as well as Vicar of Walsingham, until his death in 1958. Anglican nuns help with the work of the shrine today.

Hope Patten triumphed over many obstacles. He always maintained that when he was first appointed to Walsingham the parish church was full of evil spirits, but he managed to drive the demons back by sprinkling them with holy water. As well as the forces of Satan, he had also to contend with the villagers, who were at first not much in favour of his Marian devotions and High Church ways, and the intense disapproval of the Bishop of Norwich, Bertram Pollock. When the shrine was opened in 1931, Hope Patten had an inscription put on the foundation stone, recording that it had been built in the pontificate of Pope Pius XI and the episcopate of Bertram of Norwich. Bishop Pollock insisted that his name be removed and, on seeing the shrine, said: 'It is far worse than I expected...All these things which you have put in must be cleared away.'

The things were not cleared away. Far from it: the shrine is an extreme expression of the spirituality of the Oxford Movement and the 19th-century Catholic revival in the Church of England. A flamboyant construction in brick and flint, it has a Byzantine air and is richly bedecked with effigies, candles, murals, stained glass and gilding. There are numerous masses and processions. At the heart of it is the tiny, dark Holy House with its image of the Virgin and Child above the altar, the Virgin crowned and holding a sceptre in the form of a golden lily.

The statue is a copy of the image of Our Lady of Walsingham on the medieval priory seal. It is carried in procession around the shrine gardens while the pilgrims hold lighted candles and sing the pilgrim hymn, which tells the story of the shrine. Pilgrims also receive water from the spring on the site, near the entrance and the memorial to Hope Patten.

Surrounding the innermost shrine are 15 chapels, one for each of the mysteries of the Rosary. Some are dedicated to British saints; one chapel has a relic of the True Cross. In the grounds are the 15 Stations of the Cross. The principal national Anglican pilgrimage to Walsingham is held in the spring every year and culminates in a procession which circles the village. It attracts some 10,000 people, as well as protesting Christian fundamentalists in recent years, objecting to what they regard as the 'popish' nature of the proceedings.

Hope Patten felt a certain rivalry with the Roman Catholics – or, as he liked to call them, 'our fellow Catholics who are not in communion with Canterbury' – but the ecumenical movement has brought the Christian denominations closer together. The Methodist Chapel in Walsingham was converted into a Russian Orthodox church in 1988 and Anglicans and Roman Catholics increasingly join in each other's observances. The movement to ordain women priests in the Church of England was not well received at Walsingham, which announced that they would not be permitted to officiate at the shrine, and in 1994 the Vicar of Walsingham let it be known that he was leaving the Church of England for the Roman Catholic Church.

WALWORTH JUMPERS

THE SECT of Walworth Jumpers, also known as the Girlingites, Bible Christians, Children of God, or English Shakers, first met in Suffolk and later in London. Around 1870 they were holding religious services of an unorthodox order under a railway arch in Sutherland Street, Walworth Road, South London. Here large crowds of poor people assembled to listen to the preaching of the founder and leader of the sect, a tall, thin, Suffolk woman with high cheekbones and dark piercing eyes, whose name was Mary Anne Girling.

The main belief of the sect was that if its members stayed celibate they would never die. From the date of their full conversion, they considered themselves immortal. A characteristic feature of the Girlingite services was the dancing and jumping of the believers, who often fell down on the floor in fits, made trance utterings, and screamed in religious fervour.

From the noisy railway arch Mrs Girling moved with her loyal followers to a small chapel in College Place, Chelsea. Among the new disciples was a wealthy woman named Mrs Julia Wood, who was persuaded to buy a large house in Battersea in South London as a home for the sect. Here Mrs Girling had a vision, that 'God had given her New Forest Lodge, at Hordle in Hampshire,' as a country headquarters. She said she had no idea where it was, but God would direct her to it. Sure enough, the house and estate were soon revealed, and the faithful Mrs Wood went to her bank and bought the property for Mrs Girling.

All the Children of God, with their spiritual Mother leading them, now moved to the New Forest, where they were joined by several farmers and labourers; and by 1874 there were 164 members living in the house, which was surrounded by grounds which could not adequately support them. Everyone led a communal life, handing over all they possessed when they entered the colony, but as Mrs Girling forbade working for profit, or trading with the outside world, her followers were soon in debt, dispossessed of the house and forced to live in tents in a field in the nearby hamlet of Tiptoe.

A correspondent of The Times, visiting Mrs Girling in February 1875, reported how after a few sentences of prayer she began leaping rhythmically from foot to foot, waving her arms with a beckoning motion, while repeating short sentences of religious exhortation. A young woman on a front seat joined in, starting a strange dance with springy, elastic movements and considerable waving of her arms. Three-quarters of the disciples at this time were women. There was also a blacksmith, a shoemaker and a tailor. But most were farm labourers, and all were at that time unemployed.

Mrs Girling rejected the title given to her followers of 'English Shakers', preferring to call them Bible Christians. She pointed out that the American Shakers believed in Christ only as a prophet, whereas her followers believed in Christ as God-Man. But celibacy and the communal sharing of goods were common to both sects (see SHAKERS).

Men and women leaving the colony had spread rumours in the district that the dancers took off their clothes, but Mrs Girling denied this was ever done under direction, although it sometimes happened when the worshippers became over-excited.

Cold weather, the hostility and curiosity of neighbours, and lack of money, contributed to the collapse of the colony. Several members died of tuberculosis. In about 1878, Mrs Girling announced that she was greater than the Holy Ghost, and henceforth was to be known as the God-Mother, the Bride of Christ. To prove her claim, she displayed the nail marks of the Crucifixion on her feet and hands. A few months later she announced that she was the reincarnation of Jesus, saying, 'It was prophesied that false Christs should come and all others are false, for besides me there is none other.'

In 1885 Mrs Girling was taken ill and confined to bed. Malignant cancer was diagnosed and, after suffering excruciating pain, she arose from her sick bed to declare that she would never die. Her followers believed her, and she lingered on, the colony being sadly reduced to a few ardent disciples. Finally, on 18 September 1886, she died, and was buried next to those of her sect who had preceded her, in Hordle churchyard, near Lymington in Hampshire, where the curious may still see the graves of the Mother and some of her disciples.

JOHN MONTGOMERY

The royal sceptre, the Lord Chancellor's staff, the sergeant major's swagger stick and the conductor's baton are all derived from the magic wands of kings and priests

WAND

AS SYMBOLS of authority, the wand and the rod can be traced back to the staffs of the priest kings and magician healers of antiquity. The sceptre is an old symbol of kingship. A herald, the inviolable emissary of a king, carried a staff of office and the caduceus of the Greek god Hermes (see HERMES) was his herald's wand. The shepherd's crook was an emblem of royal authority in Egypt. Medieval physicians inherited the custom of carrying wands from their priestly predecessors. Red Indian chieftains bore carved wands as their badges of office.

In its simplest form, as a stick or staff, the wand must have been one of man's earliest weapons, enabling him to subjugate wild animals and human enemies alike. It has also long been recognized as a phallic symbol. It is a sign of power and virility, supernatural and physical (and consequently, clerical or secular) in a wide variety of forms.

In its supernatural context, the wand is an agent of transformation, a well-known example being the fairy wand, which is supposed to draw its power from the sun, represented by the star at its tip. The wand is also a means of aiming power at a given object; like the pointing finger or the pointing bone, it was once regarded as the agency of intense psychic power.

The construction of a wand was carried out in great secrecy and accompanied by mystical ceremonies. The wand of the wizard was usually of hazel-wood (see HAZEL) cut from the tree at sunrise, in order to draw upon the untouched solar energy; the knife used in the operation would be baptized in blood. At the same time special prayers were addressed to the high gods imploring

The rods of Moses and Aaron are the most famous examples of magic wands: Moses striking water from a rock as the Israelites cross the wilderness: 14th century French Bible

Bodleian Library Colour Filmstrip

Mander & Mitchenson Collection

Above The conjuror's wand is a descendant of the wand of power of the magician Below Leader of a British witch coven dressed to represent the jackal-headed Egyptian god Anubis: in one hand he holds a wand topped by an ankh, the symbol of life, and in the other a sistrum or ceremonial rattle: the magic wand probably goes back to the early use of sticks and staffs as natural weapons against human and animal enemies their help in endowing the wand with power and authority. The wands of the English and Welsh Druids were usually constructed of yew, and those of the Irish Druids of yew, hawthorn or rowan, all of these being sacred trees. The medieval magician would often fix a magnetized steel cap to the end and tip of his wand with the object of projecting an extremely powerful magnetic force. He would use it sparingly, reserving it for important acts of magic and concealing it from view within his voluminous sleeve.

In ancient grimoires and annals of sorcery there are many curious references to the employment of special types of wands for the various magical rites. Those who sought to communicate with Satan used wands of cypress wood – the cypress being well-known as a tree of death – and with this inscribed a magical circle at a crossroads at midnight. When attempting to communicate with the spirit of a suicide, the magician would touch the corpse nine times and then order it to answer his questions, under threat of torment. The use of a sword, in place of a wand, occurs in the records of English witchcraft past and present.

References to a special type of wand used by witches can be found in an anonymous 15th century work, Errores Gazariorum, which states that the witch received a special stick at the time of her initiation. In the early 17th century, the demonologist Henri Boguet declared that witches travelled through the air on white staffs, and this statement confirms that of Lambert Daneau, who had said in his work Les Sorciers (1564) that the witch received from the Devil a staff or rod which she used for flying (see also BROOMSTICK; FLYING OINTMENT). Modern witches use wands and staffs for purposes of divination; their riding staff is in fact a phallic emblem.

Wands were used by sorcerers for the detection of hidden treasures and other valuables. This is referred to in one of Sheppard's epigrams, dated 1651:

> Some sorcerers do boast they have a rod > Gathered with Vowes and Sacrifice
> And (borne about) will strangely nod
> To hidden treasure where it lies.

The wand of divination has close affinities with the forked hazel twig of the ancient miners and water diviners (see DOWSING) which, like the wand, had to be cut at either sunrise or sunset, with the sun's rays shining through the forks of the twig at the time.

There are references in some old works to the use of the wand in tests of chastity. In a tale in the Mabinogion (see MABINOGION), the wand of the wizard Math is used to determine whether or not the Lady Arianrhod has remained a virgin. Probably the old belief that walking over a magic wand served as a test of virginity was the origin of a Welsh wedding custom, in which the couple solemnized their union by stepping over a broomstick. Wands were also employed for the detection of thieves and murderers.

Rural wise men were often credited with the power to capture hares and other small game by waving or pointing their walking sticks in their direction; a practice which continued until the middle of the 19th century. On some farms men known as 'goose-charmers' were called in to bless the flocks, and would reinforce their incantations by waving a short stick.

John Moss

As the instrument of transformation, the wand occurs in the Celtic legend of Diarmaid and Grainne, in which the sorcerer transforms his own son into 'a cropped pig having neither ears nor tail'. In another Celtic legend a fairy woman strikes her rival with a wand and she becomes a beautiful wolfhound. In the Odyssey, the enchantress Circe strikes Odysseus's men with her wand, turning them into swine (see CIRCE).

To the physician priests of antiquity, the wand conferred not only the divine authority of the healer, but also the power to detect diseases. Medieval physicians were immediately recognizable by the wands which they bore. It was the custom for physicians to carry a walking stick down into the 18th century; the last of the line of 'wand carriers' being apparently the famous London physician, Dr John Radcliffe, whose gold-headed cane is preserved by the Royal College of Physicians. Charm-wands were still in use by rustic healers for the treatment of ague in the East Anglia marshlands up to about 150 years ago.

Aaron's Rod

Perhaps the most famous examples of wands used for supernatural purposes were the rods of Moses and Aaron, which were employed to divide the waters of the Red Sea, to cause water to gush forth from a rock in the desert, and to confound the enchantment of Pharaoh's magicians. According to an old Mohammedan legend, after the wand had been transformed into a serpent before Pharoah (Exodus, chapter 7) it suddenly grasped his throne and, suspending it in the air for a moment, announced: 'If it please Allah, I could swallow up not only the throne with thee and all that are here present but even thy palace and all that it contains without anyone seeing the slightest change in me.'

In a curious Jewish legend, Aaron's rod is described as having been created on the sixth day of Creation, and then taken by Adam out of Eden, and subsequently handed down through a succession of patriarchs. An early Christian tradition relates how this miraculous rod had originally been cut from the Tree of Knowledge in Eden. It finally came into the hands of Judas, and provided the beam of the cross upon which Christ was crucified. In one of the earliest portraits of Christ, incidentally, discovered in a catacomb in the 3rd century, the Saviour is depicted with a wand in his hands.

In the form of the sceptre, the wand is the emblem of temporal power. In Britain, the royal sceptre which is placed in the monarch's right hand at his coronation endows him with his kingly authority, while his other sceptres symbolize mercy and justice. The Ivory Rod, which is over three feet long, is another royal wand of office which expresses the supernatural authority vested in an anointed king. It has been suggested that the monarch's sceptre is derived from the sacred spear upon which the war chief leaned when delivering judgement; yet another example of the magic wand.

The great officers of state are presented with special wands at the time of their appointment, to endow them with part of the royal authority. The white staff carried by the Lord Chancellor signifies not only that he acts on the monarch's behalf but that his duties will be carried out with uprightness and purity. At one time the Earl Marshal would be presented with a wooden staff, but from the reign of Richard II onwards the holder of this office has been entitled to a gold staff bearing both the king's arms and his own as the symbol of his authority. The swagger stick carried by army officers provides yet a further example of the wand of power, and similarly, the baton of the conductor of an orchestra.

The modern conjuror's wand is traceable to the magician's wand of medieval days, if not to the staffs carried by court jesters. In the past, the conjuror was regarded as identical with the sorcerer, the two terms being interchangeable. As members of the Magic Circle are well aware, a magician without his wand is as ineffective as a soldier without his gun. Any appearance on stage without this ancient symbol of psychic powers dissipates both the magician's authority as a worker of wonders and his power of command over his audience.

ERIC MAPLE

Thorns in the flesh of the major Christian Churches, these eccentric and sometimes disreputable ecclesiastics can nevertheless claim apostolic succession and a valid, if irregular, consecration

WANDERING BISHOPS

IN THE LATE 1950s, the staider inhabitants of Brittany began to be both scandalized and alarmed by the unusual ecclesiastical activities of His Whiteness the Humble (Sa Blancheur L'Humble) Tugdual I, Archbishop of Dol, Primate of the Holy Celtic Church in Brittany, Abbot of St Dolay, Kayermo, and Keroussek. It was not so much the Archbishop's custom of administering the sacrament of baptism on the seashore at midnight that gave offence – although in such a traditionally Catholic area as rural Brittany it was naturally the cause of some surprise – but the fact that, save for his headgear (an imposing mitre of vaguely Gothic Revival pattern), it was alleged that he wore nothing at all while conducting this simple, but no doubt reverent, ceremony. Even the Archbishop's worst enemies, however, were forced to agree that, whatever his dress, he never failed to carry his crozier while performing his archiepiscopal duties.

Like most of the smaller Churches of Christendom, the Holy Celtic Church founded by Archbishop Tugdual suffers from 'too many Chiefs and not enough Indians'. Indeed, in the year 1970 it had no less than 14 bishops to administer to the spiritual needs of its nine lay members and to achieve its aim of reviving the Celtic invocation of 'Hum-Hum-Hum' (mysteriously spelt Oiv-Oiv-Oiv). Odd as this Church undoubtedly is, the oddest thing about it is that its bishops have the authentic apostolic succession (see PRIESTS) and that they have been validly, although highly irregularly, consecrated. For these unusual ecclesiastics are some of the episcopi vagantes, wandering bishops, whose existence and increasing numbers have been a cause of annoyance to the Orthodox, Anglican and Roman Catholic Churches since the beginning of this century.

One authority has estimated that there are something like 800 of these wandering bishops, most of them still active, though some have retired into private life. Some of them teach a syncretistic neo-gnosticism and practise faith healing, occultism and magic; others preach the historic creeds of Christianity, although these are divided on certain points of doctrine. Some are unquestionably rogues, and one or two of them have suffered long terms of imprisonment. Others live lives of great holiness – the present writer has met at least one who could be described as a saintly eccentric. Most of them are in schism from one another, but divided as they are, almost all of them have three things in common: a disregard of, and contempt for, the ecclesiastical disciplines of Rome, Constantinople and Canterbury; an almost magical belief in the importance of a valid apostolic succession; and an episcopal status ultimately derived from the Dutch Old Catholic (Jansenist) Church through either the Polish Mariavite Church or one or other of the successors of Archbishop Mathew, an eccentric Englishman who died in 1919.

Live Tiger in the Pulpit

Archbishop Mathew was a most erratic and unstable character. Born in 1852, of a Roman Catholic father and an Anglican mother, he underwent baptism in both Churches. Perhaps this early influence was the cause of the religious indecision that made him first an Anglican theological student, then a Roman priest – at this period his lifelong love of animals was responsible for his terrorizing the faithful of St Mary's, Bath, by introducing a live tiger into his pulpit – then a Unitarian, then a curate of the Church of England, then a Catholic layman, and finally an Old Catholic Archbishop. Even this last period was marked by one submission to Rome, one recantation of this submission, and a brief spiritual flirtation with Annie Besant and the Theosophical Society.

Mathew was consecrated a Bishop on 28 April 1908 by Archbishop Gul of Utrecht. On historical grounds the validity of his consecration seems unquestionable, for although the Dutch Old Catholic Church had been in schism from Rome since 1739 its episcopal line of succession could be traced back in an unbroken line to Cardinal Antonio Barberini, nephew of Pope Urban VIII. Nevertheless, the consecration was clearly obtained by fraud, for while both the Old Catholic bishops, and Mathew himself, were sincerely convinced that the latter represented a large and growing body of English Catholics who desired independence from Rome, the reality was very different. For Mathew was no more than the innocent tool of a tiny body of disgruntled, excommunicated, and possibly financially dishonest Catholic priests.

These were led by two Monsignori, Herbert Beale and Arthur Howarth, who had at one time been in charge of parishes in the diocese of Nottingham. Both had been on good terms with Bishop Bagshawe, who had been Bishop of Nottingham until his forcible retirement in 1901. Bagshawe has been described as saintly, in spite of occasional flashes of bad temper – on one occasion he excommunicated the entire membership of that High Tory body, the Primrose League – and he was usually prepared to turn a blind eye on the behaviour of his clergy, however outrageous, and to appoint to responsible positions priests who had been sacked from other dioceses. So great was Bagshawe's tolerance that his diocese became known as refugium peccatorum, the refuge of sinners. Bishop Brindle, Bagshawe's successor, was a man of quite a different type and engaged in a general clean-up – he sacked Beale and Howarth for various alleged financial irregularities. These two seem to have had no other motive for getting Mathew to establish an English branch of the Old Catholic Church than a desire to annoy their lawful ecclesiastical superiors, Bishop Brindle and Cardinal Bourne.

On his return from Holland, poor Mathew soon realized that he had been the victim of fraud, that the 'seventeen priests' and 'eight parishes' who had supposedly chosen him to be consecrated as their bishop existed solely in the imaginations of Beale and Howarth. For the rest of his life he devoted his efforts to holding together his tiny personal following, usually numbering no more than three or four, consoling himself for his lonely life by writing lengthy essays designed to prove the Baconian authorship of Shakespeare, and dreaming of a National Catholic Church under his own leadership. Unfortunately Mathew attempted to put

Faber & Faber

Faber & Faber

The wandering bishops have 'an almost magical belief in the importance of a valid apostolic succession' Left His Whiteness the Humble Tugdual I, Archbishop of Dol, Primate of the Holy Celtic Church in Brittany, Abbot of St Dolay, Kayermo, and Keroussek: a fondness for resounding titles is characteristic of the wandering bishops, who have been a cause of annoyance to the more orthodox Churches all this century Right Joseph Rene Villate derived his episcopal status ultimately from the Jacobite Patriarch of Antioch, and bishops of the African Orthodox Churches in turn derive their succession from him his dreams into practice and consecrated a number of bishops; he was a poor judge of character and many of those he consecrated were clearly quite unsuitable candidates for any ecclesiastical position.

Mathew performed comparatively few consecrations but there were some bishops who were prepared to confer the episcopate on anyone who could pay a sufficiently large fee. It is through such fee-snatching activities that the lines of succession of many of the wandering bishops of the present day are derived.

The Archbishop of Utrecht, 18 months after his consecration of Mathew, obligingly supplied the Polish Mariavites with their first bishop, a certain Michael Kowalski. The Mariavite Church had approximately 20,000 members and had come into existence as a result of the mystical experiences of a woman named Maria Kozlowska. Maria, who had started her adult life as a poverty-stricken sewing-woman, had founded, in 1887, a community of Franciscan Tertiaries (lay members of a monastic order), all female. The Virgin, said Maria, had instructed her to found a mixed religious community dedicated to the life of Mary. This organization, the Mariavite (Life of Mary) Union, was duly established and met with considerable success, for it appealed strongly to the messianic elements in Polish Catholicism. Maria began to be known as 'Little Mother', was venerated as a living saint, and continued to have further revelations.

By 1904 the Polish hierarchy had become alarmed by the growing strength of the Mariavite Union and by rumours of immoral activities in its mixed monasteries. An investigation was undertaken and a report sent to Rome. The Holy See, always suspicious of saints, declared that Maria's revelations were spurious, that her visions were hallucinations, and ordered the dissolution of the Mariavite Union and its communities. The Mariavites disregarded the Pope's ruling and were excommunicated.

Marriage in a Monastery

With Kowalski as its presiding Archbishop the Mariavite Church became ever more eccentric. Monks and nuns entered into 'spiritual marriages' – and sometimes carnal relations – with one another, women were ordained, and idolization of the Virgin Mary was encouraged. By 1930 Kowalski had actually consecrated his spiritual directress, a nun named Sister Isabella, as a female bishop and concluded that both he and she were infallible and impeccable.

Kowalski seems to have enjoyed nothing more than manufacturing bishops and carried out many consecrations; Sister Isabella was just as keen to make female bishops, and in just two months she consecrated 11 of them. In their turn Kowalski's bishops made more bishops, and today most of the episcopi vagantes who are not in the Mathew succession derive their status from the Mariavite line – although, of course, many have both lines of succession, for the conditional reconsecration of one another is a favourite recreation of the wandering bishops.

Two other lines of episcopal succession were created as a result of the activities of Joseph Rene Villate (d. 1929) and Julius Ferrete (d. 1904). Both these prelates ultimately derived their episcopal status from Peter the Humble, the Jacobite Patriarch of Antioch. There is some doubt as to the validity of the consecrations of both Villate and Ferrete, but because of cross-consecrations almost all the wandering bishops can claim an undoubted line of descent from Mathew or the Mariavites.

Aleister Crowley – Bishop

Many of the wandering bishops have chosen to involve themselves in faith healing, magic and occultism. On the other hand, quite a few magicians have sought the episcopate for their own purposes. Thus Julius Hussay, who became a bishop of the Villate line in 1904, seems to have acquired his episcopal status only because he believed that it would greatly enhance his magical powers. Hussay, who wrote several extremely boring books on magic, conditionally consecrated a number of bishops of the Gnostic Catholic Church, a mysterious body which still survives in several offshoots, each claiming the only orthodoxy. The consecrations were conditional because these French Gnostic bishops had already had the episcopate conferred upon them by A. Doinel, who himself claimed to have been 'twice spiritually consecrated a Bishop'; on the first occasion by Jesus Christ who had, so Doinel said, made one of his rare personal appearances, and on the second by the ghosts of two medieval Cathar bishops who had chosen to manifest themselves at a Spiritualist seance. Hussay also consecrated an ex-Trappist monk named Giraud, and he in turn, consecrated as a Gnostic bishop Joanny Bricaud, a prolific writer on magic.

At about the same time Dr Encausse, who wrote on occultism under the name of Papus (see PAPUS) and was a Gnostic bishop, had various masonic dignities conferred upon him by Theodor Reuss, as head of the Ordo Templi Orientis, an organization specializing in sexual magic (see CROWLEY). Dr Encausse returned the compliment by consecrating Reuss, an action which seems to have led to Aleister Crowley becoming a bishop! For when Crowley visited Reuss in Berlin and had conferred upon himself the chieftainship of the British section of the O.T.O., he was also consecrated as a Gnostic Catholic bishop – or so Reuss claimed. Crowley, however, does not appear to have been aware of his new status; certainly he never made any attempt to exercise his ecclesiastical functions, although, it is true, he did write a special Mass for the Gnostic Church.

Of all the hundreds of independent Churches spanned by the wandering Bishops, only two groups have shown any real capacity for survival and growth. The first of these groups is that of the African Orthodox Churches which, in spite of numerous schisms, have made considerable inroads amongst the membership of those African Churches which are still, to some extent, under the control of the ecclesiastical hierarchies of the former colonial powers. The second group consists of those Churches deriving from the Theosophical followers of Archbishop Mathew.

The African Orthodox Churches derive their episcopal succession from Villate who, in 1921, consecrated George Alexander McGuire, a former Episcopalian missionary in the West Indies, as 'Patriarch Alexander of the African Orthodox Church of the World'. Within a short time this new Church achieved a sizeable membership among the Negro population of the United States, almost certainly because of its appeal to black nationalism; it is significant that The Negro Churchman, the newspaper of the new Church, described McGuire's consecration as being 'the germ of a Racial Church'.

Throughout the years of the Depression the Church continued to grow, but after McGuire's death in 1935 various schisms occurred and there was a consequent decline in membership. At the present time, however, there are at least four Churches active in the United States and the West Indies deriving from the McGuire organization.

Saviour of African Christianity

It is in Africa itself that the African Orthodox Church has met with its greatest successes and has in certain areas become a powerful rival to the missionary-led Churches in general and to the Anglican Church in particular.

McGuire extended his influence to Africa in 1928, when Daniel William Alexander, the son of an American father and a coloured South African mother, returned to South Africa after his consecration by McGuire in the previous year. Alexander established his cathedral in Kimberley and, significantly, dedicated it to an African saint, Augustine of Hippo. He soon made converts and within a few years had a considerable following in Kenya, in Uganda and in South Africa. Bishop Alexander was a man of intellectual ability, charm, and even holiness, being held in high regard by Anglicans.

In Buganda – now part of the Republic of Uganda – a schismatic section of the African Orthodox Church has actually been brought into full communion with one of the ancient Patriarchates of Eastern Christendom. This, the African Greek Orthodox Church, came into existence as a result of the activities of a certain Reuben Spartas, a young African Christian who had rebelled against the theology of Anglican evangelicism.

The internal theological disputes of the world-wide Anglican communion have been reflected in the missionary activities of the Church of England and the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States. Thus, in Africa, the Universities' Mission to Central Africa has occupied the extreme Anglo-Catholic position, the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel has been in the middle of the road, and the Church Missionary Society has represented the evangelical viewpoint.

Reuben Spartas had been brought up by the Christian Missionary Society as an evangelical and had become the cook of a missionary archdeacon. He soon rebelled against both Low Church theology and the white colonialism which he believed it represented, writing to Cosmo Gordon Lang, then Archbishop of Canterbury, to tell him that the Church of England had 'no Catholic faith, Doctrine and Real Principles' and to McGuire that he had resolved 'to go to hell, gaol, or die for the redemption of Africa'.

Spartas was consecrated by Alexander in 1932 and rapidly gained converts, establishing schools and churches throughout Buganda. In 1934 he broke away from Alexander, and his African Greek Orthodox Church was finally admitted into full communion with the Patriarchate of Alexandria

Certificate of the consecration of Ernest Odell Cope by Ralph Whitman, Regionary Old Catholic Bishop of Wales, who himself had been consecrated by Archbishop Mathew, an eccentric Englishman from whom many wandering bishops are 'apostolically' descended

CERTIFICATE OF CONSECRATION

+

In the Name of God. Amen.

WE, Ralph Whitman, Regionary Old Catholic Bishop for Wales, consecrated by the late Archbishop Mathew on the 8th day of June 1910 as Bishop for Llanthony Abbey, Do Hereby Certify, that for the purpose of re-establishing the monastic vocation at Llanthony (which has been lying in abeyance since the death of the late Father Ignatius) and providing spiritual ministrations for the Order of Llanthony Abbey Brothers, We did on the 19th day of July 1940 at Repton, by the laying-on of Hands with Prayer and Anointing, Apostolically Consecrate to the Office of a Bishop in the One Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church of Jesus Christ Ernest Odell Cope, whom We had previously ordained Priest on the 11th day of July 1939 at Gloucester.

As Witness Our Signature and Seal this 19th day of July 1940.

Ralph Whitman +
Regionary Bishop

Witnesses:

Harold Fugden
Thomas Leall
Thomas Frederick Appleby
Robert Edmund Langton
James Walter Slater

Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge

in 1946; today there is not only a Metropolitan for East Africa, appointed by the Patriarch of Alexandria, but the African Greek Orthodox Church uses the full liturgy of St John Chrysostom, translated into Luganda by Spartas himself.

It seems at least possible that such independent African Churches as that of Spartas offer the best hope for the survival of Christianity in Black Africa. More and more those Churches which, rightly or wrongly, are associated with the former colonial powers are falling into disfavour with newly-independent governments. It is an odd thought that the activities of such an ecclesiastical clown as Villate may ultimately prove to have been the salvation of African Christianity.

Liberal Catholicism

The theosophically-inclined Liberal Catholic Church came into existence when most of Archbishop Mathew's clerical and lay followers went into schism as a result of Mathew declaring that membership of the Theosophical Society was incompatible with membership of his own organization. The schismatics chose James Wedgwood, a member of the famous pottery family, as their leader and he was duly consecrated. The leadership of the Liberal Catholic Church, in practice if not in theory, passed to C. W. Leadbeater, a former Anglican curate and theosophist, who held this position until his death in the 1930s. He developed a strange neo-gnostic interpretation of Catholic Christianity and wrote The Science of the Sacraments, putting forward his ideas. The growth of Liberal Catholicism has not been spectacular but has nevertheless continued at a steady rate: today there are around 50,000 members of the Church.

The Churches founded by the wandering bishops are peculiar in every sense of the word. It is unlikely that we shall hear the last of them for many years to come.

FRANCIS KING

FURTHER READING: Peter Anson, Bishops at Large (Faber, 1964); H. R. T. Brandreth, Episcopi Vagantes and the Anglican Communion (S.P.C.K., 1947); C. W. Leadbeater, The Science of the Sacraments (Theosophical Publishing House, 1929).

WANDERING JEW

The Wandering Jew, from a 17th-century engraving: the name by which he was known probably comes from King Ahasuerus, the villain and laughingstock of the book of Esther AHASUERUS, the unwilling immortal, has been a well-known figure of European legend since 1602, when he was introduced to the public in a German pamphlet which declared that the late Lutheran Bishop of Schleswig had once met a Jew in Hamburg and learnt that he was more than 15 centuries old. This man had been a cobbler in Jerusalem in the time of Christ. When Jesus, carrying the cross, tried to rest on his doorstep, the Jew pushed him away saying, 'Go where you belong.' Jesus looked at him sternly and replied, 'I will stand here and rest, but you shall go on till I return.' Ever since – the bishop gathered – Ahasuerus had been wandering from country to country awaiting the Second Coming.

The pamphlet of 1602 appeared anonymously. A later edition gives the author as Chrysostomus Dudulaeus of Westphalia, otherwise unknown. The legend became popular at once: besides many German editions of the pamphlet, there were soon eight in Dutch and Flemish, others in French, Danish and Swedish, and an English parody.

The Immortal

Ahasuerus's title varies. In German-speaking countries, he is the 'immortal' or 'eternal' Jew. The epithet 'wandering' has its source in the French version, which made him le juif errant. With other nationalities he has acquired different names: in Spain he is Juan Espera-en-Dios ('trust in God') and in Belgium, Isaac Laquedem.

About 20 reports of the Wandering Jew are on record. Besides his Hamburg appearance in 1542 or 1547, he is said to have been seen in Spain in 1575, Vienna in 1599, Ypres in 1623, Brussels in 1640 and Paris in 1644. Later appearances are rarer, although they include one in Newcastle in 1790, and one in Salt Lake City in 1868, when the wanderer met a Mormon named O'Grady – an event duly reported in the Deseret News.

While Ahasuerus cannot be documented before 1602, he has older antecedents. The notion goes back to a saying of Jesus: 'Truly, I say to you, there are some standing here who will not taste death before they see the Son of Man coming in his kingdom' (Matthew 16.28).

Early Christians speculated that somebody would be kept alive by divine favour until Christ did return. Such hopes centred for a while on John, the beloved disciple, to whom Jesus had made a rather similar cryptic remark about 'remaining until I come' (John 21. 20-23). But John died, and the belief died with him.

Then the story was revived with new characters. According to the historian Roger of Wendover, in 1228 an Armenian archbishop visited England, and told the monks of St Albans that he had seen a man called Cartaphilus who was a witness of the Crucifixion. When Jesus had passed him bearing the cross, he shouted, 'Go on faster', and Jesus answered, 'I go; but you shall wait till I come.' Cartaphilus (a door-keeper in Pilate's house, therefore a Roman, not a Jew) was afterwards baptized by Ananias and given the Christian name Joseph; 12 centuries later he was living a quiet, penitential life, chiefly as a guest of religious communities. He would age till he appeared to be 100 years old and would then be miraculously restored to 30. Travelling Armenian priests seem to have made much of this tale, not only at St Albans but at Tournai in Flanders in 1243, and it is repeated in the chronicle of Matthew Paris.

Medieval accounts of the Holy Land hint at a second figure of the same type. In 1250 a French author, returned from residence in Jerusalem, speaks of 'Jehan Boute Dieu' as proverbially long-lived. In Italian legend the same person becomes John Bottadio ('Godsmiter'), the officer who struck Christ before the high priest, sometimes further identified with Malchus (John 18.10, 22).

The names given to the two immortals, Cartaphilus ('most beloved') and John, imply that the ultimate source of inspiration is the far earlier belief about the apostle. But at some stage, divine favour has been turned into punishment. The motif occurs in Buddhist legend: Pindola, an unworthy follower of Buddha, was condemned to be unable to die.

No direct links of influence have been traced, either between Pindola and the two medieval immortals or between them and Ahasuerus. But the inventor of the Jew must have known something of the older stories. He repeats the tale of the insult to Christ. He takes up and strengthens the idea of a curse. The name Ahasuerus suggests an acquaintance with plays that were acted at the Jewish feast of Purim. Based on the book of Esther, they brought in King Ahasuerus as a villain and laughing-stock.

The Wandering Jew has inspired many works of literature and art. There is a ballad in Percy's Reliques of Ancient English Poetry (1765). Goethe and Shelley were attracted to the theme, Shelley more than once. The most recent literary addition is an episode in Evelyn Waugh's novel Helena (1950).

GEOFFREY ASHE*

WATER

Water of life, water of chaos, water of destruction – these three principal elements flow and mingle in shifting patterns in the symbolism of water

THE SPANISH conquistador Ponce de Leon, governor of Puerto Rico in the early 16th century, set out with three ships in search of the land of Bimini, where he hoped to find the fountain of youth. What he actually discovered was Florida and, by a curious irony, near the site where he landed in 1513 there now stands the city of St Augustine, a famous last retreat for the old, who wait there in the sunshine for death.

The theme of the fountain of youth, the spring of living water, the well at the world's end, the water of life, is old and widespread. In numerous folktales and fairy tales there is a magic liquid which cures all diseases, brings the dead to life and makes anyone who drinks it immortal. Alexander the Great, it was said, went to the world's end to find the water of immortality. Cranach's painting of The Fountain of Youth shows old women entering the water which transforms them into young girls, and in Bosch's Garden of Terrestrial Delights a fountain of curious and alarming design is the source of the river of life which waters Eden (see ALEXANDER THE GREAT; ELIXIR OF LIFE; FOUNTAIN). Correspondingly, lack of water is associated with death, not only in this world but in the next. In Near Eastern and Christian traditions the dead thirst for cool water, because they exist in dry, dusty places or in burning hot ones, where the water of refreshment and life is missing (see REFRIGERIUM).

Water is naturally linked with life because living things cannot survive without it, and liquids in general are regarded as life-giving. Rain makes the plants grow, babies are generated by sperm and nourished on milk, the chick forms in the liquid of the egg, the child in the womb is lapped in waters which break at its coming, the sap is the life of the tree, and blood is the life of men and animals for when they lose it they weaken and die. Intoxicating liquids are connected with life because they make people 'lively', and this

Father and Mother Nile, from an Egyptian tomb of the 19th Dynasty: one of the principal strands in the symbolism of water is its connection with life – the rain which fertilizes the soil, the river which irrigates it is reflected in the words for alcohol in various languages – aqua vitae, eau de vie, lebenswasser, all meaning 'water of life' – and in the term 'spirit', referring to the principle which vivifies matter. Liquids are also life-giving because they flow, they move about while lifeless things stay still. Mercury was called quicksilver, 'living silver', because it is mobile, which was the basis of its importance as the 'spirit' in alchemy, and one of the processes in the alchemical work was the 'bath of rebirth' (see ALCHEMY; MERCURY).

We wash away physical dirt with water, and so we wash away spiritual dirt with it too and this may be an essential pre-requisite for approaching the divine

The Spring of Eternal Life

The life-giving divine spirit and the life-giving rain are linked in Isaiah (chapter 44), when God says to Israel: 'For I will pour water on the thirsty land, and streams on the dry ground; I will pour my Spirit upon your descendants, and my blessing on your offspring', and that God 'pours' his material and spiritual blessings on man, as rain pours from the sky, has become a common figure of speech. In Jeremiah (2.13) God is called 'the fountain of living waters'. In Ezekiel (chapter 47), the river of life flows out from Jerusalem to irrigate the desert, to freshen the waters of the Dead Sea and make it swarm with fish. The book of Zechariah (chapter 14), describing the coming 'day of the Lord' when God will become king over the whole earth, says that he will stand on the Mount of Olives and 'living waters shall flow out from Jerusalem . . . it shall continue in summer as in winter'. And the people will go up to Jerusalem every year to worship God and to keep the Feast of Booths. If any fail to go up, 'there will be no rain upon them' (except for the Egyptians, who did not depend directly on rainfall and so are threatened with plague).

This prophecy links the river of life and the rain with the Feast of Booths, or Tabernacles, a harvest festival during which the people lived outdoors in arbours covered with foliage, in memory of the passage of their ancestors through the wilderness, when God had miraculously supplied them with water and had 'rained' manna from heaven for them to eat (Exodus 16.4). The green arbours recall the garden of Eden, which was watered by a river that divided into four rivers (Genesis, chapter 2). The new Jerusalem, the heavenly paradise of the book of Revelation (chapter 22) contains 'the river of the water of life, bright as crystal', which is the river of Eden, and the tree of life which stood in Eden.

It was during the Feast of Booths, apparently as the libation of water was being poured out, that Jesus said, 'If any one thirst, let him come to me and drink' (John, chapter 7), and earlier he had told the woman by the well in Samaria: 'Everyone who drinks of the water that I shall give him will never thirst; the water that I shall give him will become in him a spring of water welling up to eternal life' (John, chapter 4). In Christian symbolism the four rivers of Eden were identified with the four gospels which brought the life-giving message of Christ, and the living water with the water which flowed from Christ's side on the cross.

Clean Hands and Pure Heart

'Cleanliness is next to godliness', the proverb says, and in many societies washing in water or being sprinkled with it cleans away pollution, the contamination which may arise from many sources, including blood, childbirth, sex, the dead, a sin or a breach of custom (though water is by no means the only purifying agent – fire, blood, sand and other substances have also been used). We wash away physical dirt with water, and so we wash away spiritual dirt with it too, and this may be an essential pre-requisite for approaching the divine. In Islam the faithful must wash before each of the five daily sayings of prayer, and tanks or wells are provided at mosques for the worshippers' ablutions. The priests of ancient Egypt shaved their entire bodies every three days and washed themselves in cold water twice each day and twice each night. In Hinduism a ritual bath, which achieves both physical and spiritual cleanliness, is most effectively taken in a river or a sacred pool or a tank provided at a temple. The 'ghats' or sites of ritual bathing are regarded as spiritual 'centres' at which the bather is linked with both earth and heaven. The European magical textbooks put a high value on cleanliness, to rid the magician of impurities on which a spirit might fasten and as a sign of dedication to the work in hand (see RITUAL MAGIC).

There are numerous references in the Old Testament to ritual purification with water. In Exodus (chapter 30), priests are instructed on pain of death to wash their hands and feet before approaching the altar. Anyone who touched the bed of a menstruating woman was required to wash himself and his clothes in water (Leviticus, chapter 15), and people and things which had been in contact with the dead had to be sprinkled with water or washed in it (Numbers, chapter 19). In Psalms 18 and 24 clean hands are equated with 'righteousness' and 'a pure heart'. In strict Jewish households the hands must be washed before saying prayers and before any meal which includes bread. Jewish families which do not keep a separate set of dishes and glasses for the Passover meal may purify their ordinary tableware by dipping it in boiling water.

Roman Catholic priests wash their hands in a basin called a lavabo before saying Mass. 'Holy water', specially blessed by a priest, is provided at the doors of churches so that worshippers can sprinkle themselves with it before going in. It is also sprinkled on the congregation at Mass on Sundays, and it has long been regarded as a powerful defence against evil forces.

In Christian baptism, as in ancient Egyptian mortuary ritual, the two ideas of the Below Physical dirt is washed away with water, and so symbolically is spiritual dirt and guilt: Pilate 'washing his hands' of Jesus, a stained glass window in Lincoln Cathedral

Right Detail from Veronese's Marriage at Cana, where Jesus turned water into wine: liquids, especially intoxicating liquids which make people 'lively', are generally connected with life in symbolism

Soma Halliday

ECCE

God of Waters

By dread deeds thou dost answer us with deliverance,
O God of our salvation,
who art the hope of all the ends of the earth,
and of the farthest seas;
who by thy strength hast established the mountains,
being girded with might;
who dost still the roaring of the seas,
the roaring of their waves,
the tumult of the peoples;
so that those who dwell at earth's farthest bounds
are afraid at thy signs;
thou makest the outgoings of the morning and the evening
to shout for joy.

Thou visitest the earth and waterest it,
thou greatly enrichest it;
the river of God is full of water;
thou providest their grain,
for so thou hast prepared it.
Thou waterest its furrows abundantly,
settling its ridges,
softening it with showers,
and blessing its growth.
Thou crownest the year with thy bounty;
the tracks of thy chariot drip with fatness.
The pastures of the wilderness drip,
the hills gird themselves with joy,
the meadows clothe themselves with flocks,
the valleys deck themselves with grain,
they shout and sing together for joy.

Psalm 65, 5-13

water of life and the water of cleanliness were brought together. The water which washes away dirt and corruption became also the water of life, effecting a spiritual rebirth. In Romans (chapter 6) St Paul presented baptism as 'a ritual death and rebirth, which simulates the death and resurrection of Christ' (see BAPTISM).

In the background of this view of baptism is the notion of water as fons et origo, the fount and origin of all forms of life. In some creation myths, there existed in the beginning a chaos of water, from which the world or the god who made the world emerged (see CREATION MYTHS). But though water is sometimes regarded as the vital principle – the rain which fertilizes the soil, the river which irrigates it – the vital principle may alternatively be air, breath or spirit (see BREATH), which injects vitality into the formless waters of chaos and creates forms – the structures and bodies of the phenomena of our world. Mircea Eliade comments on the symbolism of baptism and initiation by water in this light: 'Immersion in water symbolizes a return to the pre-formal, a total regeneration, a new birth, for immersion means a dissolution of forms, a reintegration into the formlessness of pre-existence; and emerging from the water is a repetition of the act of creation in which form was first expressed.' This brings to mind the parallel, which the alchemists drew, between the Holy Spirit descending on Jesus at his baptism in the waters of Jordan and the Spirit of God moving over the primeval waters in Genesis.

The writer of 2 Peter (chapter 3) observed that God made the world out of the water of chaos and through this same water destroyed the world again in the Flood. Later writers saw a parallel between the waters of the Flood and the water of baptism, and saw Noah's ark, riding out the Flood, as a foreshadowing of salvation through Christ. 'Christ the firstborn of every creature,' said Justin Martyr (2nd century AD), 'has become

Left In Christian baptism the two ideas of the water of life and the water of purification are brought together: Jesus baptized in Jordan, by Verrocchio and Leonardo Below Satirical view of baptisms at the Brooklyn Tabernacle, New York, from Puck

Chris Barker

Victoria and Albert Museum/Mark Gerson

Illustration by W. Heath Robinson to Charles Kingsley's children's book The Water Babies (1863): small beings in human form were believed by many American Indian peoples to live in lakes, springs and streams, and were usually feared as uncanny in a new sense the head of another race, of those whom he has brought to birth by water, faith and the wood that holds the mystery of the Cross, just as Noah was saved in the wood of the Ark.' Noah's ark is related to the symbolism of the Church as a ship, in which the faithful ride out the storms and perils of this world (see SHIP), and baptism was also taken to have been prefigured in the crossing of the Red Sea, the triumphant and miraculous passage through water in which the Israelites escaped from bondage in Egypt, as the Christian in baptism escaped from slavery to the Devil.

The story of the Flood, with its parallels in other traditions (see END OF THE WORLD; FLOOD), is an example of yet another aspect of water symbolism, which stems from the fact that too much water is as harmful to life as too little: you can drown in it. There is in water, especially in the sea, a power of violence, turbulence and destruction which threatens life and good order. In Babylonian mythology the monstrous sea, Tiamat, whose 'eyes' were the rivers Tigris and Euphrates, threatened to overthrow the gods. In Canaan, Baal conquered Yam, the god of seas and rivers and waters underground, and there are passages in the Old Testament referring to Yahweh's conquest of a sea monster, the ancestor of the Great Beast of Revelation (see GREAT BEAST) and more distantly of the threatening monsters which in science fiction come up out of the depths to destroy the world as incarnations of primeval chaos.

But the waters of chaos are also the waters of potential life. Many alchemists regarded their processes as a repetition, in miniature, of the process of creation described in Genesis. 'Perform no operation till all be made water,' they said, meaning that the material in the vessel, or spiritually the alchemist himself, must be reduced to the state of watery primeval chaos before 'philosophical mercury', the divine spirit of life, could move over the waters to create a new material or a new condition.

The Mind's Depths

As the fount and origin of life water may naturally be connected with woman. Aphrodite, the Greek love goddess, was born of the sea, the fountain is one of the emblems of the Virgin Mary, and in the Cabala the Sefirah Binah (see CABALA) is called the Mother, the Throne, the Great Sea. In modern magical systems it is linked with the waters of chaos in Genesis and with female symbols, the cup, circle, oval and diamond. Water is also linked with the moon, which 'flows' in the sense that it constantly changes shape, and which is connected with the flow of the tides and the ebbing and flowing of all the rhythms of life (see MOON).

Both water and the moon are connected by many modern interpreters of symbolism and mythology with the 'depths' of the mind, the unconscious, the swirling currents of the inner self. According to C. G. Jung, the sea or any large expanse of water appearing in dreams and fantasies is an image of the unconscious. Here again, the depths of the self are chaotic, formless, and pregnant with violence and destruction, but are also the wellsprings of the life of the conscious mind. 'If attention is directed to the unconscious,' Jung said, 'the unconscious will yield up its contents, and these in turn will fructify the conscious like a fountain of living water.'

(See also BRIDGES; DRAGON; ELEMENTS; FISH; GANGES; LANDSCAPE SYMBOLISM; MERMAIDS; MIRROR; NYMPHS; SEA; SPRINGS AND WELLS.)

RICHARD CAVENDISH

FURTHER READING: S. G. F. Brandon, Creation Legends of the Ancient Near East (Verry, Lawrence, 1963); R. Wild, Water in the Cultic Worship of Isis and Serapis (E. J. Brill, 1981).

Many apparently magical methods of forecasting the weather have proved to have a scientific basis; but whether medicine-men and witches have been able to influence the elements, and if so how, has not been properly explored

WEATHER MAGIC

THERE HAS BEEN no time in human history when people have not needed to know something about the weather. Probably under modern conditions we have less knowledge of the weather than ever before. In the great civilized countries of the world, the red sky at night is no longer a warning that the cloud will disappear and fine weather will come on the morrow, but it tells us of the glare of neon signs in peace and of the burning of cities in time of war. We fill our world with artificial light so that it is only in the more remote areas that one can take a walk at night to admire the moon and the stars. Within the great city the moon is less brilliant than the street lights.

To our unsophisticated ancestors the world was a place full of magic, and most important of all the phenomena of Nature were the coming and going of rain and snow, which determined the growth of the food crops for the primitive farmer; and for the hunters the rainfall determined the amount of fresh grass available for the migrating herds of deer and bison. Sometimes quite alarming falls of coloured dust of unknown origin caused red rains, white rains and black rains which were carefully noted in the historical annals of past times. Hail storms occurred with sudden changes of temperature, sometimes blighting new crops by a layer of thin frozen ice, but more often actively destroying crops through the massive battering of larger hailstones crashing to the ground and beating everything flat beneath them.

Demons of the Desert

Then there were the winds; to most of us the winds have simply come from the four directions of north, south, east and west. We, who live in the great cities of the world just notice whether a day is windy or not, but to the seaman and the farmer each wind still has its own character, bringing its specific blessing or danger to the crops and animals. In addition to the normal winds there are the sudden and more violent winds, the waterspouts and the hurricanes; terrible things which cause tremendous damage as they sweep across the country. Sometimes, after a waterspout has passed, the ground is seen to be covered with small frogs or even fishes. Sometimes leaves of trees from far distant places are cast down as the storm passes. To primitive man all these phenomena are not only beyond his control, as indeed they are today, but also totally

British Museum/Michael Halford

Axel Poignant

'To our unsophisticated ancestors the world was a place full of magic', and weather phenomena were linked with gods and spirits Left Head of a basalt figure of the Aztec goddess Chalchihuitlicue, consort of the rain god: she was the spring rains, the whirlwinds, the whirlpools in the water and all young growing plants Above Australian aboriginal lightning spirit beyond his rational understanding.

All around the skies of the world lightning plays from time to time. To the North American Indians this is the flashing beak of the great thunder-bird as she flies through the storm. To Europeans these were the thunderbolts cast by the king of the gods. Even Mahayana Buddhism involves the use of the metal Dorje, which represents a thunderbolt, in the temple services.

Winds in a Bag

Among the greatest weather watchers in ancient times were the Etruscans of northern Italy (see ETRUSCANS). Their diviners, who cast prophecies from the state of the sky, achieved great fame, and it was customary in the early days of Rome for the Senate to send deputations to Etruscan cities to ask for advice when their own oracles seemed doubtful. The Etruscan soothsayers preferred to work from a high clear mountain with an even view of the sky in all directions; if it was situated above oak woods, so much the better. There were 16 wind directions to be regarded.

Particularly in thundery weather, the observers would wait on the hilltops, marking the direction of lightning flashes exactly, taking note of their brilliance and of the places where they appeared to strike. From this study they calculated the incidence of danger, and of blessings coming from the different directions. The augurs then assessed their particular meanings for the person or city on whose behalf they were consulting the elements.

For most people, knowledge of the sky sufficient to give a clue to tomorrow's weather is quite enough. But quite often a much fuller knowledge is demanded, even in primitive society, and this is expected from the weather specialists, the shamans (see SHAMAN) who have watched the skies sufficiently long and thoroughly to form judgements. They make their estimates from wind, cloud, the flight of birds and the colour of the sky, particularly at sunrise and sunset.

Such specialists included the magicians of Northern Europe, who were said to have the power to tie the winds in a length of rope. This power might be used for evil magic, by pulling the knots tight, when it was believed that the winds would be stopped and ships becalmed, with consequent loss of business and even health, if the calm lasted for a long time. The knots were used to tie up the bag in which the wind was symbolically trapped; the magician would use it like the bellows of a bagpipe for sympathetic magic, thus inducing the real winds to follow the example of the air being expelled.

Continual Rain in Paradise

Perhaps the most difficult of all forecasting performed by people living the simple life was that of predicting the coming of rain in semi-desert areas. Some successful meteorological observers probably possessed clairvoyant powers; in Africa, Masai shamans would sit on the hilltops near Mt Kenya and look at the sky, knowing from the position of the stars what season of the year it was. By the colour of the sky, by the appearance of little drifts of clouds forming near the snowcap of the mountain, they would estimate whether the rains would be early or late, in order to give the farmers a few days' warning so that the planting could be achieved in time. When the forecasts proved wrong the rainmaker would be considered to have been abandoned by his spiritual helpers and therefore of no further use. He would be lucky if he escaped simply with insults and a beating.

Radio Times Hulton Picture Library

Witches working magic to create a hailstorm, a 15th-century woodcut

Among the Pueblo Indians (see PUEBLO INDIANS) there were also many wise shamans who observed the weather. In their semi-desert country, where the water supply was dependent largely on seasonal thunderstorms, it was important to know whether the storms were likely to be light or heavy, early or late. All good observers in the hilltop villages could detect at a glance which way a storm-cloud was moving, and by looking at the shadows of rain or hail falling from its base, they would be able to estimate any possible danger to their crops.

In central Mexico (see AZTECS; MEXICO) the weather gods were very important. Tlaloc, the lord of the rain and master of thunder, was a great spirit who controlled the four kinds of rain and brought life and fertility to the earth. His importance was so great that the high priest of the Aztecs was called the Tlaloc Tlamacazqui.

The consort of the rain god was the beautiful princess Chalchihuitlicue, who was the spring rains, the whirlwinds, the whirlpools in the water and all young growing plants. Between them they looked after the fertility of the material earth. People who had been struck by lightning or drowned were believed to have been claimed by these deities, and their souls would live in the wonderful paradise where flowers bloomed continually, there were myriads of butterflies, and thin rain fell constantly amid the rainbows. To the Mexicans of the semi-desert highland, this indeed was the most beautiful place which could exist.

The Celtic Druids were skilled in weather magic. Their traditional knowledge has been preserved for us in many little nursery rhymes and riddles which refer to the wind and the sky. Like all people concerned with the natural growth of crops, the Druids realized that the power behind the weather had spiritual connotations, that the life of man was closely linked with the movements of wind and rain.

Splitting a Cloud

At all times magicians, witches and ecstatics of various kinds have been credited with influencing the weather – not only the shaman tying knots in his rope, but also the witches in their magical rituals, flying through the air on their broomsticks. They swept along among the clouds, they brought mists, they threw the hail, they were able to charm the winds on the ocean so that they could float to sea in a sieve.

Even under modern civilized conditions, there are various curious phenomena to be found in the experience of witchcraft. In periods when the atmosphere is highly charged with electricity and the skin is dry, a group of naked dancers in a circle may find themselves producing sudden little flashes of fire all over their bodies. This is due entirely to the electrical static discharge between the atmosphere and their skins. These discharges may often be very beautiful in the dark, like veils of flashing pale blue diamonds appearing all over the dancer. Such things in the past must indeed have seemed magical and mysterious, although to a modern mind they are simply curious and rather beautiful.

Although nothing has been reported in recent years to compare with the storm-raising powers credited to medieval witches or with the bringing of thunder and lightning from the heavens which was attributed to priests and magicians in classical times, in practice it has been found possible to split a small cloud in unstable weather conditions. A few years ago, three friends walking along a path in thundery weather observed a small cloud blowing up directly towards them. On looking towards it and wishing that the cloud would divide, they witnessed the actual splitting of the cloud into two portions as it approached and then passed in its separate halves overhead.

Unimpressive as this experiment may seem, it did give a clue to the possibility that people much more devoted to such activity, and with a deeper occult knowledge, could have caused clouds to disperse.

The whole of this field of weather control by magic is insufficiently explored in modern times. Nevertheless, it is still possible for ordinary people to look at the sky and say what tomorrow's weather will be. That in itself is a phenomenon worth noting as an achievement of the human personality. (See also SKY.)

C.A.BURLAND

THOMAS WEIR

IT WAS THE CURIOUS FATE of Thomas Weir to enjoy during his lifetime a reputation for extreme religious zeal and piety, and to be remembered after his death as one of Scotland's most notorious witches. Born in Lanark about 1600, he was executed in Edinburgh in 1670 for crimes of which he had never been suspected until he suddenly and quite spontaneously confessed to them. In between, he had been well known as an ardent Covenanter, a violent anti-royalist during the Civil Wars, and a fanatical opponent at all times of the Established Church.

In 1641 Weir served as a lieutenant in the army sent by the Covenanting Estates into Ireland, and in 1649 and 1650 he was a commander in the City Guard of Edinburgh. He was then a major, and he was known by that title for the rest of his life. In his later years, as a member of an extreme Presbyterian sect sometimes called the Bowhead Saints, he was renowned throughout Edinburgh for his remarkable gifts of extemporary prayer and exhortation. He always carried a black staff with a thornwood head, and leant upon it while he prayed; and it was noticed that, if he became separated from it for any reason, his power and fluency seemed to desert him.

In 1670, this respected man suddenly confessed to a number of abominable crimes, secretly committed over many years. He told the appalled and incredulous members of his own sect that he had been guilty of adultery with 'several and diverse persons', and of long-continued fornication with his maidservant; of incest with his stepdaughter, and also with his sister, Jean, from the time she was 16 till she was 50 years old; and of bestiality with animals, particularly one of his own riding-mares. His horrified co-religionists at first refused to believe these wild statements and then tried to conceal them. Eventually, however, the Provost of Edinburgh was informed. He not unnaturally concluded that the major was demented, and sent doctors to examine him. They reported that he was quite sane, and suffering only from an outraged conscience. Some ministers subsequently sent by the Provost also declared that he was not mad, but driven by 'the terrors of God that were upon his soul'.

Notwithstanding his posthumous reputation, Weir was never indicted for witchcraft, nor does he seem to have acknowledged that offence in so many words, though it formed part of the evidence at the trial. His sister, however, was accused of sorcery as well as incest, and confessed to both. One of the charges brought against her was that she had a familiar spirit. In fact, there is no evidence that she ever kept a familiar spirit in the usual sense of that phrase, but she admitted that, many years before, when she lived in Dalkeith, she had trafficked with messengers from the 'Queen of Farie', and with one of these she had gone through a ritual equivalent to the renunciation of her baptism. She also said that, in 1648, she and her brother had been transported in a coach 'which seemed all of fire' to Musselburgh, and there the major heard from the Devil news of the battle of Preston which did not reach Scotland by normal means for several days afterwards. As soon as they were both arrested, she drew the guards' attention to his staff, saying that it had magical powers, and that he had received it from the Devil himself.

While in prison, Weir was visited by several well-intentioned ministers, who urged him to repent and ask God's pardon for his sins. He would not listen to any of them. He said he knew he was already damned beyond hope, and that no prayers or exhortations could save him. 'I find nothing within me,' he declared on one occasion, 'but blackness and darkness brimstone, and burning to the bottom of Hell.' In that despairing state he continued until the end.

The evidence against both the Weirs depended almost entirely upon their own confessions. Several witnesses at the trial testified to statements made earlier in their presence, including one man who said he had asked Thomas if he had seen the Devil, and had been told only that 'any feeling he ever had of him was in the dark'.

Except for the evidence of the witnesses, there were only the confessions reiterated and steadily persisted in with a fervour that suggests the Provost's original suspicions may have been right. Both prisoners were convicted. The major was strangled and then burnt on 11 April 1670, his staff being burnt with him, and on the following day his sister was hanged. CHRISTINA HOLE*

Stories of men having the power to change themselves into ravening beasts have gained currency in almost every part of the world; a universality which suggests that the underlying idea emanates from deep within man's own mind

WEREWOLF

IN LEGEND, the werewolf is a living person who has the magical power to change his or her shape. In its bestial form it is a terrorizer, a killer, an eater of human flesh. These two elements – metamorphosis and murder – form the basis, and much of the substance, of the legend. But the werewolf's family tree is ancient, vast, and has many spreading branches. Some branches lead to the realm of revenants (those who have returned from the dead), where ghosts and vampires walk; others lead to evil sorcery, witchcraft and diabolism.

The idea of the werewolf is based on the acknowledgement of 'the beast in man' – our dual nature, which was no doubt as much of a commonplace in the Stone Age as in our Age of Psychoanalysis. Primitive mythology, naturally, makes much of the concept. Sometimes we are said to be descended from original, semi-divine animals, and sometimes the primitive feels a mystical and total identity with an animal, in the religious belief called 'totemism' (see TOTEM). In folktale, the culture heroes appear in indeterminate, human or animal form, like Coyote and the other tricksters of American Indian myth (see TRICKSTER). And there are numerous tales of intermarriage, when a humanized animal takes a human mate, perhaps producing offspring with the power of shape-shifting. These and other elements of primitive myth established the widespread belief in metamorphosis (see SHAPE-SHIFTING). When the assumed shape was that of a dangerous animal, a carnivorous enemy of man, the element of murder enters the picture as well, and the werewolf idea begins to emerge.

But not only the werewolf emerges. The world's folklore is full of other were-animals. ('Were' may come from the Old English word for 'man', and the corresponding terms in other languages are mostly similar compounds meaning 'man-wolf'.) Even those lands where the wolf is or was native have tales of other were-creatures: were-bears in Russia and Scandinavia, for instance. Lands without wolves have tales of were-hyenas, were-lions, were-crocodiles, were-jackals. In 1933 a respectable British doctor reported that he had seen two Africans turn themselves into jackals during a ceremony (see ATAVISM). But the were-leopard dominates the African tradition, assisted by sensationalized tales of the secret cult of the Leopard Men (see AFRICA), which gained much attention earlier in this century.

Similarly, were-tigers have been noted in the supernatural lore of India and other Asian lands; were-jaguars and sometimes were-snakes terrorize South American tribesmen. And though occasionally the were-animal is not of the most ferocious species (the Chinese have tales of were-foxes, for instance, rather like the cats or hares that witches are said to become, in European tales), in general the metamorphosis and murder theme predominates.

The Beast in Man

Ancient civilizations provide a number of antecedents for the werewolf. The maenads of ancient Greece (see DIONYSUS) flaunted the 'beast in man' in their ecstasies, and apparently sometimes wore wolf masks during their hunts through the forests. Also from Greece comes the legend of Lycaeon, a man who became over-zealous in his worship of Zeus and sacrificed a child to the god, making an offering of the child's flesh. Zeus changed him into a wolf, as punishment. But later there grew up an ecstatic cult of the worship of Zeus Lycaeus, in which the participants wore wolf masks.

Several notable Greek writers, including Herodotus and Plato, gave credence, or at least currency, to the werewolf idea, and so helped its spread into Europe in later centuries. In ancient Rome, Pliny discussed the idea seriously, Petronius mocked it in the Satyricon, and Ovid drew the Lycaeon story into the Metamorphoses.

Perhaps all the beast-men and wild men, found in folklore all over the world, are also distant kindred of the werewolf: the satyrs and centaurs of Greece, the Abominable Snowman, the human children fostered by animals, as in Kipling's story of Mowgli.

But the metamorphosis and murder is absent, or of minor importance, in such tales. Mowgli is not a werewolf, nor Tarzan a were-ape. More explicitly and directly behind our idea of the werewolf are two strands of folklore from the chillier regions of Europe. Northern peoples generally seem to have viewed the wolf with a fear and hate bordering on hysteria – the kind usually reserved for the worst supernatural monsters (see WOLF). Of course, the wolf was always a dangerous predator that cared little whether its dinner was a prize sheep or the shepherd. But there is more to the fear of the wolf than a mere antipathy to a beast of prey. The wolf seems to be regarded by Europeans as somehow in itself demonic. Wolves are semi-nocturnal, usually greyish in colour, and move in an almost ghostly silence. They have slanting eyes that glow yellow-green in moonlight, red in reflected firelight. And their chilling, banshee-like howl completes the eerie picture.

So the wolf unsettles us, on some deep atavistic level. Which may explain why even today men seek to exterminate this beast, while intending only to control other predators. The wolf has vanished from America (except Alaska), Britain, Germany, Switzerland and France. The French suffered terribly from wolves in the past, which explains the abundance of werewolf (loup-garou) tales from that country. In 1963 it was thought that a small pack of wolves had been sighted in France; and though some people believed it was just a pack of half-wild dogs, the mere thought of wolves returning to France made international headlines.

Wolves are still said to roam in eastern Europe, in Russia, and in Spain and Portugal. They exist also in Canada (a man was attacked by wolves in Ontario in 1963), but probably not for long. The hysterical urge to exterminate wolves is well described by the Canadian writer Farley Mowat, in Cry Wolf, a book that offers facts about the animal which counter its traditional type-casting as an evil, voracious monster.

No doubt that view will persist, and will pursue the wolf into extinction. Our responses have been conditioned by centuries of horror stories about wolves. Invariably these stories concern the wolf's cruel ferocity and murderousness, and his insatiable hunger. The Bible compares false prophets to 'ravening wolves' in sheep's clothing. A comparable disguise was used by the wolf in the tale of Little Red Riding Hood, which is part of the furniture of the mind of nearly every Western European and North American child. There are a number of old wives' tales of hunters caught out in the northern woods as darkness falls, hearing that echoing howl in the distance, approaching; or of that famous Russian sled, from which members of a family are thrown one at a time in vain sacrifices to a pursuing pack. In common catchphrases, villains grin wolfishly, and gluttons wolf down their food. Above all, there is the Fenris wolf, the most terrible monster of Northern mythology, and the eventual killer of Odin himself (END OF THE WORLD; SCANDINAVIA).

The Fenris wolf points to the second strand of folklore that has contributed directly to the werewolf legend. Scandinavian and Teutonic myth and folklore are full of the combination of metamorphosis and murder. The Norse gods took animal form even more often, it seems, than those of the Greeks. Scandinavian heroes are also often shape-shifters: one Bodvar Bjarhi took the shape of a bear to fight in a great battle in Denmark, recounted in the Norse sagas, and a bear motif appears in the tales of many other heroes (see BEAR; BEOWULF). Clearly there is a link here with the 'berserkers' of Scandinavian legend – the warriors who fell into a battle madness that made them preternaturally powerful, causing them to roar like beasts and foam at the mouth. We use 'berserk' to mean that kind of maniacal fury, but it is said to derive from the Old Norse for 'bear-shirt', referring to the fur garments of these warriors. It was not much of an imaginative step (for their victims especially) to believe that the berserkers not only released the 'beast within' but actually transformed themselves into wild beasts.

The werewolf's impressive European ancestry became focused in the Christian era's dark centuries of superstition and witch hunting. The old horror tales of those

Man into ravening beast, a film still from Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde: Robert Louis Stevenson's book used the theme of 'the beast within' which lies behind the stories of werewolves and other were-animals

Mansell Collection

Mansell Collection

Chris Barker

'Northern peoples generally seem to have viewed the wolf with a fear and hate bordering on hysteria', and the human being who turns into a wolf and prowls in search of human victims is a persistent figure of folklore and fantasy Top and centre The werewolf of Eschenbach, Germany, 1685, said to have preyed on children Below Werewolf attacking a man, from a 15th century German work Facing page The Wild Beast of Gévaudan, France, 1765, said to have devoured more than 100 people and to have a particular liking for the flesh of girls centuries showed the witches in possession of the shape-shifting power, conferred on them by Satan. The witches were believed to change into cats, hares, toads, and the like. But the ancient wolf fear rose up too, became projected onto Satan's minions, and led to the idea that werewolves were witches who chose to take wolf form, ravaging the countryside as part of their diabolic duties. So the Renaissance witch trials recorded many gory accounts of werewolfism, especially in France and Germany. Often the 'confessions' of witches asserted that whole sabbaths changed into wolf packs; one old Latvian tale described a 12 day march at Christmastide of thousands of demonic werewolves, led by Satan himself in wolf form.

Sometimes the demonologists argued that werewolves were actual demons or imps, rather than metamorphosed human witches. But a few clearer minds, like that of Reginald Scot, author of Discovery of Witchcraft (1584), suggested that shape-shifting was unlikely, that certain kinds of insanity might lead people to imagine that they became wolves. Usually such insanity was ascribed to demonic possession and so although the mental illness known as lycanthropy was recognized quite early, the recognition had little effect on the superstition.

A Belt of Wolfskin

Out of the 16th century obsession with witches and like horrors come some of the world's most famous documented accounts of 'werewolves'. In 1573 a French village was terrorized by a monster that had killed and partially eaten several children. Then a group of villagers rescued another child from an attack by a huge wolf which, they swore, had the face of a local recluse named Gilles Garnier. Garnier was duly induced, by the usual means, to 'confess' to being a werewolf. The authorities, who seemed especially incensed that he had engaged in some of his gruesome feasts on meatless Fridays, ordered him to be burned alive.

Even more fearful was the punishment meted out to Peter Stubb, or Stump, in Germany in 1589. Stubb's 'confession' revealed him explicitly as a diabolist werewolf: he shifted his shape by means of a magical 'girdle' or belt of wolfskin, given to him by the Devil. And as a wolf, Stubb went forth on the Devil's work, to wreak 'his malice on men, women and children'. Apparently he had been doing so for some 25 years before he was caught. He sometimes killed livestock, and occasionally men whom he disliked; but he principally preyed on women and girl children, whom (he claimed) he raped, killed and ate. As a sideline he committed a good deal of ordinary if sinful fornication, as well as incest with his sister and his daughter, and capped his crimes, as the story goes, by killing and eating his own son. Finally he was captured, but the wolfskin belt was not found, which seems to have proved its diabolic origin to the witch-hunters' satisfaction: clearly the Devil had taken it back. Stubb died fearfully, under the most terrible tortures and mutilations.

Somewhat less ugly was the story of Jean

Grenier (see GRENIER), a clearly mentally defective youth accused of being a werewolf in southwest France in 1603. He brought it on himself, boasting of having killed and eaten many girls; and since several children had been killed in the area, he was believed and brought to trial. He claimed that he shifted his shape by means of a magic ointment and a wolfskin cloak given to him by a 'black man', whom he called 'Maître de la Forêt'. The judges sensibly decided that Grenier was suffering from the mental illness of lycanthropy, though they added that it was caused by demonic possession. Grenier was merely imprisoned for life, in a monastery.

Tell-Tale Signs

Since the days of medieval superstition and demonology, the werewolf legend – like so many others – has become a tangled web of older semi-pagan folklore and Christian strands of belief. But out of the tangle can be extracted a fairly clear picture of the werewolf's nature and habits, as he is known in modern European and American lore, and in those Hollywood films in which Lon Chaney Jr created the Wolfman.

The creature's appearance is fairly standardized, in the legends. When there are any visual clues that a man is a werewolf, they include extreme hairiness, straight eyebrows meeting over the nose, strong and claw-like fingernails, small flat ears, or sometimes pointed ears, and the third finger on each hand at least as long as the second.

In wolf form, the werewolf tends generally to be merely an extra large and ferocious wolf. But in some traditions (including the French) the shape-shifting is not complete, which adds to the werewolf's detectability. Gilles Garnier was said to have retained his human features while in wolf form; other tales speak of werewolves with human hands or feet. In the early 20th century, according to the French folklorist Claude Seignolle, a French farmer told of seeing two great wolves who conversed in human voices and who took snuff from a box produced from under the tail of one of them.

But it is rare for a werewolf, after the transformation, to be mainly humanoid – as is the Hollywood Wolfman, who after shape-shifting is simply a man with extra hair, teeth and agility. Even in the Middle Ages, when a hairy man began howling and saying he was a wolf, the experts generally agreed that he was mentally ill, suffering from lycanthropy. If he was a werewolf, those experts knew, he would be able to change into a wolf. Still, controversy often arose over occasional lycanthropes who claimed that they did change into wolves, but wore their hair on the inside. In northern Italy in 1541, one such claimant died under the knives of officials probing for proof of his statement.

These were the same kind of officials who generally agreed that werewolves had made a pact with Satan, who then bestowed upon them the power of metamorphosis. But it is clear that the Christian authorities were trying to patch much older werewolf beliefs onto their systematized accounts of devils. They did not succeed entirely: the seams show. For it is obviously odd and inconsistent that a would-be servant of Satan, who signed that pact, should ask only for the power of shape-shifting. One would have to be a Satanist of very limited ambition to want to be merely a werewolf; after all, any rank-and-file witch could change her shape – as the accounts of 16th century witch trials tell us – and a witch could also raise storms, wither crops, fly on a broomstick or other conveyance and cast a multitude of useful spells.

Of course, much laborious medieval argument arose over whether an actual metamorphosis took place, whether Satan placed the minion's soul in the 'effigy' of a wolf, or whatever. More rewarding, however, are the older, non-Christian ideas about how a werewolf becomes one in the first place. Several of these seem to involve the summoning of a demon to confer the power, but the being who is summoned is quite often obviously an elemental, a pagan spirit (like Jean Grenier's Maître de la Forêt).

How to Become a Werewolf

This conjuring up of an evil spirit is done by a complex ceremony, involving a magic circle, a fire, an incantation or two, application of magical ointment (like the witches' flying ointment) to the nude body, and final donning of a wolfskin cloak or belt. But the shape-shifting power can, in other traditions, come more easily. Sometimes it can come whether you want it or not – if you infringe some taboo. Italian folklore says that if you were conceived at the time of the new moon or if you sleep outdoors on a Friday under a full moon – you will become a werewolf. An obscure flower will, if eaten, confer the power of metamorphosis, according to Balkan legend; so will drinking from a stream where a wolf pack has drunk. Drinking water from a wolf's paw-print, eating a wolf's brains, or eating the flesh of a rabid wolf are the simple do-it-yourself magic for the would-be shape-shifter.

A few ancient writers thought that the power might be hereditary, while others thought that it might grow within a person who lived an especially evil life. An old French tradition tells of priests putting curses on criminals that forced them to be werewolves for seven years. And Paracelsus wrote that particularly evil, bestial men might return after death as werewolves.

The ghost werewolf occurs in a few other places. England's cruel King John was said to have risen after death as a werewolf. And several ghost wolves seen in Britain during the 19th century had human features, which identified them as belonging to this species. It seems that this minor aspect of the legend affected Hollywood: the Wolfman was a resurrected corpse, turned into a werewolf by an accidental combining of magical elements like the plant wolf's-bane and a full moon. But the living men with shape-shifting powers vastly outnumber the revenants, in werewolf traditions.

The technique by which the metamorphosis is accomplished is often the same as that by which the power has been acquired: so many legends say that the change requires, each time, the full ritual and summoning of the evil spirit mentioned before. But as always, folklore likes its simple magics too. Often the mere act of putting on the wolfskin belt will cause the change. In a few gruesome variants, the belt is supposed to be of human skin, preferably from a criminal executed on the gibbet. Some French tales say the werewolf must immerse himself in water, besides putting on the belt, in order to change – though elsewhere in Europe, the werewolf is supposed to exhibit a fear of water, a clear transference from the 'hydrophobia' idea of rabies.

Quite often the werewolf changes by stripping himself under a full moon and urinating in a circle on the earth, a technique used by Guy Endore for the hero of his excellent novel Werewolf of Paris, as definitive a work for this body of legend as Bram Stoker's Dracula is for the vampire. In a few tales, and in Hollywood's films, the full moon alone may effect the change; in a few others, though not as yet in films, stripping nude and rolling about on the ground may do the trick.

Changing back to human form may require the repetition of certain of these actions, like the rolling about or the immersion in water. Some legends say that the werewolf changes back automatically, at daybreak. Most tales agree that the creature instantly changes back to human form if it is injured or killed. From this idea come all those stories in which a hunter shoots and wounds a marauding wolf, later to learn that some local person has suffered an injury to the same part of the anatomy.

Chris Barker

Les Lupins by Maurice Sand: these werewolves of Normandy were believed to steal into cemeteries and dig up corpses to violate and devour

The legends disagree widely on how a werewolf may be injured or killed. In many European tales, it can be caught or destroyed by the same means that would be used against an ordinary wolf. Peter Stubb, for instance, was pursued by men and dogs, and captured when he changed to human form in an attempt to outwit the pursuers. No one seemed surprised that he was as easily killed as any man; many other werewolves in European tales have been simply shot, clubbed or stabbed to death.

In other traditions, however, it seems that the power of the creature must be opposed by some kind of magic. In those traditions where werewolves are believed to be possessed by demons, the holy magic of the Church goes into action, to exorcize them. So a Catholic priest in French Canada is said, in an old tale, to have rescued a man from a loup-garou by magically changing it into its human form. And an old legend from colonial New England mentions a simpler exorcism, when a colonist drove off a pack of werewolves simply by speaking the name of Jesus.

Otherwise, rather more pagan magic is mingled with Christian elements in the werewolf antidotes. In England, Scotland and parts of France the creature is said to be immune to ordinary bullets; although, like vampires and witches, he can be killed by a silver bullet, especially if it is first consecrated in a church. In some instances a cure will be effected if the werewolf is called by his human name, or if he is called three times by his Christian name. French lore says that you may cure the loup-garou by taking three drops of blood from him, or merely pricking him to bleeding point, when he is in wolf form; it is not clear how you get close enough to him, in safety. And those who become werewolves involuntarily can cure themselves, it is said, if they have the strength of character to abstain from human flesh for nine years.

Monster From the Mind's Deeps

A fragment of fact, is to be found at the roots of the werewolf tradition. It has long been recognized that the mental illness known as lycanthropy is associated with a pathological condition in which the sufferer believes himself to be a wild beast and, as the old case histories show, develops a taste for raw or putrid meat, a desire to howl and run naked through the woods, and sometimes a wish to kill, rape and eat young girls. Although it is a rare malady, it may not have been so rare in past centuries; or perhaps other, more common types of sex murderers and child rapists of the past were assumed to be lycanthropes, the more so because such killings often involve an element of mutilation which might make Europeans think of wolves. Assuredly the werewolf is just as sexual a figure as the vampire (see VAMPIRE). But he lacks the sado-erotic subtlety of the vampire: werewolves are crude rapists and murderers, with a few ghoulish or cannibalistic overtones.

Despite this basis of fact, the werewolf belongs rather in the realm of sado-masochistic fantasies. Robert Eisler has thrown some interesting light on these connections, in a theory based firmly on Jungian ideas. Eisler tries to trace the idea of the werewolf back to prehistory, seeing its origin in a primeval clash of cultures between peaceable, vegetarian early man and the brutal, fur-wearing, carnivorous creature that he was forced (by, say, an Ice Age) to become. The clash left scars on the collective unconscious that have still not healed.

Even in this over-simplified form of Eisler's theory, the argument cannot be easily dismissed. The werewolf is a monster of the unconscious, one to which folklore and superstition formerly gave fleshly reality and occasionally still do, in modern times: a French farmer in 1930 was accused of changing into a wolf at night; and in 1946 in America a Navaho Indian reservation was terrorized by a murderous beast which was widely reported as a werewolf. (Both Navaho and French traditions are rich in werewolf tales.)

But today the legend has generally retreated to a more subjective reality, without losing any of its horror. Nandor Fodor, the American psychologist and psychical researcher, has collected a number of dreams reported by people under psychoanalysis in which the werewolf theme – metamorphosis and murder – was brutally explicit. 'The old, savage lycanthropic beliefs have been relegated to our dream life where they are still active . . .' Fodor comments, 'the transformation is used symbolically as self-denunciation for secret deeds, fantasies or desires.'

Coming full circle, these psychological insights merely confirm that age-old and universal truth about the inner duality of man, the ravening beast within each of us. As Lord Byron put it:

> Lycanthropy
> I comprehend, for without transformation
> Men become wolves on any slight occasion.

History as well as folklore shows that many of us are more than likely to let the beast take over, in an inner 'shape-shifting'.

(See also BERTRAND.) DOUGLAS HILL

FURTHER READING: B. Copper, The Werewolf: in Legend, Fact and Art (Hale, 1977); Robert Eisler, Man Into Wolf (Ross-Erikson, 1978); Montague Summers, The Werewolf (Citadel Press, 1973); I. Woodward, The Werewolf Delusion (Paddington).

The Lupins

In many parts of France, but more especially perhaps in Britanny, Le Meneur des Loups is a well-known figure. He is generally considered to be a wizard, who when the werewolves of the district have met and sit in a hideous circle round a fire kindled in the heart of some forest, leads forth the howling pack and looses them on to their horrid chase. Sometimes he himself assumes the form of a wolf, but speaks with human voice. Gathering his flock around him he gives them directions, telling them what farm-towns are ill-guarded that night, what flocks, what herds, are negligently kept, which path the lonely wayfarer setting out from the inn is taking . . .

In Normandy tradition tells of certain fantastic beings known as lupins or lubins. They pass the night chattering together and twattling in an unknown tongue. They take their stand by the walls of country cemeteries, and howl dismally at the moon. Timorous and fearful of man they will flee away scared at a footstep or distant voice. In some districts, however, they are fierce and of the werewolf race, since they are said to scratch up the graves with their hands, and gnaw the poor dead bones.

Montague Summers The Werewolf

The idea of an ancient secret wisdom of the West, emanating from the vanished Atlantis and handed on through the Celts and the Druids to the Grail traditions, has been much in vogue in this century

WESTERN MYSTERY TRADITION

'DO NOT LET IT BE FORGOTTEN that there is a native Mystery Tradition of our race which has its nature aspect in the Sun-worship of the Druids and the beautiful fairy-lore of the Celts, its philosophical aspect in the traditions of alchemy, and its spiritual aspect in the Hidden Church of the Holy Grail, the Church behind the Church, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.'

So wrote Dion Fortune (see FORTUNE) in 1934 in her book about Glastonbury, Avalon of the Heart. A member of the Order of the Golden Dawn (see GOLDEN DAWN) and later founder and moving spirit of the Fraternity of the Inner Light, she was an influential figure in building up the idea of a Western mystery tradition rivalling the oriental tradition beloved of the Theosophical Society. Another influence in the same direction was Rudolf Steiner (see STEINER), who broke away from the Society over its concentration on oriental matters and its attitude to Christianity.

The Lost Atlantis

At the heart of the idea of the Western mystery tradition is the ancient story of Atlantis which, according to Plato's account, was a powerful island-empire in the West, beyond the Pillars of Hercules, rich and fertile, highly civilized and advanced in technology and engineering, which embarked on a career of conquest in the Mediterranean area and was suddenly swallowed up by a gigantic cataclysm and sank into the sea. It is generally believed that this story is based on the immense volcanic explosion on the island of Santorin, or Thera, in the Mediterranean north of Crete in about 1500 BC, though this theory has recently been called in question (see ATLANTIS).

Plato's story of a lost paradise of beauty and high civilization, overwhelmed by a colossal catastrophe, has struck a resonant chord in the Western imagination ever since. There were numerous stories in the Middle Ages of hypothetical islands far out in the Atlantic. In the 16th century, after the discovery of the New World, it was argued that America was Plato's Atlantis, but, though still propounded well into the 19th century, this theory was too prosaic for the romantic imagination.

In 1882 a fresh wave of excited speculation was launched with the publication of Atlantis: The Antediluvian World. The author, Ignatius Donnelly (1831-1901), was an erudite American lawyer and politician who had spent several years in Congress. Also a strong proponent of the theory that Bacon wrote Shakespeare, Donnelly maintained that the real Atlantis was where Plato said it was, in the Atlantic opposite the mouth of the Mediterranean. It was there that human beings first became civilized, and from Atlantis civilization was carried into Europe, the Mediterranean world and the Americas. The religions of Ancient Egypt and Peru were directly descended from Atlantean worship of the sun. The Garden of Eden, the Olympus of the Greeks and the Asgard of the Norse were all distant memories of Atlantis. The gods and goddesses of the ancient world and of Hinduism were originally the wise and powerful kings and queens of Atlantis, and Atlantis was the ancient home of both the Indo-European and the Semitic peoples. The memory of the catastrophe which swallowed up the empire survived in the numerous legends of the Great Flood.

Donnelly's ideas made a powerful impression on Madame Blavatsky (see BLAVATSKY), the formidable founder of the Theosophical Society, but where Donnelly had used conventional historical and scientific evidence to support his case, Madame Blavatsky added a fresh weapon to the arsenal of Atlantean theory – clairvoyance, through which she claimed to have seen the vast Book of Dyzan, written long ago on Atlantis in the lost Senzar language. This informed her own book, The Secret Doctrine, which came out in 1888. In it she described how the history of the cosmos moves through time in seven vast cycles, involving seven root races. The third root race lived in the lost continent of Lemuria in the Indian Ocean (see LEMURIA) and the fourth were the inhabitants of Atlantis. The Indo-European peoples are the fifth race, while the sixth and seventh are still to come. It was the Atlanteans who founded all the civilizations of world history and who transmitted their knowledge and wisdom to the Brahmins in India and the Druids in the Celtic countries.

Toltecs and Tyranny

The hint about the Druids was to prove particularly fruitful, but meanwhile a banker and amateur anthropologist named William Scott-Elliot claimed to have discovered more about both Lemuria and Atlantis by 'astral clairvoyance', a technique in which he has had many successors. It relies on the idea that a record of everything that has ever happened still exists on the astral plane. Through deep meditation, occultists believe, it is possible to penetrate this plane and observe the Akashic records or 'memory of Nature'.

Scott-Elliot's book The Story of Atlantis was published in 1896 and reissued by the Theosophical Society in 1962. He said that Atlantis occcupied most of what is now the Atlantic Ocean more than a million years ago. It was inhabited by warrior tribes, including the black aboriginals called Rmoahals, who stood ten to twelve feet tall. The ruling people were the Toltecs (who occupied Mexico in historic times), holding sway from their magnificent capital, the City of the Golden Gates. They exercised a tyranny similar to that of the Incas in Peru, stood eight feet tall and made slaves of the Rmoahals. The insistence on the great stature of the Atlanteans was probably meant to account for the myths of giants which have come down to us, while belief in the inferiority of black races was common among occultists of Scott-Elliot's generation.

Unfortunately, wrote Scott-Elliot, the rulers of Atlantis took to black magic, which eventually brought retribution in the cataclysm in which Atlantis sank beneath the sea. However, a group of Toltecs had emigrated to Egypt some 20,000 years ago. It was their descendants who designed the Egyptian pyramids, and it was also people descended from Atlanteans who built the pyramids in Mexico and Central America. Another group visited England and oversaw the construction of Stonehenge.

Rudolf Steiner accepted Scott-Elliot's astral researches. He saw Lemuria and Atlantis as two of the main stages in the history of the gradual descent of humanity over eons of time from its original purely spiritual form into captivity in matter. The Atlanteans were corrupted by evil spiritual powers which increased their propensity to misuse their sexual capacities, and those of them most entangled in sensuality grew to gigantic size. (Steiner himself was quite a small man). Even some of the greatest initiates were corrupted. The result was a succession of natural catastrophes which drove some of the Atlanteans to emigrate to Europe, Africa, Asia and America, where they founded all subsequent civilizations, and Atlantis itself finally sank beneath the vengeful waves some 11,500 years ago.

Image of the Modern West

Lewis Spence, a leading figure of the Druid revival in Britain, wrote three books about Atlantis in the 1920s. He believed that Atlantis had been preserved in 'folk memory' and in a 'world-intuition' of its existence in the distant past. He thought the Atlanteans were masters of occult arts and pioneers of astronomy and astrology, but did not accept the idea of their advanced technology.

A more important influence on ideas about Atlantis was Edgar Cayce, the famous American seer and healer (see CAYCE), who believed he gained access to the Akashic records in trance. He gave many readings for clients in which he described their previous lives in Atlantis long ago. His Atlantis had been a continent lying between the Mediterranean and the Gulf of Mexico. His account of it as a technologically highly advanced society, with its aircraft and mastery of crystals, lasers and atomic power, influenced the contemporary tendency to see the lost civilization as an image of the modern West. The destruction of Atlantis by moral failure and inability to restrain the immensely powerful forces which its technology had unleashed came to be seen as an object lesson in what might well be in store for today's world.

Cayce died in 1945. His Atlantean material was collected and published in two books in the 1960s, Atlantis: Fact or Fiction and Edgar Cayce on Atlantis. He had predicted that part of the submerged continent would reappear from under the sea late in that decade near the island of Bimini in the Bahamas. It failed to do so, but numerous psychics and channellers have continued to

Kobal Collection

The vanished civilization (and its imagined technology) has featured on the cinema screen: scene from Atlantis, the Lost Continent bring news of the vanished world. One of the most prominent is Frank Alper, who founded the Arizona Metaphysical Society in 1974 and published a set of books on Exploring Atlantis in 1982. According to his information, gained through channelling, the Atlanteans came originally from outer space in the year 77,777 BC to settle Atlantis below the sea – it had sunk years before – and developed the use of crystals to power their cities and transport systems and for healing and spiritual progress, an idea that has been taken up by other New Age authors.

Atlantis has also made its mark on fiction and the cinema screen. In Jules Verne's Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea (1870) the ruins of Atlantis are found on the sea bed and in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's tale The Maracot Deep (1928) an Atlantean city is discovered thriving on the ocean floor. One of Dennis Wheatley's books was They Found Atlantis, and a comic-strip novel of 1991 was entitled Indiana Jones and the Fate of Atlantis. G.W. Pabst directed an impressive silent film on the theme, L'Atlantide (1921), which placed the lost world in the Sahara Desert, but Fire Maidens From Outer Space (1956) and Atlantis, the Lost Continent (1961) are not rated highly by the film reference books.

The Druids and the Grail

A common feature of Atlantis speculation from the time of Ignatius Donnelly and Madame Blavatsky onwards was that Atlantis was both an extremely advanced culture and the parent of the early civilizations of the Near and Middle East. This made it possible to identify the great Atlantean sages as the channel through which esoteric wisdom of immense antiquity had passed to the wise of subsequent periods – the priests of Ancient Egypt, the Pythagorean philosophers, the Orphics and the adepts of the classical mystery cults, the gnostic and hermetic sects, the Cabalists and the initiates of esoteric Christianity (see ESOTERIC CHRISTIANITY). Atlantis could be seen as the source of the whole complex of ideas which created the Western tradition of high magic, which passed on through the medieval alchemists to the Renaissance interest in magic, the Rosicrucians and the occult revival of the 19th century.

Some occultists in Western Europe and the English-speaking countries have focused attention on the religion of the Celts and their Druid priests and sages as a key element of this tradition of an ancient wisdom, passed on to small groups of initiates over the centuries and stemming originally from the vanished Atlantis in the West. Classical writers about the Celts had linked their belief in reincarnation with the Pythagorean theory of the transmigration of souls from one living body to another, and there was a tradition that either the Druids had been initiated into Pythagorean teachings or, conversely, that the Pythagoreans had imbibed the Druids' wisdom. In Britain and France from the 17th century on, a view of the Druids as sages and natural philosophers, possessed of a profound ancient wisdom, gained ground, and they were linked with Stonehenge and the other prehistoric stone circles (see DRUIDS).

This pattern of ideas was taken up by Dion Fortune and her immediate circle. According to Gareth Knight, a well-known writer on esoteric subjects, they assembled, but did not publish, information about Atlantis which came from fragmentary recollections of their own previous lives there and from advanced spiritual beings communicating on the 'inner planes'. The picture they built up was of an Atlantis ruled by a sun-worshipping theocracy headed by the High Priest of the Sun, to whom the king and the warrior caste, the scribes and craftsmen, were subordinate. Below them were lower castes and slaves of debased, animal-like black and yellow races. The sun cult, however, was only for public consumption and purposes of state. It was the mysteries of the Sea and the Stars which formed the real, secret religion of the initiated elite of priests and priestesses, the highest and wisest of whom were the priestesses of the Sea (one of Dion Fortune's novels was called The Sea Priestess). They remained faithful to the Path of Light even when the sun priests meddled with dark forces, selfishly misused their power, took to evil rites and so brought on the eventual destruction of Atlantis.

An Atlantean colony in Britain built Stonehenge and the Druids drew their knowledge and spiritual understanding from the Atlantean well. When the final cataclysm came, some of the virtuous priestesses and initiates were washed up on the shore of Lyonesse, the lost land now sunk beneath the sea off the Breton coast. Others managed to reach the southern shores of Ireland and Wales. Among the survivors was Christine Hartley, one of Dion Fortune's pupils, according to her subsequent recollections of her previous existence in the doomed Atlantis. Among them also, she recalled, were a priest named Merlin (meaning 'the man from the sea') and a priestess named Morgan ('the woman from the sea'), later to be known as Morgan le Fay. Both were to have many subsequent incarnations on the earth.

Both also, of course, play prominent roles in the Arthurian legends (see ARTHUR; MERLIN; MORGAN LE FAY). The undoubted presence of strong Celtic strands in the medieval Arthurian stories encouraged the identification of them as part of the Western mystery tradition, transmitted from Atlantis to the modern world; or at least of the more elevated and spiritual aspects of the legends, and so especially of the traditions of the Holy Grail – identified as the Christian incarnation of the sacred cauldron of life and rebirth in Celtic mythology (see CAULDRON; GRAIL).

The Tuatha De Danann

Ignatius Donnelly had provided a foundation for the belief that Celtic culture was directly descended from Atlantis. 'According to the ancient books of Ireland,' he wrote, 'the race known as "Partholan's people", the Nemedians, the Fir-Bolgs, the Tuatha-de-Dananns and the Milesians were all descended from two brothers, sons of Magog, son of Japheth, son of Noah, who escaped from the catastrophe which destroyed his country. Thus all these races were Atlantean.' The Milesians, Donnelly, thought, lived in Egypt, then in Crete, then in Africa, then crossed to Spain, and eventually after many generations invaded and conquered Ireland.

Irish tradition, as it is recorded in the 9th-century History of the Britons ascribed to the Welsh monk Nennius, spoke of three invasions of Ireland far back in the beginnings of recorded time by Partholon, Nemed and the Children of Mil. An 11th-century source knew of successive invasions of Ireland by Partholon, Nemed, Fir Bolg, Tuatha De Danann and the Children of Mil. The Tuatha De Danann, or 'people of the goddess Danu', were the great gods of Celtic Ireland. They came from the sea, by way of Norway and northern Scotland, according to the myth, with their Druids leading the way in a magical mist, and swiftly conquered the more primitive Fir Bolg, who already occupied the country. The Fir Bolg were backward farmers, but the Tuatha De Danann were skilled in magic and the arts and crafts. They subsequently withstood a ferocious attack by the Fomoiri, monstrous beings with one leg, one hand and three rows of teeth apiece, who came from the Isle of Man and the Hebrides, and in a decisive battle drove them in rout.

The Tuatha De Danann included the Dagda or 'Good God', the 'sun-faced' god Ogma, the god Lug, who was 'skilled in many arts', and the terrible war-goddess, the Morrigan. Their Welsh counterparts were 'the children of Don', who appear in the stories in the Mabinogion, and the names Danu and Don may be variants of a Celtic name which also survives in the names of the rivers Danube and Don.

The Milesians or Children of Mil in Irish tradition are the human population of Celtic Ireland, who are supposed to have come from Spain at a later stage of the legendary history. They settled down in the Emerald Isle and the Tuatha De Danann retreated to the prehistoric tombs and fairy mounds where they have lingered ever since.

The Lure of Avalon

Atlantean wisdom and magical power, according to the theory of the Western Mystery Tradition, were preserved in Ireland and the other Celtic countries by the Druids and injected by wandering Welsh and Breton minstrels into the legends of King Arthur and the Holy Grail. Christine Hartley saw King Arthur as a personification of the sun. 'Arthur then stands for the Sun, the giver of life, the ruler of the world. He is the gardener who makes the crops to swell; another version of his name is Artor, which means Workman.'

There are various magic cauldrons in Celtic mythology. The Tuatha De Danann remained immortally young and fair by drinking beer from a great cauldron in the otherworld. The Dagda owned a cauldron which never ran dry and which could bring the dead back to life, and the Welsh god Bran's cauldron similarly gave life back to dead warriors who were placed in it. The Holy Grail, the cup of the Last Supper, is the sacred vessel of plenty and immortality; the hero who achieves the Grail achieves union with the divine – which is the goal of high magic in the European tradition.

The Grail, according to a persistent tradition, was kept in secret at Glastonbury in the Isle of Avalon, first brought there by St Joseph of Arimathea in the 1st century (see GLASTONBURY). Dion Fortune had a house in Glastonbury and found there the powerful and inspiring magic of both the pagan and the Christian spiritual paths. To her the place was a 'gateway to the Unseen' and the English Jerusalem. 'Two traditions meet in Avalon – the ancient faith of the Britons and the creed of Christ. The older, its relics obliterated, its legends bent to a Christian purpose, is shadowy and veiled. Only here and there do we see clearly the lineaments of the ancient creed; but a veiled figure can be seen in the darkness of the racial memory, and its dim but awful presence is alive... In the days before the Fisher King was made custodian of the Graal, dark Morgan le Fay, half-sister to Arthur and pupil of Merlin, had her dwelling upon Chalice Hill. May not the still surface of the Well...have been her magic mirror?'

Dion Fortune mingled Celtic tradition with the Cabala, ceremonial magic and esoteric Christianity in her teaching. 'In the Arthurian and Grail legends,' she wrote, 'we have the Mystery Tradition of our Race.' She died in London, in 1946, but she was buried in Glastonbury as her heart desired. The rise of interest in esoteric matters in the 1960s brought a new wave of enthusiasm for her 'shadowy and veiled' tradition – Celtic mythology and magic. It has influenced the witchcraft movement (see MODERN WITCHCRAFT) and New Age writers have explored 'the ancient faith of the Britons' to bring the western mystery tradition to life.

FURTHER READING: L. Sprague de Camp, Lost Continents (Dover, New York, 1970 reprint); C. Hartley, The Western Mystery Tradition (Aquarian Press, London, 1968); M. Hope, Atlantis: Myth or Reality (Penguin Arkana, 1991); G. Ashe, Atlantis (Thames & Hudson, London, 1992).

WHALE

'HE ANCESTORS of the whale were probably and mammals, whose structure became dapted to living in the sea. Because of its mmense size and energy, the whale has ttracted a wealth of superstition and folkore. In medieval times, for instance, it was egarded as an aggressive creature armed vith huge tusks, a misconception that robably arose from a confusion between the vhale and the walrus.

The whale is called 'Fastitocalon' in an nglo-Saxon bestiary and is described as deceptive floater on ocean streams, upon vhich men build a fire and sink to the all of death; in other words, when the immense bulk of a whale was at rest on the ocean's surface it would occasionally be mistaken for an island by naïve sailors who, in attempting to land upon it, would be suddenly plunged to a watery grave. A similar story is told about the kraken (see KRAKEN). Perhaps because ambergris was an ingredient in perfume the whale was said to have so sweet a breath that fish were lured into its wide-open jaws. As a result of this mistaken belief the creature became the symbol of deceitfulness. It also stood for unintelligent immensity, violent passion and lust.

The whale was worshipped as Mamacocha, or 'Mother Sea', among the Indians on the east coast of Central America. The Arabians believed that a fabulous whale, Bahamut, provided the base upon which the whole world rested, and that earthquakes were the result of its movements. (The beast referred to in Job 40.15, by the similar name of Behemoth, is now considered to have been the hippopotamus.) The whale that swallowed Jonah (see JONAH), and in whose belly the prophet spent three days and three nights, is one of the ten animals that have been allowed to enter paradise, according to Mohammedan legend.

In Christian thought the whale became

According to Mohammedan legend, the whale that swallowed Jonah, and in whose belly the prophet spent three days and three nights, is one of the ten animals allowed to enter paradise: Jonah and the Whale by David Jones

Pearl Binder

An allegory of evil in Christian thought, the whale was the emblem of the Devil; its mouth has been regarded as the gateway to the otherworld, while its belly symbolized the infernal regions: a demonic whale threatens a fisherman, illustration from Collin de Plancy's Dictionnaire Infernal (1863) an allegory of evil, the emblem of the Devil, the archetypal snare, baited with sweet aromas, which lured the unwary to eternal damnation. The whale's mouth has often been depicted as the gateway to the otherworld, while its belly has been said to symbolize the infernal regions.

Among some Indian tribes on the western coast of America, the whale was regarded as a totem animal, and was thought to have the power to sink enemy canoes. Whales' teeth and whalebone are both supposed to be extremely effective as amulets; in fact, the teeth have been used for that purpose since Neolithic times. Chieftains of Tonga, Soma and Fiji wore necklaces of whales' teeth, shaped like curved claws, as signs of high rank. Pieces of whalebone were highly valued as charms since they were supposed to confer some of the physical powers of the whale upon the owners.

Ambergris, a grey waxy substance found in the intestines of the sperm-whale, is supposed to be a powerful aphrodisiac. According to Boswell, the biographer of Dr Johnson, it produces 'a greater activity in the intellectual faculties, a disposition t cheerfulness, and venereal desires'.

Primitive whale hunts were associate with a number of specially devised magi rituals which were thought to be necessar because of the dangers involved in huntin Among the Eskimo, the hereditary role c whaler verged on shamanism, and the whal was skilled in the art of psychic mimicry an the imposition of taboos. Ritual purit was essential among Greenland hunters the chase was to be successful, and anyon who wore soiled garments, or who had bee in physical contact with a corpse, wa excluded from the party. Chastity on th part of the tribal chief was obligatory i many communities. Siberian whale-hunte sought to pacify the mother whale, whos offspring they proposed to kill, with praye for forgiveness.

Among the Indians of the Bering Strait all work was suspended for four days afte a whale had been slaughtered, in the belie that its ghost lingered in the vicinit of its body for this length of time. Th Annamese, of what is now Vietnam, regarde even a dead whale washed up on the beac with considerable awe, and always burie the body with elaborate ceremonies whic included burning incense and firing cracker Shape-shifting between the whale an other creatures of land and sea was n unknown. An Icelandic myth tells of a goo less youth who was condemned to assume th shape of a whale as a punishment, and wh was killed when he attempted to swim u a waterfall. North American Indians hav legends of a terrible killer whale whic approaches the shore and assumes the shap of a ravening wolf. In 887 AD a snow-whi mermaid, 190 feet long, was reported an was said to be the metamorphosis of white whale.

The whale represents one of the grea cosmic forces of the universe. This sym bolism is found in Herman Melville's Mob Dick, which tells how Captain Ahab pursue and finally destroys, the great white whal This has been interpreted as the etern conflict between good (Ahab) and evil (th whale), as the war in heaven which le to the downfall of Lucifer. On the othe hand, some have maintained that the whi whale is the spirit of absolute goodnes while the proud Ahab is evil.

WHEEL

THE WHEEL ranks with money and writing as one of the greatest single contributions to human progress and, like them, it evolved (and is still evolving) rather than coming into existence as the result of a unique act of invention. No one will ever know for certain where, when and how the decisive stages in this evolution were achieved, but present archeological evidence suggests that the first object we should recognize as a wheel was used under a kind of sledge in Mesopotamia, c 3500 BC. This early wheel was solid, and the axle was an integral part of it. It may have been another five centuries before a wheel which revolved about its axle was invented. The connection between this primitive cartwheel and the potter's wheel is not known, but some archeologists believe that the two kinds of wheel came into existence at about the same period.

At an early stage in its evolution, the wheel became a cult object, with religious, mythological and magic attributes. Here again, the actual process by which these attributes were acquired is lost in the mists of prehistory, but the wheel became associated with the sun, which Stone Age man had already represented as a disc in rock carvings, before the wheel as such was known. The association, being very ancient, is widespread. In Scandinavian myths, elves call the sun 'fair wheel', and in the far away Java Sea, the Balinese fire god is always represented as dancing on a fiery wheel, the symbol of the sun. Th ancient Egyptians used to place a winge solar disc over the gateway of every templ forecourt. The stages by which this dis evolved into a spoked wheel can be traced i places as far apart as Greece and Japan.

Wheel of Time

Connected with the sun wheel is the wheel a a symbol of the year, and also of time, whic is found in various Indian myths. In th belief of one Indian sect, the Jains (see JAINS time is endless, and is pictured as a whe of 12 spokes. The spokes are divided int two sets of six, one representing a 'descend ing' phase, in which good things graduall give place to bad, and the other an 'ascend ing' phase, which shows the opposit endency. According to the Jains, we are iving now in the fifth 'spoke' of the descend-ng phase.

A similar notion of descending and ascending phases is symbolized in the Wheel of Fortune of the Tarot cards, and here may be a link with ancient ideas about good and evil, or constructive and destruc-ive forces in the universe. Thus, in the characteristically dualist system of Mani-chean beliefs, the Creator builds a cosmic wheel, also representing the two opposed forces. The 12 spokes of the Jain wheel of time are obviously linked with the 12 equal parts of the zodiac. The Manichean cosmic wheel also contains 12 buckets for the raising of souls, another reference to zodiacal ideas.

In magic and religion, however, the sym-bolic wheel has four spokes more often than 12. In Greek mythology, Ixion is bound to an eternally revolving four-spoked wheel as a punishment for trying to seduce Hera, the queen of heaven. In his great work on Zeus, A. B. Cook argued that Ixion represents a long line of human beings who were sacrificed in bygone ages 'as effete embodiments of the sun-god'. Cook also believed that a sun wheel like Ixion's was represented in the love charm which Aphro-dite devised to enable Jason to win the love of Medea. A bird, the wryneck, itself the nymph Iynx transformed by Hera as a punishment for seducing Zeus, was fastened to a magic wheel, which also had four spokes. In later Greek love magic, the bird was largely forgotten, and the charm was merely a simple wheel, pierced with two holes and threaded with string, which was made to rotate by pulling the string. This magic wheel, sometimes with jagged edges repre-senting the rays of the sun, and often with four spokes, occurs frequently as a motif on certain types of ancient Greek pottery. The same wheel was hung on the gables of a temple at Delphi, and an ancient Babylonian tablet, depicting an event which took place c 870 BC, shows a sun disc with two sets of four spokes suspended on ropes held in the hands of two divine beings poised on the roof of a shrine. The prayer wheel of Tibetan monks comes to mind in this connection, and here also there is an essential link with sun worship.

Temple wheels and prayer wheels, found in India, Tibet, ancient Egypt and Gaul, Greece and Japan, have a long ancestry, going back, as with many widespread ideas and objects, to the Babylonians. Worship-pers were supposed to turn them in paying adoration to the gods, either imitating the rotatory movement of the heavens, or turning from one god to another. Some bronze wheels suspended on the doorposts of Egyptian sanctuaries emitted water, so that worship-pers could sprinkle themselves. In medieval churches in Europe, the Wheel of Fortune hung up to the roof was a common sight. It was worked with a rope, and regarded as an oracle. The ancient Roman goddess Fortuna was depicted in statuettes and on coins seated on a wheel, and Roman writers from Cicero onwards frequently mention Fortuna's wheel. Fortuna is not the only ancient goddess to be represented with a wheel: so are Nemesis and Isis. Perhaps the inevitability and randomness, which can both easily be associated with the turn of a wheel, are present here, but the original connection may well have been with the worship of the sun. Scholars have drawn attention to the fact that one of Fortuna's temples (associated with her interest in farms and gardens) was dedicated on the summer solstice.

The summer solstice, or Midsummer Day (see MIDSUMMER EVE), was certainly asso-ciated with magic wheels (relics of sun worship) in medieval Europe. There is a possible link with Druidic worship in the custom at Douai, in northern France, of carrying a large Wheel of Fortune in pro-cession before a wickerwork giant. But more commonly, a blazing wheel was rolled down hill, burning discs or wheels were flung into the air, or fresh fire was kindled by rotating a wheel on a wooden axle. Another custom was to set fire to a tar barrel and swing it round a pole. There is a possible reference to such customs in connection with the celebration of St John the Baptist's

Below Prayer wheels in the Golden Temple, Tibet; they convey a blessing when turned to the right, the side of good, but a curse when the movement is to the left, the side of evil
Bottom The belief that all men are shackled to the 'wheel of life', and that they must be reborn on earth until all karma is expended, is a basic concept in Hinduism and Buddhism: Tibetan 'wheel of life'

William MacQuitty

© Nelson Stewart

day as early as the 7th century. An 11th century writer describes quite clearly a wheel set alight and brandished in the air. An edict issued in a German principality in 1566 expressly forbids the use of fire wheels on St John the Baptist's day, which it lumps with 'other heathen and superstitious practices'. The wheel in question certainly was a relic of pagan sun worship and of imitative magic intended to ensure good weather for the harvest, but the connection with St John the Baptist was rationalized by referring to him as a 'burning and shining light' who was the forerunner of the true light.

The rolling of the wheel was taken to signify the rising of the sun to the highest part of its orbit before it must descend, which was again analogous to the role of the Baptist, who says of Christ (John 3.30), 'He must increase, but I must decrease.' The wheel, by a not entirely coincidental analogy, is also a symbol of contraction and expansion as well as of ascent and descent. But here, one cannot tell which idea came first, for the celebration of St John's day at the summer solstice, as the turning point of the year, must surely be connected with his prophecy about increase and decrease.

Ezekiel's Vision

More trivial magic was also associated with wheels in the Middle Ages, all of it no doubt deriving ultimately from the sun magic. For example, before the spring sowing, peas were allowed to trickle through the spokes of a cartwheel in some parts of centra Europe. In the Tyrol it was believed tha some kinds of swelling could be cured b rubbing against a cartwheel, and magi powers of marksmanship were believe to be conferred by mixing part of a molte spoke from a wheel on which a miscrear had been broken in the manufacture c shot. In folktales in many parts of the worl magic wheels or wheel tracks guide the her or heroine on the right way.

The wheel also has other more mysteriou magical and religious connotations, goin beyond its association with the sun. Th famous wheels seen by the prophet Ezeki in his vision (Ezekiel, chapter 1) are sus ceptible of many interpretations: the 17t century mystic Jacob Boehme, for example

'he association between the sun and the wheel s widespread; in Scandinavian mythology lves call the sun 'fair wheel', while the alinese fire god is represented dancing on a iery wheel symbolizing the sun Facing page lthough the Wheel of Fortune is generally ccepted as being a symbol of the inevitability f fate, it may originally have been connected vith sun worship; one of the temples of the oman goddess Fortuna, who was depicted vith a wheel in statuettes and on coins, was edicated on the summer solstice: Fortune vith her wheel, from a 15th century French nanuscript Right Detail from the Gundestrup auldron; a Celtic deity who is thought to be aranis, 'the thunderer', is shown holding a poked wheel which may possibly be a symbol f the sun

C. M. Dixon

ook them to be symbols of the spiritual and he natural life. Because a wheel is most imply represented by four spokes making cross, and because four is a natural umber of wheels for a vehicle, there is a ink between the wheel and the four elements f alchemy. But the symbolism can become o diffuse as to cease to be specific. So Jung eads a 'symbol of the self' into Ezekiel's vheels, and through the four faces of the reatures associated with the wheels he races a link with the four elements, thus onnecting alchemy with his own version of sychoanalysis. As Ezekiel remarked, there re wheels within wheels, and the subject is much larger one than most people in this vheel-crazed era of history would guess.

DAVID PHILLIPS

WHITE

VHITE has both positive and negative ualities. It symbolizes good, light, purity, eace, modesty and innocence, gaiety and appiness; but it is also traditionally the olour of weakness, delicacy, infirmity and owardice. The more dominant associations f white are derived from its link with the ight-giving sun and the other heavenly odies, including the silver moon. Romans vore white robes when they sacrificed white attle in honour of Jupiter, and the priests of he Egyptian god Osiris were also robed in vhite.

In northern Europe the Druids sacriiced white cattle in their sacred groves, and n general white sacrificial animals are egarded as unblemished and so suitable as fferings to the gods. Zeus was said to take the hape of a white bull, representing the twin orces of solar light and creative energy, and he sacred steed of the sun in antiquity was a vhite horse. In Teutonic mythology the god Odin is sometimes depicted riding on a vhite horse, and even today to dream of a vhite horse promises success.

The Vestal Virgins, who tended the sacred fire brought to Rome from Troy by Aeneas, were clothed in white, to represent irginity and innocence. The same qualities elong to white in Christian symbolism, and bride wears white as a mark of virginity.

In Christian art, Jesus is generally shown robed in white after the Resurrection, and angels and the righteous dead are shown in white robes in heaven. Churches are hung in white at the festivals of all saints except martyrs. The white lily is an emblem of Easter Sunday, and processions of newly-baptized worshippers, garbed in white, gave Whit Sunday its present name. Curiously enough, in early 19th century England, the hallmark of a Radical was a white top hat, which was no doubt worn as a token of impeccable political principles.

White draws its negative symbolism from the fact that paleness has always been equated with bloodlessness and lack of vigour. The white feather is the badge of the coward and the white flag the banner of defeat. White could also be imposed as a badge of shame and repentance, as girls in the 17th century, who had loved not wisely but too well, found to their cost; they were made to stand in front of the congregation in church, dressed in white sheets.

In magic white was associated with the good magician and black with his opposite, the Devil's agent. Although the former were generally immune from charges of heresy, and the latter were the main targets of

White is connected with death, innocence, purity and the radiant light of the heavenly bodies, and in Christian art the angels and the righteous dead are shown in white robes in heaven: Jesus Ministered to by the Angels, a painting by James Tissot witch-hunters, white magicians were frequently sent to the stake during outbursts of witch mania, particularly in Scotland and on the mainland of Europe, under suspicion of working for the Devil.

Sonia Halliday

The White Lady

There is a close association between white and death. Small white pebbles have been found in prehistoric graves, and until the late medieval period white was the colour of mourning in England, as it is today in China. The departing soul was commonly thought to take the shape of a white bird, usually a dove and occasionally a sea bird. Moslems believe that the souls of the just assume the forms of white birds, and wait beneath the throne of God for the resurrection. The belief that all ghosts materialize in white winding-sheets is widespread, and spectres have been described as emitting a curious white light.

Fairy lore contains many curious allusions to a mysterious being, called 'the white lady', who is sometimes seen in the vicinity of bridges and is an omen of death. In Wales and on the Welsh borders she carries a torch with a vivid white flame. More recently she has begun to haunt motorways in Britain.

White animals and birds are often regarded with awe because of their rarity. American Indians classed albino animals as sacred and, in the past, sacrificed the white buffalo and the white dog. The Chinese consider the white tiger to be the king of beasts, while a white fox with nin tails is regarded as an omen of good luck i many Eastern countries. In Scotland it wa customary to give young children necklace of white nuts in the belief that they woul turn black at the first sign of threatenin evil.

The racial problems of the 20th centur have been exacerbated by the Caucasia superstition that white is inherently superio to black, which is in some mysterious manne devilish and debased (see RACE MYTHS) This is in spite of the fact that a palli skin is symptomatic of weakness and ill health and that the sign of physical vitalit and virility in a 'white' man is usually a rudd glow or a deep suntan.

(See also COLOURS; CORRESPONDENCES.)

The white magician of the past, like the psychiatrist of today, was basically a healer, and the complaints treated and the methods used were similar: whether we attribute our ills to devils or neuroses, the result is anxiety – and 'where anxiety exists, measures will always be taken to allay it'

WHITE MAGIC

DESCRIBED as an 'ancestral science' and also as 'the art of compulsion of the supernatural', magic is in practice a human technique designed to control the environment. It is based on the belief that the forces of Nature can be recruited to serve man's interests. In many primitive societies the control of these forces was one of the most important functions of priesthood, and it is only comparatively recently that magic has become divorced from religion.

The battle between good and evil or light and darkness, between white magic and black, may have existed only in the imagination, but it has always been conducted by dedicated individuals who were assumed to have access to psychic powers. The practitioner of white magic may have been a priest, magician or psychically endowed layman, but he always insisted that his supernatural operations were dedicated to the service of man, a claim that led to a great deal of contention. Both priests and magicians tend to insist that they and they alone have the qualifications to perform their vital role. This is why the clergy so often attacked magicians as agents of the Devil.

Magic has its positive and negative aspects, its active and passive principles. Similarly, magical practitioners may be divided into two basic personality types. One is the seeker after power, who strives to overcome his personal deficiencies by dominating others. The other is the seeker after wisdom who, driven by the same unconscious impulses, attempts to find the key to the hidden treasures of truth. The white magician, traditionally, calls upon God, angels and elemental spirits to supply the power he needs for his operations. The black magician is supposed to derive his particular powers from devils, and to have ghouls and other night monsters as his agents. Black magic should not be written off for it can implant a degree of terror in a victim that may seriously harm him (see CURSE).

The history of the conflict between black magic and white suggests that in the main it is not the highly specialized magician who is held responsible for psychic attacks, but ordinary individuals, usually neighbours, who are thought to have the Evil Eye (see EYE) or 'evil mouth', and to be involuntary agents of evil. Among people who believe in bewitchment, the fear of being caught by it, unprotected, is ever present; drowsiness, for example, is supposed to be a vulnerable state which must be avoided at all costs unless one has taken steps to protect oneself by white magic, such as by wearing an amulet. The gospel of St John hung on a cord around the neck was thought to be effective for this purpose, as was the Lord's Prayer inscribed on a piece of paper and kept in one's shoe. The charm bracelet, which has become universally popular as a luck-bringer since its introduction about 100 years ago, is probably the last of the traditional protective devices, but many people observe eccentric rites to which the resort when agitated. An unexpecte example which I came across recently wa the wearing of a violin 'D' string around th waist in order to benefit from its favourabl vibrations. In the past, whenever persona systems of protection failed to put the min at ease, a white magician was called in, i much the same way that a psychiatrist i consulted today.

In the country the white magician use to be a kind of general practitioner, th village Cunning Man or conjuror, while hi urban counterpart, particularly in the uppe ranks of society, tended to specialize in on particular art, such as astrology. In fact, th role of white magician will always remai important in a community that fears magic or in one that has been convinced by it clergy of the presence of devils.

Doctor, Vet and Detective

It is not generally realized that in its heyda white magic involved a wide variety o socially useful activities which are not readil associated with sorcery. The country magi cian was likely also to be the local veterina surgeon, treating sick animals with a com bination of muttered spells and a soun knowledge of animal diseases. The name o God was frequently on his lips when h supplied his human patients with simples o ointments, or exorcized their ghosts an devils. When cross-examining someon who had asked him to divine the where abouts of a lost object, he would combin incantations with painstaking interroga tion. The white magician's status was sus tained by the awe with which he wa regarded in his community and, unless h was driven underground by persecution, h survived for just as long as people had nee of his services, and while they accepted hi peculiar version of reality.

An inveterate enemy of the clergy, whom

Spectrum Colour Library

Corn dolly in Wales; made from the last shea of the harvest, which was thought to contai the spirit of the corn, dollies were kept until the beginning of the next season's plough ing to ensure continuity; this old custom which was widespread throughout Europe, reflects the belief, a basic concept of magic that the forces of Nature can be controlled an used for the benefit of man

e tended to regard as presumptuous inter-ppers, the white wizard in Europe assumed semi-divine authority, comparable with hat of the African witch-doctor. This might e conferred upon him during his initiation,
r it might be based upon some unusual ircumstance of birth – in England, for nstance, he might be the seventh son of a eventh son – or on an inherited power.

In medieval Germany and 19th century Vorth America the charmer whispered or ang his patient back to health. At Castelhellano in southern Italy, a small village hich is regarded as a centre of witchcraft y people for many miles around, the naciara or sorceress treats her emotionally isturbed clients by tying knots in a length of tring which is buried in a cemetery at the onclusion of the ceremony. The spirit of vil is destroyed by this ritual 'killing'. In 9th century England a wizard of Amerham in Buckinghamshire was reputed to ave cured a sick child by instructing its arents to 'take the length of the child with a tick, measure so much ground in the hurch-yard, and there dig and bury the tick'.

The Spanish village of Mojacar, famous or its witches, was the home of a celebrated Almerian wise woman Tia Carrica, until bout 20 years ago. She achieved some emarkable cures by tracing a cross with a nger on the foreheads of sick clients. She vould then enter into a trance state during he course of which the sickness passed from er client's body into her own. She often ecited the following spell over individuals uffering from the Evil Eye:

Three have done evil to you.
Three have to be taken away.
Who are the three persons of the Holy Trinity?
Father, Son and Holy Ghost.
Shepherd who came to the fountain
And came from the fountain,
Take away the Evil Eye
From whom you put it on.

The white magician in medieval England onfronted with the same type of case used a very similar technique and recited:

Three biters hast thou bitten
The hart, ill eye, ill tongue.
Three biters shall be thy Boote, Father, Sonne and Holy Ghost or God's name.
In worship of the five wounds of our Lorde.

Magic as a force can probably best be lefined as the interaction of one mind upon nother, with suggestion as its primary nechanism; psychic power is nothing more nor less than a peculiarly effective type of hinking. In Africa the witch-doctor is believed to possess an indwelling power which enables him not only to heal the sick
but also to identify witches in the com-nunity (see FINDING OF WITCHES). This consciousness of an inner force is common o most psychic healers and white magicians, and they usually believe that it can be preserved only if they observe an extremely strict code of conduct. If the witch-doctor submits to the temptation to practise magic

Colorific

Charms, amulets and talismans of various kinds play their part in white magic: in Mauritius fishermen attached images of fish to a tree; a form of imitative magic, this is thought to ensure a plentiful supply of fish for illicit ends his power will leave him, or he will become a witch himself.

English folklorists report a similar moral code among the Cunning Men of the past (see EAST ANGLIAN AND ESSEX WITCHES). It seems that they always refused to work for reward since they believed that this would result in a subconscious pandering to the client's wishes, and that they would tell him what he wanted to hear rather than what he needed to know. Such insight, though rare, is not uncommon among white magicians.

The practitioner of white magic is compelled to be rigidly disciplined in his attitudes to day-to-day affairs, as he may otherwise fall from grace and his spells may fail to work. This leads to a permanent state of tension, which is in itself a sign of instability, a measure of the emotional disturbance common to 'possessed' people (see POSSESSION). It is a widely-held view today that the witches of the past were often people who would nowadays be classed as suffering from some form of mental illness (see HYSTERICAL POSSESSION; OLD AGE; WITCHCRAFT), and the same could be said of witch-doctors. The Siberian shaman became frenzied as he entered the trance state (see SHAMAN), and it is well known that many white magicians have been emotionally disturbed.

Whether the practitioner of white magic was a priest, magician or psychically endowed layman, he always insisted that his supernatural powers were dedicated to the service of man; the most important of his roles was that of healer, in emulation of Jesus whose aid he often called upon when carrying out his healing operations: Jesus Raising Lazarus from the Dead, wall painting in Cyprus

The social value of the white magician was to some extent counterbalanced by the dangers inherent in his methods of treatment. In his extremely informative book Scared to Death, Dr J. C. Barker devotes considerable attention to this problem. There are cases in which fortune tellers have implanted troublesome thoughts and eroding fears in the minds of clients, with disastrous results. It is a curious situation when the sick are treated by the sick, and when the rustic psychiatrist who sets up shop to abreact the community's traumas could be said to be in need of treatment himself.

Another aspect of witch-doctor practice, and one which led to many tragedies, was the hunting down and execution of so-called black witches at the instigation of white ones. Isolated examples have occurred in the 20th century. Some 40 years ago, for instance, the Pow Wow men of Pennsylvania were indirectly responsible for the murders of a number of innocent victims of popular prejudice. More recently similar cases have been reported from West Germany, where the belief in magic is today, if anything, even stronger than in pre-war years.

Aura of Responsibility

Although the definitive history of white magic in the British Isles has yet to be written, it is clear that much of it is of Germanic origin. The white magicians and healers of Anglo-Saxon times treated their patients with a combination of prayer, magical incantations and herbal medicines, based on the Doctrine of Signatures, the principle that 'like cures like' (see DISEASE). They healed by touch, breath, and suggestion, and this in their day was probably the best type of medicine available. Medieval healing charms were often supplemented by a type of amulet that goes back to prehistoric times, and which is still used today to bring luck. This is the flint arrowhead or the holed stone, sometimes called a fairy stone, which protected both the byre and the bedroom from demonic attacks. The consecration of a fairy stone was an elaborate affair, and included the following incantation:

> I conjure thee, by all Hosts of Heaven,
> By the Living God, the True God,
> By the Blessed and Omnipotent God . . .

At the conclusion of the ceremony the magician cried out: 'May it protect you against all evil forces and curses, Amen.'

Such a blasphemous combination of paganism and Christianity was a constant affront to many Christians and gave offence to the ecclesiastical authorities, but there seems to have been very little they could do about it. Basically there appears to have been little difference between the magicians' claims that sickness was the work of evi spirits, and the Church's belief that Sata was responsible.

White magic was apparently sanctioned if not sanctified, because it was sociall necessary. Given the choice between th faith healing of the Church and that of th more skilful wizard, the outcome wa generally predictable. Love magic (se LOVE MAGIC), a primitive type of marriag guidance, was in constant demand by al classes in spite of the fulminations of th bishops. Geomancy and many other divina tory arts had the same meaning for medieva man as the newspaper astrologer has for hi 20th century counterpart. Where anxiet exists, measures will always be taken t allay it. The law of supply and deman applies to every type of human need.

The white magician of medieval days com peted successfully with the clergy for th exorcism of ghosts and devils, transferre the evils of sickness from the living suffere to inanimate objects which were then ritually buried, and at the same time maintained hi aura of respectability by insisting that God Christ and the 12 Apostles were on his side This is probably the reason why Englisl white magicians were allowed to operat relatively unimpeded.

From a study of modern white magic i is possible to reconstruct some of the tech niques used by healers until well into th 19th century. Magic circles with cabalisti symbols were drawn in order to conjure u what would now be described as psychi energy. Modern witches call this proces reating the 'cone of power', and insist that be directed to social ends. A variety of bells were used to combat black witchraft, the most remarkable being the witch ottle (see BLOOD; IRON; MURRELL), which as used when the identity of a witch was nknown to her victim. A bottle which was ften made of glass but sometimes of welded on, and which contained blood, hair, nail arings, urine and excreta from the bewitched erson, was heated on the hearth fire at midight; at the same time the assembled ompany intoned the Lord's Prayer backards. The witch was presumed to be underoing excruciating agonies while the contents the bottle boiled, with all the blood in her ody afire, and this pain continued until she ad removed her spell. If the bottle exploded e was expected to die. Witch bottles are ot unknown, even today. It is possible that few hysterics may have been cured by this izarre rite, but it is doubtful that it could ave had much effect upon organic diseases.

rom White Magic to Black Box

he state's attitude towards semi-heretical agicians began to harden after the Reforation, despite the sympathy directed wards white magicians by the community enerally. A few eminent European jurists, uch as Paulus Grillandus, a 16th century riter on witchcraft who was a papal judge the witch trials in Rome, were even preared to tolerate white magic, at a time hen witches generally were being persecud, provided it was socially useful. Howver, strict adherence to the law of God, articularly to the command in Exodus 2.18, which is translated in the Authorised ersion of the Bible as 'Thou shalt not uffer a witch to live', made it imperative at every kind of witch should be eliminated. he Bible also decreed that 'There shall not e found among you anyone who . . . pracses divination, or a soothsayer, or an ugur, or a sorcerer, or a charmer, or a edium, or a wizard, or a necromancer. For hoever does these things is an abomination the Lord' (Deuteronomy 18.10-12).

Religious purists instituted witch-hunts eliminate both black and white sorcerers. he Scots tortured and burned both classes discriminately, but elsewhere in the ritish Isles white magicians were awarded inor punishments unless it could be proved at they were heretics. These prosecutions ere at their fiercest during the reign of ueen Elizabeth I, and gradually died down uring the following century. As late as 1651 ohn Lock of Colchester was placed in the illory for setting up as a diviner of lost nd stolen property, and many other white agicians were sent to prison. Jane Wenam, the last woman in England to be found uilty of witchcraft, who was tried and ardoned in 1712, was a former white magian whose clientele had turned against her.

Although the Witchcraft Act of 1735 bolished the death penalty for witchcraft, ractitioners of white magic were theoreticlly liable to be put in the pillory and sent to rison. However, there is no evidence that gal proceedings were ever taken against hite magicians.

The traditional type of white magic is still dispensed in the Channel Islands by bone-setters and healers, who often claim to be seventh sons of seventh sons. On the mainland the older type of magician had almost disappeared by the beginning of the 20th century, although a report published by the British Medical Association just before the First World War revealed that a few healing witches still survived in remote places.

Today the successors of the white magician may be found in the sphere of unorthodox or 'fringe' medicine. The 'Black Box', for instance (see RADIESTHESIA), which it is claimed can diagnose disease in the absence of the patient, so that it can be treated on homoeopathic principles going back to Paracelsus, has become a vogue in the present century; and there are even radionic instruments which are said to be able to 'broadcast' treatment from a distance. Healing by the laying on of hands – by ordinary men and women rather than priests – is as popular today as it was in the Middle Ages. Astrologers and diviners of every kind dispense their psychic powers in cities and towns, while in the countryside wart charmers and rustic healers have their following. Yet another manifestation of white magic in Britain is in the form of witch covens which flourish in some cities (see MODERN WITCHCRAFT). Modern witches insist that they are the only true heirs of the old magical healers. Needless to say, the Church looks on their activities with a jaundiced eye.

There is a certain similarity between the methods used by modern psychiatrists and those of the old magicians, and in recent years psychiatry has begun to examine sympathetically the functions of witchdoctors, medicine-men and shamans. If white magic may be defined as the power of the imagination to effect changes in mental states by helping the sufferer to relive his past experiences, and by this means externalize his problems and reduce them to manageable proportions, the comparison becomes obvious.

The Evil Eye may have ceased to trouble civilized man, but the 'evil mouth' in the shape of adverse news continues to assault his peace of mind and to require the ministrations of the healer. Although white magic can have no effect on the objective world, it profoundly influences the way in which it is seen. In an age of anxiety the white magician in one form or another can still perform a useful role; for this reason, white magic is likely to be with us for the foreseeable future.

ERIC MAPLE

FURTHER READING: G. Knight, A History of White Magic (Mowbrays, 1978); David G. Phillips, White Magic (Scholarly, 1981); E. Maple, Magic, Medicine and Quackery (A. S. Barnes, 1968).

Tibetan exorcizing dagger: the belief that sickness is the work of evil spirits is found in many cultures; in England the white magician competed successfully with the clergy for the exorcism of ghosts and devils, and maintained his aura of respectability, at the same time, by insisting that God, Christ and the 12 Apostles were on his side

Victoria & Albert Museum

Whitsun

The season of Pentecost, commemorating the descent of the Holy Spirit to the apostles of Jesus (Acts, chapter 2): Whit Sunday is literally 'white Sunday', probably because newly baptized Christians wore white robes on that day; still a holiday season in Britain, it used to be celebrated with feasting, games and processions.

See PENTECOSTALIST MOVEMENT; SPEAKING IN TONGUES.

Widdershins

Or withershins, the direction contrary to the sun's apparent course, to the left, or anticlockwise; deliberate movement in this direction is sinister, associated with witches and worshippers of the Devil, because it reverses the normal and proper order of things.

Men fled to their homes when they heard the Wild Hunt approaching and took care not to look out of their windows; the leader was sometimes said to be the Devil, and his hounds were demon dogs, or the spirits of unbaptized children

WILD HUNT

A TERRIFYING BAND of spectral riders and hounds led by some divine, or demonic, or ghostly leader, the Wild Hunt could be heard on dark and stormy nights of midwinter (and sometimes at other seasons also), rushing through the air with a great clamour of shouts and horn-blowing and the baying of hounds.

Belief in its existence was at one time widespread all over northern Europe, Germany, France, and Great Britain, and traces of that belief are still to be found in the folk traditions of all these lands. It has been known by various names in various regions: the Yule Host in Iceland, the Raging or Furious Host in Germany, the Chasse Maccabei, or Chasse Artu, or Mesnie Hellequin in different parts of France, and numerous others elsewhere. In the West of England, it was the Yeth Hounds or Wish Hounds, in Durham and north Yorkshire the Gabriel Hounds or Gabble Ratchets. This last name literally means 'corpse hounds', from the medieval gabares, a corpse, and rache, a hound that hunts by scent and gives tongue. In some north-country dialects, it is also a term used for night-flying wild geese, whose cries, heard in darkness, so strikingly suggest the noise of an invisible pack of hounds passing far overhead.

It was commonly believed that to see the Wild Hunt as it swept by was dangerous. Men fled to their homes when they heard it approaching and took care not to look out of their windows. One version of the legend says that any person who could not find shelter in time was liable to be seized, carried away over long distances, and finally abandoned in some unknown region far from his home. He could save himself only by falling face downwards on the ground so that he could see nothing, and holding fast to any available plant or tuft of grass until the dark company had passed. To look deliberately at the riders, or to speak to their leader, was to court instant death or madness, or at best, some dreadful personal misfortune.

Odin, god of the dead, or Woden, his Germanic counterpart (see GERMANIC MYTHOLOGY; ODIN), is generally thought to have been the original leader of the Wild Hunt. Later on, when Christianity had dimmed the memory of the ancient deities in the minds of men, his place was often filled by the Devil. He too rode with a great company who were sometimes fiends like himself and sometimes the souls of the lost dead. His hounds were demon dogs, or the spirits of unbaptized children. The unnamed spectral huntsman who is sometimes encountered on Dartmoor and in other lonely places, riding without followers but with a pack of jet-black hounds, is almost certainly a direct descendant of the Devil as leader of the Wild Hunt. So also is the anonymous being who, in later legends, drives a sinister black coach in which the souls of dying sinners are fetched from the death chamber and driven away to hell.

The Night Hounds

In the Middle Ages, the leader was frequently neither god nor devil, but some human individual of heroic stature, renowned, locally or nationally, for the splendour of his former deeds or, quite as often, for the magnitude of his sins or his misfortunes. Dietrich von Bern (the legendary name of Theodoric the Great) was one of these; so was Charlemagne, and King Wenzel (or Wenceslas) of Bohemia, and Duke Abel, the fratricide. In one district of France, it was Hugh Capet, King of France in the 10th century, who led the host, in another, King Herod, the murderer of the Innocents. Gervase of Tilbury, writing in the 13th century, refers to a belief that Arthur hunted in the forests of England and Brittany, and that companies of his knights, with their hounds, had been seen there by foresters, at midday, or on nights of the full moon. At Cadbury Fort in Somerset (see CAMELOT), which is one of the places where Arthur is said to abide until the day when he will come again, local tradition asserts that he and his men rode round the hill when the moon was full, and watered their horses at a nearby spring. So too, on wild winter nights, he went hunting down an ancient trackway running from Cadbury towards Glastonbury, which is still known as Kin Arthur's Causeway. No one saw him ther but those who lived near the old track some times heard his hounds and his horses rush ing by in the windy darkness.

In Shropshire, Wild Edric, the resis tance hero who held out against Williar the Conqueror for nearly three years an was never defeated or captured, appeare before a war, riding furiously with hi followers in the direction of the enem country. Whoever encountered them had t cover his eyes immediately and keep siler until the cavalcade had passed. If he faile to do so, he would be smitten with madnes A rather uncertain tradition says that S Francis Drake used to drive over Dartmo in a black coach, drawn by headless horse and followed by a pack of hounds whos baying killed every earthly dog that heard i In this late tale we see a transitional stag between the ancient Wild Hunt and th spectral coach which eventually took it place in folk tradition. Here is the huma leader who was once a god, and here are th hounds; but the hero does not ride, and th perils of his passage fall, not upon men, bu upon dogs.

A faint memory of the legend lingere until fairly recently in the Meon Hills south Warwickshire. On Christmas Eve an New Year's Eve, a solitary huntsman wa often seen with a pack of hounds whos cries could be heard a long way off, and wh were locally known as Hell Hounds, or Nigh Hounds, or Hooter. No one knew who h was; some said he was a master of foxhoun who hunted on the Sabbath and was conse quently condemned to hunt until the Day Judgement. Others said he was a man wh had been torn to pieces by his own hound In one version of the tale he hunted a phar tom fox through the countryside; but i another, he rode quietly with his hounc round him, as though returning from a day sport. If he encountered any night wayfare he often asked the man to open a gate f him, or do some other little thing that horseman might reasonably ask of a man o foot. But to grant these requests was dar gerous. Whoever did so ran the risk, lik his pagan ancestor long ago, of bein suddenly swept away, not to be seen again i his home for a very long time, and perhap never.

CHRISTINA HOL

WILDWOOD

The forest of legend and folklore is often strange and eerie, an otherworld, the realm of Nature untamed by man, of unearthly and potentially dangerous beings

THE MOLE, in Kenneth Grahame's children's classic The Wind in the Willows, set off by himself one winter's day to explore the Wild Wood. It stretched before him 'low and threatening, like a black reef in some still southern sea', and once inside it he became increasingly uneasy. Growths of fungus on tree stumps looked like faces, and he thought he saw faces watching him from the holes in the banks. Nervously plunging away into the trackless depths of the wood, he heard a faint shrill whistling sound that came first from one direction, then another. There was the rustling patter of feet. 'The whole wood seemed running now, running hard, hunting, chasing, closing in round something or – somebody?'

Suddenly the Mole was in a panic, running aimlessly to and fro, bumping into things, falling over things, dodging round things, until he took refuge in the dark hollow of an old beech tree, where he covered himself with leaves and hoped he was safe. The Rat, who came to his rescue, told him that no one should walk in the Wild Wood without protection: 'I mean passwords, and signs, and sayings which have power and effect, and plants you carry in your pocket, and verses you repeat and tricks you practise.'

The uncanny quality of woods is part of the lore of childhood. In the forest you are far from home, from fireside warmth and kindliness and the settled accustomed order of things. In the forest you are lost. In the forest the trees put out roots to trip you, and reach out for you with crooked, skinny fingers. In the forest, very often, lives the witch. In the story of Hansel and Gretel, for instance, the two children are abandoned in the woods, where they become hopelessly lost. They find a little house made of gingerbread and sugar, and break off pieces of it to eat, but it is a treacherous sanctuary, for it belongs to a cannibal witch, who puts Hansel in a cage to fatten him up for cooking.

In another, peculiarly nasty, German fairy tale a little girl goes to the house of Frau Trude in the forest. She looks in through the window and sees no sign of Frau Trude, but she does see the Devil with a fiery head. When she tells Frau Trude this, the latter says, 'Oho, then you have seen the witch in her true colours: I have been waiting for you for years, longing for you to shine for me.' She turns the little girl into a block of wood and throws her on the fire. 'And when she was in full flame, Frau Trude sat down beside the blaze, warmed herself and said, "Now at last it shines bright."'

There is another highly disagreeable forest witch in Russian folklore, Baba Yaga, an ogress who cooks and eats small children. She lives in a hut, surrounded by a fence topped with skulls, in a clearing in the woods, and the hut spins round and round on chickens' legs. She is evidently an incarnation of wild Nature, for she guards the fountain of the water of life, her teeth are stone, she rides through the air in an iro kettle to stir up storms, and she is serve by three horsemen, a bright one, a red or and a dark one, who are her day, her su and her night.

Previous page The forest of legend and foll lore is a strange and eerie place, an othe world of unearthly and potentially dangerou beings; in modern interpretations it frequently taken as a symbol of the darl tangled depths of the mind Above 'The uncann quality of woods is part of the lore of childhood and in the forest trees put out roots to tri you and reach out for you with crooke skinny fingers: Jo's Wild Wood, a drawin by Anne Said

Forest Primeval

Groves and woods have many symbolic co notations and are by no means alwa places of evil (see TREES). They may be place of retreat from the bustle of th noisy human world to the peace of Natur or the scene of amorous dalliance away fro the neighbours' eyes, or the arena of th hunting of boar or stag. The forest of legen and folklore is not always what Edgar Alla Poe characteristically called 'ghoul-haunte woodland', but it does tend to be strange an eerie. It is an otherworld, the realm of Natur untamed by man, of unearthly and poten tially dangerous beings. In modern interpre tations it is frequently taken as a symbol c the dark depths of the mind, the wild an tangled growths of the unconscious.

In the forest you are lost. In the forest the trees put out roots to trip you up, and reach out for you with crooked, skinny fingers. In the forest, very often, lives the witch

In the Odyssey, the house of Circe, the nchantress (see CIRCE), is in a forest learing. Dante's Inferno begins in a gloomy ood and in Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream a wood is the setting for Oberon, Titania, Puck and the fairies. There is an old uneasy saying that 'woods ave ears', and when we are still caught n some entangling thicket of difficulties e say we are not yet out of the wood.

One strand in the theme of the wildwood s the feeling of its immense antiquity, he forest primeval' of Longfellow's famous nes in Evangeline, where the murmuring ines and the hemlocks 'stand like Druids of ld'. The Druids worshipped in woodland anctuaries (see DRUIDS), and the Celtic nd Germanic reverence for sacred trees nd groves contributes to the haunted, uminous quality attributed to woods in orthern Europe.

Another strand is the terror that the trees ight move. In a frightening passage early in . R. R. Tolkien's Lord of the Rings the eroes traverse the Old Forest, where the ees do not like strangers. At night they em to be whispering to each other, passing ews and plots along in an unintelligible anguage, and the branches sway and grope ven when there is no wind. 'They do say he trees do actually move, and can surround trangers and hem them in.' One of the hobits is trapped by a great grey willow tree, nd Old Man Willow has an old and pecularly sinister reputation among trees, as oes the elder (see ELDER; WILLOW). Oak oppices, where the trees have been felled, re also dangerous places in which to walk t night, for the stumps hunger for revenge nd swiftly grow new shoots which reach ut for passers-by.

The Questing Beast

n Arthurian legend, the wild forest is requently the scene of enchantments and ncounters with supernatural beings and vonders, or the way to these beings and vonders lies through the forest. The Forest Perilous, located in North Wales in Malory's Morte D'Arthur, was the home of an nchantress who lured King Arthur there o seduce him, and he would have died there f he had not been rescued by Sir Tristram. t was deep in a forest that Arthur saw the Questing Beast, a most extraordinary reature (with which T. H. White had great fun in The Once and Future King). It had the head of a serpent, the body of a leopard, a lion's hindquarters and the feet of a stag, and from its belly came the noise of 30 couple of hounds baying.

In Perlesvaus, a French romance of the 13th century, the Questing Beast is a white animal which has 12 barking hounds in her womb. When she gives birth to these hounds, they tear her to pieces but cannot eat her flesh. The author explains that the beast is a figure of Christ and the hounds are the Jews, who sacrificed Christ but cannot consume his body in the sacrament of the Mass.

In the Didot Perceval, of the same period, a young knight enters the land of Avalon and in an enchanted forest meets a beautiful maiden sitting by a fountain. They wander lovingly through the woodland till they come to a green meadow where the knight becomes unaccountably drowsy. He falls asleep, and when he wakes up finds himself the maiden's prisoner in an invisible castle. A similar story was told of Merlin, who was tricked and made prisoner by an enchantress (see MERLIN), a scene sometimes set in the Forest Perilous.

Sir Gawain and the Green Knight (see GAWAIN) describes how the hero, riding north to seek out the Green Knight, travels through the Wilderness of Wirral, on the borders of Cheshire and Lancashire, which in the 14th century was so infested with dangerous outlaws and outcasts that in 1376, at the request of the citizens of Chester, Edward III ordered it to be deforested. Pressing on through unknown country, he fights dragons to the death and battles with wolves, woodwouses (wild men of the woods), bulls, bears, boars, and ogres on the high fells. Cleaving his way through all these perils, he reaches 'a wondrously wild wood', a forest of oak, hazel and hawthorn (all of them magical trees), and when he comes to the Green Knight's castle he sees it shimmering through the oaks which hem it in.

Among his other adventures, Gawain reached the hall of the Grail after riding through a forest, and the causeway which led to the hall was roofed by trees which grew on either side, making it dark and eerie. Another Grail hero, Perceval (see GRAIL; PARSIFAL), was brought up in the forested wilds of Wales. Emma Jung and Marie-Louise von Franz (in The Grail Legend) see in this an image of both the mother and the unconscious. The forest in which Perceval grows up is Nature in her maternal role as nourisher and protector, and: 'with its plant and animal life, its twilight and its restricted horizon, the forest aptly illustrates the as yet barely conscious condition of the child . . .' They also suggest that in general when the forest is the starting point of a hero's adventures, it 'represents the emergence from a relatively unconscious situation into a far more conscious one'.

The Wild Man

One of the alarming creatures to be found in the forest of legend, and in the old days in the forest of reality, is a woodwouse (spelt in various ways, including woodwose and woodhouse), a wild man of the woods. Perceval is something of a wild man himself, in the sense of a 'natural man' or 'noble savage', brought up close to Nature and far from civilization, so ignorant of the ways of the world that when he first sees mailed knights of Arthur's court he takes them for angels.

A more orthodox woodwouse, is the hero of Sir Orfeo, a medieval English poem based on the Greek legend of Orpheus, the great singer (see ORPHEUS). Sir Orfeo takes to the forest when his beloved wife is snatched away by the fairies. In his desperate grief he decides never to look at a woman again but to go to the wilderness, to live with wild beasts in the ancient woods. There he sleeps on the ground, gathering fruit and berries in the summer and in the winter reduced to grubbing up roots and gnawing on grass and bark. He grows cruelly thin, his beard long and shaggy, but on bright clear days he plays his harp. All the beasts of the forest gather round and the birds cluster on the branches to hear the sweetness of his harping.

In the woods Sir Orfeo sees the King of Fairyland at his hunting, with the sounding of horns and baying of hounds. He sees armed fairy knights riding with swords drawn and banners unfurled, and knights and ladies dancing in the glades. One day he recognizes one of the ladies as his lost love and unlike his Greek original, is able to win her back.

It was said that Merlin had been driven mad and sent wandering through the woods as a punishment for causing war. There was a Scottish legend of a forest wild man, said to have been encountered by St Kentigern.

British Museum

He was naked and hairy, his name was Lailoken, and he had been punished for his sins by being made to live apart from humanity with only wild beasts for company: some said he was Merlin. In Irish legend, Suibne Gelt, King of Dal nAraide, was said to have gone mad after the battle of Moira in 673. He fled to the woods where, since he could fly like a bird, he spent much of his time roosting in the tops of trees.

The fact that the coat of arms of the Earls of Atholl in Scotland had a wild man in fetters as a supporter was explained by the story that a wild man had lived among the rocks at Craigiebarns, ravaging the countryside and terrifying everyone. After several attempts to catch him had failed, a man named Murray trapped him by filling the pool from which the wild man drank with Atholl brose – whisky and honey – and so putting him into a sound sleep. As a reward the Earl of Atholl gave Murray the hand of his daughter in marriage, and Murray eventually succeeded to the earldom. (In fact, the Murrays did succeed to the title through a marriage with the heiress of Atholl in the 17th century.)

A celebrated wild man of modern fiction is Ben Gunn, in Treasure Island. He has been marooned on the island and has survived there alone for three years, living on goats, berries and oysters, and wistfully longing for toasted cheese. Shaggy, black with sunburn, dressed in rags and tatters, he is almost as timid as an animal, desperately anxious for human company and

Previous page In Arthurian legend, the wil forest is frequently the scene of enchantments wonders and supernatural beings, or the wa to them is through the forest: Sir Lancelo in the enchanted forest, from a French 14t century MS

Above In its beneficent aspects the forest ha been described as representing Nature in he maternal role, nourishing and protecting, concept reflected in the story of the 'Babe in the Wood' in which two lost children ar fed and cared for by the animals of the forest Babes in the Wood by Ralph Caldecot

Far right Robin Hood, the most famous of al forest outlaws, feasting in the Greenwood: i the outlaw legends the forest is a place o refuge and freedom from the demands o conventional society

The Mole in the Wild Wood

There was nothing to alarm him at first entry. Twigs crackled under his feet, logs tripped him, funguses on stumps resembled caricatures, and startled him for a moment by their likeness to something familiar and far away; but that was all fun and exciting. It led him on, and he penetrated to where the light was less, and trees crouched nearer and nearer, and holes made ugly mouths at him on either side.

Everything was very still now. The dusk advanced on him steadily, rapidly, gathering in behind and before; and the light seemed to be draining away like flood-water.

Then the faces began.

It was over his shoulder, and indistinctly, that he first thought he saw a face, a little, evil, wedge-shaped face, looking out at him from a hole. When he turned and confronted it, the thing had vanished.

He quickened his pace, telling himself cheerfully not to begin imagining things or there would be simply no end to it. He passed another hole, and another, and another; and then – yes! – no! – yes! certainly a little narrow face, with hard eyes, had flashed up for an instant from a hole, and was gone. He hesitated – braced himself up for an effort and strode on . . .

If he could only get away from the holes in the banks, he thought, there would be no more faces. He swung off the path and plunged into the untrodden places of the wood.

Then the whistling began.

Kenneth Grahame The Wind in the Willows

Mansell Collection

et scared of it. Robinson Crusoe, the Swiss Family Robinson, Tarzan of the apes, and Kipling's Mowgli are other fictional explorations of the same basic theme.

Outlaws of the Greenwood

The wild man of legend has his prototypes in real madmen who took to the woods to escape from the hostility of the sane, but his closeness to Nature connects him with two other figures, the Green Man who personifies the life of vegetation (see GREEN; VEGETATION SPIRITS), and the unearthly woodman who is the keeper of the forest and its creatures (Tom Bombadil in The Lord of the Rings). In 'The Lady of the Fountain', one of the stories in the Mabinogion (see MABINOGION), Cynon rides through the forest and comes to a clearing with a mound in the middle of it. On the mound sits a huge black man who has one foot, one eye in the centre of his forehead, and a massive iron club. He is the woodman, ugly to look at but not ugly in disposition, and he has power over animals. He demonstrates this to Cynon, who describes the scene. 'He took the club in his hand and with it struck a stag a mighty blow till it gave a mighty belling, and in answer to its belling wild animals came till they were as numerous as stars in the firmament . . . And he looked on them and bade them go graze. And then they bowed down their heads and did him obeisance, even as humble subjects would do to their lord.'

A giant guards the cedar forest in the Babylonian Epic of Gilgamesh (see GILGAMESH) and in some of his aspects seems to personify a forest fire. His roaring is like the storm, his mouth is fire, his breath is death. Gilgamesh and his friend Enkidu, another 'natural man', penetrate the forest through an enchanted gate, which paralyses Enkidu's hand when he touches it. They come to the mountain which is the home of the gods, and the sacred cedar which Gilgamesh fells with an axe. When the giant, Humbaba or Huwawa, appears, the sight terrifies even the valorous Gilgamesh, but the sun god sends eight great winds which hold Humbaba fast, and Gilgamesh cuts off his head.

Another variety of forest wild man is the outlaw, wild because he has been placed outside the pale of society and outside the protection of the law, and wild in the sense that, as Maurice Keen says, he is 'a desperate man and he has recourse to desperate and violent remedies' and 'a cold and callous brutality'. The forests of medieval England sheltered thieves, vagabonds, fugitives from justice, men who had been turned off their land, rebels and misfits of all sorts. The poor, themselves suffering in a hard, rigidly stratified society, romanticized them and credited them with superhuman abilities. There grew up the picture of the merry outlaw in the greenwood, free as a bird, roistering on good ale and forbidden venison, robbing the rich and giving to the poor, the enemy of pomp, privilege and tyranny. Far the most famous of them is Robin Hood who, dressed in Lincoln green, has a connection with the Green Man and the May Day ceremonies (see ROBIN HOOD).

The forest is now a sanctuary and the wild man or natural man a proud, heroic figure, admired because he is free of the chains and shackles of society. The same aura surrounds highwaymen, and romantic wanderers and free spirits, nomadic motor cyclists, tramps and hippies, but here the lure of the wildwood has turned into the longing for the open road.

RICHARD CAVENDISH

FURTHER READING: The Mabinogion, trans. G. and T. Jones (Biblio Dist., 1976); Sir Orfeo, trans. by Brian Stone in Medieval English Verse (Penguin, 1964). See also E. Jung and M. L. von Franz, The Grail Legend (Sigo Press); M. Keen, The Outlaws of Medieval Legend (Univ. of Toronto Press, 1961); A. Porteous, Forest Folklore, (Gale, 1968, c1928).

In many respects a typical member of Victorian society, 'Mrs Willett' was also a non-professional medium who played an essential part in the 'cross-correspondences', communications which purported to come from the spirit world

MRS WILLETT

UNTIL AFTER her death on 31 August 1956, Mrs Charles Coombe Tennant was known in the literature of psychical research as 'Mrs Willett'. She was a most remarkable non-professional medium.

Born on 1 November 1874, and christened Winifred Margaret, she was the only child of George Edward Pearce-Serocold (1828–1912) by his second wife, Mary Richardson of Derwen Fawr, near Swansea. Her paternal ancestors had been closely connected since the middle of the 18th century with the University of Cambridge and with the vicarage of the neighbouring village of Cherryhinton.

On 12 December 1895, in her 22nd year, she married Charles Coombe Tennant (1852–1928) of Cadoxton Lodge, Glamorganshire. He was the head of a wealthy and able family, originally of industrialists, who had sprung from northern England and had in the 18th century settled in Glamorganshire and acquired and developed property there. One of his sisters, Eveleen, had married F. W. H. Myers (see MYERS), one of the pioneers of psychical research in England. Mrs Coombe Tennant, thus related by marriage to him, came to like and admire him greatly; but she actively disliked his wife Eveleen, and she had no very friendly feelings for the latter's sister Dorothy, who married the explorer H. M. Stanley and eventually wrote his biography.

The Coombe Tennants had four children. The eldest son, George Christopher, and the only daughter, Daphne, died in youth. Daphne, who was born in 1907, lived only one year and seven months, but exhibited during that short period a most remarkable personality. Christopher, a young man of brilliant promise who became an officer in the Welsh Guards, was killed in Flanders in 1917 in his 20th year. Naturally, these early deaths of two very remarkable children had a profound effect on their mother. In August 1908 she wrote, and had privately printed, a memoir of Daphne. And she contributed a memoir of her eldest son to the book, entitled Christopher, containing many of his letters, which was compiled by Sir Oliver Lodge and published in 1918.

Mrs Coombe Tennant combined marked practical interests and abilities with outstanding gifts of mediumship. She was in many aspects a typical Victorian society lady, but she combined this with strong, and rather unusually radical, social and political interests. She was an early and enthusiastic supporter of women's suffrage. In politics she was a strong Liberal, and for a time a great admirer of Lloyd George. She took an active part in local administration in Glamorganshire, and was one of the first women JPs on the bench there. After the end of the First World War the British Government appointed her a delegate to the Assembly of the newly founded League of Nations. Of Welsh descent on her mother's side, she became a keen Welsh nationalist; played an active part and held high office in the National Eisteddfod; and was a discriminating patron of Welsh painting. Beside this, she made for herself a fine collection of modern French pictures.

It was probably through her brother-in-law, F. W. H. Myers, that she first became aware of the Society for Psychical Research and met some of its prominent Cambridge members, such as Mrs Sidgwick, Mrs Verrall, and the latter's daughter Helen (afterwards Mrs W. H. Salter). But it was not until after the death of her daughter Daphne that her interest in psychical research became strong and her own very distinctive type of mediumship developed. Its nature, and the course of its development, are thoroughly described in Gerald Balfour's 'Study of the Psychological Aspects of Mrs. Willett's Mediumship', which he contributed to the S.P.R. Proceedings in 1935.

The 'Palm Sunday' Case

The salient points are as follows. She had attempted automatic writing in the summer of 1908, after Daphne's death, and had obtained messages purporting to come from Myers, who had died in 1901. She had not been much impressed with these, but had nevertheless continued. Then, early in January 1909, came a sudden development. In a script, ostensibly coming from Myers, she received an order to stop writing, and to try to apprehend the ideas which would be put into her head, and to record them in ordinary writing as soon afterwards as possible. It was stated in the scripts that Edmund Gurney (see GURNEY), who had died in 1888, was involved with Myers in a special experiment which they were to make 'from the other side' with her help.

The next stage was that the 'Myers-persona' and the 'Gurney-persona', as we may call them, expressed and reiterated in the scripts the wish that she should give sittings in the presence of Sir Oliver Lodge, who had been a friend and collaborator of theirs in their lifetimes, and should dictate to him the impressions which she would receive from them. After considerable resistance she consented to approach Lodge, who was then a complete stranger to her. They first met on 17 May 1909 and she afterwards had many sittings in his presence, with him as note-taker.

Next, the Gurney-persona insisted that Gerald Balfour (later the second Earl of Balfour) should be introduced as a sitter and note-taker. He had been a close friend of Gurney's, had co-operated with him in psychical research, and was deeply read in philosophy. Mrs Coombe Tennant, who had never met him, resisted the suggestion, but eventually consented to approach him. The first sitting was on 4 June 1911. Thereafter he became almost the only sitter with her, and during the next 20 years hundreds of sittings were held, sometimes at Cadoxton and sometimes at the Balfours' home at Fisher's Hill, Woking, in Surrey.

These sittings largely took the form of elaborate conversations, with questions and answers, between the sitter and the ostensible communicators. The latter, purporting to be the surviving spirits of Myers and Gurney, explained the use which they claimed to be making deliberately of Mrs Coombe Tennant, the methods which they employed and the difficulties which they met in attempting various kinds of communication through her. Whatever their origin, these communications are on a high intellectual level. They are some of the most impressive recorded products of trance-mediumship.

Long before Balfour's study was published, two papers, one by Sir Oliver Lodge and the other by Mrs Verrall, appeared in 1911 in the S.P.R. Proceedings concerning the 'cross correspondences' in which 'Mrs Willett' played an essential part (see CROSS-CORRESPONDENCES). Balfour himself published two papers on the same subject, in 1914 and 1917. These four papers have become classics in the literature of psychical research. Between them they make it plain in detail that in her scripts 'Mrs Willett' showed a knowledge of particular facts and incidents and of highly recondite classical lore, which cannot plausibly be assigned to any source normally available to Mrs Coombe Tennant. These are, moreover, highly characteristic of the interests, the learning, and the idiosyncrasies of the deceased scholars, in particular Myers, Verrall, and Butcher, who were ostensibly communicating through her.

In 1960 Joan Balfour, daughter-in-law of Gerald, published in the S.P.R. Proceedings a long paper on the 'Palm Sunday' case. This describes how 'Mrs Willett', in a long series of automatic scripts and trance-utterances, between 1912 and 1929, seems to be referring cryptically, but unmistakably, to a certain very private and personal matter in the early life of Gerald's elder brother, the Conservative statesman Arthur Balfour (1848–1930). This was his love for Catherine Mary Lyttelton and her tragic death from typhus on Palm Sunday 1875, before he had declared himself. A sitting between Balfour and 'Mrs Willett' in 1916 is referred to and certain incidents in his last illness are described, when he was a very old man in 1929, in which 'Mrs Willett', who was staying in the house, seemed to be aware of the presence and intervention of Catherine Lyttelton's surviving spirit.

Mrs Coombe Tennant died in 1956 in her 82nd year, but on the face of it this was by no means the end of her psychic activities. For from 7 August 1957 to 6 March 1960, Miss Geraldine Cummins, who had been unknown to her personally, obtained a series of 40 automatic scripts purporting to come from her surviving spirit. They were published in 1965 under the title Swan on a Black Sea, and they have been the subject of much discussion since. Whatever may be their ultimate origin, they seem to be redolent of Mrs Coombe Tennant's personality, and to contain bits of highly individual information about her doings and feelings throughout her earthly life.

(See also AUTOMATIC ART.)

C. D. BROAD

WILL-O-THE-WISP

MYSTERIOUS LIGHTS seen hovering or moving about in an eerie manner, especially over fens and marshes or in churchyards, have acquired a grim reputation in Europe under a great variety of names: including will-o-the-wisp, jack-o-lantern, fox fire, fairy fire, ignis fatuus ('foolish fire', because only a fool follows it), elf light, friar's lantern, corpse light, corpse candle, William with the little flame, Jack of the bright light, fetch candle or fetch light, a 'fetch' being a person's shadowy counterpart or double (see DOUBLE). The lights may be caused by atmospheric conditions or possibly by ignition of gases emanating from decaying plant or animal matter. They look like small, glowing balls of fire or like candle flames and are generally associated with the souls of the dead (see CANDLE). In northern Europe spectral fires were seen on burial mounds and were believed to be the souls of dead warriors, guarding the treasure which had been buried with them.

A will-o-the-wisp, jack-o-lantern or ignis fatuus, sometimes believed to be a wandering soul which cannot find refuge in heaven or hell, or sometimes a malignant imp, wanders about in an erratic way and, if you follow it, it is likely at best to get you hopelessly lost and at worst to lead you to your death in a bog or pool, though there are a few reports of the light being helpful and leading people out of danger. There are also stories of the will-o-the-wisp chasing a terrified victim through mud and brambles until he is confused and then leaving him with the sound of mocking laughter.

In German folklore, the light is thought to be the soul of someone who in life moved or disregarded a boundary marker, a way of stealing part of a neighbour's land which has been a particularly detested crime in many societies. The Finnish liekkio, 'flaming one', is the soul of a child who has been buried in the forest.

A corpse candle or fetch light, like a small flame moving through the air in the dark, may be a warning of your own imminent death if it hovers before you, or of the death of someone you love. Or it may hover at a place which will soon be the scene of a death. It may cross your line of vision between your home and the grave which waits for you in the churchyard. More often, it is seen going from the churchyard to the house of a person who is near death, in which case it is tracing in reverse the route which the funeral will take, or lingering on the roof of a house in which a death will follow.

The sea-going equivalent of the corpse candle is a glowing light called St Elmo's Fire, which is caused by electrical discharges during thunderstorms and is accompanied by a crackling sound, like the noise of twigs burning. It is seen on the masts and yards of ships and is generally interpreted, correctly, as a sign that the worst of the storm is over. However, if it comes down onto the deck, this is an ominous sign, and if it is seen glowing round a sailor's head, his death is very close to him.

An alternative name, corposant, is derived from Portuguese corpo santo, 'holy body', the body being that of St Elmo himself, the patron saint of Mediterranean seamen. His name is probably a corruption of Erasmus, the name of a martyr of the early 4th century who was said to have died at sea during a storm, after promising the crew that if they were not fated to die in the storm, he would come back and show himself to them. They waited anxiously and presently a glowing light appeared at the masthead.

Tate Gallery London

A glowing ball of fire, the will-o-the-wisp, jack-o-lantern or ignis fatuus, has been known to lead men to their deaths: Ignis Fatuus, an imaginative 19th century relief by Henry Alfred Pegram

WILLOW

A TRADITIONAL EMBLEM of grief and melancholy, the willow is also a symbol of forsaken love, and it was once customary for the jilted to wear a willow garland. In The Merchant of Venice Shakespeare describes the forsaken Queen of Carthage:

> In such a night
> Stood Dido, with a willow in her hand,
> Upon the wild sea-banks. . . .

Ophelia hangs her symbolic bunch of wild flowers upon a willow that 'grows aslant a brook', and Desdemona sings 'a song of "willow"' about a jilted girl, which ends 'Sing all a green willow must be my garland'. Unkind people would even send a willow garland to someone who had been jilted, often on the occasion of the unfaithful lover's marriage to another. In Wales the willow wreath was replaced by a peeled hazel wand.

It was not only the jilted but the bereaved who should wear the willow. In Henry IV (Part 3) when Bona, sister of the Queen of France, hears of Edward IV's marriage with Elizabeth Grey, she says: 'Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly, I'll wear the willow-garland for his sake.'

The association with grief dates only from the late Middle Ages; there is little doubt that the biblical 'willows' upon which the exiled Jews hung their harps as they wept by the rivers of Babylon were the Euphrates aspen, a kind of poplar. Even the 18th century Swedish botanist Linnaeus was misled by the Bible into christening the weeping willow, which actually comes from China, Salix babylonica.

There is, however, an ancient association between the willow and death. In the 2nd century AD Pausanias, the Greek historian, wrote of a grove sacred to Persephone, queen of the underworld, where willow and poplars grew, and also describes Orpheus holding a willow branch in the underworld. On the island of the enchantress Circe there was said to be a grove of willows, from which corpses hung. In China coffins were covered with willow boughs, and the trees were planted in cemeteries to suggest immortality. The Chinese also considered the tree to be magical and capable of averting harm and illness, a belief that is also found in Ireland, where the pussy willow, one of the 'seven noble trees of the land', was a charm against enchantment.

Associated with death by the ancient Greeks, the willow is traditionally an emblem of forsaken love; in Hamlet Ophelia hangs her wild flowers on a 'willow aslant a brook' before drowning herself: painting by Millais

Because of its ancient sacredness the willow is one of the trees that should be invoked when a person 'touches wood'. The pussy willow provided the English substitute for palm branches on Palm Sunday (see PALM). It is sometimes thought to be unlucky to take the catkins or 'pussies' indoors, but more often this is said to bring good luck, especially if they are brought into the house on May Day.

In certain places the willow was associated with festivals held on St John's Eve, 23 June. In the Ile de France a figure made from pliable willow wands was ceremoniously burnt and at Luchon, in southern France, a representation of an actual willow tree was made from the wands. Snakes were thrown upon it and it was then set alight. The background to these two extraordinary rites is obscure.

As with hazel, wands of willow were important in various magical operations, especially divination. In northern England, a girl who wanted to know whom she would marry could perform an alarming ritual. With her willow wand in her left hand, she had to leave the house secretly and run three times around it, saying, 'He that's to be my gude man come and grip the end of it'. On the third time round a likeness of her future husband would grasp the other end.

Because willow trees are often hollow, and decay easily, it was believed that a child beaten with a willow rod would be stunted, while an animal so beaten would suffer internal pains. However, willow trees were sometimes used in an ancient cure for children's ailments, notably rupture. The child was passed through a natural hole or artificial cleft in the tree, which was then bound or closed up with willow twigs.

Willow is one of the few cases where the Doctrine of Signatures, the theory that 'like cures like' (see DISEASE), has proved to have a scientific basis. Because the tree grows in wet places it was believed to be a remedy for rheumatism, which can be caused by damp. A magical method recorded in the Netherlands was for the afflicted person to make three knots in a branch on an old tree, saying 'Good morning, Old One, I give thee the cold.' Later, according to Gerard, the 16th century herbalist, branches of osier, a kind of willow, would be brought into the sick-room; but the country remedy was to take an infusion of the bark. During the 19th century this remedy was investigated and willow (salix) was found to contain salicylic acid, which is now used in the treatment of rheumatism.

In the language of flowers, the weeping willow is not surprisingly the code for mourning, but the water willow represents freedom.

A. J. HUXLEY

'O for the wings of a dove': the human longing for wings and flight has been accomplished in one sense, for man can and does fly in his dreams

WINGS

PERHAPS BECAUSE man's body, wingless and earth-bound, has never normally been able to levitate, let alone fly, the ability to take off and soar freely away from terra firma, as demonstrated by birds, has aroused man's awe and longing. Ancient man peopled the mysterious upper and lower regions of his world with imagined creatures of unhampered mobility, often with winged appendages, whether for flight or not, as a symbol of extra-terrestrial power.

In some ancient myths, the sky itself was depicted as a winged vulture, and the Egyptian sun god Re, when he was disenchanted with human beings, was advised to mount the Heavenly Cow, rise up and become the sky itself. The Mesopotamian god Anum created a winged bull, called the Bull of Heaven, and sent it to earth to redress a slight to his daughter Ishtar (the wings, however, did not prevent the bull from being slain).

In Greek myths Hermes (see HERMES), messenger of the god Zeus, wore winged sandals and a winged hat to make him invincibly swift and mobile. Eros, a beautiful winged youth, sped where he willed to shoot his victims with arrows of love (see EROS). The Sphinx, a woman-fronted lion with an impressive wing-spread, killed people who could not answer her riddles, epitomizing the evil use of supernatural flight.

The Fall of Icarus

Of several winged horses in ancient myth, Pegasus, steadfast and courageous, travelled the air faster than the wind, attained the heights of Olympus and drew the thunder-chariots of Zeus across the heavens. A Borak ('Lightning'), milk-white and with the wings of an eagle, carried Mohammed to the seventh heaven.

Less appealing, the winged Harpies which were partly women but had eagle's claws and beaks, swooped down viciously to seize man's food and depart, leaving a terrible stench (see HARPY). The griffin (or gryphon) had the head, wings and feet of an eagle and the hind-part of a lion. Only the female was winged; the male counterpart had protruding spikes instead. Aeschylus called griffins 'the hounds of Zeus, who never bark, with beaks like birds', and they were considered fierce guardians against theft. Nemesis, avenger of wrongdoing, was a winged woman carrying a sword or whip, who travelled the air in a griffin-drawn chariot. The hippogriff was a variant of the griffin, with the body of a horse, the forefront of a griffin and an eagle's wings and claws.

The terrifying dragons that appear in many legends are a compound of many creatures, including serpent, lion, antelope, fish and eagle. Although some alternately ran and flew, many seem to have been able to fly a considerable distance, and most were depicted with wings, signifying the ultimate in supernatural endowment (see DRAGON). The wings of the Roc (or Rukh), according to Marco Polo, who had heard of it from many sources, had a span of '30 paces', and the wing feathers were '12 paces long'. It could rise to great heights, swoop down on an elephant, bear it far up, then drop it and smash it, and, of course, descend to eat it (see ROC).

A moral lay in the experience of Daedalus, architect of the labyrinth for the Minotaur in Crete. Daedalus did not have wings at all, but when King Minos imprisoned him and his son Icarus in the labyrinth, Daedalus fashioned some with wax and glue, and he and Icarus took to the one available escape route, the air. Icarus, however, intoxicated by his new-found freedom and power, did not heed his father's warning to fly a middle course between the sun and the sea. He flew too near the sun and his beautiful wings melted. He fell into the sea and drowned. His sorrowful father flew safely on to Sicily.

Peter Pan

In later folklore (and theology), both angels and devils had the power of flight, and angels were generally illustrated with feathered wings, which they apparently did not need to flap to encompass distance; angels' thoughts and desires sped them without this effort.

By the 17th century, it was generally believed that angels ruled all spheres above the moon, and devils all below. The seraphim, highest order of angels, had no less than six wings. The main business of angels was the salvation of men's souls, and of devils the damnation of them. By purity of character, men might themselves become angels when they died, thus finally acquiring the supremacy of wings.

Fairies were considered nearer to devils than angels. Supposedly composed of condensed or congealed air, they took countless shapes, and were more often earth-oriented than celestial, though some were said to have been descended from gods. How, when and why they first acquired wings, is uncertain, though probably the form of angels was an influence.

Though fairies are frequently without them, their ability to become invisible in one place and visible in another, to steal in and out of shapes and sizes, has the same supernatural freedom of movement. In Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream, Oberon has just arrived from India, and Puck takes but a few minutes to travel from England to Athens and back. Oberon summarizes the fairies' eerie form of flight when he says to Titania:

> Then my queen in silence sad,
> Trip we after the night's shade;
> We the globe can compass soon,
> Swifter than the wandering moon.

The human child's longing for wings, or their equivalent for flight, is never more vividly portrayed or more happily fulfilled than in J. M. Barrie's Peter Pan. Peter, the boy who refused to grow up, knew how to fly. He taught the Darling children how to do it by simply believing they could, and then taking a huge jump from their beds into the air. Suddenly, as if wing-borne, they lifted up and followed him out of the window, gliding with speed and exhilarating ease to

Jeffrey Craig

Although angels were generally depicted as having feathered wings in medieval art, they apparently did not need to flap them to encompass distance; it was believed that their thoughts and desires alone were able to move them: winged cherubs surrounding a statue, in Sicily

'Never-Never Land'. That their escape from adulthood had sad repercussions did not linger in children's minds as much as the identification with Peter's magic ability.

The art of flying, with or without wings, has been accomplished in one sense – man can and does fly in his dreams. In dreams man may have the pleasure of being conscious that he has risen out of his body's limited sphere. He may ascend only a short way, looking down at his still reclining and inert body, or rise high into the sky and fly across an ocean. Techniques range from a rapid flapping with the elbows, a forward thrust and outspread of arms that now act as wings, to a controlled tilting and angling of the body to balance it in relation to the air. Flying dreams of any kind are primarily satisfying and delightful; whether man merely rises above his normal confinement, or right out of it, the added dimension of levitation and flight removes frustrating barriers to the supernatural.

Above Symbols of extra-terrestrial power, wings were the attributes of many deities of the ancient world: winged sun disc, detail from painting on the coffin of a priestess of the Egyptian god Amen-Re Below Although fairies are more often earth-orientated than celestial beings, they are frequently depicted with wings

Scientists are not sure how real wings were evolved, and it is now believed that they may not be appendages at all, but the extension of the chitin, the outer integument or body wall. In any case, the outstretche human arm is just similar enough to the win structure of birds to tantalize man with th possibility of developing flight power. Ma has spent untold amounts of time strength ening appropriate muscles and appendin strange devices to his person, to no avail In vicarious achievement of his desire, h has flown kites and balloons, invented meta wings and even rocket propulsion. He has be come airborne, but still cannot elevate himse more than a few feet off the earth, and this fc but a fleet moment. Until he can do so, ma will continue to be fascinated with the super natural connotations of wings and flight.

(See also ANGELS; BAT; BIRDS; FAIRIES SKY.)

NONA COXHEA

WINTER

There is food everywhere, heavy, rich food. And laughter. A positive urge to spend seizes on everyone . . .' What sounds like our modern Christmas is in fact an account of a pagan winter festival in the 4th century AD

IN NORTHERN LANDS the season of cold, wet and darkness has also traditionally been the time when the freest rein is given to fantasy. It was in winter that whole families in bygone ages huddled together in smoky huts listening, as the storms raged outside, to sagas and folktales. In winter, more than any other season, ghosts stalk abroad, and in the countryside a solitary light, glimpsed in the distance by a lone wayfarer, can flood the soul with emotion. Winter has always been, too, a time for feasting and celebrating. When harsh weather made warfare and even trivial disputes between neighbours impossible, and the concerted hostility of the elements made men mindful of their own essential brotherhood, it was natural to think of winter as the season of goodwill. There was also the gloom and tedium of long nights crying out for relief, and when the days began at last to lengthen, however imperceptibly, men looked upon it as the rebirth of the sun, and celebrated the nativity of a god.

The earliest of these winter festivals about which we know anything was the Sacaea in Babylon, a celebration of the New Year, lasting several days. From the third millennium down to the very end of Mesopotamian civilization, a few centuries before the Christian era, mock battles were held every year, in which the king impersonated the god Marduk, who had won a mighty victory over Tiamat, the watery goddess of chaos, on the very first New Year's day, when the world had been created (see CREATION MYTHS; MARDUK). In Babylonia new temples were inaugurated only on New Year's day, and from this day a king officially dated the beginning of his reign. According to later Greek writers, the Babylonian Sacaea was a time of sexual licence, feasting and disguising. Slaves gave orders to their masters during the days of the festival, and a criminal was chosen to have royal rights conferred upon him, only to be executed at the end of the celebrations. Whether these Greeks are reading contemporary practices in the Roman world into the Babylonian setting it is impossible to say, but if their reports are accurate, then the Babylonian festival must have been the ancestor of a number of similar celebrations in the ancient world.

The Roman Saturnalia, celebrated at the end of December, was a festival of merry-making and exchanging gifts which left its mark on our own Christmas celebrations. All work and business was suspended, originally for three days, but eventually for seven, and slaves were free to say and do what they liked. Gambling, usually punishable with a fine fixed at four times the value of the stakes, was officially permitted on these 'best of days', as the Roman poet Catullus calls the Saturnalia. Rich men gave their 'clients' presents of silverware, and children received little wax dolls.

A Greek writer of the 4th century AD, the sophist Libanius, has left a description of the winter festival as it was celebrated in his own city of Antioch: 'There is food everywhere, heavy, rich food. And laughter. A positive urge to spend seizes on everyone, so that people who have taken pleasure in saving up the whole year, now think it's a good idea to squander. The streets are full of people and coaches, staggering under the load of gifts. Children are free of the dread of their teachers, and for slaves the festival is as good as a holiday. Another good thing about it – it teaches people not to be too fond of money, but to let it circulate from hand to hand.'

Libanius was an early opponent of Christianity who nevertheless had Christians among his pupils, one of them St John Chrysostom. He is here describing pagan festivities in general, though he seems to have had the Saturnalia particularly in mind. The corresponding Greek festival, the Kronia, was celebrated at harvest time, but the Greeks had winter festivals, including the rustic Dionysia, held in December, and celebrated in villages with a burlesque procession; the Lenaea, or feast of the wine vats, celebrated in January with a procession, sacrifice and competing plays; and the Anthesteria, held during three days about the time that we call February, when the casks were opened and the new wine was tasted.

All the winter festivals were connected in some way with Dionysus, the god of wine (see DIONYSUS), and the Greeks in fact divided the cult-year into two halves, the Dionysiac and the Apollonian, corresponding to winter and summer. A similar division was made by the ancient Hindus, for whom winter was the time for ancestor worship and summer for the gods of Nature. In other parts of the world, too, winter is the time for appeasing the spirits of the dead. On the third day of the Anthesteria, the celebrations were held within the family circle, with rites in appeasement of ancestors. This festival came at the end of winter in Greece – indeed, it was to celebrate the end of winter marked by the appearance of the year's first flowers – but in northern Europe the cult of the dead was celebrated either in autumn, as among the Saxons, or in early or midwinter, as among the Scandinavians and Celts. In these pre-Christian festivals, bonfires were lighted to represent the waning and waxing sun. The rites were absorbed into Christianity in the guise of All Saints' day on 1 November and All Souls' on 2 November. Winter festivals in commemoration of the dead were also celebrated in China until comparatively recent times.

The Last Winter

Connected perhaps with the cult of dead souls, but also with the general harshness of winter, is the widespread notion that the world will come to an end in the middle of a terrible winter. This is the fimbul-vetr of the Icelandic sagas. In one of these poems, Odin, the god of the dead (see ODIN), asks the wise giant Vafthrudnir which of mankind will survive the mighty winter, and is told Lif and Lifthrasir, hidden in Hoddmimir's wood. In a prose saga of the 13th century, it is prophesied that winter will precede the great Doom (see SCANDINAVIA). Snow will drive from all quarters, with sharp frost and cruel wind. The sun will have no power. Three such winters will follow in succession, without an intervening summer. There will be fighting all over the earth, with brother slaying brother.

In Iranian mythology, the rain of Malkosh devastates the earth, and snow and ice cause most of mankind to die of cold and famine. The only men and animals saved from this destructive winter are those who are herded together by one of the gods in a great enclosure. There is a related idea in St Mark's gospel (13.18), when Christ, in prophesying the misery and destruction

Musée Condé, Chantilly/Giraudon

There is a widespread notion that the world will come to an end in the middle of a terrible winter which will precede the Second Coming, urges his disciples to 'pray that it may not happen in winter'. Other verses in the same chapter may have inspired the passage in the Eddic saga about brother slaying brother, but whether the Iranian myth shows Christian influence, or whether even older notions connecting the end of the world with winter underlie both the myth and the gospel prophecy, is impossible to determine.

The Sleep of God

In astronomical terms, winter begins at the solstice on 21 or 22 December, and ends at the vernal equinox, on 20 March, but in northern latitudes winter begins, in popular estimation, much earlier. In many villages in the Upper Styria region of Austria, it was the custom to 'ring in' the winter as early as 24 August, the purpose of the ceremony being to frighten away the malevolent spirits of winter by making a loud noise. According to a saying current at one time in Aachen, Charlemagne goes to his winter quarters on St Giles's day (1 September) and leaves them on Ascension Day, a reference to the army of ghosts stationed in a magic mountain that Charlemagne still commands. In other parts of northern Europe, winter begins on 28 October, 1 November, or 11 November – St Martin's day, the saint riding on a white horse as the harbinger of snow. Colder weather is supposed to set in on St Catherine's day (25 November), but in a warm year when winter is late, St Andrew's day (30 November) finally marks the real onset of winter.

The day most commonly taken as mid-winter is that of the conversion of St Paul (25 January). In more southerly climates, January and February are regarded as the true winter months. But it is curious that

Mansell Collection

Mansell Collection

Left Illustration depicting the month of February, from the Très Riches Heures; probably as a result of the general harshness of the season, there is a widespread belief that the world will come to an end in the middle of a terrible winter Above right Christmas mummers and (right) the 'Wassail Bowl'; winter has always been a time for feasting and celebration, when the hostility of the elements made men conscious of their essential brotherhood; these traditional Christmas scenes reflect the pagan elements that are still an essential part of the Christian festival

Victoria & Albert Museum

In myth and folklore winter may be personified as a storm god or in the form of frost, ice or snow spirits Left Probably because of its beautiful, sparkling quality, frost seems to have stimulated man's myth-making faculty more than either snow or ice: Jack Frost, illustration by Arthur Rackham Far right Ice is the original stuff out of which the world is made in the myths of some Northern peoples: Ice Fairy, statuette by J. Causse the Greek and Latin words for 'winter' (kheimon, hiems) are related to words in prehistoric languages meaning 'snow': the name Himalaya is cognate. In northern European languages, on the other hand, the words denoting winter are cognate with words meaning 'water' and 'wet'. The Greeks probably brought their word with them when they migrated in prehistoric times into their present country. In literature, at any rate, one can find as many references to rain as to snow and ice: 'The winter is past, the rain is over', says the Song of Solomon (2.11), words which Chaucer echoes: 'The winter is goon, with alle his reynes wete.'

In myth and folktale, winter is personified, either in himself, as a storm god (Kari in Nordic legend), or through frost, ice and snow spirits of one kind or another. There are traces in prehistoric myths of a single god or goddess wielding power over both winter and summer. The Asiatic Nature goddess known to the Greeks as Kubele (see CYBELE) held the keys of the earth, which she opened in summer and shut in winter. The Teutonic lunar goddess Holda (the Frau Holle or White Woman of German folklore) holds summer captive in her underworld kingdom during winter. When she shakes her bedclothes, it snows.

The idea that Nature is asleep in winter is an ancient one, and the Phrygians believed that the Deity himself was asleep in winter. In primitive belief, winter and death are often equated, a notion strikingly summed up in an oracle quoted by a Latin author about the time of the birth of Christ: 'The highest God is called Hades in winter.' Here again, there is a link with the winter cults of the dead already mentioned, and with ghosts, which are especially active in winter. In Nordic myths, winter is the time of the wanderings of Odin, or Wotan, the god of the dead.

The belief that dead ancestors are present in winter explains the practice of the Kwakiutl Indians of British Columbia who change their names at the beginning of winter, when the ghosts arrive, and adopt the names of their ancestors. They also form secret societies in winter, in place of their ordinary summer family life. The practice of exorcizing evil and evil spirits at either the beginning or end of winter is widespread among primitive peoples.

Probably owing to its beautiful, sparkling quality, frost seems to have stimulated the myth-making faculty of man more than either snow or ice. Jack Frost is our own personification of frost, and he seems quite a friendly figure compared with the evil frost giants of the Eddic sagas. These giants, the Hrimthursar, represent snow and ice as well as frost, and were descended from the giant Ymir, who was himself created out of ice. They had been driven out of their ancestral home by Odin and his band of Aesir, and dwelt in Utgard, the outlying world.

Porridge for the Frost Man

Frost is personified in Finnish magic songs, and Frost man appears as the brother of Mist man in a charming Japanese legend. But the frost spirits were taken most seriously by the Finnish tribes of Russia and Siberia, the Votiaks, the Cheremiss, the Mordvins and the Ostiaks. There was a 'Frost woman' as well as a 'Frost man' to whom sacrifices were made. It was the custom among the Mordvins (who live in the district lying between Nizhni Novgorod and Saratov, and who in Byzantine times scored many victories over the Russians) to place porridge for the 'Frost man' in the smoke outlet of their huts on the Thursday before Easter, in order to protect the spring sowings, for although the Mordvins had accepted baptism, they still clung to their ancient mythology and to many pagan beliefs and practices. The Lapps also paid great respect to the 'Frost man', who was more like a god than a man, as he was believed to govern the weather, the snow and the ice, and sacrifices were offered to him so that 'the ice should not harm the reindeer and that the blizzard should cease'.

In central Europe, ice in winter was connected with good crops the following year

But frost is not the monopoly of the northern hemisphere. A tribe of Australian aborigines have the following myth about the origin of frost. The seven Pleiades (called by them the Meamei) once lived on earth as seven sisters, whose bodies sparkled with beautiful icicles. Several brothers followed the girls about and tried to seduce them with gifts, but without success. A man stole two of the girls, but could not manage to thaw off the icicles. These two girls flew up to the sky, where they found their five sisters already waiting. Once every year, the sisters break off ice from themselves and throw it down to earth. Then members of this Australian tribe say, 'The Meamei have not forgotten us.'

Snow Maiden

In the mythology of sub-arctic peoples, ice is the original stuff out of which the world is made. Ymir the ice giant has been mentioned already. He is one of many such giants, the personification, perhaps, of icebergs. In the Eddas, the god Buri, grandfather of Odin, was licked into life from a block of ice by the magic cow Audhumla. A legend of the ice sea was recounted even in the western mountains of Czechoslovakia, which told of twelve ice giants, enemies of the sun. It is these giants, says the legend, that cause eclipses of the sun. The ice wolf, who threatens both sun and moon with his baying, lives with these giants on an island in the ice sea.

In central Europe, ice in winter was connected with good crops the following year, if it came in the period between Christmas and Twelfth Night. Smooth ice in March was taken as a sign that fruit would be plentiful in some places, while elsewhere it was taken to mean the opposite. Long icicles indicated that the flax would grow long in the following year, and again, their appearance in the days following Christmas was especially important. Sometimes the appearance and the time of formation of icicles was taken as a guide as to the best time to sow. If icicles were forked, the flax would also be forked.

Snow is personified in the myths and folktales of many peoples. In Japanese lore, Yuki-onne, the snow woman, is a young woman with a ghastly white complexion, with a slim figure, and a gentle and alluring manner. She appears to any wayfarer caught in a snowstorm and exhausted in the struggle. She soothes him and lulls him to sleep, until he loses consciousness and dies. Sometimes, it is said, she incarnates herself as a beautiful woman and marries a mortal, but she kills her unlucky husband.

Other people picture snow, in personified form, as a man. In Nordic mythology, Snow is an aged king of cold Finland, with the name Snaer, 'the old man'. His father is Iceberg or Frost, and his three daughters are Thick Snow, Snowstorm and Fine Snow. Snaer is 300 years old, and when people wish one another a long life, they say, 'May you live as long as Snaer.'

Snow is not always personified as a powerful or fearful figure. A Russian folk song tells of an elderly childless couple who made a snow doll in their garden, which a passing stranger blessed, whereupon it became a living child. The blue-eyed, golden-haired little girl was very precocious – she was like a child of 14 by the time winter had passed. As the snow melted from the fields in spring, little Snow child avoided the sun, in which she wilted, and sought out the shade of the willow trees. Most of all, she liked heavy showers, and if there was a hailstorm she was as gay as if she had found a treasure trove. But on St John the Baptist's day (24 June) her friends took her on an outing. They were careful to keep her in the shade of the forest, but when night came, they lit a bonfire and leapt back and forth across it. Suddenly they heard a dreadful noise behind them. They could see nothing when they turned to look, but Snow child had disappeared, and though they looked for her for several days, combing the forest tree by tree, they could find no trace of their little pale companion. The old couple were inconsolable, and imagined that a cruel beast had carried Snow child off. But, says the song, it was not a beast. When Snow child followed her friends over the glowing embers, she turned into fine vapour, and rose as a cloudlet to heaven.

It would be possible to read a symbolic meaning into this apparently very simple story. The Snow child, sweet and innocent

Private Collection Hamlyn Group Library

Erich Lessing/Magnum

A feature of Greek and Roman winter festivals, the custom of giving gifts has been perpetuated in the Christian counterpart of these celebrations; according to legend, the Three Magi brought gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh to the infant Jesus. Village schoolchildren dressed as the Magi walk through a snow laden forest in Austria to announce the birth of Christ to people living on nearby farms as she is, represents the cruel winter, but for all the care she takes to avoid the sun, she is vanquished in the end. It is interesting that it is not the sun itself which melts her, but the bonfire which in pagan times was lit to celebrate the sun god at the height of his power, about the time of the summer solstice. With the triumph of Christianity, these pagan rites were transferred to the celebration of St John the Baptist (see also WHEEL), and in this Russian tale there may also be a barely conscious reference to the triumph of the Son over the powers of darkness, symbolized by the wintry phenomenon of snow.

(See also ALL HALLOWS' EVE; CHRISTMAS; NEW YEAR.)

DAVID PHILLIPS

Wisdom Literature

General term for writings of the ancient East concerned with practical rules of conduct or with philosophical wisdom; including the books of Job, Proverbs and Ecclesiastes in the Old Testament, and the Wisdom of Solomon and Ecclesiasticus in the Apocrypha; in Proverbs, chapters 1 to 9, Wisdom is a personified female aspect of God.

Wish

Among numerous traditional occasions for making a wish which will come true are on seeing a chimney-sweep, a white horse, a loaded hay-wain coming towards you, or a horseshoe in the road, provided you spit; when putting on new clothes for the first time; on seeing a hare or the first star of evening; or on seeing the new moon, provided you turn your apron back to front.

Wish-Bone

Or merrythought, the forked bone between a fowl's neck and breast; two people grip the bone and pull, while wishing, and the wish of the one who breaks off the larger piece will come true, provided he does not speak or laugh while the contest is going on, or reveal his wish.

Wishing-Well

A well at which you formulate an unspoken wish, dropping a coin, a pin or perhaps a pebble into the well as an offering; the belief that the wish will come true is part of the old lore of wells as the dwelling-places of powerful spirits.

See SPRINGS AND WELLS.

Although the epidemic character and the religious entanglement of European witch-beliefs make them different from the beliefs anthropologists have discovered among existing nonliterate tribes, there are still many points of parallel

WITCHCRAFT

IN MOST ENGLISH dictionaries 'witchcraft' and 'sorcery' are roughly synonymous. In anthropological usage they have acquired distinct meanings because an African tribe, the Azande (see AZANDE), are more precise in their categories of the supernatural than we are; and E. E. Evans-Pritchard, the anthropologist who studied them and wrote what has become a classic on the ethnography of witchcraft and similar belief systems, found the existence in English of these two words a useful means of translating the Zande distinction.

Witchcraft and sorcery are words referring to systems of belief centred on the idea that certain human beings in a community may harm their fellow men by supernatural means. According to the Zande usage now adopted by most of the anthropological profession, both witches and sorcerers are believed illegitimately to kill others or make them ill, to cause them to fall victim to accident or other misfortune, or to destroy their property. 'Both alike are enemies of men,' as Evans-Pritchard puts it.

They differ, however, in method and motivation. The techniques of the witch are 'more supernatural' than those of the sorcerer in that they are beyond the comprehension of ordinary folk, whereas those of the sorcerer are acts of destructive magic that are well known and reasonably accessible to most adult members of the community. As to motive, witches are believed to be slaves of aberration and addiction; thus considered, they are weird, sometimes tragic characters. Sorcerers, on the other hand, are considered to be ordinary people driven by understandable, if disapproved, urges such as malice, envy or revenge, which are part of everyone's experience.

Powers and Spells

The propensity to be a witch is usually attributed to heredity or at least is considered constitutional, in the sense of having been implanted at an early age through mother's milk or, as among the Cewa of Central Africa, through a child's having been magically inoculated by a senior relative against the dermatitis believed to result from eating human flesh, an activity attributed to Cewa witches. Sorcery, on the other hand, usually demands no special personal attributes and is believed to be practised by anyone who can acquire the necessary magical substances (in Africa) or spells (in Oceania).

Most anthropologists see the advantage of agreement on the meanings of these terms as outlined; but there are some, particularly those writing on Oceania, who treat the term 'sorcery' as socially or morally neutral, using it for all forms of destructive magic regardless of whether it is socially approved – as it may be in property protection for instance – or considered illicit. Similarly, and this applies to historical studies of European witchcraft, the term 'witch' does not invariably have a sinister or evil connotation, especially if it is qualified by the adjective 'white', in which case it may be used in reference to those who cure people rather than kill them, or who help to find lost possessions rather than destroy them (see WHITE MAGIC). However, in most societies, more often than not, witches, like sorcerers, are believed to be agents of evil and misfortune.

The self-styled witches of modern society usually emphasize that they are not involved in any such antisocial practices as black magic or the casting of malevolent spells. This makes doubtful their inclusion in the anthropologist's definition of either sorcerer or witch. Their continued existence is as much a tribute to the inventive genius of Margaret Murray or of Gerald Gardner as it is to the strength of any continuing tradition (see MODERN WITCHCRAFT).

COMPENDII
MALEFICARVM
LIBER SECVNDVS.

In quo agitur de diuerſis generibus Maleficiorum, & de quibuſdam alijs ſcitu dignis.

De Maleficio Somnifico. Cap. I.

Doctrina !

Conſueuere Sagæ, & Malefici, alios potione, malo carmine, & certis ritibus ſoporare, vt interea illis venenum infundant, vel infantulos rapiant, aut necent, vel furto quid ſubtrahant, vel ſtupro, adulterioue contaminent, & hoc fieri poteſt naturalibus venenis ſoporiferis, vt erit videre per exempla. Et he non ſunt fabulæ, quia ſi multa ſunt, quæ naturaliter, vel infuſa, vel admota, non ſomnium aut ſoporem tantùm, ſed etiam ſtupo-

rem

Symptoms of social strain, the witch-beliefs of 16th- and 17th-century Europe reflected a period of profound change, and became intertwined with the religious, economic and political conflicts that arose during the emergence of modern European society from feudalism; an early mistaken identification of witches and heretics resulted in the belief that witches are the earthly representatives of the Devil: title page of Compendium Maleficarum, a late 15th-century treatise on witchcraft

Colorific!

The Universal Witch

Beliefs in witchcraft (which from this point will be used in a generic sense to include sorcery) have been so widely observed that it has been suggested that the more important elements were probably common to Paleolithic man and spread with him to most of the presently inhabited parts of the world. There are certainly close resemblances between the beliefs in witchcraft revealed by the studies of modern anthropologists and those shown, by historical and literary sources, to have been characteristic of classical and medieval Europe. As Philip Mayer remarks, 'Shakespeare, writing in 17th-century England about mediaeval Scottish witches, makes them recite a list of creatures that would be just as appropriate to witches in primitive Africa. Or again: the Pueblo Indians in Mexico say that witches go round at night carrying lights that alternately flare up and die down; exactly the same thing was said to me in Western Kenya by the Bantu tribe among whom I worked.' One might add that these widely dispersed elements would also have been familiar to Lucius Apuleius, author of The Golden Ass, a useful source for witch-beliefs in classical times.

Many of the works on European witchcraft, dealing with the early modern period, are concerned with a phenomenon very different from the witch-beliefs of surviving primitive societies or those of classical or medieval Europe. In the Dark Age, as Trevor-Roper puts it, 'there were witch beliefs, of course – a scattered folklore of peasant superstitions, the casting of spells, the making of storms, converse with spirits, sympathetic magic... but on the whole the mediaeval Church succeeded in containing them.' But the 16th and 17th centuries saw so great an upsurge in Europeans' preoccupation with witch-beliefs, with the craze encouraged 'by the cultivated Popes of the Renaissance, by the great Protestant Reformers, by the saints of the Counter-Reformation, by the scholars, lawyers and churchmen of an enlightened age', that Trevor-Roper is led to summarize: 'If these two centuries were the age of light, we have to admit that, in one respect at least, the Dark Age was more civilized.'

Eric Cross

Servants of Satan

This means that the witch-beliefs of primitive peoples and those of early modern Europeans are in many ways not comparable. The first represent a chronic state, active but kept unremarkable by a society's normal mechanisms of tension management. The second reflect times of profound change when witch-beliefs, as sensitive symptoms of social strain, became intermingled with the religious, political and economic conflicts that punctuated the very rapid emergence of modern European society from feudalism.

For this reason the events relating to witchcraft in early modern Europe might more appropriately be compared with the cult movements which, since the second half of the 19th century, have been reported from virtually every part of the world where native peoples have had to adjust themselves suddenly to the advent of Western ways of life. Just as the cargo cults of Melanesia, the ghost dance and peyote movements of North America and the anti-witchcraft crazes of Central Africa represent, as Worsley has put it, 'desperate searchings for more and more effective ways of understanding and modifying' a confused environment, so may the witch scares of Europe and of Old and New England have played a similar role in blasting away the creaking and groaning remnants of an outdated social structure (see CARGO CULTS; GHOST DANCE; PEYOTE CULTS).

The most important respect in which the epidemic character of European witch beliefs made them differ from those of non-literate societies was the fact that they were taken up in the conflicts of the late medieval Church, the Reformation and the Counter-Reformation. An early mistaken identification of witches with heretics had the effect of marshalling a pre-Christian moral indignation against those who failed to conform with official Christianity. This fact probably prompted Margaret Murray's now discredited theory that European witches were the lingering adherents of a pagan religion. However, it also accounts for the fact that, whereas in all societies witches personify evil, in the society of early modern Europe they did this in a very specific way, being regarded as the earthly representatives of the Prince of Evil. In the course of time the chief criterion for identifying a witch in Europe or New England came to be whether he or she had made a compact with the Devil. Evidence of such a compact included the presence of a 'Devil's mark' on his or her body (see PACT; PRICKING).

Witches were often accused of appearing in spectral form to tempt and torment their believed victims. In the Salem trials in New England in 1692, the screaming teenage girls, who were the main witnesses for the prosecution, regularly claimed to see – in the very courtroom – the spectres of the accused (see SALEM WITCHES). The idea that the Devil could not use the spectral counterparts of people without their connivance was an important principle in establishing the guilt of the accused. It was sufficient for an accuser to state that he had seen the accused witch's spectre; and it was only when theological opinion questioned this principle that the rate of conviction by the courts declined.

The Hoot of an Owl

Although the epidemic character and the religious entanglement of European witch-beliefs make them different from the beliefs anthropologists have discovered among existing non-literate tribes, there are still many points of parallel. The ethnography of witchcraft, the systematic description of this complex of beliefs in relation to the total way of life of the people or the period, has shown many similarities between societies separated in space and time.

Wherever beliefs in them are found, witches are conceived as having supernatural powers, antisocial tendencies and disgusting practices. They are believed to travel around at night by flying through the air on broomsticks (in Europe) or in saucer-shaped winnowing baskets (in Central Africa), or to move over the ground by riding on the backs of animal familiars such as baboons (in southern Africa). The range of animals and insects they are believed to induce to run their evil errands for them is wide, and includes dogs and cats in Europe and hyenas, owls, nightjars and red ants in Africa. In the Cewa language an owl's hoot is heard, not as a meaningless inanity such as 'To wit-to woo!', but as a clear and sinister Muphe! Muphe! Nimkukute! (Kill him! Kill him! That I may munch him!), and this inevitably links this weird bird with the necrophagous sorcerers who, the Cewa believe, bring them a large share of their misfortunes, such as illness, death and accident. Witches are usually credited with extra-sensory powers approaching omniscience, knowing by a sixth sense where a death has occurred and consequently where the next ghoulish feast will be held.

European beliefs reflect the medieval concern over sins of the flesh; for witches appeared to men as voluptuous succubi and to women as seducing incubi (see INCUBUS). A somewhat similar treatment of illicit sexual relationships occurs in the beliefs of the Pondo of south-eastern Africa: their beliefs seem to be related to the fact that custom excludes large categories of individuals living in the same neighbourhood from marrying or flirting with one another. The less sex-ridden but more food-conscious Nyakyusa of south-western Tanzania, on the other hand, consider witches as being motivated by greed rather than by lust.

British Museum

Some of the witchcraft beliefs found in classical and medieval Europe still exist today Facing page The custom of using a doll to kill or injure the person it represents was known in Greece and Rome, and is still widespread Above right A doll in a coffin, found in the 1960s by firemen in a house in London to which they were called Above left The figure of a naked woman, and a sheep's heart, both pierced by slivers of hawthorn, found at a castle in Norfolk in 1964 Left In primitive rituals curses are directed at an effigy of the intended victim Right A witch with her familiars: animals and insects associated with witches include hyenas, owls and red ants in Africa, as well as the creatures that are generally associated with European witchcraft

From one society to another, ideas vary regarding the relationships between witches and their familiars, whether these be spirits, mythical creatures or animals. Among the south-eastern Bantu-speaking tribes of Africa, including the Pondo, witches are believed to have sexual relationships with their familiars, particularly with a dwarf-like creature called tokoloshe or tikoloshe. Although familiars are usually regarded as the servants or the messengers of witches, they are sometimes believed to urge their masters and mistresses on, giving their aberrant addiction a more feasible, comprehensible and somewhat tragic character.

Even where no sexual relationship is postulated between witch and familiar, some kind of mystical link may be claimed. It was said of a reputed sorcerer among the Cewa that, when he had imbibed heavily, drunken hyenas were to be found in his house and that, when he died, his hyena-familiars died with him.

Attributed with special powers, witches are believed to be particularly difficult to bring to terms. Eternal vigilance and protective medicines have to be employed while they are at large and, once they have been caught, special methods of killing them have to be followed, such as burning them alive or driving stakes, pegs or nails into various parts of their bodies. Such practices, of widespread occurrence, are probably related to the belief that witches have special spirit helpers or that they possess elusive souls, though not all those who follow these procedures are explicit about their reasons for carrying them out.

Supernatural Terrorists

Owing to their supposed deviant and often revolting practices, witches are everywhere looked upon as beyond the pale of decent living. They provide moralists with shorthand concrete descriptions of evil and parents with effective bogymen. To accuse anyone of witchcraft is a condensed way of charging him with a long list of the foullest crimes, and this action throws into sharper relief the moral precepts of the society to which he belongs.

The fact that the witch is used to make children more circumspect about their conduct is no doubt related to the tendency in many societies for beliefs in witchcraft to provide plausible points of backward reference in the explanation of misfortune. If someone falls ill or has an accident, both he and his fellow men can usually find some incident in his prior social interaction which will explain why someone had reason to have a grudge against him and why he should now be the victim of witchcraft. He may have quarrelled with someone of dubious reputation, or he may have failed to discharge an obligation towards someone who, though in a superior moral position, is now believed to have resorted to an immoral form of retribution.

This leads to the paradox that, though witches provide mainly negative instances of conduct, they may also play positive moral roles in being the points of retrospective projection for the 'victim's' feelings of guilt resulting from acts of foolishness and meanness. This moral import of beliefs in witchcraft can be illustrated from all those societies, contemporary and historical, on which data on such beliefs exist, and this represents an important convergence of the findings of historians and anthropologists. Witches are unmitigated supernatural terrorists in all societies in which beliefs in them occur; and sufferers of misfortune find in the witches' supposed actions the means of expressing their feelings of guilt.

Another anthropological finding has been more difficult to substantiate from historical materials. It has been found that, in contemporary non-literate societies, accusations of witchcraft and believed instances of attack by witches occur typically between persons whom the social structure throws into uncontrolled competition and tension, for instance rivals in love or in politics. Accusations, which represent crises in the relationship between the alleged witch and the accuser, may thus be regarded as 'social strain-gauges', indicating where the tensions and role conflicts in the social structure lie. Believed instances of attack, involving the relationship between alleged witch and believed victim, have a similar significance but, since all witchcraft and most sorcery exist in the uneasy minds of their believed victims, they are on a different plane of reality and illuminate the society's own model of strained social relationships rather than the anthropologist's.

These two models often differ from one another and either may differ from the accepted picture. For instance, people in most societies where beliefs in witchcraft exist usually claim that witches are almost invariably women; yet, if the anthropologist keeps a tally of actual instances of accusation or of believed attack, he is likely to discover that men, who are generally more socially involved and more in competition for positions of leadership, form a much higher proportion of those accused or suspected than informants' general statements would suggest. In our society, statements about women drivers are a parallel case.

Until recently the nature of the historical materials made it difficult to apply the 'social strain-gauge' hypothesis to European data. The historical sources that have been analysed have often not revealed enough specific information about the relationships between the important triad of accuser, accused witch and believed victim; nor have they always thrown light on the nature of the issues between them. However, with Macfarlane's recent meticulous combination of the latest techniques of English local history and the theoretical orientations of social anthropology in his study of witchcraft in Essex between 1560 and 1680, an ever closer convergence in this field is promised.

In any society that uses witchcraft as a regular explanatory principle, two features may be expected to be prominent. Firstly, there will be practices such as consulting diviners and oracles, and submitting suspects to ordeals (see FINDING OF WITCHES). Secondly, prevailing thought processes will be closed, in the sense that misfortunes, witch-beliefs and the techniques of witchfinding form a circular sequence in which each case of misfortune that is attributed to witchcraft reinforces the belief in witchcraft and renders a sceptical escape from the sequence unlikely.

As yet we have no satisfactory explanation of how some societies, including our own, have broken from this closed circle and abandoned beliefs in witchcraft. Part of the answer seems to lie in the larger scale of modern societies with their related tendency to specialization, not only in economic processes, but also in human relationships, with some of the latter personal and others impersonal. Instead of having everyone in the community breathing intimately down our necks, we manage in our modern way of life to escape, even if momentarily, the prison of personal relationships, with their high potential for influence and control of our conduct, for love and hate, and, in general, for the ingredients of those delusions which in the right social setting become standardized and infuse the world with fellow humans wielding supernatural power. It is significant that, in most reports of accusations and believed instances of witchcraft, the main characters, like most of those involved in crimes of violence in even our impersonal society, have been intimately acquainted with one another.

An Open Society

Though modern people may have given up the more specific beliefs in witchcraft, they have retained many of its associated tendencies. They have not yet completely escaped from the charmed circle of taboos and magical beings that confines primitive peoples, and moved into an open society in which they have no qualms about adjusting their social institutions in the light of rational analysis. Some 20th-century movements have many of the characteristics of a 16th-century European or a contemporary primitive witch-scare. An accusation of political deviance may, like an accusation of witchcraft, prove an infallible means of destroying a reputation or a career. Arthur Miller's play The Crucible, which attacked Joseph McCarthy's anti-Communist cult in the idiom of 17th-century Salem, brought out this parallel with brilliant insight.

(See also FAMILIARS; OLD AGE; SORCERY; and articles on European Witchcraft.)

M.G.MARWICK

FURTHER READING: Apuleius, The Golden Ass (Indiana Univ. Press, 1962); J. C. Baroja, The World of Witches (Univ. of Chicago Press, 1965); C. Larner, Witchcraft and Religion (Basil Blackwell, 1984); A. D. J. Macfarlane, Witchcraft in Tudor and Stuart England (Harper & Row, 1970); M. G. Marwick, Sorcery in its Social Setting: a Study of the Northern Rhodesian Cewa (Humanities, 1965); R. H. Robbins, Witchcraft (Kraus Intl., 1978); John Middleton and E. H. Winter ed, Witchcraft and Sorcery in East Africa (Praeger, 1963); H. R. Trevor-Roper, Crisis of the Seventeenth Century: Religion, the Reformation and Social Change (Harper and Row, 1967) and The European Witch Craze (Harper & Row, 1969).

VOLF

EW EUROPEAN MAMMALS equal or surpass he wolf in the richness of its folklore, hough in the British Isles wolf lore is much cantier than on the Continent, where in ome mountainous forested regions the nimals are still to be found. By the mid-3th century there can have been few olves left in England but not until the 8th were the last wolves killed in Ireland nd Scotland.

Much European wolf lore is pervaded by fearsome awe, less apparent in North merican wolf traditions. But although ear of wolves is a natural human reaction, he friendly wolf appears fairly frequently n myths and legends, indicating that the nimal awakens ambivalent responses. The Rig-Veda tells of Rijrasva, whom his ather blinded because with misplaced enerosity he gave 101 sheep to a bitch olf: the wolf prayed for her benefactor, to he Asvins, benevolent deities, and they estored his sight. On the other hand, ccording to ancient Iranian doctrines the olf was created by the evil spirit Ahriman see AHRIMAN). A similar belief is still urrent among the Voguls of Siberia.

The associations of Greek gods and oddesses with wolves hint at older tradi-ons beneath the mythology of the anthro-omorphic divinities. It was said that the riest of Zeus could take the form of a wolf. Iecate could also take wolf shape (see IECATE). Leto, the mother of Apollo and rtemis, appeared as a she-wolf and a olf was emblazoned on the shield of rtemis, the huntress. Apollo (see APOLLO) as said to have expelled wolves from thens and any citizen who killed one had bury it by public subscription. Sophocles alled Apollo 'the wolf-slayer', yet a number f myths describe how his children by mortal irls were fostered by wolves. This motif of hildren tended by a she-wolf reappears in he story of Romulus and Remus (see OUNDING OF ROME) and in later legends. Despite this myth of the kindly wolf the Romans associated the animal with Mars, he god of war.

In Scandinavian mythology the Fenris olf is one of the three children of Loki, he others being the Midgard serpent and Iel (Death). Fenris, whose jaws stretched rom heaven to earth, created much trouble mong the gods until they managed to bind im with a magic cord. However, as the epresentative of Fate he bides his time, ntil at the end of the world he swallows up he sun (see SCANDINAVIA).

Victoria and Albert Museum/Mark Gerson

National Gallery

The friendly wolf appears fairly frequently in myths and legends, indicating that the animal awakens ambivalent responses' Above right Kipling draws on legends of human children reared by wolves, in his stories about an Indian boy who becomes a member of a wolf pack: Illustration to the Jungle Book by Rudyard Kipling Right A famous legend tells how St Francis of Assisi tamed the ferocious wolf of Gubbio: a painting by Sassetta shows the saint arbitrating between the citizens of Gubbio and the wolf

Hier biótra Hd R Fenris:
Úlpiñ: Týr misser Sýna adra-Hönd: eñ þr Aristera Úlfiñ til ha-gna Rockurs: sofm XXIX Eddu Dæmisaga Útvísar.

he wolf was feared as an uncanny and evil eature, and credited with preternatural unning Left in Scandinavian legend the Fenris olf is a force of terror and destruction, brother death and the World Serpent: the god Tyr acrifices his hand in order to bind the Fenris Volf, in an illustration from an Edda MS ight The wolf seizes Little Red Riding Hood, fter tricking her into climbing into bed with im: illustration from a 19th century children's ook

Victoria & Albert Museum/Mark Gerson

The wolf has innumerable associations ith the Devil, especially in Germany. ccording to one saying the Devil squats etween the beast's eyes, according to nother he appears as a black wolf. A legend lates that the Devil made the wolf out of ixed constituents – his head from a ump of wood, his heart from stone, his reast from roots, and so forth. The Devil the witches sometimes took wolf shape. he cross drives away all such diabolical pine apparitions, and although great rocity is attributed to the animal it is said have been cowardly ever since Christ ruck it with his staff.

Because wolves were seen on battlefields eding on corpses, the animals were transrmed by imagination into sinister superatural creatures. They were thought of as rpse demons, connected with Odin (see DIN) and the fierce Norns or Fates. In ormandy horrible spirits disguised as olves were said to haunt cemeteries in rder to devour corpses. In Finland it was id that unbaptized children wandered round in the shape of wolves.

n Sheep's Clothing

Volves have ancient associations with itchcraft. The Latin term of opprobrium pula (little wolf) signifies 'witch'. Thessaan witches were said to howl like wolves nd to use portions of the animals in their harms, as Shakespeare recalled when he ncluded a wolf's tooth in the witches' brew n Macbeth. On the Continent gypsies ould say on hearing a wolf howling, 'Take are, it may be a witch.' In Germany witches ere said to ride wolves and in Lorraine he 'witch-master' turned into a wolf to o to the witches' sabbath. It was also hought that witches could transform themelves and other people into wolves. A priest ho was turned into a wolf remained dentifiable by his white collar. In the 17th entury men and women were hanged for avages believed to have been committed by hem as wolves, although a century earlier Reginald Scot in his Discoverie of Witchraft had ridiculed such ideas. The Navaho nd other American Indians believe that a an disguised as a wolf goes around ractising witchcraft.

The New Testament reference to false rophets as wolves dressed up in sheep's lothing (Matthew 7.15) embodies the elief that wolves are crafty as well as malious, and the allusion served to perpetuate hese ideas. In a beast fable the crafty wolf ings Psalm 23, the Shepherd Psalm.

On the principle that evil combats evil nd what frightens a man also terrifies evil pirits, parts of wolves were used to scare such beings. A pierced wolf's tooth was sometimes worn as a protective charm, and a tooth placed under a pillow was thought to enable the dreamer to identify a robber. In Spain and Sicily a scrap of the animal's skin was believed to avert the Evil Eye, and in some localities was even thought to be effective in keeping flies out of the house. A wolf's hair placed in the rafters was a protection against fire and a wolf-bite made a person immune to witchcraft. According to an ancient tradition if a man came on a wolf and the wolf saw him first he would be struck dumb.

So prominent a place in the imagination of the people was occupied by the wolf that it entered into expressions describing the time of day and the weather. In France dusk is commonly described poetically as 'between the dog and the wolf' – the one being thought of as a creature of the day, the other as nocturnal. Elsewhere, when the wind whistles, 'the wolf sharpens his teeth', and a strong, destructive wind is 'the wolf'. If the sun shines when it is raining, it is 'the wolves' wedding'. Around Düsseldorf, when the sky is filled with woolly clouds they say, 'today little sheep, tomorrow wolves'.

The Wolf of Gubbio

The tradition of the kindly wolf appears in a number of Christian legends. Sculptures in some churches illustrate the benevolent beast which kept guard over the head of the martyred St Edmund. Probably the best known of such legends is the story of St Francis of Assisi and the wolf of Gubbio. The animal was so fierce that the citizens were afraid to venture forth from the little town. The saint reproved him and, bowing his head, he indicated that he would abandon his evil ways. He accompanied St Francis into Gubbio and henceforth lived amicably among the citizens. This legend is a version of a much older story. Friendships developed between Irish saints and wolves. St Maedoc provided a feast for a pack, while the blind St Hervé was led around by a wolf. In other tales we hear of a wolf killing an animal drawing a plough or waggon and being compelled by a saint to take the place of the dead beast. Thus the wolf legends in which saints are involved embody the ambivalence characteristic of much wolf folklore. The fierceness and the friendliness of the animal both tend to be exaggerated.

From the Babylonian Epic of Gilgamesh to medieval tales of wolves invading monasteries and devouring heretical monks, the wolf has been represented as much more dangerous to man than it is. It was, and still is, a menace to domestic animals, but there are hardly any authenticated accounts of a wolf attacking an able-bodied man. It is possible that during times of famine in the Middle Ages wolves broke into flimsy dwellings and seized children or invalids, but stories of packs pursuing travellers on sledges in Russian forests do not deserve credence. They are the inventions of myth-makers in comparatively recent times.

(See also WEREWOLF.)

E. A. ARMSTRONG

Keystone

Keystone

WOMAN

'Through women doth the Enemy lay siege to mortal men': the myth of the evil nature and inferiority of woman has grown out of social conditions, which in turn it has powerfully influenced

GODDESS, VICTIM, idol, plaything, mother, virgin, harlot, ministering angel, slut, enchantress, hag, 'better half' or 'weaker vessel' – woman plays all these roles in supernatural contexts, partly in reflection of man's frequently professed inability to understand her. Women, in male eyes, are supposed to be contrary and mysterious creatures, bewilderingly combining all sorts of opposite characteristics, as changeable as chameleons, and yet somehow vexingly in touch with reality through their intuition, a secret sympathy with the heart of things.

Among the most powerful strands in the web of the mythical female are that she is man's inferior and that she is essentially evil. In the Jewish, Christian and classical traditions, evil came into the world through woman. In many societies, including our own, women's bodies are hung about with a miasma of impurity and pollution which does not cling to men. In many parts of the world women do not eat with men, they walk a few paces behind their husbands as a sign of their inferiority, and they are often excluded altogether from important masculine activities, including religion.

Orthodox Hindus believe that women cannot attain salvation as women, but only through being reborn as men. Women are evil and unclean, and the virtuous Hindu woman, who must treat her husband as if he was a god, is considered inferior to the worst of men. In the West the more important religious roles have been reserved for men and denied to women until very recently, and women have invaded male preserves only against fiercely obstinate resistance. In religious and magical traditions which classify phenomena in terms of opposites, male is generally classed with good, positive, active, and female with evil, negative, passive. It is characteristic that one of the dictionary meanings of the word 'female' is 'epithet of various material and immaterial things denoting simplicity, inferiority, weakness, or the like'.

In male eyes, women are supposed to be contrary and mysterious creatures, as changeable as chameleons, and yet somehow in touch with reality through a secret sympathy with the heart of things

The Terrible Mother

ll this has the weight of hundreds of years f tradition and custom behind it: some omen welcome it, many accept it, and lmost all are brought up to behave in ccordance with it and so perpetuate it. ut how it began, how hatred, fear and ontempt came to be injected into the mage of woman – remembering that a hild's first love is his mother, that men and omen do fall in love and live happily ogether, and that what may be the oldest nown representation of a deity is a figure f a woman – is a question to which there is o certain answer. Psychoanalysts in earch of an answer have created new myths f their own, including those of penis envy nd the castration complex. Stated in a ery brief and over-simplified way, the heory is that the little girl, lacking a penis, els a sense of inferiority to males which asts her the rest of her life: and that the ttle boy fears losing his penis when he sees hat little girls have none, and fears that is father will castrate him because he is a ival for the affections of the mother, these ears mingling with desire in his attitude to omen, who become both love-objects and ate-objects.

It is true that the theme of castration ccurs in mythology and religious practice in the worship of Cybele, for instance – see YBELE; MUTILATION), and the motif of oman as castrator has enjoyed some terary popularity in the wake of Freud, ut it seems unlikely that fear of castration s really a crucial element in the myth of woman's evilness. A simpler approach sees the source of this myth in the difference between the sexes itself. Women are different from men, and tolerance of what is different is not a marked feature of human societies. When what is different and 'other' is also desired, it may be resented, hated and feared, as well as loved and idealized.

The fact that it is woman who bears and rears children means that it is first and foremost a child's mother who not only loves and protects him but also thwarts and punishes him. The twin experiences of mother's love and mother's rage seem to implant an ambivalent attitude to women in general, which is reflected in beliefs about the supernatural. For example, Spartan boys were flogged, or ritually 'punished', on the altar of Artemis Orthia, which had a fondness for human blood. In the Cabala the sefirah Din or Geburah, which represents the punishing judgement of God, is on the female pillar of the Tree of Life (see CABALA). In the Near East mother goddesses and love goddesses were also wrathful war goddesses. Kali, the goddess of terror in Hinduism, significantly presides over undeserved retribution as 'the Mother who nourishes but also punishes'. She typifies 'the deep-seated dread aroused by the unpredictable hazards of man's existence', which in terms of childish experience starts with the bewildering terror of the mother's anger. The age-old assertion that woman is fickle and changeable may have the same root.

William MacQuitty

Woman's inferiority to man is one of the most powerful strands in the web of the mythical female; the legend of Eve's subordination to Adam, and the numerous representations of her in art as the acme of physical desirability, have contributed to a stereotype described by Germaine Greer in The Female Eunuch as being 'more body than soul, more soul than mind . . . the Sexual Object sought by all men, and by all women'

Facing page, left to right Raquel Welch, Marilyn Monroe and Mae West, three 20th century examples of 'the perfect woman' Right The concept of woman as a passive sexual object or plaything classed on a level with wine and song as a masculine diversion, is ancient and widespread: wall painting in an Egyptian tomb showing women at their toilet

Paul Popper

The All-Devouring Curse

The supposed inferiority of woman follows from the fact that human societies have been dominated by men, presumably because men's greater physical strength has enabled them to dominate. The theory that early societies passed through a stage of matriarchy, followed by patriarchy when men seized power from women and enslaved them, is now generally doubted (though there are myths of the reign of women – see BRAZIL) and even matrilineal societies, where descent is reckoned from the mother, are not usually woman-dominated.

Because women are physically weaker, it is concluded that they must also be inferior mentally and spiritually. A German neurologist named Paul Möbius published in 1907 a book on The Physiological Intellectual Feebleness of Women in which he pronounced that the regions of the brain 'necessary for spiritual life' are 'less well developed in women', and concluded that since women are mentally inferior to men lying is 'the natural and indispensable womanly weapon'. He thought it was for the best, since if woman could compete with man in masculine fields her function as a mother would suffer.

Many attempts have been made, unsuccessfully, to show that woman is biologically inferior to man, and the argument that the emancipation of women would wreck home and family life, and the female character, is old and tenacious. But the pronouncements of Möbius pale into insignificance as a condemnation of woman beside the tirade in the Indian epic, the Mahabharata: 'Woman is an all-devouring curse. In her body the evil cycle of life begins afresh, born out of lust engendered by blood and semen. Man emerges mixed with excrement and water, fouled with the impurities of woman. A wise man will avoid the contaminating society of women as he would the touch of bodies infested with vermin.'

Although woman has been regarded as subordinate to man in cultures throughout the world, sometimes excluded entirely from masculine activities such as religion, modern women are rebelling against this traditional concept of their role; these two contrasting aspects of woman are reflected in The Favourite of the Harem, a 19th century engraving by Thomas Hallom, coloured by Laura Lushington (left) and members of the Women's Liberation Movement at a rally in New York (above right)

This diatribe contains two themes found elsewhere. The first is that when our earthly lives and our earthly bodies are condemned as evil and dangerous, distracting the mind from spiritual things and imprisoning us in ignorance and wrong, then sexual intercourse is considered evil, and so is woman, who tempts man to sex and from whose body yet more imprisoned spirits emerge to earthly life: though in other contexts, of course, woman as mother and fount of life is deified and revered (see EARTH; FERTILITY; ICONOGRAPHY; MOTHER GODDESS).

The second theme is that women are unclean. The fact that they bleed at regular intervals has aroused fear and disgust, especially when menstrual blood is regarded as the substance which should have formed the body of a child and as charged with potent and dangerous energy. Contact with this blood and with a menstruating woman has been widely feared as contaminating, and so has contact with a pregnant woman or with childbirth. If women are unclean, then they must be kept at a distance from men's fighting and hunting activities and equipment, and from religious ceremonies, because they might pollute them.

The Great Whore

Another physically-based reason for masculine fear of woman is that the male organ 'dies' in orgasm, and the emission of sperm has frequently been regarded as a loss to the male of some of his life-energy. H. R. Hays quotes an Australian aborigine as saying, 'The vagina is very hot, it is fire and each time the penis goes in, it dies.' The Roman poet Ovid used the same image in hoping to die making love: 'Let me go in the act of coming to Venus; in more senses than one let my last dying be done.' In Paradise Lost, when Adam and Eve make love after the Fall, Adam rises afterwards as Samson rose from Delilah's harlot lap, 'shorn of his strength'.

This motif combines with the fact that women are unlike men in being capable of sex at any time and able to go on longer, to create the myth of woman's insatiable lustfulness and to paint a picture of her as a voracious monster who ensnares a man to devour him, subjecting him to orgasmic 'deaths' until she destroys him.

Greek men were horrified by the worship of Dionysus (see DIONYSUS), partly because it took women away from their 'proper place' in the home, but also because the frenzied rites unleashed all the murderous carnality felt to be inherent in the female nature. In later centuries people were similarly horrified by the cannibalism and orgiastic excesses of witches. It was once customary to refer to women as 'the sex', as though sensuality was a peculiarly female trait.

Jean de Meung, 13th century continuator of the Roman de la Rose, put it succinctly: 'Every woman is a whore.' In the book of Revelation (chapter 17) the personification of lust and murder is the great harlot who sits on a scarlet beast, arrayed in purple

Mario Newcombe

Previous page Although there are myths that tell of the reign of women, the theory that societies went through a stage of matriarchy before men seized power from women and enslaved them is generally doubted; in fact, woman's influence over man has generally been based on her sexual role. In Lysistrata, a comedy by the Greek writer Aristophanes, the women of Athens force the men to make peace with Sparta by going on a 'sex strike': scene from a modern Greek production of the play Right Woman's traditional reliance on man's goodwill is reflected in the story of Cinderella, who is finally rescued from a life of drudgery by a prince: Cinderella, illustrated by Arthur Rackham and scarlet and jewels, holding a golden cup full of abominations and the impurities of her fornication, drunk with the blood of saints and martyrs. The German writer Otto Weininger, who detested both women and Jews, published in 1903 a book called Sex and Character, which went through numerous editions, in which he maintained that women are monsters of devouring sexuality: 'Woman wants man sexually because she only succeeds in existing through her sensuality.'

The same stereotype, of woman as a being whose existence depends on draining the life from men, appears in the legends of Lilith, the lamias, the sirens, vampires and demonesses who prey on men sexually (see INCUBUS; LILITH; SIRENS; VAMPIRE). She appears again in modern novels, for instance as the Great Bitch in Norman Mailer's An American Dream, who 'delivers extermination to any bucko brave enough to take carnal knowledge of her', and in the fantasy characters, described by Germaine Greer in The Female Eunuch as 'those extraordinary springing women with slanting eyes and swirling clouds of hair who prowl through thriller comics on the balls of their feet, wheeling suddenly upon the hero, talons unsheathed for the kill. Their mouths are large, curved and shining like scimitars: the musculature of their shoulders and thighs is incredible, their breasts like grenades, their waists encircled with steel belts as narrow as Cretan bull-dancers'.'

The great bitch or cat-woman, the seducer and slayer, is also related to the femme fatale or la belle dame sans merci, the enchantress for whom men feel an irresistible longing and who pitilessly enslaves and degrades them. She appears in Arthurian legends, she is Delilah, who robbed Samson of his strength and his freedom, or Cleopatra, 'who lost Mark Antony the world'. She is Wilde's Salome and the Dolores, 'Our Lady of Pain', of Swinburne's masochistic fancy.

The Jar of Evils

The femme fatale may herself be essentially passive: her loveliness by itself entraps men and destroys them, as in the case of Helen, whose beauty launched the thousand ships of the avenging Greeks and caused the fall of Troy. Another example is Pandora, whose story was told by Hesiod in his Works and Days and Theogony. Zeus determined to make men pay for the gift of fire, which Prometheus had stolen (see PROMETHEUS), and instructed the divine craftsman Hephaestus to manufacture a 'beautiful evil', a woman, made of soil mixed with water. The goddess Athene taught her to sew, golden Aphrodite 'shed grace upon her head and cruel longing and cares that weary the limbs', and Hermes bestowed on her 'a shameless mind and a deceitful nature'.

Pandora was, in fact, a typical woman as seen by Hesiod, and Zeus presented her to Epimetheus, Prometheus's brother, who foolishly accepted the gift. She then raised the lid of a jar, which contained all evils, and the evils escaped and have been loose in the world ever since. Before this, Hesio says, 'men lived on earth remote and fre from ills and hard toil and heavy sick nesses . . . but the woman took off the grea lid of the jar with her hands and scattered al these and her thought caused sorrow an mischief to men.' All women are descende from her, 'the deadly race and tribe o women who live amongst mortal men t their great trouble', for Zeus 'made wome to be an evil to mortal men, with a nature t do evil'.

Pandora's name may mean 'all-giving and was perhaps originally a title of th Earth Goddess. Her jar (pithos) was turne into a box (pyxis) by Erasmus, the 16t century humanist, and 'Pandora's box became a phrase for any source of multipl

Reflections on Woman

What man has assurance enough to pretend to know thoroughly the riddle of a woman's mind, and who could ever hope to fix her mutable nature?
Cervantes

From a woman sin had its beginning, and because of her we all die
Ecclesiasticus

Women are only children of a larger growth
Lord Chesterfield

The goal of female education has invariably to be the future mother
Hitler

There's nothing sooner dry than women's tears
Webster

Nature has given women so much power that the law has very wisely given them little Dr Johnson

Dissimulation is innate in woman
Schopenhauer

What female heart can gold despise?
What cat's averse to fish?
Gray

The female of the species is more deadly than the male Kipling

A woman is necessarily an evil, but he that gets the most tolerable one is lucky Menander

Thou goest to women? Don't forget thy whip!
Nietzsche

Here lies my wife: here let her lie!
Now she's at rest, and so am I Dryden

Here's to Woman! Would we could fall into her arms without falling into her hands
Ambrose Bierce

The modern individual family is founded on the open or concealed slavery of the wife
Engels

Women have very little idea of how much men hate them
Germaine Greer

disasters. Early Christian writers likened her to Eve and the Renaissance rediscovered her, though usually not as the source of evil but as the 'all-gifted' one, on whom the gods had bestowed their many treasures. However, as Jean Olivier, the author of Pandora (1541), said: 'Eve in Scripture opened the forbidden fruit by her bite, by which death invaded the world. So did Pandora open the box in defiance of a divine injunction, whereby all the evils and infinite calamities broke loose and overwhelmed the hapless mortals with countless miseries...'

In the 18th century, the painter James Barry, who executed an enormous Creation of Pandora, called her story 'one of the most splendid of the many specimens of the Heathen manner of adumbrating and allegorizing that introduction of Evil or fall of mankind which is celebrated in Genesis'. Pandora's box was occasionally identified with her genitals, and Paul Klee's drawing of Pandora's Box (1920) brings in the menstruation motif, for it shows a goblet shaped like the female genitals, containing some flowers and emitting evil vapours.

The Devil's Gateway

The Jewish legend of the Watchers traces the introduction of evil into the world to the angels who descended from heaven, significantly drawn to earth by the sexual attractions of human women (see DEVIL), but the story of Adam and Eve has had a greater influence in the West in reinforcing the belief in woman's inherent wickedness. In the account in Genesis it is the woman who succumbs to the serpent's temptation and persuades Adam to eat the forbidden fruit, the action which caused the Fall and implanted the taint of original sin in all human beings (see EVIL; FIRST MAN). In some paintings of the scene, including Michelangelo's in the Sistine Chapel, the serpent itself is female.

Genesis also stresses the inferiority of woman. She is created after Adam, and fashioned from one of his ribs, and the pangs of childbirth and the subjection of woman to man are among the penalties for the crime, so providing divine authority for the actual situation in patriarchal Hebrew society. The story in Genesis may have been influenced by the Babylonian Epic of Gilgamesh (see GILGAMESH), in which Enkidu, the 'noble savage' who is man in his natural primitive state, is seduced by a temple prostitute. She teaches him the delights of sex, instructs him in civilized behaviour, lures him away from his peaceful life with the animals and takes him to the city, and so ultimately to his doom. When he is dying, Enkidu curses her for coaxing him away from his simple life in the wild.

Eve, who coaxed Adam into eating the forbidden fruit of sexual and civilizing knowledge, entered the Christian tradition as the supreme example of woman as both intensely desirable and intensely dangerous. Tertullian (2nd century AD), who castigated women as Eves, Devil's gateways, destroyers of man and ultimately responsible for the death of Christ, said that they ought all to wear permanent mourning as a sign of penitence for the wickedness they derived from Eve. And Eve's creation from Adam's rib was for hundreds of years one of the stock arguments against the emancipation of women. There is a story about one of the desert hermits, the holy Arsenius, who was visited by a devout woman, a virgin, who went all the way from Rome to see him. Arsenius was furious and said, 'Dost thou not know that thou art a woman, and ought not to go anywhere? And wilt thou now go to Rome and say to the other women "I have seen Arsenius", and turn the sea into a high road of women coming to see me?' She asked him to pray for her but he said that on the contrary he would pray to God to wipe the memory of her from his mind. When she told the archbishop what had happened, he said, 'Knowest thou not that thou art a woman, and through women doth the Enemy lay siege to mortal men?'

It is not as easy to generalize about Christian attitudes to sex and woman as authors embattled in these particular lists have sometimes suggested. Few Christians went as far as a Church Council in 585 which ruled that a male corpse must not be buried beside a female corpse until the latter had decomposed. But though generally by no means as hostile to women as orthodox Hinduism or as appalled by sex as some of the European heretical sects, Christianity did contain a powerful strain of mistrust of sex and the body, as obstacles to spiritual advancement, which engendered disapproval of women as evil temptresses, and which lies behind the lauding of the virgin state as a condition closer to God than the married, the establishment of monasteries and nunneries, and the insistence on clerical celibacy.

The God of Jews and Christians is emphatically male and, unlike pagan gods, has no female consort (except in mystical imagery about the Shekhinah or Wisdom or the Sophia of the Gnostics, or the mystic himself, as God's bride). Jesus did not marry, and speculations about him being involved in a love affair with Mary Magdelene strike most Christians to this day as thoroughly offensive. The nearest thing to a goddess in Christianity is a virgin, though she has clearly brought into patriarchal Christianity a feminine element which multitudes of worshippers have refused to do without (see MARY).

The fact that St Paul, in the much discussed passages of 1 Corinthians (chapters 6 and 7), keeps insisting that it is not a sin to marry suggests that the Corinthian Christians thought it was. 'It is well for a man not to touch a woman,' he says, though conceding that many men, unlike himself, cannot refrain from touching one; and so, 'it is better to marry than to be aflame with passion'. St Paul was writing at a time when Christians expected the world to come to an end at any moment, and he advised people to stay as they were if they could, single or married, slave or free, 'for the appointed time has grown very short'. Later Christian writers continued to recommend virginity, not necessarily condemning marriage but regarding it as a second best, because involvement in things of the flesh distracts attention from the things of God. Sex was necessary for the procreation of children, and the Almighty for his own inscrutable reasons had instituted it for that purpose, but it was still something of a barrier between humanity and God.

Many Christian authors have disapproved of cosmetics and other feminine adornments because they excite men's passions, and much of the element of distrust of woman in Christianity stems from the observation that sex causes man to lose his self-control. This is part of the widespread human feeling that desire is supernatural, awesome and dangerous, sweeping over human beings from outside and carrying them away in an uncontrollable tide. Both St Albertus Magnus and St Thomas Aquinas maintained that what is sinful in sexual intercourse is not the pleasure of the act but the fact that fallen man in his weakness cannot enjoy so intense a pleasure without losing sight of God. Earlier, St Augustine had also been horrified by the irrationality of erotic passion, the whirling away of reason and self-control in the hurricane of desire. He thought that what Adam and Eve really discovered, when their eyes were opened and they knew that they were naked, was 'concupiscence' – desire which was beyond their control.

Giraudon

Wine, Women and Song

If at one end of the scale woman is whore, temptress, murderess, at the other she is a toy or doll, a passive sexual object and plaything, the occupant of a real or psychological harem, classed on a level with wine and song as masculine diversions. The legendary Eve's subordination to Adam, and the numerous representations of her in art as the acme of physical desirability, in styles varying with male tastes of different periods and places, have contributed to this stereotype, which is blisteringly described by Germaine Greer. 'She is more body than soul, more soul than mind . . . She is the Sexual Object sought by all men, and by all women. Her value is solely attested by the demand she excites in others. All she must contribute is her existence. She need achieve nothing, for she is the reward of achievement . . . Because she is the emblem of spending ability and the chief spender, she is also the most effective seller of this

In legends of sirens and vampires woman is depicted as a being whose existence depends on draining the life from men; this stereotype is related to the enchantress for whom men feel an irresistible longing, a femme fatale who may in fact be essentially passive, and whose loveliness by itself entraps and destroys men Above left Helen's beauty caused the fall of Troy: Helen on the Ramparts of Troy by Moreau Above right Head of Nefertiti, wife of the heretic Pharaoh Ikhnaten Below Pandora, who raised the lid of a jar containing all evils and allowed them to escape to plague the world, has been described as a typical woman: Pandora by François Quesnel world's goods. Every survey ever held ha shown that the image of an attractive woma is the most effective advertising gimmick.'

Facing page* Relief depicting an Egyptian queen, said to be Cleopatra who 'lost Mark Antony the world'

Corvina, Budapest

There is far more to Eve in Genesis, an to woman in supernatural contexts generall than evil and passive inferiority, but the not of wickedness, darkness, danger and deat does sound constantly. Cherchez la femm men say, if there's trouble there's a woma at the bottom of it. In Paradise Lost Milto whose relations with women were not of th happiest, depicts Sin sitting at the gate hell. She is female, a beautiful woman to th waist and a foul scaly serpent below, an her womb is the kennel for demonic dog Many of the mother goddesses of the distar past were deities who gave life but who als gave death, and their worshippers seer to have regarded them with the same mingle emotions of love and terror, trust and fea admiration and resentment, desire an disgust, which men have blended in the image of woman all through recorded histor (See also AMAZONS; BIRTH; HYSTERICA POSSESSION; MENSTRUATION; OLD AG SELF-DENIAL; SEX; TANTRISM.)

RICHARD CAVENDIS

FURTHER READING: D. S. Bailey, The Sexu Relation in Christian Thought (Harper a Row, 1959); H. R. Hays, The Dangerous S (Putnam, 1964); D. and E. Panofsky, Pa dora's Box (Princeton Univ. Press, 2nd ed 1962); B. Walker, Hindu World (Praeg 1968, 2 vols). See also G. Greer, The Fema Eunuch (McGraw-Hill, 1980).

Werner Forman

Feminism, the women's movement and a wealth of New Age ideas have inspired a new emphasis on feminine spirituality which has seen women ordained as Christian priests and the pagan and prehistoric Great Goddess restored to her age-old throne

WOMEN'S MYSTERIES

IN CLASSICAL GREECE AND ROME certain areas of religious cult and worship were reserved exclusively for women. They included the wild and ecstatic rites of Dionysus, whose female devotees were the Bacchantes (see DIONYSUS). In Rome, only the Vestal Virgins were allowed to enter the inner sanctuary of the temple of Vesta, the goddess of the hearth, where certain objects were kept. Men were not permitted to see these objects or even to know what they were, though they naturally speculated about it. The Roman goddess known euphemistically as Bona Dea, 'the good goddess', was attended and worshipped only by women. Once a year the Vestal Virgins and the wife of the principal magistrate honoured her at night in a ceremony which no man was allowed to attend. Myrtle and wine were also taboo. The room was decorated with vine branches and wine was brought in, but it was called milk for the purposes of the evening.

These rituals are long forgotten today, but the women's movement in the modern West has brought with it a revival of the belief in a special feminine spirituality, different from that of men, wiser and more profound. One symptom of this has been a spate of books on the deeply venerated goddess figures of the past, seen as examples of a single figure, the Great Goddess. She was recognized in earlier times as a personification of the earth and as mother of all living things, the supreme feminine principle in the cosmos.

Her earliest images are the crude but powerful prehistoric figurines of women with swelling pregnant bellies, massive breasts and the genital triangle emphasized, like the Venus of Willendorf. These are interpreted as evidence that in the early days of the human race the supreme deity was female. She was the unseen power sensed behind all the rhythms of life, behind birth and growth, and equally behind death and destruction. She was pictured in triple form, expressing three facets of her nature as maiden, mother and crone, corresponding to the waxing, the full and the waning moon. She had a young male consort, a youthful god who impregnated her every year to father the joyous rebirth of the life of nature in the spring, but was subordinate to her (see FACELESS GODDESSES, MOTHER GODDESS).

The Overthrow of the Goddess

In later days the Great Mother was given different names in different parts of the world – she was Inanna or Ishtar, Isis or Cybele or Demeter, Kali or Kuan Yin or Amaterasu – and she was forced to share her throne with male gods, to whom she eventually had to yield her supremacy. Male-oriented, patriarchal religion was introduced by the Aryan invaders who conquered India, the Near East and Greece, bringing with them their violent, despotic, masculine gods. They and their descendants reduced women to an inferior status in a patriarchal social system and fostered the assumption, virtually unquestioned in the West for centuries, that the supreme deity, the god of gods, must be male.

Ancient Art & Architecture Collection

Above The earliest images of the Great Goddess were powerful prehistoric figurines with swelling pregnant bellies, massive breasts and the genital triangle emphasized: the Venus of Willendorf, 25,000 BC Above right More than twenty millenia later, the representation of the Goddess remained much the same: Sumerian relief, 2000 BC, in the Archeological Museum, Aleppo

The earlier societies which worshipped the Goddess, according to this line of argument, were earth-centred, peaceable, body-affirming and egalitarian in character. They were in tune with the life-force and they saw human existence as part of the life of the universe as a whole. It was the male-dominated patriarchal, and often puritanical, cultures which put a premium on aggression and destruction, which rejoiced in war, competition and distinctions of rank and which plundered nature.

Judaism, Christianity and Islam, with their single all-powerful male God, were denounced with special venom by the new partisans of the Goddess, although it was recognized that in Christianity aggressive masculinity had been forced to give way to popular demand sufficiently to allow th Virgin Mary something of the role of th Goddess, albeit in a fundamentally tyran nical patriarchal system.

One of the most influential books along these lines was When God Was a Woman by Merlin Stone, which came out in 1976 The Goddesses and Gods of Old Europe b Marija Gimbutas, The Return of th Goddess by Edward Whitmont and Th Once and Future Goddess by Elinor Gaydo are notable 1980s examples of the genre.

Elinor Gaydon's eyes were opened durin a year in India in the 1960s. In India, sh wrote, 'I had experienced myself as sexual sacred and powerful in a way no moder women in the West can. Our psychologica being has been severed from our biologica selves for so long that we are completely cu off from our true natures. Because I was i touch with this strength, with the celebra tion and fullness of my being for even s limited a time, I could never return to m old ways of seeing the world.'

The rediscovery of women's true spiritu ality – of women's 'mysteries' in this sense seemed to hold out a way in which wome could transform their lives, but beyond thi it was felt to offer a road of redemption fo Western society as a whole, which had los all feeling for the natural world that it wa busy despoiling and plundering. In this wa women's spirituality meshed with the pow erful 'green' conservation movement an with the prevailing hostility towards scienc and technology, and their apparentl uncaring attitude to the world.

E.T. Archive

Ancient Art & Architecture Collection

The Great Goddess was portrayed in triple form, as maiden, mother and crone, and of these perhaps the most evocative was that of the bringer and nourisher of life Above left Isis with the infant Horus: bronze figure from the necropolis of Ballan e Qustul in Nubia Above A comparable representation from the other side of the world: the Mexican goddess Xochiquetzal represents love and happiness

The White Goddess

The rediscovery of the Goddess also fitted in with growing sympathy with paganism and disapproval of Christianity in the period following the Second World War. Robert Graves's book The White Goddess, published originally in 1946, was a powerful influence on this whole current of ideas and became almost the centre of a cult in itself, though it was, as he warned his readers, a 'very difficult book'. Graves, greatly admired as a poet and historical novelist, set out to demonstrate that the language of the old pagan myths of the Mediterranean area and Northern Europe was 'a magical language bound up with popular religious ceremonies in honour of the Moon-goddess, or Muse, some of them dating from the Old Stone Age.' He also hoped to show that 'this remains the language of true poetry'. It was a book he felt obscurely driven to write and his White Goddess of Life-in-Death and Death-in-Life was the inspirer of poetic truth. His best-selling account of The Greek Myths (1955), though not highly regarded by scholars, contained plenty more fuel on which the fires of paganism and goddess-worship could feed.

The Goddess of Witches

Another influence was the Margaret Murray theory of witchcraft (see MODERN WITCHCRAFT). The idea that the witch covens of medieval and early modern Europe were not devotees of the Devil of Christianity, but had preserved 'the old religion' of pagan, pre-Christian Europe – though again dismissed by scholars – proved powerfully attractive to neo-pagans.

Margaret Murray found very little evidence of the Goddess in medieval witchcraft. Her witches worshipped a male deity, the horned god, who was identified by the Church as Satan and the great supernatural Enemy of Christianity. If witchcraft was fundamentally a nature religion and fertility cult, however, it needed a great feminine principle alongside the male. Modern witchcraft, or Wicca, recruited women who found in it a route to fulfillment not available to them by more conventional means. While some covens were dominated by a male High Priest, there were others which were ruled by their High Priestesses, the earthly representatives of the Goddess.

'Dianic' covens reserved exclusively for women were organized in the United States in the 1970s, and there were others exclusively for men. Most of the Wicca groups, however, have remained open to both sexes, honour both the Goddess and the Horned God, and consider it essential for men to recognize and come to terms with the divine feminine or female archetype.

Elinor Gaydon has pointed out how many contemporary women artists have found inspiration and strength in the image of the Goddess. Miriam Simos, a prominent figure in Wicca in California in the 1970s, who took the name Starhawk, has described herself as 'a leader of the religion of the Great Goddess, the life force manifest in nature, human beings and the world. To me the Goddess is a symbol that evokes women's strength and men's nurturing capabilities, and restores deep value to nature, sexuality and the ecological balance.' In 1975 she was one of the founders of the Covenant of the Goddess, a witchcraft 'church' to which many covens subscribed. In the 1980s she helped to establish a Center for Feminist Spirituality in Berkeley.

A Wicca manifesto from New York proclaimed that: 'WITCH lives and laughs in every woman. She is the free part of each of us, beneath the shy smiles, the acquiescence to absurd male domination, the make-up or flesh-suffocating clothing our sick society demands. There is no "joining" WITCH. If you are a woman and dare to look within yourself, you are a Witch. You make your own rules. You are free and beautiful... Whatever is repressive, solely male-oriented, greedy, puritanical, authoritarian – those are your targets.'

In Britain, meanwhile, the anthropologist T.M.Luhrmann investigated witch covens in London at first hand, by joining them. She found that witches regarded their movement as 'a revival, or re-emergence, of an ancient nature-religion, the most ancient of religions, in which the earth was worshipped as a woman under different names and guises throughout the inhabited world. She was Astarte, Inanna, Isis, Cerridwen... The Goddess is multi-faceted, ever-changing – nature and nature's transformations. She is Artemis, virgin huntress, the crescent moon and the morning's freshness; Selene, Aphrodite and Demeter, in the full bloom of the earth's fertility; Hecate and axe-bearing Cerridwen, the crone who destroys, the dying forests which make room for new growth. The constant theme of the Goddess is cyclicity and transformation: the spinning Fates, the weaving spider, Aphrodite who each year arises virgin from the sea, Isis who swells and floods and diminishes as the Nile. Every face of the Goddess is a different goddess, and yet also the same, in a different aspect...' The Goddess is both a titanic natural force and a person to whom one can talk. One of T.M.Luhrmann's subjects told her: 'I relate to the Goddess every day, in one way or another. I have a little chitchat with Mommy.'

Ecology and the Spiritual Dimension

In the background of these developments was the burgeoning women's movement, which affected religion and spirituality along with virtually every other area of life and had an influence reaching far beyond the comparatively small world of neo-paganism and witchcraft. One of its fundamental convictions was that women shared a set of principles and standards which were different from those of men and of at least equal value. Many feminists went further and believed that women were superior beings, infinitely wiser than men, whose power-hunger, blinkered intellectualism, childish competitiveness and selfish greed had caused all the wars of history and were now threatening the survival of the planet itself. A strong lesbian separatist movement emerged in the United States in the 1960s and 1970s, and although most women were not lesbians, there was considerable sympathy for the assertion that women's values were not only different but superior.

In the 1980s the women's movement developed an ecofeminist wing, partly in reaction to the Three Mile Island nuclear plant disaster of 1979, which spurred feminists to organize conferences on ecological issues. Starhawk founded a national ecofeminist organization called the Woman Earth Institute. The issue was presented as an attack on male authoritarian dominance in yet another crucial area – the environment – and on the dangerous irresponsibility of science, with its fundamentally 'masculine' values. Feminists objected not only to men's domination of women, but to whites' domination of blacks and humans' domination of the animal kingdom and the whole world of nature.

In the same decade religion became a popular subject for discussion at feminist conferences and women's spirituality groups blossomed all over the United States. The belief that, far in the past, universal worship of the feminine principle, the Goddess, was accompanied by a peaceful, unselfish and egalitarian order of society which respected nature and the environment proved powerfully inspiring.

Women in Church

In the next step the women's movement invaded the mainstream Christian Churches. In her book The Second Stage (1983) Betty Friedan suggested that: 'The most important effect of transcending those old sex roles may be an evolution of morality and religious thought, as the concrete, flexible dailiness that used to be reserved for female private family life is wedded to the noble grandeur of spiritual vision and higher moral principles, as formerly preached from pulpits one hour a week by male priests, ministers and rabbis.'

Back in the 19th century the formidable Elizabeth Cady Stanton, a campaigner for women's rights and author of The Woman's Bible (1895), had pointed out that woman is considered a secondary being in the Bible and that this was being used to justify the unequal treatment of women in American life. During the 1970s and 1980s, as women's studies became a popular discipline in American universities, the number of women attending theological colleges showed a marked increase and the whole question of gender in religion and women's place in religious organizations was opened up to examination and debate.

Feminists like Mary Daly, author of Beyond God the Father: Towards a Philosophy of Women's Liberation (1973), argued that the Judaeo-Christian tradition of God as male has authorised the assumption that femininess is a secondary, deficient, inferior form of being. When women are denied the full potential of being human, trapped in the category of 'the second sex', their experience of life is diminished and their ability to fulfill their true potential is severely hindered – to the disadvantage of human society as a whole.

Some feminists wanted God to be recognized as androgynous, not only as God the Father, but as God the Mother as well. The American Roman Catholic feminist theologian, Rosemary Radford Ruether, however, a highly influential figure in Britain as well as in the United States, rejected the idea of divine androgyny as inadequate because it perpetuated the traditional dualism of male and female, which she wanted feminism to move beyond. 'The vindication of the "feminine", as we have inherited that concept from patriarchy,' she wrote, 'will always be set within a dualistic scheme of complementary principles that segregate women on one side and men on the other. Even if this scheme is given a reversed valuation, the same dualism remains.'

In her book Sexism and God-Talk: Toward a Feminist Theology (1983) she attacked the whole idea of a hierarchy of values, a dualism of superior and inferior based on the traditional male-female model, which she saw underlying the major evils of the time – racism, poverty and the destruction of the environment.

Feminists have varied considerably in their attitudes to religion and the Churches. Some have rejected organized religion altogether. They see it as an authoritarian power structure which helps to keep people, not only women, in a state of dependence and prevents them from shaping their own lives and taking responsibility for themselves. Others believe that religion is too important to people to be rejected, especially in nurturing the spiritual side of human beings, in teaching good moral behaviour and in its role in consolation and healing. There is a gulf, however, between those who think that the sexist character of the conventional Churches can be transformed and those who do not believe that this can be achieved and so look to new organizations or groups outside the mainstream Churches.

Above Great Goddess as a fertility deity: Sumer, 18th century BC Right Rev. Angela Berners-Wilson celebrates her first communion, following her ordination as a priest of the Anglican Church in Bristol, March 1994

'The important fact which all feminists have in common,' Ursula King says, 'whether they be antireligious, inclined to reform or revolutionary recasting, is the deep conviction that a new spirit is needed, a different approach to symbols, myths and rites capable to reflect and express their new experience of self, world and cosmos today.'

A Feminine Christ

As the women's movement grew inside the Churches, there came demands to alter the male-dominated language of prayers and services, to recognize God as She and talk of Her power and grace. As this trend has gained confidence and support – from male clergymen as well as women worshippers – some remarkable spectacles have astonished and alarmed more old-fashioned Christians, male and female alike. In 1994, for example, Manchester Cathedral in England witnessed an ecumenical women's service in which God was referred to as She and a Christa, a crucified female Christ, was carried in procession through the nave. The Bishop of Manchester approved of the ceremony as moving and helpful, but many of the more conservative cathedral clergy were horrified and embarrassed.

Patrick Landmann/Gamma

New Age paganism, the tendency to see Christianity as only one among many equally deserving religions, the belief that all religions are fundamentally the same, and the search for supportive and inspiring themes and symbols from religions all over the world, have all eaten their way into mainstream Christianity itself. An alarmed newspaper report from the United States in 1993 said that 'thousands of Catholic women – mostly educated suburbanites – have become involved in a subterranean cult of neo-pagan Wicca worship in which they read the runes, celebrate the seasons, go to forests, caves and hill-tops for nature rites and gather to "summon up the power of the life-force".' There was an account of a spring equinox ritual carried out by a group of Roman Catholic nuns in Philadelphia, in which some 40 women in masks danced to the sound of drums before an altar with Buddhist statues on it and figures of women wreathed with flowers.

The most radical groups of nuns were identified as the School Sisters of Notre Dame, the Benedictines, the Sisters of Loretto and the Sisters of St Joseph, but many less extreme nuns were reported to hold regular sessions in which they criticised oppressive patriarchy and celebrated the transcendent through female images.

Rosemary Radford Ruether, in Woman-Guides (1985) and Woman-Church (1986), provided a canon and liturgy for a Roman Catholic female impetus which would displace the Bible from its position as the fundamental text of Christanity and make it one among many texts drawn from other religions. A hymn to a Great Goddess of Babylonia was included and a picture of the goddess Isis leading an Ancient Egyptian queen by the hand was captioned: 'Hand in hand, women guide each other as they claim their buried past and journey to the place of the death of the patriarchy and the beginning of new possibilities for woman being.' She believed there was an ecological lesson to be learned from pagan veneration of nature and that pagan myths and cults of goddesses could provide resources for women's identity today. The reaction of orthodox Christian critics was, needless to say, sulphurous.

It was not only in the West that women claimed spiritual roles that had long been male property. In Kiev in the Ukraine in 1993 there was uproar when members of an offbeat Christian cult called the Great White Brotherhood occupied the cathedral of St Sophia in the firm conviction that the end of the world was at hand, and had to be evicted by force. Though the cult had been founded by a man, the charismatic figure at the centre of events was a woman who called herself Maria Devi Khristos and claimed to be the Messiah and an incarnation of both Christ and the Virgin Mary.

Women at the Altar

In the early 1990s in Britain the most visible manifestation of women's spirituality was the drive for the ordination of women as Church of England priests. The Nonconformist Churches, less Catholic in their sympathies, were already accustomed to women ministers, as also in America, where a woman had been ordained as a Congregationalist minister as far back as 1853. Reformed Judaism appointed its first female rabbi in New York in 1972.

The Roman Catholic Church, however, could not bring itself to countenance a woman priest; neither could the Church of England for many years, while pressure from women and their supporters mounted. The argument reached a point at which the Archbishop of Canterbury announced, to furious opposition, that the view that only a man could be a priest was a heresy. Eventually the Synod of the Church of England voted in favour of the ordination of women in 1992 and the first women were ordained two years later. It was a landmark in the progress of the women's movement.

FURTHER READING: Merlin Stone, When God Was a Woman (Dial Press, New York, 1976); Elinor Gaydon, The Once and Future Goddess (Harper & Row, 1989); T. M. Luhrmann, Persuasions of the Witch's Craft (Harvard University Press, 1989); U. King, Women and Spirituality (Macmillan, London, 1989); Barbara G. Walker, The Woman's Encyclopedia of Myths and Secrets (Harper & Row, 1983).

WOODPECKER

MOST WOODPECKERS assert their possession of a nesting territory not by song, but by a rattling noise or 'drumming' made by striking the bill rapidly on a branch – a distinctive drum-roll quite different from the sound made by a woodpecker when pecking at a branch to extract an insect or make a hole for its nest. This drumming was of great significance to our ancestors who, living mainly out of doors and dependent for their well-being on propitious weather, paid much attention to birds which seemed to them to be not only weather-wise but actually able to influence the weather, especially the amount of rainfall.

Listening to the woodpecker drumming in a tree high up towards the sky, they assumed that he was making miniature thunder, calling for and bringing down rain. Such a bird, in league with the higher powers, deserved respect and could teach men how to act when they needed rain for their crops. It is a widespread practice for people anxiously desiring rain to make imitation thunder by drumming, the underlying idea being that like would attract like. In Estonia, during times of drought, a man used to climb a tree in a sacred grove, carrying a small cask or kettle, and rattle a stick in it: he acted the part of a woodpecker making thunder.

It is still believed in the English countryside that the loud and frequent calling of the green woodpecker foretells rain, although observation shows that this has no foundation in fact. In Scandinavia, also, the woodpecker is considered a weather prophet. Frenchmen call the bird 'the miller's advocate', because in times of drought it is thought to plead insistently for water to turn the mill wheel.

The red crowns of European woodpeckers have also played a part in gaining them their status as thunderbirds and rainbirds. Species with conspicuous red markings tend to be associated with fire, and so the woodpecker came to be connected not only with thunder but also with the lightning which accompanies it.

Perhaps the first hint in literature that the woodpecker was considered a rainmaker and thunderbird is its name in Babylonian, meaning 'the axe of Ishtar', for Ishtar was a fertility goddess. The earliest written evidence of the bird's exalted status is a reference by Aristophanes: 'Zeus won't in a hurry the sceptre restore to the woodpecker tapping the oak.' There appears to have been a belief that the bird once occupied the throne of the High God and received reverence such as Zeus received in Aristophanes's time.

There is definite evidence that the woodpecker was consulted as an oracle, if not actually worshipped. An account survives of an oracle connected with Mars in the Apennine Mountains, where an image of a woodpecker was placed on a wooden pillar; engraved gems show a warrior consulting such an oracle. Mars was originally associated with fertility as much as with war (see MARS), which perhaps explains his association with the fertility-bringing woodpecker.

The First Ploughman

There is further evidence that the woodpecker is a bird of fertility. Greek myth relates that Celeus, whose name means 'green woodpecker', attempted to steal the honey which nourished Zeus while he was an infant. As a punishment the angry god turned Celeus into a green woodpecker. Celeus was the father of Triptolemus, the inventor of the plough – a king or chieftain instructed by Demeter, the Earth Mother, in the ritual which procured the fertility of the soil.

The significance of all this is obscure until we realize that the green woodpecker often feeds on the ground, picking up ants, and that its beak could be regarded as serving the same purpose as the primitive plough, which was not much more than a single prong drawn through the soil. The story says in effect that the green woodpecker was the first ploughman.

More recent legends confirm the woodpecker's connection with ploughing. According to a tale of the Letts, a people of the eastern Baltic, God and the Devil engaged in a ploughing match. God had a woodpecker to draw his plough, but the Devil had horses and quickly ploughed a whole field, while the woodpecker was making little progress. During the night God borrowed the horses and ploughed a field. The Devil was so impressed next day that he stupidly exchanged his horses for the woodpecker. When the bird lagged behind he angrily struck it on the head and this is why the woodpecker has a blood-coloured crown. In a veiled way this story tells of the suppression of ancient beliefs.

There are plenty of other indications of the association between the woodpecker, rain and fertility. In France, Germany, Austria and Denmark it is given names equivalent to the English local name 'rain bird'. In Italy there is a saying, 'When the woodpecker pecks, expect rain or storm.' In France the story goes that at the Creation, when God had made the earth, he called on the birds to help by hollowing out places which could be filled with water and so become seas, lakes and ponds. Only the woodpecker refused to join in. A German version says that it was because she would not dirty her fine plumage. So the bird was condemned to peck wood and to drink nothing but rain. That is why she clings to the tree trunk with beak upwards calling, 'Rain, Rain'.

It was at one time believed, or half-believed, that the mysterious herb springwort, with which doors and locks could be opened, could be obtained by blocking the woodpecker's nesting hole. The bird would fetch the herb and apply it to the blocked entrance. If a strip of red cloth was placed below the nest, the bird, mistaking it for fire, would drop the sprig on it. Another plan was to watch where the woodpecker went to fetch the plant.

The legend seems to be an Eastern tale in Western dress. A version was current in Greece but the bird concerned was the hoopoe. It had its nest in a wall, but three times the owner plastered it up and three times the bird removed the plaster by applying the springwort. The tale as told in Germany is similar to a version quoted by Pliny.

Probably it passed from Greek literature into Latin and is not, as might at first appear, the concoction of simple country folk. What may be an embellished and distorted version was current in a region of Germany. It was said that a princess incarcerated in the Markgrabenstein could be released by the man who went to the place at midnight on a Friday carrying a white woodpecker.

E. A. ARMSTRONG

FURTHER READING: E. A. Armstrong, The Folklore of Birds (Dover, N.Y., 1970).

Wraith

The double or apparition of someone who is alive; its appearance is generally taken as an omen of the person's imminent death, or as a sign that he is in serious danger or trouble.

See ASTRAL BODY; DOUBLE; SPONTANEOUS PSI EXPERIENCES.

Mary Evans

Wreath

A circle or garland of flowers or leaves, bestowed as a mark of distinction, or placed in a grave or on a coffin to honour the dead; evergreen wreaths are used as Christmas decorations; in Greece and Rome poets, athletes and other persons of note were honoured with laurel wreaths or crowns.

See BURIAL; LAUREL.

The custom of killing a wren at midwinter and parading it with elaborate ceremony through the neighbourhood, observed in parts of France and Ireland, was probably connected with ancient sun rituals

WREN

Bodleian Library Colour Filmstrip

ALTHOUGH IT IS nearly our smallest bird, inconspicuously coloured and unlikely to call attention to itself, except when it utters its relatively loud song, the wren is a familiar bird to most people because it is common, and besides inhabiting woods is to be seen in hedgerows and gardens. The folklore of the wren is of exceptional interest as it is the only bird associated with a fairly elaborate ritual in the British Isles, besides being represented in legends and oral traditions.

Wren ritual is performed throughout most of Ireland and to a limited extent in the Isle of Man. It seems to have disappeared in Wales, as it has in England, but scraps of evidence and local traditions indicate that it persisted until not very long ago, in one form or another, in many of the southern countries. It was never established in Ulster or Scotland.

The Wren Hunt and Procession as performed in Ireland may be briefly described. In those localities where an actual wren figures in the ceremonial it may be caught by beating the hedgerows or captured in its roost. On St Stephen's Day (26 December) a number of lads and young men form a party and visit the houses in neighbouring villages, carrying the corpse of the bird with them, or more often now a toy bird or some other object representing a wren. Girls occasionally take part, another indication that the custom has deteriorated. The 'Wren Boys' dress up for the occasion in odds and ends such as pyjama jackets and fantastic headgear. When they call at a cottage they sing a Wren Song in English or Irish, seeking a contribution from the householder. When the Wren Boys have finished their calls they hold a celebration, paid for by the collections made during the day.

French wren ceremonies were enacted in an area stretching from Marseilles northwestwards up to Brittany. They were more elaborate than in Ireland, probably indicating that the cult was carried to the British Isles from France and lost some of its characteristics on the way. At Carcassonne, the Wren Boys of the Rue St Jean assembled towards the end of the year and went into the countryside to beat the bushes and obtain a wren. The first lad to kill one was proclaimed King and to him fell the duty of carrying the bird back to town on a pole. The King proceeded through the streets on the last day of the year with all who had participated in the Hunt, accompanied by a drum and fife band and carrying torches. Here and there they would halt and a lad would chalk on a house 'Vive le Roi' and the number of the New Year. On Twelfth Day, the King arrayed himself in a blue robe and, wearing a crown and carrying a sceptre, went to High Mass at the parish church; he was preceded by a man carrying the wren fastened to the top of a pole, which was decorated with a wreath of olive leaves, oak or mistletoe cut from an oak. After the service the King, together with his retinue, paid visits to the bishop, the mayor, the magistrates and other notable citizens. Money was given to the participants, a banquet was held in the evening, and the celebrations concluded with a dance. Unfortunately this picturesque ceremony was suppressed in 1830. In some places in France and the Isle of Man the wren was solemnly buried in a churchyard.

The ceremonies are certainly very ancient and probably date from the Bronze Age. Unfortunately, documentary evidence earlier than the 19th century is practically nonexistent, so we have to piece together an interpretation from a variety of scattered clues. The geographical distribution of the ritual is significant. It would seem that the people amongst whom wren ceremonies were important reached southern France from elsewhere in the Mediterranean and carried elements of their culture northwestwards, eventually reaching the British Isles. There are grounds for believing that these same folk may have been the builders of some of the megalithic monuments which are found in areas where wren ritual was practised.

Through the Keyhole of Hell

The date of the custom provides a valuable clue to its meaning. Midwinter was for our ancestors a crucial turning-point of the year and many ceremonies performed at this time were intended to combat or chase away the powers of darkness and co-operate with the sun in restoring light, warmth and growth to the world. The wren frequents thickets and penetrates holes, crevices and other dark places, as its scientific name Troglodytes troglodytes, 'dweller in caves', indicates. It was therefore a suitable representative of the powers opposed to or complementary to the sun.

This view is borne out by the well-known fable of the competition between the eagle and the wren to decide which could fly highest. The wren defeated the eagle – the bird of the sun – by trickery. In many languages the wren is called 'king', suggesting that long ago it was regarded as allied with mysterious powers; these may have been the dark potencies believed to reside in the earth. An ancient Irish document refers to the wren as a bird with oracular powers.

As heat proceeds from the sun, it was natural that birds, being creatures of the sky, should be regarded as fire-bringers. Such birds were commonly identified by the red badge of fire on their plumage. The robin (see ROBIN) was one of these and in France the wren was also a fire-bringer, perhaps because when it is in its full spring plumage some of its feathers have a ruddy tinge. It was said that when the wren fetched fire from heaven most of its plumage was scorched away. The other birds compassionately donated some of their feathers, but the robin came too close and its breast feathers were burnt. Another French version relates that as the wren was flying to earth with the fire its wings burst into flame; it passed the brand to the robin, whose breast feathers also became alight. The high-flying lark then came to the rescue and brought the precious burden to mankind. The Bretons explain that the wren fetched fire, not from heaven but from hell. Her plumage became scorched as she escaped the infernal regions through the keyhole.

So closely were the robin and wren associated in folklore that they were regarded as male and female of the same species – a notion which has lingered to the present time in some localities.

> The robin redbreast and the wren
> Are God Almighty's cock and hen.

A Scots ballad refers to their marriage tiff over who ate the porridge:

> The robin redbreast and the wran
> Coost out about the parritch pan;
> And ere the robin got a spune
> The wran she had the parritch dune.

Although in many localities the wren was hunted and killed at the winter solstice, this does not imply that it was generally regarded as in any sense an evil creature. On the contrary, it was usual for birds and beasts held in high respect to be sacrificed on some special occasion during the year. In France it was said that the crime of robbing a wren's nest would entail the destruction by fire of the culprit's house, or that his fingers would shrivel and drop off.

An indication of the affection in which the wren was held in France is provided by its appearance in legends connected with various saints. A delightful story records that St Malo, finding that a wren had built a nest in his habit, which he had laid on a bush while working in the monastery vineyard, went without the garment until the bird had reared its young. St Dol, noticing that the monks at his monastery were distracted during their devotions by the calls of the birds in the neighbouring woods, ordered the birds to depart. He made an exception of the wren, because its sparkling song cheered the brethren without interfering with their concentration on prayer and praise.

E. A. ARMSTRONG

FURTHER READING: E. A. Armstrong, The Wren (Collins, 1955).

Ironically, the lasting influence of this Polish Messianist was not in his hoped-for 'Absolute Reform of Human Knowledge' but in passing on to the famous magician Eliphas Levi, the secrets of occultism which he had so long attempted to hide

J.M.H.-WRONSKI

Polish Institute

JOSEPH MARIA HOËNE-WRONSKI was born at Wolsztyn in Poland in 1776. His career led him from misfortune to misfortune, until he died in Paris in 1853 in a condition which the intrigued observers of a man believed variously to be a fraud, a genius, a madman and a divinity, unite in calling miserable. But he left disciples, and after the First World War a 'Hoëne-Wronski Institute of Messianism' was set up in Warsaw. More recently, a lengthy bibliography of Wronskiite works was issued by the Polish Academy. To Wronski's credit must be placed the crucial influence in the life of Eliphas Levi (see LEVI), various mechanical inventions, including what seems to have been a tank, and the discovery in 1803 of 'the Absolute'.

This misplaced Renaissance figure was the son of Antoine Hoëne, the court architect (the 'Wronski' was added later). When the Poles rebelled in 1794 against the partition of their country between Russia and Prussia, Wronski distinguished himself in the fighting but was eventually captured by the Russians, with whom he took the opportunity to enlist. Eventually he left the Russian service with the rank of major, and spent the next three years studying philosophy in Germany, chiefly the system of Immanuel Kant. In 1800 his dormant sense of patriotism revived, and he set off to join the legions gathering in Italy under Dombrowski to free Poland. But the patriot succumbed to the man of science and Wronski returned to scientific researches at the Observatory of Marseilles. In 1810 he married the daughter of a well-known French astronomer: by that date he had discovered the Absolute.

The Absolute is the knowledge of truth attained through human reason. At least, Wronski always claimed he had reached this state through rational thought, but as his philosophical works are couched in mathematical terms, it is almost impossible for the layman to understand him. From the sum of his sense impressions, a man could 'create reality' in accordance with Wronski's 'Law of Creation', a mathematical expression of no meaning to those who are not mathematicians, and little enough significance to some who are. Wronski's supporters derive his theory from pure mathematics and the influence of Kant; but it is just as likely that it comes from mystical experiences and a knowledge of the Cabala (see CABALA).

Christ among Nations

The rebellion in which Wronski changed sides was one in a series of ill-starred attempts by the Poles to reassert their nationhood. Perpetually fought over and partitioned, Poland became for Romantic Europe, and for France in particular, the epitome of heroic resistance. Another rebellion, hopelessly ill-timed, took place in 1830–31 and the Tsarist regime allowed the wholesale emigration of the Polish officer corps.

About 12,000 Polish refugees were allowed to enter France, where they became national heroes. Until that time Wronski had enjoyed a monopoly of 'Messianism', the Polish national philosophy; he became most disgruntled when one of the late arrivals, the great Polish poet Adam Mickiewicz, started lecturing at the Collège de France. Mickiewicz, when told that Wronski was accusing him of stealing his ideas, asked whether Jesus Christ had taken out a patent.

Polish Messianism compared the Polish and Jewish nations. The perpetual suffering of the Poles was seen as a counterpart to the sufferings of the dispersed tribes of Israel, forever denied the right to exist as a free nation. Nevertheless they were the chosen people: to justify the national run of bad luck it was argued that Poland was the Christ among nations. Just as Christ, by his suffering, had redeemed each individual human being, Poland, by hers, would redeem all nations.

Sage in Tatters

The apocalyptic mood of these doctrines was emphasized by two factors. The first was the existence in 18th century Poland of the very influential Jewish revivalist movement known as Hasidism (see HASIDISM). Founded by Israel Baal Shem, who died in 1760, this represented an attempt to make of the Jewish Cabala a really popular tradition. Some of this cabalistic enthusiasm was imported by the Polish immigrants into France where, transformed by the romantic imagination of Eliphas Levi, it became the basis of the later revival of ritual magic. The second current of thought was that represented by Martinism (see MARTINISTS) and other forms of occult Freemasonry, which had thoroughly penetrated the Masonic orders in Poland and Russia and were prominent in liberal and anti-Tsarist circles. Such doctrines, with their symbolic interpretation of Masonic ritual and ideas of 'Hidden Chiefs' behind the apparent superiors of the Order, were also markedly to influence the development of modern occultism (see MASTERS).

But Wronski, although he had read the German mystic Boehme, and was expert in the Cabala and familiar with the teachings of the early Gnostics, was most anxious to conceal his occult studies, according to Eliphas Levi. His teachings were supposedly strictly rationalist: he had, after all, to earn his living. He was soon forced into penury by the withdrawal of a subsidy which the French Academy had paid him when he studied at Marseilles. The publication of his first work was enough, embodying as it did the 'Supreme Law of Algorithmy'.

Wronski's devotion to his own genius was admirable. He survived by schoolmastering in Montmartre; he went about in wooden clogs; his little child died. In this state, he is hardly to be blamed for fastening onto a gullible businessman called Arson, who had made a fortune and wanted to improve himself. In 1812 Arson met Wronski through a mutual friend and was overwhelmed by the wisdom of the sage in tatters. He agreed to take a course of instruction from Wronski, and eventually financed the publication of his Messianic works, which were soon rolling off the presses in indigestible volumes. Then Arson was initiated into the secret of the Absolute. Perhaps this was less illuminating than he had expected, for the businessman decided that he wanted to go back on the bargain and published a pamphlet entitled Materials towards a History of the World's Great Frauds. Wronski replied, and a polemical battle began, which was continued in the courts to the total discomfiture of Arson, who had foolishly signed a binding contract. Wronski ever afterwards declared Arson to be a real incarnation of Satan.

Sum of Human Knowledge

To do Wronski justice, if he was out to exploit Arson it was solely to publish his books. This seems all he was ever interested in; but it rapidly became necessary to seek new sources of income. In the hope of claiming a reward offered by the British Board of Longitude for improvements in their system of navigation, Wronski pounced on an error in the Nautical Almanac, sent the Board a complex correction to their theory of refractions and followed it to London. Here he was soon reduced again to extreme poverty. The Nautical Almanac incorporated his correction without payment or acknowledgement; Wronski petitioned Parliament, showered Sir Humphry Davy with letters and persuaded a clergyman to swear before the Lord Mayor as to the justice of his case. The learned bodies maintained a stony silence.

In this period of total catastrophe Wronski began yet another project, which for some time seemed to promise not merely relief from poverty but positive riches. It was a system for steam engines which he called the 'dynamogenic system': the engine could dispense with rails, travelling on specially reinforced roads. By 1833 he had actually signed a contract with a French company which would have kept him comfortably for at least 15 years. But Wronski's soaring mind had deduced from his invention further principles of mechanics, which he conceived it his duty to publish. The company objected to Wronski's making public property of their experiments, using, moreover, the money given to him to build working models. They broke the contract and Wronski was again without support.

He was not to find a new patron till 1850; but somehow his works were still printed. Appeals to the Tsar failed to produce the expected summons to implement his political programme immediately. But at this time he met Eliphas Levi, whom he is said to have initiated into the secrets of the Cabala.

It is indeed ironic to think that the lasting influence of the Polish Messianist was not in his hoped-for 'Absolute Reform of Human Knowledge', but in passing on the secrets of occultism which he had so long attempted to hide. For this encounter gave a completely new direction to the life of the former Abbé Constant, turning Levi from the lunatic fringe of politics towards magic. Shortly afterwards he adopted his pseudonym.

One day in 1873 Eliphas Levi discovered in a junk shop Wronski's pride and joy. This was the Prognometer. Whilst the Pole had been alive, the disciple had never been allowed to touch it; now he bought the machine. Inside the central globe of this curious construction was another, inscribed with equations. By adjusting the machine, the operator could bring together on any given point the sum of human knowledge. The Prognometer contained the solution to every problem. Wronski's widow survived him, poverty-stricken, but believing herself to have been married to a god.

J. C. N. WEBB

WRYNECK

THE WRYNECK is a rather inconspicuous, slim, greyish-brown bird with mottled and streaked plumage, which lives in woodland and is related to the woodpeckers. Both its common name and its specific scientific name, torquilla, refer to the way in which the bird twists and turns its neck when disturbed at the nest or handled.

Today the wryneck is commoner on the Continent and attracted the attention of the Greeks in classical times. Aristotle gives an excellent description of it in his Natural History. Among the Greeks it had importance in ritual as well as mythology. It seems that the bird was spread out on a wheel with four spokes, which was then rotated as part of a magical procedure, probably as a love charm. In all probability this custom, in which the wryneck was associated with a revolving wheel, arose from observation of the peculiar manner in which it rotates its neck. Until recently the wheel had many magical associations (see WHEEL), arising in large part from its movement seeming to resemble the curved path of the sun and moon across the sky.

As the rotating wheel had magical power, it was assumed that the bird which rotated its head and arrived from abroad when the sun was rising higher in the sky also had magical significance. Thus it became involved with a complex of ideas – fire and fertility, sun and moon, witchcraft and love, gods and goddesses. On a Greek vase Adonis is depicted holding out a wryneck to the goddess of love, Aphrodite. On another, Cupid, winged and nude, revolves a wheel in front of Adonis while a female figure holds out a wryneck.

When the bird was commoner in England countryfolk noticed that it returned in spring about the same time as the cuckoo or a little before it; hence it was called in Norfolk 'cuckoo's leader', in Gloucestershire 'cuckoo's footman' and in East Anglia 'cuckoo's mate'. Other names are derived from peculiarities in its behaviour – 'turkey bird' because of the way it ruffles its neck feathers when disturbed, 'writhe neck' and 'snake bird' from its neck-twisting and 'tongue bird' because of its long tongue.

The god of Israel revealed himself to Moses in the burning bush with the words 'I am who I am': modern scholarship suggests an origin and development of the cult of Yahweh far different from that presented in the Bible

YAHWEH

ACCORDING TO modern academic opinion, 'Yahweh' represents the personal name of the god of Israel. In the ancient religions, gods had personal names as well as titles: thus in the Hebrew Bible the god of Israel is called Yahweh as well as 'God' (in Hebrew, Elohim), or 'God Almighty' (El Shaddai). Yahweh is actually a vocalized form of what is known as the divine Tetragrammaton, the four consonantal letters YHWH by which the personal name of Israel's god is written in the Hebrew scriptures (see NAMES).

Hebrew was originally written in a consonantal script, the vowels being supplied by the reader. But the name signified by YHWH gradually became too sacred to be pronounced, with the result that the original vowels were forgotten. Instead of pronouncing the name where it occurred in the scriptures, the Jews substituted Adonai (My Lord). For this reason, in English translations of the Bible YHWH has generally been rendered as 'the Lord'. Another English rendering of the name, often used in hymns, is 'Jehovah', but the form derives from a medieval usage for which there is no authority. Some scholars think that another early form of the name was 'Yahu', which could have been a primitive cultic invocation: ya-hu, 'oh He!'

There has been much speculation about the meaning of the name Yahweh. This speculation can even be traced far back into the Bible itself, for the Hebrew author of Exodus 3, 14, who may have written about 800 BC, tried to explain the name. The passage is very important and merits quotation. It occurs in the dramatic account of Moses and the burning bush, which was intended to explain how Yahweh first revealed his concern for the Israelites, who were then in bondage to the Egyptians.

The episode begins by telling how the attention of Moses was attracted, one day in the desert of Horeb, by a burning bush. On going near to investigate, Moses heard a voice announcing: 'I am the God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.' The mysterious presence then revealed his intention to deliver the people of Israel from Egypt and settle them in the land of Canaan, and that Moses should be his agent in effecting this. In reply, the astounded Moses asked: 'If I come to the people of Israel and say to them, "The God of your fathers has sent me to you," and they ask me, "What is his name?" what shall I say to them?' The answer then given is in fact an attempt to explain the meaning of 'Yahweh'. Moses is told by the strange divinity: 'I AM WHO I AM . . . Say this to the people of Israel, "I AM has sent me to you."'

In this curious statement the ancient Hebrew writer was trying to connect the name Yahweh with the verb 'to be' (hayah). Today scholars still debate its meaning; it has recently been suggested by a specialist of great authority that the name signifies 'he causes to be, or brings into being'.

Another passage in the book of Exodus (6.2–3) reveals that the ancient Jews were aware that Yahweh had not always been worshipped under that name by their ancestors: 'And God said to Moses, "I am Yahweh. I appeared to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob as God Almighty (El Shaddai), but by my name Yahweh I was not known to them."' This consciousness that Yahweh had become the god of Israel at some definite point in the past finds graphic expression in the account of the covenant made between Yahweh and Israel at Mt Sinai, as recorded in Exodus. This momentous event is described as having taken place shortly after Israel's marvellous deliverance from the bondage of Egypt. Moses had led the Israelite tribes into the Sinai desert, to the sacred mountain of Yahweh. The mysterious god, into whose presence Moses then ascends, is represented as promising the terms of the covenant to Israel: 'Now therefore, if you will obey my voice and keep my covenant, you shall be my own possession among all peoples; for all the earth is mine, and you shall be to me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation' (Exodus 19.5–6).

The Sacred History

Belief in this ancient covenant has conferred on the Jewish people their distinctive character and destiny in the history of mankind. Their unique achievements and awful sufferings stem from their conviction that Yahweh, whom they identify with the divine Creator of the universe, made them his Elect People (see ELECTION). The records of his dealings with their race constitute their holy scriptures, on which both their cultural and religious life have been continuously nourished. It is from these scriptures, however, that modern scholars have reconstructed a very different account of the origin and development of the cult of Yahweh.

Nearly a century of critical study of the Hexateuch (the first six books of the Bible) has shown that a single writer or a succession of writers were responsible for presenting Yahweh as the unique god of Israel. It appears that the ancient Hebrew writers who created the tradition about Yahweh were the literary representatives of a powerful group of Yahwist devotees concerned to promote the cult of Yahweh. They were obliged to do this because Yahweh was not originally the god of many of the tribes which came to form the people of Israel.

In the Hexateuch three distinct cycles of tradition about Yahweh can be discerned. The first can best be designated the 'Primeval History'. It starts at Genesis 2.4 with Yahweh's creation of Adam and ends by telling how the original unity of mankind was broken by the confusion of languages, as divine punishment for the building of the Tower of Babel (Genesis 11.1–9). In this Primeval History, Yahweh is presented in a universalist setting as the Creator of the human race. The Jews do not figure specifically in the narrative; but a hint is given about their future settlement in the land of Canaan in the curious episode concerning Ham's offence against his father Noah, recorded in Genesis 9. 20–27. Instead of cursing Ham, Noah curses Ham's son, Canaan, and decrees that he shall be the slave of Noah's other sons, Shem and Japheth. From Shem, we are told, the Hebrews descended, and the Philistines from Japheth. Thus the Yahwist writer prepared the way for his later narrative: for the Hebrews and the Philistines were to dispossess the Canaanites of Canaan, their land.

The next cycle of Yahwist tradition can be aptly termed the 'Patriarchal Saga'; for it describes the careers of four generations of Hebrew patriarchs who are presented as the ancestors of the Israelites. They are Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and the sons of Jacob, the most notable being Joseph. It concludes with a series of vividly described episodes concerning the fortunes of Joseph, used by the Yahwist writer to explain how the descendants of the patriarchs came to settle in Egypt instead of Canaan.

The third cycle of Yahwist tradition begins in the first chapter of the book of Exodus. A long period has elapsed since the sons of Jacob first settled in Egypt, and their offspring have now grown into a populous nation. Their increasing numbers so alarm the Egyptians that they enslave them. It is to deliver Israel from this oppression that Yahweh appears to Moses in the burning bush, and commissions him to tell Pharaoh to release the people. The colourful account of the ten plagues that precede the exodus from Egypt, and the marvellous crossing of the Red Sea, reveal the power of Yahweh and his care for his chosen people. This cycle of tradition concludes with Israel's conquest of Canaan, fulfilling Yahweh's ancient promise to Abraham.

The Yahwist narrative is thus a most impressive demonstration of how Yahweh had guided world events from the Fall of Adam to the settlement of Israel in the land of Canaan. But, impressive though it is and influential as it has been, this sacred history is essentially a propagandist work. It was designed to show two things: that the various Israelite tribes in Canaan had a common ancestry, and that Yahweh was their ancestral god. Modern research has revealed that this version of Israel's past was composed because the real situation had been very different.

War God of the Desert

Of the three cycles of Yahwist tradition which have been outlined here, that concerning the exodus from Egypt and the conquest of Canaan is historically the most important. For it is clearly based on a firmly established memory among the Hebrews that their ancestors had escaped from servitude in Egypt and had succeeded in conquering Canaan, and that Yahweh had been essentially connected with these momentous events. There was also a memory that the cult of Yahweh had started with a covenant made at Mount Sinai, in which Moses was the mediator between Yahweh and the Israelite tribes.

After much study of the traditions concerning the exodus and the conquest of Canaan, modern scholars have reached something like the following interpretation of the historical events which lie behind them. It would appear that certain Semite tribes, possibly those known as the Joseph tribes, escaped from Egypt under a leader called Moses. These tribes believed that they owed their deliverance to a war god of the desert, whom they came to know as Yahweh. This deity, who seems to have been associated with fire and storm, may possibly have been worshipped by the Kenites, a nomadic people dwelling in the desert land of Midian. The tribes, led by Moses, united with other Semite tribes for the purpose of invading and settling in Canaan. This union was placed under the patronage of Yahweh, whose prestige as a potent war god was high. Yahweh's presence among the marching tribes was located in a portable wooden ark; this ark was sheltered in a tabernacle or tent, which formed the focus of worship when the tribes encamped.

After the tribes had established themselves in Canaan the ark of Yahweh was deposited at Shiloh, which became his cult centre. However, despite the success gained under his patronage, Yahweh's hold on the allegiance of many of the tribes was insecure. Although these tribes had accepted Yahweh as the divine patron of their federation, they still remained loyal to their ancestral gods or tended to adopt the Canaanite gods. The attraction of these latter gods was great, since they were fertility deities and their help was needed by the nomadic invaders as they settled down to an agricultural economy (see VEGETATION SPIRITS). Doubtless many reasoned that Yahweh was indeed a powerful god in the desert and in war, but how could he make the corn grow in fertile Canaan?

This desertion of Yahweh was vehemently opposed by his devotees, and they were soon able to back their exhortations to loyalty by military facts. The Israelite conquest of Canaan had not been complete and the Canaanites began to fight back; moreover, the Philistines who had settled in

Scala

The god of Israel, Yahweh is depicted in the first part of the book of Genesis as the divine creator of the world: Creation of the World, 17th century painting by Fiamminga the coastal area became aggressive. The Israelites' original success had lain in their unity; when their tribal federation broke up, they became an easy prey to their enemies. Thus the Yahwist prophets had a strong case. They could argue that when the tribes had been loyal to Yahweh, he had fulfilled his covenant and given them victory; but when they deserted him for other gods, he had punished them by defeat. The book of Judges records the pattern of Hebrew history at this time. Israel is subjugated by its enemies; a Yahwist leader then recalls them to their allegiance to Yahweh and victory follows; but later the tribes again revert to other gods and the process is repeated.

Shrine at Jerusalem

However, the persistent endeavour of the Yahwists gradually bore fruit, and under Saul and David, the first Israelite kings, the cult of Yahweh was established as the national religion. After David's capture of Jerusalem from the Jebusites (c 1000 BC), the Ark of Yahweh was brought there and placed in the Temple which David's son, Solomon, built for Yahweh on Mt Moriah. The place was reputed to be the site where Abraham had attempted to offer up Isaac, his son, as a sacrifice to Yahweh. Thus began Yahweh's association with that historic site, which is still commemorated in the celebrated Wailing Wall of the Jews.

The construction of a national shrine to Yahweh at Jerusalem was indeed a momentous event, and its consequences have been immense not only for the Jews but for a large part of mankind (see JERUSALEM). But it did not mean that the supremacy of Yahweh was yet assured, or that the Israelites had been consolidated into a single nation under the protection of Yahweh. Indeed, after Solomon's death the people split into two separate kingdoms: that of Israel with its capital at Samaria, and that of Judah with Jerusalem as its centre (see LOST TRIBES). Moreover, as the books of Kings show, there was still a deep-rooted tendency to worship the Canaanite gods, or to serve Yahweh with ritual practices appropriate to Baal, the Canaanite god (see BAAL; SYRIA AND PALESTINE).

It was to counteract these dangers that the Yahwist version of Israel's past, which is contained in the Hexateuch, was constructed. The intentions behind its three distinctive parts varied, but they all supported the major theme of the composition as a whole: to reveal the purpose and power of Yahweh. Thus the account of the exodus and the conquest of Canaan commemorated the two momentous events that marked the beginning of Israel's life as a nation, together with its covenant with Yahweh at Mt Sinai. The preceding Patriarchal Saga was designed to show that the various tribes which had settled in Canaan were really a homogeneous people, descended from common ancestors. It also taught these tribes that their possession of Canaan was the fulfilment of the promise that Yahweh had made to their ancestors. To this national history the Primeval History served as a most impressive introduction, revealing that Yahweh, the god of Israel, was the divine Creator of the world and had guided its affairs from the beginning for the good of his chosen people, Israel.

This Yahwist philosophy of history succeeded in its purpose. It established the idea of the 12 tribes of Israel forming a single nation, united in a common past and a common faith. It has subsequently been a major factor in preserving the national consciousness of the Jews during all the painful vicissitudes of their long history; and its influence on Christianity has been incalculable (see HISTORY).

The conception of Yahweh underwent much change during the course of centuries. In origin and nature Yahwism was an ethnic religion. It was essentially concerned with the relationship between Yahweh and his chosen people, Israel. Individual persons were significant only in so far as they affected, by their conduct, this relationship for good or ill. They could look forward to no life after death, for Yahweh had decreed man's fate when he sentenced Adam for his original sin: 'You are dust, and to dust you shall return' (Genesis 3.19). The most that was promised to the individual was that Yahweh would reward his pious service with a long life in this world, economic prosperity, and sons to inherit him. But at death the same grim fate awaited all persons, good

Corvina, Budapest

It was essential for the early Christians to preserve the Hebraic message of the creator god, who was active in history and who loved his world, and Yahweh was eventually transmuted into the Christian god who 'so loved the world that he gave his only Son, that whoever believes in him may have eternal life (John 3.16): God the Father by Tiepolo or bad. What survived the physical disintegration of death descended to Sheol, which was conceived as an immense pit, far below the foundations of the world, shrouded in dust and gloom (see HELL).

This view of human destiny became increasingly intolerable, as prophets emphasized that Yahweh was not only omnipotent, but also a just god, who required just dealing from his people. For experience showed that only too often it was the just who suffered in this world, while the unjust prospered. Consequently, because there was no hope of recompense after death, the justice of Yahweh was questioned. The book of Job illustrates the tension that built up for the faithful Israelite (see JOB).

When the book of Job was written, the problems of innocent suffering could not be solved since there could be no redress after death. But by the middle of the 2nd century BC belief in a resurrection and judgement of the dead had become established in Israel (see JUDGEMENT OF THE DEAD). However, although this development made Yahwism a more satisfactory personal faith, the old ethnic character of the religion remained. Indeed, it became more vehemently presented owing to the worsening of Israel's political fortunes.

The basic tenet of Yahwism was that Yahweh had settled Israel in Canaan, and had consented to dwell in the Temple built for him at Jerusalem. But Israel was a small nation, and it became a victim of the power politics of the ancient Near East. Solomon's Temple was destroyed in 586 BC by the Babylonian forces of Nebuchadnezzar, and the better part of the people sent in captivity into Babylonia. On the return from this exile in 538, the Temple was rebuilt on a modest scale. But the Holy Land of Yahweh continued to be controlled, except for a brief period, by foreign powers or uncongenial native rulers until its incorporation into the Roman Empire in 6 AD. One of these rulers, Herod the Great (37–4 BC), an Idumean by race and Jewish by profession, whom the Jews hated exceedingly, rebuilt the Temple on a most magnificent scale, but it failed to placate the Jews. The subjugation of Israel contradicted their ideal of it as a theocracy. This contradiction led to a fervently held belief that Yahweh would ultimately intervene, or send his Messiah, to overthrow Israel's enemies and restore its sovereignty in its Holy Land.

The belief eventually proved fatal to Israel. The yoke of heathen Rome was increasingly felt to be intolerable, and in 66 AD the people revolted (see ZEALOTS). They trusted that Yahweh would interpose with some miracle to save them. But after a bitter struggle, in 70 AD the Romans captured Jerusalem and burnt the Temple. Israel's national life in the land of Yahweh's promise ended then in awful disaster, until its restoration in 1948.

(See also HIGH GODS; JUDAISM; SKY.)

S. G. F. BRANDON

FURTHER READING: W. F. Albright, Yahweh and the Gods of Canaan (Eisenbrauns, 1978); S. G. F. Brandon, Jesus and the Zealots (Scribner, 1968); M. North, History of Israel (Harper and Row, 2nd edn., 1960); H. H. Rowley, From Joseph to Joshua (Oxford Univ. Press, 1950) and Worship in Ancient Israel (Fortress, 1967).

W.B.YEATS

'I HAD NOT taken up these subjects wilfully, nor through love of strangeness, nor love of excitement, nor because I found myself in some experimental circle, but because unaccountable things happened in my childhood, and because of an ungovernable craving. When supernatural events begin, a man first doubts his own testimony, but when they repeat themselves again and again, he doubts all human testimony. At least he knows his own bias, and may perhaps allow for it, but how trust historian and psychologist that have for some three hundred years ignored in writing the history of the world, or of the human mind, so momentous a part of human experience? What else had they ignored and distorted?'

The view current among Yeats's younger contemporaries during his lifetime was that, considering the nonsense Yeats took seriously, his verse was surprisingly good; T. S. Eliot, by contrast, was regarded as learned in all that it befitted a poet to know. Time has worked a reversal of that judgement: there is a tradition of spiritual knowledge which comprises a body of learning not taught in the schools, with its own great literature, besides its unwritten gnosis, accessible only to those who submit themselves, as Yeats did, to a spiritual discipline. Yeats was in his own field a learned, even a scholarly poet, though not in an academic sense.

The son of Anglo-Irish parents of Protestant stock, William Butler Yeats (1865–1939) did not inherit the Catholic faith of the nation for whose cause he worked as a member of the Young Ireland movement, and in whose parliament he afterwards became a Senator. His father, the portrait painter J. B. Yeats, a member of a Pre-Raphaelite community at Bedford Park, in London, felt no need for any religion beyond his own courteous humanism. Yeats's mother, a Pollexfen from Sligo, was imaginative rather than religious; and Yeats's sense of the supernatural was first aroused by the country people of Sligo, the paradise of his childhood.

As an art student in Dublin Yeats formed a friendship with a class-mate, George Russell (A. E.) a natural mystic and visionary

(see RUSSELL). Under the influence of A. P. Sinnett's Esoteric Buddhism the Dublin Hermetic Society was founded. On the invitation of this society the theosophist Mohini Chatterjee (named in a poem written many years later) came to Dublin, and from him Yeats learned the rudiments of Hindu philosophy, which remained a lifelong study. (Sri Purohit Swami dedicated to Yeats on his 70th birthday his translation of the Gita; and the poet collaborated with the Swami in translating the Ten Principal Upanishads, published in 1937.) Yeats and A.E. both became members of the Theosophical Society; in The Trembling of the Veil Yeats has described with amusement and sympathy his impressions on meeting Mme Blavatsky (see BLAVATSKY; THEOSOPHY).

Among his father's friends was Edwin J. Ellis, a minor poet and painter interested in esoteric matters. Blake was, during the 1880s, much in vogue in Pre-Raphaelite circles and Yeats, in collaboration with Ellis, set to work on the Blake manuscripts in the possession of the Linnell family to produce the first edition of his longer poems, the three-volume Quaritch edition (1893). The commentary is based upon the authors' esoteric knowledge; they rightly surmised that Blake had access to an esoteric tradition, though they had at that time no exact knowledge of Blake's sources. Yeats may have come to Swedenborg (see SWEDENBORG) through his Blake studies.

Education in Magic

While working on Blake in the British Museum Reading Room Yeats noticed a figure who captured his imagination: S. Liddell Mathers, afterwards known as MacGregor Mathers, was copying magical manuscripts and rituals. Yeats afterwards described him as 'a learned, but not a scholarly man'. In 1887 Mathers became, with two distinguished English Rosicrucians a co-founder of the Hermetic Society of the Golden Dawn (see GOLDEN DAWN). Yeats was initiated in May or June 1887 under the motto Diabolus est Deus Inversus (Frater D.E.D.I.). Yeats helped Mathers to write the rituals, drawing upon the Chaldean Oracles, the Egyptian Book of the Dead, and (evidently Yeats's contribution) William Blake.

Yeats's fictitious figure Michael Robartes (who first appears in the early romance Rosa Alchemica) is no doubt based upon Mathers, 'who seemed, before I heard his name, or knew the nature of his studies, a figure of romance'. Rosa Alchemica describes a magical initiation, in which superhuman beings descend to dance with mortals on a marbled floor in 'an agony of trance', long afterwards recalled in the poem Byzantium. Michael Robartes appears again as the Initiator of A Vision; this work, an 'arbitrary, harsh and difficult' diagrammatic system relating historical cycles and human character to the 28 phases of the moon, resembles related systems by Eliphas Levi (see LEVI) and others, which Yeats had studied as an initiate of the Golden Dawn.

Through Yeats a number of his friends, including Florence Farr and Maud Gonne, became members of the Order. Nearly all the early members were high-minded people, including Anglo-Catholic clergymen and even for a time Evelyn Underhill, the writer on mysticism. The volumes of the ritual, since published by Israel Regardie, do not include the many essays on prayer, the Catholic sacraments, the doctrines of the Virgin Birth, Apostolic Succession and the like, circulated among adepts. The original object of the Society was, beyond the study of magical techniques of various kinds, the alchemical 'great work' of self perfection (see ALCHEMY). Subsequent quarrels arose from Mathers's dictatorial attitude and increasing interest in black magic. Yeats was the leader of the movement to throw out Mathers's pupil Aleister Crowley, who under the name and number of 'the Great Beast' of the Apocalypse openly identified himself with the Antichrist, and practised a form of sexual magic (see CROWLEY). Yeats was at no time anti-Christian, nor was sexual magic practised by the Golden Dawn.

In the troubles which followed the expulsion of Crowley, and afterwards of Mathers, other fragmentations disrupted the Order. A. E. Waite (see WAITE), author of scholarly works on the Cabala and Rosicrucianism, resigned, with a group of adherents who wished to devote themselves exclusively to spiritual development; Yeats was among those who wished to study magic. In 1901 he published a pamphlet circulated among members of the Lodge, Is the Order of R.R. and A.C. to Remain a Magical Order? (R.R. and A.C. stand for Rosea Rubiae and Aurea Crucis, the higher grades of the Golden Dawn). In it he urged the continuation of the strict examination system by which initiates worked their way through the degrees of adeptship. This document, written to be read by friends who shared his deepest beliefs, is perhaps Yeats's most open declaration of faith. In 1905 Yeats, Wynn Westcott and Arthur Machen resigned; the poet had been a member of the Order for nearly eight years.

Yeats's interest since boyhood in the fairy lore of Ireland, still a living tradition at the end of the 19th century, was an important element in his widespread knowledge of occult matters: Mr W. B. Yeats presenting Mr George Moore to the Queen of the Fairies, a caricature by Max Beerbohm

Heinemann

The Golden Dawn taught the Western esoteric tradition; the Cabala was central, and adeptship was based upon the Tree of Life and the sefiroth, to which were added the Tarot symbols, the Egyptian pantheon and other mythological equivalents (see CABALA; TAROT). Such was the real ground of all Yeats's subsequent thought: he received no formal education after leaving school; and his true education was a most thorough, serious and practical knowledge of magic and its literature, including alchemy, through the Golden Dawn, together with an introduction to the Platonic and Eastern traditions, through the Theosophical Society. In the pamphlet already mentioned he defines magic as he understood it: 'The central principle of all the Magic of power is that everything we formulate in the imagination, if we formulate it strongly enough, realizes itself in the circumstances of life, acting either through our own souls, or through the spirit of nature.'

The course of Yeats's wide and deep reading was to a great extent determined by these studies. The publications of the Theosophical Society, and publishers and authors under theosophical influence, give a good idea of the scope of his interests. The level of scholarship in this circle was high: learning remained in the hands of such scholars as G. R. S. Mead, A. E. Waite, Harold Bayley and Stephen McKenna, whose qualifications were more than academic.

Yeats also studied history, comparative mythology (the Golden Bough set its stamp upon a generation), works on symbolism by Harold S. Bayley and others. Among English poets he preferred the Platonists – Spenser, Shakespeare, Shelley, Blake. He was widely read in philosophy, from the Cambridge Platonists and Berkeley to Kant, Hegel, Spengler and Wittgenstein.

He was also interested in Spiritualism: he maintained a critical attitude, not from scepticism but because he understood that many explanations of the undoubted phenomena were possible. His play The Words upon the Window Pane is drawn from his knowledge of mediumship and seances.

A no less important tributary of Yeats's knowledge of occult matters was his interest (continuous from boyhood) in the fairy lore of Ireland, still a living tradition at the end of the 19th century. The collection of folklore by Douglas Hyde and others inspired Yeats to follow their example. The Celtic Twilight contains material gathered round Sligo; and he presently inspired Lady Gregory to collect similar material in Galway. In his introduction and notes to her Visions and Beliefs he relates folklore to the learned tradition of the Platonists and to Swedenborg. W. Y. Evens-Wentz, since famous as the translator of the Tibetan Buddhist scriptures, dedicated to Yeats his first book, The Fairy Faith in Celtic Countries, in which he argues that the Irish folk-beliefs are a remote memory of learned Druidism.

Yeats dreamed of establishing, with the help of Maud Gonne, a Hermetic order in Ireland, whose temple was to be in a castle on an island in Lough Key. The rituals were to be Irish in character, substituting perhaps for the Egyptian gods of the Golden Dawn, Irish gods; as he hoped to do in an epic. 'Patrick or Columcille, Oisin or Finn in Prometheus' stead; and, instead of the Caucasus, Cro-Patrick or Ben Bulben. Have not all races had their first unity from a mythology that marries them to rock or hill?'

In Byzantium, a city at once Christian and Hellenic, Yeats found a symbol which seemed to epitomize the imaginative integration of 'unity of being' within that 'unity of culture' without which no true unity of being is possible to the individual. 'I think that in early Byzantium, maybe never before or since in recorded history, religious, aesthetic and practical life were one, that architect and artificers – though not, it may be, poets, for language had been the instrument of controversy and must have grown abstract – spoke to the multitude and the few alike. The painter, the mosaic worker, the worker in gold and silver, the illuminator of sacred books, were almost impersonal, almost perhaps without the consciousness of individual design, absorbed in their subject-matter and that the vision of a whole people.'

To restore to the Irish nation a unity of culture founded upon a mythology expressed in works of art was the ambition of the poet; who could not endure 'an international art, picking stories and symbols where it pleased'. It was his purpose as a poet so to 'deepen the political passion of the nation that all, artist and poet, craftsman and day-labourer would accept a common design. Perhaps even these images, once created and associated with river and mountain, might move of themselves and with some powerful, even turbulent life, like those painted horses that trampled the ricefields of Japan.'

'Age-long Memoried Self'

His biographer, Joseph Hone, played down Yeats's concern with occultism, which most of his academic readers and admirers also dismiss as being either discreditable or irrelevant. Others defend their poet on the grounds that he studied magic only for the sake of his poetry; quoting in support of this too facile judgement a phrase from A Vision in which Instructors say, 'we have come to give you metaphors for poetry'.

The evidence is rather that Yeats regarded poetry as a special kind of magic, than magic as a special kind of poetry. In a postscript to the pamphlet already quoted he makes it clear that for him symbols are agents of power whose operation upon the unconscious mind is independent of conscious intention. 'It is a first principle of our

A learned, even a scholarly, poet in his own field, Yeats's true education was a thorough and serious practical knowledge of magic and its literature; in A Vision he expounds a diagrammatic system which relates historical cycles and human character to the 28 phases of the moon, and which resembles related systems by Eliphas Levi and others: 'The Great Wheel' from the Speculum Angelorum et Hominum, one of the illustrations in A Vision illumination that symbols and formulae are powers, which act in their own right, and with little consideration for our intentions.' This is because such formulae act upon 'the agelong memoried self' whose Daimons 'may move through the Great Year like individual men and women and are said to use men and women as their bodies, to gather and disperse those bodies at will'; for such reasons as this Yeats told Florence Farr that 'individuality is not as important as our age has imagined'. In his Autobiographies he gives instances of subjects made to see visions by symbols exhibited to them in a state of trance.

As a member of a Hermetic order Yeats was under vows of secrecy; his work was grounded in a body of knowledge which he never disclosed. The rituals of the Golden Dawn have since been published, in part by Crowley and fully by Israel Regardie; but these cannot be understood by merely reading the text.

Before Jung and long before Surrealism, and with greater learning and surer metaphysical foundations than either of these or than any psychical research since undertaken, Yeats had divined the existence of a collective mind, a source of imaginative knowledge and poetic images beyond normal consciousness. It is Henry More's anima mundi, the oversoul, or collective unconscious. 'I know now that revelation is not from the self but from that age-long memoried self, that shapes the elaborate shell of the mollusc and the child in the womb, that teaches the birds to make their nest; and that genius is a crisis that joins that buried self for certain moments to our trivial daily mind.'

From this collective and shared mind great poetry derives, and to that imaginative ground in each reader it addresses itself. Certain myths, images and incantations speak to the imagination with an immediacy that overlaps reason, in whoever will allow this to happen. Yeats's symbols, his incantatory speech, all his themes, are addressed to that mind; his design is to awaken recollection, in the Platonic sense of the word, by the use of symbolic images. His poetry is at once oracular and evocative. He held strong views on the declamation of verse which should be (so he held) incantatory, because rhythmic incantation also addresses itself immediately to the imagination.

Yeats believed that the evocatory power of symbols had little to do with the conscious mind. He describes how a certain diagrammatic symbol had the power of evoking visions of 'Eden', with tree, walled garden on the top of a high mountain, birds among the boughs, and from the trunk the sound of 'continual clashing of swords. Whence came that fine thought of music-making swords, that image of the garden, and many like images and thoughts? I had as yet no clear answer, but knew myself face to face with the Anima Mundi described by Platonic philosophers, and more especially in modern times by Henry More, which has a memory independent of embodied individual memories, though they constantly enrich it with their images and thoughts.'

To those who regard such symbolist art as 'inhuman' it may be replied that such is the abiding ground of our collective humanity. Symbolist art is a form of religious art; one might even say that when religious art ceases to be symbolist it is no longer religious, for it no longer joins the 'age-long memoried self' at certain moments to 'our trivial daily mind'. A demythologized religion is no longer a religion at all, since it no longer possesses the means of binding the individual self to the universal life.

Yeats is never more a symbolist than when in such occasional poems as Parnell's Funeral or All Souls' Night he relates events of national history or of personal life to that cosmic whole which alone confers upon each part its dignity and significance.

Yeats must be seen in the context of that 'revolt of soul against intellect now beginning in the world' (Yeats here uses the word 'intellect' in the sense of 'reason') of which the Theosophical Movement, Freud and Jung, the Surrealist Movement and the revival of magical studies are various aspects. Of those named it is possible that Yeats himself reached the most profound understanding, as he gave the most enduring expression, to a great reversal of the cycles of history.

KATHLEEN RAINE

FURTHER READING: The principal works of W. B. Yeats are The Collected Poems (Macmillan, 2nd edn., 1956), The Collected Plays (Macmillan, 2nd edn., 1953), Mythologies (Macmillan, 1969), Autobiography (Collier Macmillan, 1966); Yeats, W. B., A Critical Edition of Yeats' "A Vision" (Macmillan, 1978); and The Letters of W. B. Yeats (Macmillan, 1954); see also the official biography by Joseph Hone, W. B. Yeats 1865-1939 (St Martin, 2nd edn., 1962); Mary C. Flannery, Yeats & Magic: The Earlier Works (Barnes & Noble, 1977) and Yeats' Iconography (Macmillan, 1960); G. M. Harper, ed., Yeats and the Occult (Macmillan of Canada, 1975).

YEW

THE EVERGREEN YEW lives to an immense age for it can continue to grow with a completely hollow centre. It has been claimed that the tree can survive for over 3000 years, but this seems unlikely. However, like other conifers, it had an ancient reputation for immortality and became a symbol of life after death. Mourners carried yew branches at funerals, which were placed in the grave; and shoots of yew were sometimes put in a dead person's shroud.

As a symbol of the Resurrection, yew was often incorporated in Eastertide church decorations and used on Palm Sunday. However, it was considered unlucky to bring it into a house, and for this reason it is not used for Christmas decorations. Because of its sacred associations, in Ireland yew wood was made into croziers and shrines. While a common yew was valued at 15 pence in the Middle Ages, a consecrated yew was worth a pound.

It was most unlucky to cut down or damage a growing yew tree; this is not surprising for the yew was among the most potent of trees for protection against evil, and was therefore often planted alongside a house, or where it might form a windbreak against the invisible wind as well as against the unknown powers of evil. Doubtless its planting in churchyards was largely to prevent witchcraft and to restrain the spirits of the buried dead.

However, Robert Turner, writing in 1664, suggested that its main function in churchyards was that it 'attracts and imbibes putrefaction and gross oleaginous vapours exhaled out of the Graves by the setting Sun, and sometimes drawn into those Meteors called Ignes Fatui'. Its protectiveness presumably arose from its longevity, its very tough tim-

Said to be among the most potent of trees for protection against evil, the yew was probably planted in churchyards to prevent witchcraft and to restrain the spirits of the buried dead; a symbol of life after death, it had an ancient reputation for immortality, and mourners at funerals carried yew branches which were placed in the grave: yew tree in Stoke Poges churchyard ber, and its red 'berries'. It was, of course, also prized for making bows, although most English bows were made from imported yew, for the native variety was often too brittle and too full of knots. The most antique wooden weapons known are early Paleolithic spears made from yew.

John Moss

Unrejoicing Berries

The yew cannot be called a cheerful tree, although its autumn display of what Wordsworth called 'unrejoicing berries' is spectacular. Its churchyard affinities have given it funereal associations, and it was also considered a malign tree, perhaps because its foliage is poisonous. Because of this, and because weapons were made from it, Shakespeare referred to it as 'double fatal' (Richard II). It seems likely that the 'cursed ebenon' referred to by the ghost in Hamlet is of yew; Marlowe also mentions 'juice of hebon' in The Jew of Malta. Yew forms part of the witches' brew in Macbeth:

> Gall of goat, and slips of yew > Sliver'd in the moon's eclipse.

'Slivered' refers to the wind breaking branches of the trees; any branch broken in this way was unlucky and dangerous to use, for the evil spirit of the storm remained within it.

There are various other intriguing pieces of folklore about the yew. In the north of England it was used in a variant of dowsing to find lost property: the seeker held a yew branch in front of him, which led him to the goods and turned in his hand when he was by them. A very odd Scottish tradition was that a chieftain could, if holding a piece of churchyard yew in his left hand, threaten or denounce his enemy without the latter hearing. Others present did hear, however, so that it could not be said that he attacked his enemy without warning.

A Herefordshire belief was that if a girl placed a sprig of yew under her pillow, which she had picked in a churchyard she had not previously visited, she would dream of her future husband.

To dream of yew presages the death of some old person which will be of benefit to the dreamer. In the Victorian language of flowers yew meant sorrow.

Yggdrasil

In Scandinavian mythology, the world ash tree; standing at the centre of the universe, it connects together the heavens, the earth and the underworld; after the doom of the gods at the end of the world the man and woman who will repopulate the earth emerge from the world tree.

See ASH; SCANDINAVIA; TREES.

Yin and Yang

In Chinese philosophy, two great opposite principles or forces, on whose interplay everything in the universe depends; Yang is male, light and positive, Yin is female, dark and negative, and all phenomena can be classified in terms of them; in Taoism, the Tao is the principle which unites and transcends the opposites.

See ACUPUNCTURE; CHINA; DUALISM; I CHING; OPPOSITES; TAOISM.

Both a form of meditation and a practical discipline, yoga is a path to liberation from the bondage of rebirth. The best known form is hatha yoga, which charts the course towards mystical union with the Universal Soul, through the physical body, in a long series of arduous exercises

YOGA

ESSENTIALLY yoga is a voyage of self-discovery, for it means the linking of the lesser self with the Greater Self. Paradoxically, the Greater Self is contained within the lesser, personal self, just as the farthest horizon of an undiscovered continent is contained within the ship that rides at anchor waiting the captain's word of command. Yoga charts the course, tells how to get there, and describes what will be encountered on the way.

Yoga has sometimes been defined as a religion, and there are as many kinds of yoga as there are sects and cults in any great denomination. In this general sense yoga can mean all things to all men. It has been recommended as a method of beauty culture and a means of getting rich. Its advocates have prescribed it for migraine and falling hair, for insomnia and flatulence. The great adventure has been bypassed altogether, and yoga made into a plaything.

Nonetheless, yoga has a more conservative meaning. It is a system of philosophy; one of the six recognized systems of orthodox Hinduism (see HINDUISM). The other five are concerned with logic (this is called Nyaya), with physical concepts like space, time, causality and matter (Vaisheshika), with the objects of abstract philosophical inquiry (Samkhya), with ritual (Mimamsa), and with the metaphysics of the Ultimate Principle (Vedanta; see VEDANTA). But yoga is not a philosophy in the ordinary sense, and a yogi is not a mere 'knower of words'. It is essentially practical, and its discipline down to earth.

The chief textbook on yoga and the first systematic presentation of its philosophy is found in the work of Patanjali, who lived in the 3rd century BC. He is not regarded as the founder, only as the codifier of a doctrine that had already been in existence in India for about 1000 years before his time. He set forth its philosophy in a series of sutras, aphorisms or brief sentences, which in the course of centuries, have been subject to considerable interpretation.

As yoga evolved a number of subsidiary systems were added to it, many of them taking as their starting point a verse or even a phrase or word from Patanjali's sutras, and these developed along their own specialist lines, just as modern exponents speak of the 'yoga of business efficiency' or the 'yoga of marital happiness'. But the aim of all the orthodox systems of yoga was permanent liberation from the bondage of rebirth in another incarnation, and ultimate union with the Infinite. Each of these yogas was a 'path' to that goal. The powers that one might pick up along the way, such as an enhanced mental and physical power, are regarded as of no great consequence in themselves, and a preoccupation with them is a hindrance. Anyone who takes up yoga solely for the powers it might confer is disqualified from the higher teachings.

There are about ten traditionally recognized yogas, acceptable as a path to Realization. Bhakti yoga is the way of devotion love and faith, usually directed to God. Yoga, like most of the orthodox Hindu systems of philosophy, was originally atheistic, and even later, when a concept of of a divine soul was introduced, did not refer to God in the ordinary sense as Creator and ruler of the universe. He was only one, albeit the chief, of a whole class of souls (according to Nyaya philosophy), or the fashioner of the world out of material elements which were already in existence (according to Vaisheshika), or an impersonal spirit, the animating principle which united with inert matter to form the universe (Samkhya). Mimamsa held that God was not necessary for salvation, which could be achieved by ritual acts. But bhakti yoga presupposes a personal creator who desires men's devotion and responds to their faith.

Dhyana yoga is the method of contemplation. It is a purely mental discipline, much of which is also embodied in the yoga of physical culture, hatha yoga, the yoga familiar to most people today. Dhyana yoga teaches mental discipline, concentration, and the forms of meditation leading to trance states, of which samadhi is the culmination.

There is a yoga of works and deeds called karma yoga, expressed in charitable acts, forgiveness, penance, asceticism. It is to be distinguished from kriya yoga, which is primarily concerned with religious action and ritualism, particularly as expounded in the Mimamsa philosophy. The yoga of knowledge, called jnana yoga, relates to the understanding of the sacred books, the Vedas, especially the Upanishads, where many esoteric doctrines are expounded. Mantra yoga deals with magical spells and mystic syllables and the verses of sacred lore, whose correct recitation is believed to confer supernatural gifts (see MANTRA).

In addition to these there are certain yogas concerned with the subtle plexuses of the etheric body, called chakras, of which one, called laya yoga, teaches their activation, with special emphasis on the kundalini (see KUNDALINI) lying at the base of the spine, hence also known as kundalini yoga. It is connected with the recitation of sacred mantras which stimulate the chakras.

Often regarded as the highest form of yoga is raja yoga, the royal path to spiritual perfection, which deals almost entirely with mental and psychic development leading to spiritual enlightenment. It is sometimes given the honorific title of rajadhiraja yoga, the king of kings yoga.

The Yoga of Physical Power

The best known of all the yogas, and the one whose practice is linked with all the procedures usually associated in the popular mind with Indian religious and occult practice is hatha yoga, the yoga of physical power, or the development of the physical body. It is yoga as commonly understood, the yoga of the cross-legged posture, of standing on the head, the yoga of the wonder-worker. Like the other yogas it follows a series of 'stages', working progressively from the easy to the more difficult. Like the others its aim is release from the bondage of rebirth, and attaining union with the Absolute. It has adopted several features of the other yogas and embodied them within its own discipline.

There are eight stages in hatha yoga, and so comprehensively are they formulated that they are usually taken as the prototype of all forms of yogic discipline. Starting with simple restraints it proceeds through a system of physical and mental culture until it reaches the final stage which cannot be taught but will be experienced by the yogi when he is ready for it. The whole course is long and arduous, and most practitioners are content to confine themselves to the earlier stages and opt for health and efficiency, leaving the Ultimate to the more aspiring.

Whatever spiritual goals may ultimately

The yoga of physical power, hatha yoga consists of eight stages which are usually taken as the prototype of all forms of yogic discipline; the third stage teaches the asanas or bodily positions which are assumed as an exercise and during meditation: statuette of a deity sitting in the lotus position. The most common of the asanas, and the simplest for people accustomed to sitting on the ground, it obviates any danger of the student falling over during trance underlie yogic training, it is the physical body that is the instrument through which they are achieved, and the physical body must be trained for it. We can go through life ignoring our 'soul', indeed even denying its existence, without doing ourselves apparent harm; we may neglect the intellectual side of our personalities and still savour a great deal of life without detriment to ourselves. But the physical, or gross body of flesh and blood, makes insistent demands on us. Breath is needed every few seconds; food every few hours; sleep once a day. And unless the body receives this recurrent sustenance and replenishment it will demand attention in such a manner that all other considerations will have to be subordinated until it is satisfied.

Musee Guimet Michael Holford

Therefore, even though the aim of yoga might reach beyond and above the range of the physical, we have to begin at the beginning, that is, on the physical plane. Our attitude to worldly and unworldly matters has to be settled and our priorities fixed and it is in the arrangement of these that hatha yoga has laid down its eight stages.

The first two preliminary stages are called yama and niyama, and are to do with external and internal control. They cover the ethical rules governing personal and social conduct, and various methods of self-discipline connected with non-injury, continence, equanimity and right thinking.

Non-injury, or ahimsa, implies a restraint on all aggressive emotions, such as hatred, anger, jealousy, revenge. It totally forbids physical injury to any living thing and this idea lies behind the dietary prohibition against the eating of meat. The true yogi is a vegetarian, and a pacifist. One should not 'flail one's arms about', in case one injures someone standing near by. One should not even think in violent and aggressive terms.

Ahimsa is closely connected with the idea of equanimity, which is one of the basic tenets of the Hindu ethical code. It means that a person should be tranquil in the face of every provocation, defeat, personal and financial loss, indignity, insult. It is the mark of self-conquest, to be acquired long before the regular yogic disciplines are undertaken. It is to be learned in the school of life, as a householder or man of affairs. Anger, desire to avenge an insult or redress a personal injury, retaliation, are all marks of pride. According to the great Indian epic, the Mahabharata, only the fool imagines that anger or indignation are signs of energy or of the superior man. A man given to anger is a man in chains, not a free person. Self-restraint or self-control are aimed at in the early stages, but as one advances even these fall short of the true ideal, for they imply the existence of emotions that need restraining. True equanimity is the absence even of the seeds of anger.

Executed in combination with breathing techniques, the recitation of mantras, and mandalas or mystic diagrams, asanas are believed to draw down etheric forces from the invisible world which imbue the body of the student with power: mandala, 17th or 18th century

Another item usually included in the yama and niyama exercises is brahmacharya or abstinence from sex, and this is generally insisted on for those who desire to devote themselves totally to the spiritual life. But for all persons, irrespective of their occupation, moderation in sexual activity is of the highest importance. Married people are enjoined to guard against self-indulgence. Aspirants to the higher reaches must abstain altogether, for while sex has its proper place in the life of the householder, it is considered a definite hindrance to the higher life. The lawgiver Manu said, 'Irresistible power comes from chastity.'

For the man of the world yama and niyama present an eminently rational way of life. Certain things are essential, but our attitude to them must be reasonable. Food is necessary but not greed; sex but not sensuality; self-respect but not arrogance.

The Beneficial Headstand

The third stage in hatha yoga teaches the asanas or bodily positions, the postures assumed both as an exercise and during meditation. Patanjali said that the best posture was one that was 'firm and pleasant', that is, fit for its purpose and not uncomfortable. Yogic meditation involves long periods of motionless sitting and it is partly to accustom the student to a fixed and easy position in which he can remain longest without discomfort that the basic yogic asanas have been devised.

Many of the positions involve great bodily contortion, and though the practice of such devious attitudes is frowned upon by the adept, it is with these asanas that most people associate yoga. The exponent with his legs twisted about his neck or in some other peculiar stance is the traditional Western image of the yogi in action.

Asanas are called after their supposed resemblance to some object, plant or animal. There are asanas named after the lion, the bull, tortoise, frog, fish, scorpion, lotus, plough, wheel and sun, and many other such things. The names are bestowed on them partly to describe their appearance and also to suggest the quality they impart. The asana named after the swan gives one discrimination, for this is the chief attribute of that bird; the asana named after the frog gives one the main quality of this animal, which is strength of purpose.

In the simhasana, or lion pose, the yogi bends his legs till the knees touch the floor and places his hands on his knees. He protrudes his tongue as far out as it will go, stares at its tip, and then tenses the shoulders, arms and neck, making the whole frame taut so as to give the body the appearance of a fierce lion. This asana gives one leonine attributes.

The most common of yogic asanas is the well-known cross-legged pose called the siddha (power) asana and, in a slight variation, the padma (lotus) asana. This is the squatting position, with legs crossed. To people who are accustomed to sitting on the ground this is the simplest of all the asanas, although it presents some difficulty to those who have never tried it. It is a very stable posture, which enables one to keep the spine straight and obviates any danger of falling over and injuring oneself.

Another popular posture is the shirsha asana or 'head position', the ordinary headstand, which is done in several ways. The simplest method is to stand facing the wall, a convenient distance away from it, to bend forward till the head touches the ground, and finally to throw the legs up till they touch the wall for support. The legs are then shifted off the wall and the body straightened out. There are numerous variations on this.

The headstand pose is one of great antiquity. As an occult exercise it was known to the early Taoists of China (see TAOISM) who recommended it as a means of making certain subtle fluids descend to the head in order to 'repair the brain'. The mysterious sect of the Cabiri of Greece practised the headstand as a sacred rite, and the statue of a woman standing on her head in a Cabiri shrine aroused the uncontrollable laughter of the Persian king Cambyses II (d. 522 BC) who could not understand what the inverse attitude had to do with religion. In Europe standing on the head was long recommended as a cure for colic.

In yoga the purpose of this asana is to reverse the direction of the flow of certain fluids running in the internal channels of the body and direct them to the hidden reservoirs of the brain. The perfect execution of the headstand is said to be a profound mystery for it unites 'upper with lower', 'running with still', and 'male with female' in the 'nuptial chambers' situated in the cranium. The fluids become etherialized and then ignite, so that a state of illumination may be reached through this asana alone, if one knows the hidden art.

Many blessings attend its proper performance. In addition to the physical benefits of longevity, youthfulness and sexual vigour, and the intellectual benefits of an improved memory, great concentration and increased will-power, the spiritual blessings include the ability to perform miracles and fly through the air. This latter has been interpreted to mean that the adept can travel at will in the astral body (see ASTRAL BODY).

Associated with the asanas are certain accompanying gestures of the hand called mudras, which are believed to direct the latent potencies of each bodily posture by channelling them along particular paths. The hand is the focus of immense power, and certain gestures made by the hands are universally recognized as having an almost magical quality (see GESTURE). The human hand has been called the second brain and the visible part of the mind. Benedictions are bestowed by the hand. Diseases are healed and strength communicated by the laying on of hands. Gestures of anger, appeal, supplication, and command are familiar throughout the world. A hand gesture not only articulates and concentrates the internal forces and directs them outwards, it also receives power from the invisible world. It is the channel of communication between the two worlds.

Pranic Winds

In their highest form yogic asanas are executed in combination with breathing techniques, with the recitation of mantras, with mudras, and with mandalas, or mystic diagrams (see MANDALA). In such an asana the whole body becomes a plastic mould, as it were, a fixed symbolic pose, into which etheric forces are drawn down and poured forth from the invisible world, filling the mould represented by the asana and imbuing it with the desired power.

The fourth stage of hatha yoga is concerned with pranayama or breath control, which takes into account a number of factors. First, comes the simple technique of inhalation, retention and exhalation, for which a ratio has to be established. For instance, if we breathe in for the duration of six seconds, hold our breath for nine seconds and breathe out for three seconds, the ratio would be shown as 6.9.3., a ratio that is regarded as good for a specific purpose. In order to increase the efficacy of the ratio the yogi might double it to 12.18.6., and breathe with this frequency, or treble it to 18.27.9., and use this timing in his breathing. The commonest ratios are 1.4.2., or 2.5.3., or 5.4.3. Sometimes another item is added to the rhythm of inhalation, retention and exhalation, namely, retention of breath after exhalation, and we then have to add a fourth element to our ratio, thus getting 1.4.2.3., or whatever the ratio may be.

When further refinements are added to these factors, such as breathing with the mouth open or closed throughout, or with the mouth closed during inhalation and open during exhalation, or with one nostril closed with the finger, breathing shallowly or deeply, hot or cold, or inhaling and exhaling while blowing, panting, sniffing, snoring, or while making the noises of animals like barking, cooing, mooing, or roaring, the permutations are increased almost to infinity.

The full range of possibilities in pranayama has therefore never been worked out and its systems of breathing are of unending variety. The chief kinds of breathing are taught by various schools, their benefits explained in brief, and their continuance strongly advocated. As a rule the subtleties are ignored. For the important thing about breathing is not so much the manner in which it is done, as the way the breath is used, for it is believed to be a very subtle essence full of energy.

Although the ultimate aim of yoga is permanent liberation from the bondage of rebirth, the body is the physical instrument through which these goals are achieved, and its demands must therefore be disciplined and controlled before samadhi, 'final bliss', can be attained. Some of the bodily positions assumed in hatha yoga are called after the objects or animals they supposedly resemble: the 'plough' (left) and the 'tortoise' (right)

The air breathed in is not in itself the essential element utilized by the yogi, but another far more refined ingredient which is diffused in the atmosphere all round, and impregnated with a vivifying power. The air we breathe only serves as the conductor for this subtle force. This energy is called prana, which is generally translated as 'wind', and pranayama teaches the method of absorbing it.

Several kinds of these pranic winds or airs are distinguished, each with its own function. Prana, when taken in, moves from the lungs and lodges in the heart, and from here directs the movement of the vital airs to the other parts of the bodily frame. Pranas in their various forms are responsible for the beating of the heart, for respiration and the circulation of the blood, for digestion, speech, sleep, hunger and thirst, and all the physiological processes of the body, which are continuously activated through the subtle body. Essentially, pranayama is the controlled means by which the invisible energy of the cosmos is channelled to act directly on the physical system.

The next stage, pratyahara, involves a deliberate procedure of abstraction and withdrawal of the senses from the turmoil of the outside world. The obvious way to do this is to retire into quiet seclusion free from all disturbances; or to shut the eyes and ears and so prevent the sights and sounds from impinging on them. There is a specific way of performing this act, which involves the actual closing of the organs of sense.

Again, the instrument used is the body itself. One must 'block' the passages of the body by using the body, without recourse to external apparatus. A special mudra has been devised which shuts the gates of the body. The yogi sits in a cross-legged position, performs the prescribed breathing rituals, utters a few mantras, then raising his hands to his face he shuts his ears with his thumbs, his eyes with his index fingers, his nostrils with the middle fingers; the ring fingers press on the upper lip and the little fingers on the lower. With his heel he applies a firm pressure to the perineum, and thus effectively seals the chief orifices of his body.

But this gesture is only a symbolical rite, and is always accompanied by special mental exercises, which eventually lead to mastery of the secret of sealing the gates without the mudra. The ordinary person may take anything up to 21 years before he can perfect the technique to such an extent that his senses are totally impervious to every sensation of sound, sight, hearing, touch, taste and smell. Since his sensory reactions are also effectively blocked, he remains unperturbed by anything that happens around him.

'A Flame in a Windless Place'

Next comes the stage of dharana or concentration, fixing the mind on a single object to the exclusion of all else. In a small way everyone has moments of dharana – the child playing with his toys, the student cramming for his examinations, the mathematician engrossed in his problem. It is also spoken of as 'one-pointedness', and a number of yogic exercises are designed to heighten one's capacity to concentrate. The purpose of dharana is to fill the mind, already emptied by pratyahara, with the thought one wishes to hold, and then to hold that thought without any flickering of consciousness. The mind must burn steadily and purely, 'like a flame in a windless place'.

Among the many different methods used to increase the powers of concentration is one called trataka, or 'fixing', in which the gaze is directed without blinking and with full concentration on an external object. One might start with an object far off, such as a hilltop, or a window in a distant house, or the branch of a tree. The mind must be collected and focused on the object without wavering. In time, nearer objects may be used for the purpose, and then in the quiet of the room one can mark the wall with a small dot at eye level and, sitting about six feet away from the wall, stare at it. In the case of such exercises one must think of nothing else but the dot. But concentration, being an 'inward' matter, is best achieved by exercising the mind to dwell on the body itself. Thus we have exercises concentrating on the tip of the nose, the centre of the forehead, or the navel.

The seventh stage is called dhyana, or contemplation and in it one must lose oneself. The operation is still 'mental', and mental forces are required to attain it. There is a total direction of thought on the goal sought. The range of subjects for dhyana is limitless for the higher adept, but is confined to certain specific items for the beginner.

Not all subjects are suitable for meditation. It is easy to concentrate on material things, and think of money, sex or pleasure, but the moral dangers of such objectives are very great. Similarly, symbols casually selected without taking into account one's religious, racial, family and personal background can also lead to spiritual disharmony. In India the matter is very simply decided. One can meditate on one's guru or mentor, or on a deity, but for the Western mind the unfamiliar character of such meditation will present difficulties, apart from the psychological barriers in the way of his acceptance of such objects to meditate upon.

Symbols too have a strong psychic dynamism and every religion charges its own symbols with its own current of power, which can be picked up by anyone who meditates on such a symbol with sufficient faith. The mandalas and mystic diagrams are all capable of putting one in rapport with the powers inherent in them. Great care has to be exercised before adopting a symbol for dhyana.

Attainment of Ecstasy

The eighth and final stage of hatha yoga is samadhi, which has been variously translated as trance, super-consciousness, or final bliss. This is no longer an intellectual state, for it transcends the merely mental condition of intellectual contemplation, and goes on to the state of ecstasy. The attainment of such a condition for the ordinary man is difficult in the extreme and needs long practice, for he is constantly hindered by physical and mental distractions. An uncomfortable posture will result in the mind being diverted to the aching limbs; lack of sufficient self-discipline and training will make one aware of the pangs of hunger or the need for sleep. If one has mastered the early stages of yoga sufficiently to withstand these distractions, one is faced with the distractions of the mind and spirit as one moves along the path. It is precisely in order to remove all possible sources of distraction that the stages of yoga have to be systematically followed through.

Samadhi is the mystic union of the individual soul with the Universal Soul. The earlier stages of dharana and dhyana may be defined as concrete meditation. Samadhi may be regarded as abstract meditation on the Void. The earlier stage is active; the latter is passive. The earlier is achieving, this is receiving. One is seeking, the other absorbing and being absorbed. There is no trace of mental activity, no trace of self or the ego. The fevers of the flesh are far behind, the petty emotions that perturb the soul and shatter the peace of mind. The ego is lost, the mind transcended.

True samadhi must be clearly distinguished from certain kinds of extraordinary trance states that have on occasion been achieved by practitioners of the magical arts, and that have been attested by more than one dependable witness. Some exponents have allowed themselves to be buried alive.

A well-authenticated case took place in Lahore (now in Pakistan) in 1838 in the presence of the distinguished Sikh leader, Maharajah Ranjit Singh, a British general, Sir Claude Wade, and other British officers. The man was a professional magician who made a living by feats of this kind. He took a few days to get himself in readiness by fasting and meditation and then presented himself to the distinguished gathering. He sat cross-legged on a sheet of white cloth and went into a trance, after which the corners of the cloth were drawn up and tied over his head. He was then buried, still seated, in a padlocked box, in an underground pit within a garden pavilion. The doors were locked and sealed. British soldiers stood on 24-hour guard outside. He remained in the grave for 30 days, after which the pit was dug up in the presence of the Maharajah, Sir Claude Wade, Dr McGregor and several others, and the box lifted out intact. After the man's apparently lifeless body had been gently massaged by his assistant he recovered consciousness, and two hours later was able to speak.

This kind of performance is emphatically discouraged by the true adept. But so close is the inherited association of yoga with the magical arts of the wonder-worker that the term jogi (colloquial adaptation of yogi) has become synonymous with the magician, and jogis have been credited with some very bizarre feats. They are the fakirs and naked sadhus of the tourist. Some of them sleep on beds of nails, or remain standing in one place, often on one leg, for several months. Some remain in the same spot throughout their lives, never moving outside the confines of the area they have assigned for themselves, which may be a tiny hut, with only a short walk for the calls of nature. Others remain submerged up to the waist in a stream for weeks on end; or sit in the open in the full blaze of the midsummer sun surrounded by five fierce fires kept alive by their disciples. Some hold the face up until the neck muscles harden and they are unable to look down upon the earth again; some reverse the position and look downwards so that the sky is no more within their normal vision. Others keep the fist closed permanently until the nails grow into the flesh (see FAKIR).

But some remarkable claims have been made on behalf of the orthodox yogi too, especially concerning the control of the physiological processes of the body. Yogis are able to suspend their breathing to an abnormal extent; show different pulse rates at will on the right and left wrists; lower the respiratory rate till it is barely perceptible; become totally immunized to the effects of heat and cold; remain in trance for days at a time; go without food and water for several weeks; exert an almost supernatural control over wild animals.

Although the exercise of the powers that come to the practitioner of yoga is regarded as an obstacle in the path towards the aspirant's spiritual progress, many people practise yoga for precisely these powers, or siddhis as they are called, and are not greatly concerned about the non-material benefits accruing from its practice.

There are said to be eight traditional siddhis, as follows: making oneself infinitely small; infinitely large; infinitely heavy; weightless; transporting oneself anywhere instantaneously; gaining all one's desires; controlling people; achieving overlordship over all things. Patanjali's enigmatic statement that 'Perfection may arise from birth (inherited faculty), drugs, spells, austerities or concentration', has been the subject of considerable commentary and interpretation. The inclusion of drugs has divided opinion on the matter, some suggesting that the philosopher mentioned drugs as one means of emancipation from the bondage of rebirth, others contending that he merely included them to complete the catalogue of items that could be used for the purpose of reaching samadhi, but did not give drug-taking his approval.

A matter of considerable interest to researchers in the field today is the close similarity between the powers developed by yoga and the experiences of the drug-state, particularly those induced by LSD. Drugs produce the tranquillity, provide the vision, and create the illusions of power. Subjects of LSD experiments report experiences that parallel every one of the traditional siddhis, produced as a result of visual, auditory and other sensory distortion. Session records indicate that subjects have the feeling that they have shrunk to near vanishing point, while the consciousness of others expands to such an extent that they imagine themselves 'as big as a galaxy'. Some feel that they have a vastly greater or lesser density, and become extremely heavy and virtually immovable or, in some cases, almost weightless. The feeling of being transported to other places is quite common in LSD experiments. This kind of drug-induced 'travelling clairvoyance', where the subject visits distant places, is perhaps also comparable to the flying of medieval witches, who rubbed the sensitive mucous membranes of the nasal and sexual orifices with ointments impregnated with drugs – which induced a trance – and returned with accounts of wonderful adventures at the sabbath (see FLYING OINTMENT).

The power of attaining one's desires is again met within the hallucinogenic state where the subject, depending on his personal predispositions, projects himself into his vision and thus attains what he seeks. Likewise the power to control people and the illusion of overlordship over all physical things is another commonplace of psychedelic experience, and on a smaller scale is exhibited by the subject who jumps off a tall building under the delusion that he has suddenly acquired the ability to fly; or who stands in a busy thoroughfare, steps off the pavement and wills a speeding bus to come to a halt.

But many regard these resemblances as superficial. The differences between the genuine and controlled powers acquired after many years of self-culture and the erratic hallucinations produced instantaneously by drugs are so considerable that the analogy need not be pursued any further. On the other hand it is easy to exaggerate the benefits of yoga, for it is well known that many other disciplines of physical culture and mental training can bring about the same results, and are not the monopoly of any one system of spiritual development.

Yoga is said to give one a higher IQ, exceptional sexual vigour, ESP, and even a kind of earthly immortality. Yet yogis in their prime die every year like other mortals. They are not notable for their IQs. Attempts by exponents to walk on water have always come to a watery end. And extraordinary breathing feats have been recorded all over the world from China to Peru. The ascetic disciplines of the sadhus find a parallel in the Christian desert hermits of the 4th and 5th centuries. Yogis have been buried alive, but so have Moslem sufis, and Western magicians. Yogis have walked on fire, but so have natives from the South Seas, who perform the much more difficult feat of walking on red-hot stones.

Putting the whole of the miraculous element aside, it may be said that yoga is a discipline which, in moderation and by the use of common sense, may be practised with benefit.

(See BREATH; MEDITATION; SELF-DENIAL.)

BENJAMIN WALKER

FURTHER READING: Theos Bernard, Hatha Yoga (Wehman); Paul Dukes, The Yoga of Health, Youth and Joy (Harper and Row, 1960); Mircea Eliade, Yoga, Immortality and Freedom (Princeton Univ. Press, 1970) S. K. Majumdar, Introduction to Yoga: Principles and Practice (University Books, 1967); R. E. L. Masters and Jean Houston, The Varieties of Psychedelic Experience (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 1966); Lar Caughlan, Yoga: The Spirit of Union (Kendall-Hunt, 1981); Bhagwan Shree Patanjali, Aphorisms of Yoga (Faber & Faber, 1973); Vivian Worthington, History of Yoga (Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1982).

When the Roman army entered the smoking ruins of the Zealot stronghold of Masada, mounds of corpses testified to the resolution of this Jewish sect to die rather than to recognize any other lord than Yahweh

ZEALOTS

THE EMPEROR AUGUSTUS ordered the incorporation of Judaea into the Roman Empire in the year 6 AD. The change was to prove disastrous to the Jews because, for the first time, it brought them up against the realities of subjugation to Roman rule. Other peoples had naturally resented the imposition of Roman rule as the Empire expanded: but for the Jews such subjection was not only an affront to their national pride, it profoundly affected their religion. It touched them at their most sensitive point; for they cherished the idea of Israel as a theocracy, with Yahweh (see YAHWEH) as their supreme Lord and a godly high priest as his earthly representative.

One of the first measures taken by the Romans to implement the new decree was to order a census of the population of Judaea for the purpose of taxation. The Jews had been accustomed to pay taxes to their own kings; but to pay them to Rome challenged a fundamental tenet of their religion. For it meant giving of the resources of the Holy Land of Yahweh to the heathen emperor of Rome. As soon as the new measure was known, a rabbi called Judas of Galilee incited the people to revolt – to pay the taxes, he proclaimed was an act of apostasy toward Yahweh, and tantamount to recognizing Caesar as lord (despotes) instead of the god of Israel.

The revolt was suppressed, and Judas was slain. But those of his followers who survived took to the deserts of Judaea, to maintain a guerilla resistance against the Romans. They became known as the Zealots, which was a Greek translation of their Hebrew name Kanna'im. The name probably derived from the ancient example of Phinehas, as recorded in the book of Numbers 25.6–13. Angered by the liaison of a fellow Jew with a non-Jewish woman, Phinehas had slain both. For his action he had been praised by Yahweh, 'in that he was zealous with my zeal', and a perpetual priesthood was conferred on him and his descendants, 'because he was zealous for his God, and made atonement for the people of Israel'.

Phinehas was thus the divinely commended prototype of the Zealots, who served Yahweh their god with a fanatical devotion, ready to resort to violent action or suffer martyrdom in his cause. Their enemies were not only the heathen Romans, who had imposed their rule on Israel, but also those Jews who collaborated with them. Such Jewish 'quislings' were mainly members of the Sadducean aristocracy, who monopolized the chief ecclesiastical offices connected with the great Temple of Yahweh at Jerusalem. From this aristocracy the high priest was chosen by the Romans, who recognized him as the head of the Jewish state for internal affairs. These sacerdotal aristocrats were not popular with the mass of their fellow-countrymen. Consequently, since their positions depended on Roman support, they co-operated with the Roman government of their land.

Suppression of the Truth

It has only been since the Second World War that the real character of the Zealot movement has been understood. There have been three main reasons for this. The excavation of the rock fortress of Masada beside the Dead Sea, and the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls have provided new information about the Zealots and the background of Jewish religio-political thinking at this time (see DEAD SEA SCROLLS). Then, the 'resistance' movements in Nazi-occupied countries during the Second World War have promoted a more sympathetic insight into the Zealot 'resistance' against ancient Rome. These factors, in turn, have led to a more critical evaluation of what Josephus, the Jewish historian of the 1st century, wrote about the Zealots. Josephus is our chief informant concerning the Zealots; but it is now realized that he denigrated them for personal reasons. In the war against Rome which started in 66 AD, Josephus deserted to the Romans, and later wrote an account of the war for his Roman patron, the Emperor Vespasian. In this account, Josephus blames the Zealots for the war, representing them as evilly-disposed desperadoes who would stop at no atrocity to force their peaceably-minded countrymen to revolt against Rome. His favourite term for them was lestai ('brigands'), which was undoubtedly also how the Romans described them. He conceals the fact that the Zealots were patriots, and that their actions were inspired by their intense devotion to Yahweh, the god of Israel.

Owing to the apologetical character of Josephus' account of Jewish affairs during this period, it is impossible to trace out the development of the Zealot movement. However, the Christian gospels afford some significant evidence, although this is also of an enigmatical kind. Thus it is recorded that one of the apostles chosen by Jesus was 'Simon the Zealot' (Luke 6.15); but Mark tries to disguise the fact by giving only the unexplained Aramaic equivalent 'the Cananaean' for 'the Zealot' (Mark 3.18). Jesus was also implicated in some way with Barabbas, a Zealot leader of a rising against the Romans (see JESUS); and Pontius Pilate ordered Jesus to be crucified between two lestai, who were doubtless Zealots captured in the recent rising in which Barabbas was involved.

Like other resistance forces, the ancient Zealots adopted guerilla tactics in operating against the Romans and their Jewish collaborators from hide-outs in the desert areas of Judaea and Galilee. They probably had the sympathy and clandestine support of the mass of their own countrymen, whose social interests and antipathies they shared. It is significant that one of their first acts, on gaining control of Jerusalem in 66 AD, was to burn the public archives which contained the money-lenders' bonds – in order, so Josephus complains, to encourage the poor to rise against the rich; a sympathy showed also by Jesus.

Death Before Surrender

The Zealot movement seems to have had a dynastic leadership. After the death of Judas of Galilee, the founder, in 6 AD, his sons apparently organized the movement; for Josephus records that the Roman governor Tiberius Alexander, during his term of office in 46–8 AD, crucified Jacob and Simon, sons of Judas. At the beginning of the revolt in 66 another son, Menahem, assumed the leadership, and the last surviving Zealots at Masada were commanded by a descendant of Judas, named Eleazar.

Capture by the Romans usually meant crucifixion for a Zealot. It is probable that the warning given by Jesus of the likely consequences of joining his movement already had a Zealot currency: 'If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me' (Mark 8.34). In Judaea at that time crucifixion was the Roman penalty for sedition. It is significant that Josephus also records that the Romans tortured Zealots to make them 'acknowledge Caesar as lord'.

According to Josephus, a new group of Zealots appeared when Felix was the Roman governor (52–60 AD). They were called 'Sicarii', or daggermen, from the sica or dagger with which they were armed. They were evidently formed as a terrorist group to carry out clandestine assassinations, particularly of notable Jewish collaborators with the Romans. Concealing their daggers in their loose garments, they struck at their victims in crowded places – thus they killed the high priest Jonathan in the Temple.

During the 60 years from 6 to 66 AD, Jewish history has the appearance of a Greek tragedy moving relentlessly to its fatal climax. Even if the Roman procurators of Judaea had been consistently wise and just in their rule, it is unlikely that the Jews would ever have settled down quietly as subjects of heathen Rome. For the fundamental tenets of their religion forbade their recognition of any other sovereign lord of Israel than Yahweh. These tenets the Zealots fanatically maintained, and their exhortations to their fellow Jews were powerfully reinforced by the evidence of Roman injustice and such outrages as the attempt of the Emperor Caligula in 39–40 to place his image, in the form of Zeus, in the very sanctuary of Yahweh at Jerusalem.

The final explosion came in 66 AD, when the lower order of the priests, who were infected by Zealotism and persecuted by the sacerdotal aristocracy, refused to offer the daily sacrifice in the Temple for the well-being of the Roman emperor and people. These sacrifices were regarded as signifying Jewish loyalty to Rome, so that their cessation was tantamount to rebellion. The aristocracy endeavoured to restore the situation by force, and fighting broke out. The rebel priests were soon reinforced by the Zealots. Opposition was wiped out, and the Roman garrisons in Jerusalem and elsewhere were massacred. Once in possession of the Temple, the Zealots elected a new high priest according to the directions of the Torah.

The first Roman attempt to suppress the revolt in 66 failed disastrously, and encouraged the Jews to believe that Yahweh would save them. It took four years of bitter fighting before the Romans could capture Jerusalem. In the final assault on the city, the Temple, which was fiercely defended by the Zealots, was burnt. The fall of Jerusalem in 70 AD was fated to mark the end of the Jewish national state in Palestine until its re-establishment in 1948. The Jewish overthrow is commemorated in the sculptured panels of the Arch of Titus in Rome, where the exultant legionaries are shown bearing the spoils of the Temple in triumph through the streets of the capital.

The final drama of Zealot resistance was, however, played out at Masada, on the shores of the Dead Sea. There a Zealot garrison, with their families, held out until 73 AD. When the Romans, by a prodigious feat of military engineering, at last succeeded in breaking the walls, the Zealots preferred suicide to surrender. The men killed their wives and children; then they drew lots for the order in which they themselves should be killed by their comrades. Finally, on that fatal night, the last remaining Zealot, having seen that all were dead, set fire to the fortress and killed himself. The next morning, when the Romans entered the smoking ruins, 960 corpses testified to Zealot resolution to recognize no other lord than Yahweh, the god of their fathers.

S. G. F. BRANDON

FURTHER READING: The best edition of the works of Josephus, including Greek text and English translation, is published in the Loeb Classical Library; vols 1–3 concern the Zealots. See also: S. G. F. Brandon, Jesus and the Zealots (Manchester Univ. Press, 1967); Y. Yadin, Masada: Herod's Fortress and the Zealots' Last Stand (Weidenfeld & Nicolson, 1966).

St Simon, 12th century wall painting in Cappadocia; one of the apostles chosen by Jesus, he is described in St Luke's gospel as 'Simon the Zealot'

Sonia Halliday

ZEN

An emphasis on direct intuitive experience characterizes Zen, a conviction that penetration to the heart of life's meaning cannot be brought about by the mind alone; unexpectedly to the Western mind, its deeply serious truths are often conveyed in humour and also in seeming irreverence

ZEN is a Chinese-Japanese branch of Mahayana Buddhism. Although nowhere within the boundaries of its special teachings is there demanded faith in a God external to the universe who has created the cosmos and man, nor is there any single sacrosanct collection of revealed scriptures to be venerated like the Christian Bible or Hinduism's Vedas, Zen followers and teachers nevertheless consider Zen a religion. In their view, Zen's form of Buddhism is a natural, indeed inevitable development from such challenging and iconoclastic statements by the founder of this major world faith as 'Look within, thou art the Buddha'. Zen is concerned with teaching that all men, with disciplined individual effort, are capable of attaining the Buddha's Enlightenment, known as satori in the Zen vocabulary.

Zen's emphasis, in the present as well as the past, falls on specific meditative practices designed to 'see into one's nature', a descriptive phrase attributed to one of the most important figures in the annals of early Zen, the Chinese master of the 7th century, Hui-Neng (638-713; in Japanese, Eno). The late author and scholarly authority on Zen Buddhism, D. T. Suzuki, called Hui-Neng's statement 'the most significant phrase ever coined in the development of Zen'. Some 13 centuries have passed since Hui-Neng uttered these words but they remain as basic to Zen teaching as they were when he spoke them, and it is this phrase, and others similar to it, that have turned a number of Western psychoanalysts and psychiatrists – including

Although one of the characteristics of Zen is a zany sense of humour this springs from the wish to avoid self-conscious religiosity or smugness about spiritual attainment, and it has not stopped Buddhists from prostrating themselves in front of Buddha images as an act that 'horizontalizes the ego-mast': statue of Buddha in Kamakura, Japan

Carl Jung, Erich Fromm and Karen Horney – to a serious study of Zen methods in relation to their own interests in the attainment of self-knowledge. Existentialists, also, of the stature of Martin Heidegger, have claimed to find in ancient Zen writings some of the very ideas they have been developing in modern times.

The recent phenomenon of a steadily growing interest in Zen teachings in Europe and the United States arises, it has been suggested, in part because Zen's emphasis on 'finding out for oneself' appeals to modern people who have difficulty accepting fixed dogma or traditional religious authority in a world now in scientific and philosophic flux. It is not only Japanese roshis (venerable spiritual teachers) but Westerners as well who, after training in Japanese monasteries, are today carrying to the West Zen's interpretation and extension of original Buddhist teachings. Through body-mind techniques of 'quiet sitting' as well as through the challenge of the dynamic conundrum known as the koan, Zen aims to establish unshaken personal faith in life's 'Is-ness', the universe seen as an indissoluble unity, a single totality of which man is but a part.

The Growth of Zen

In Buddhism's slow but irresistible spread over all Asia the Mahayana branch of teaching reached China around 525 AD. From China in time it moved on to Korea and to Japan, acquiring, in the usual flexible Mahayana style, certain colorations from the cultures encountered in its passage (see BUDDHISM; JAPAN).

The ancient Indian mystic roots, along with strong pragmatic and humanistic influences that came from China, the land of Confucius and Lao-Tze, are so clearly traceable in Zen's development that Zen as known today might be fairly described as a unique blend of Indian mysticism and Chinese naturalism sieved through the special mesh of the Japanese character. The very origins of its name indicate its historical genesis. Zen is the Japanese way of writing and speaking the Chinese word ch'an, which is a transliteration of the Sanskrit word dhyana, meaning meditation or, more fully, 'contemplation leading to a higher state of Consciousness' or 'union with Reality'.

It was in the 12th century that the special development of Buddhist philosophy known in China as ch'an was definitely established in Japan under the name of Zen. Prior to this date, however, there had been a significant exchange of Buddhist monks and teachers between the two countries; a traffic of inestimable importance not only to Japanese culture but to the history of Zen philosophy and the world's art.

These religious emissaries acted, in effect, as disseminators and preservers of Chinese civilization at its brilliant height in the great Sung Dynasty. When the Sung idyll was brought to its end by an invasion of Mongols, Japan escaped the invaders and thus became the sanctuary not only for the scriptures and teachings of a new-old, India-born, Chinese-influenced philosophy but for its intimately related arts as well.

So allied with Zen philosophy is its unique aesthetic that one cannot separate the two and still have a profound comprehension of Zen's underlying precepts. This is true in particular of those swiftly executed 'spontaneous' ink paintings which manage to express with consummate subtlety both a passionate love of Nature and a singular harmony with it. Waterfalls, mountain peaks, birds, stones, flowers, bamboo, pines in mist, all speak of a hidden Unity, of the belief that the Buddha nature is immanent not alone in man but in everything that exists, animate or inanimate.

The traditional culture of Japan is grounded in Zen perceptions which have been preserved, encouraged and practised in an amazingly pure stream of transmission right up to modern times. Qualities such as naturalness, simplicity, tranquillity, asymmetry, emptiness, are expressed in Japanese plays and poetry, in flower arrangement (a highly regarded art in Japan), in sumi ink painting and calligraphy, in the subject matter and performances of the traditional theatre, in the design of gardens and house interiors. The room in which the tea ceremony is held, for example, is known as 'the abode of vacancy' and taking tea might be fairly described as a Zen practice in unfaltering awareness and joy in simple objects. The precise disciplines of judo, archery and ceremonial swordsmanship are also rooted deep in Zen. Most importantly the stripped-down, evocative 17-syllable Japanese verse form known as haiku affords special clues to the Zen state of mind:

The water-fowl
Lays its beak in its breast
And sleeps as it floats.

An old pine tree preaches wisdom
And a wild bird is crying truth.

How marvellous, how miraculous
I draw water,
I gather fuel.

What is being said in lines like these is that one should come to rest in the great Emptiness, that in every moment of life there is chance for enlightenment and that in the very seeming commonplaceness of existence one may discover the deepest mystery and wonder.

Buddha's Truth Beyond Words

Zen claims to be the direct inheritor of principles of thought and behaviour first promulgated by the historic Buddha (see GAUTAMA BUDDHA). In the 6th century BC the Buddha preached a new doctrine of a Middle Way of Understanding. He taught that certain methods of thought and behaviour could lead a follower to freedom from attachment to objects and to the eventual release from that cramping and illusory sense of a special self or ego which, cutting off man from his fellows and from all other forms of life, gave human existence its tragic tone.

The Buddha's illuminating perception that he was, in a strictly personal sense, 'nothing' and 'no-body', and thus his profound realization of the indescribable, existential indivisibility or One-ness of all life, freed him forever from the fetters of maya (illusion) and from the necessity for rebirth or participation in the ceaseless round of 'becoming'. At this point in the spiritual history of Buddhism it is assumed that the Enlightened One might of his own volition have left the physical plane. Instead, after a period of doubt and uncertainty, he accepted the sacrifice and responsibility of going forth to try to teach the unteachable; a truth that could not be described in words, that must instead be individually experienced as he had experienced it in his own moment of supreme clarity while seated under the Tree of Wisdom.

The Bodhisattvas

It is this act of profound selflessness on the part of the historic Buddha which has led to the development in Mahayana Buddhism of the theory of Bodhisattvas, enlightened beings who have taken the vow to postpone their own release in order to assist all other creatures in the attainment of Nirvana, a state of total inner Peace and Freedom, or, in other words, Buddhahood itself (see NIRVANA). Although this profoundly mystical and, in a sense, paradoxical concept of Bodhisattvas as personifications of the highest wisdom and compassion did not originate in Zen, they preside in spirit over Zen halls of instruction and meditation, and the chanting of a Bodhisattva's four vows of dedication to the Buddha's Way are a part of each day's routine in teaching centres and monasteries.

Sculptured or painted forms of such great Bodhisattvas as Kuan-Yin (in Japanese, Kwannon), Manjusri, Maitreya (Miroku) and others are found in the priceless art collections of the Zen monasteries, and are numbered among Japan's greatest national treasures. In old Chinese and Japanese art one can even find the Buddha himself depicted as a Bodhisattva, notably in such a moving masterpiece as the 12th century Chinese painter Liang K'ai's picture of the Great Teacher leaving the mountain top of his Enlightenment, preparing to descend again into the world. Shown as a worn, weary, shabby ascetic, he stares down with an expression of profound questioning into the valley below, where he must now go on his self-determined mission to carry a light into the 'darkness of the world'.

From the annals of early Indian Buddhism, Zennists pluck certain stories which to them represent the very crux and significance of Buddhist teaching. One is the Buddha's rebuke to a disciple who kept demanding intellectual answers to such questions as the nature of the First Cause, life after death and similar insoluble mysteries. To this typical sophist the Buddha remarked that his demands were comparable to those of a man who refuses to leave his burning house until he has found out who set the house on fire; or like a man who, shot with a poisoned arrow, will not remove it until he has ascertained all the facts about the arrow's source. In other words, speculation can only lead to further speculation, with no possibility of any final solution; individual penetration to the heart of life's meaning cannot be brought about by the mind alone.

The Silent Sermon

The second story in this general style describes the Buddha's so-called Silent Sermon, to a Zennist perhaps the most eloquent of all the Buddha's discourses. On one occasion before a great gathering of followers and disciples, the Buddha sat without speaking, turning a flower quietly in his hand. Some of the versions relate that he regarded the flower with joy, that he even broke into laughter. As he, without words, turned the flower in his hand he also looked into the faces of his followers waiting for a flash of understanding. At last it came. One disciple, Kasyapa, smiled, a serene inward-turning smile of awareness which told the Buddha that he had really seen the flower, had grasped that 'which goes beyond the Word'.

'The True Flower'

It is significant that this perceptive disciple was subsequently chosen by the Buddha as his successor in the role of teacher. It is also worth mention in passing that to this day a canon of judgment brought to bear on Japan's ancient Zen-rooted Noh drama is whether a performance does or does not possess 'the true flower', in other words express that which is ineffable, indescribable yet communicable and capable of being intuitively experienced. This basic Zen emphasis on an understanding that lies outside verbalism has been put succinctly in a famous four-line statement:

> A special transmission outside the Scriptures;
> No dependence upon words and letters;
> Direct pointing to the soul of man;
> Seeing into one's own nature and thereby attaining Buddhahood.

These four lines, expressive of the very essence of Zen, might be said to find their original embodiment in a semi-legendary missionary monk from India known as Bodhidharma (in Japanese, Daruma). The date of his first appearance in Zen annals is uncertain but we are told that Buddhism was already established in China when he arrived. It is related that he came all the way from India, a journey of incredible hardship, with the sole purpose of restoring to Buddhism its original directness and meaningful simplicity; to teach Buddhist followers that 'the finger pointing at the moon was not the moon [Enlightenment] itself.'

Although the precise date of Bodhidharma's arrival in China is lost in the mists of time, we do know the dates (502-550) of the devout Buddhist Emperor Wu Ti who received him in private audience. It can be assumed therefore that, sometime around the middle of the 6th century, a most important dialogue took place between the devout emperor and his noted visitor from the sacred land of the Original Teacher. The significance of this perhaps apocryphal conversation lies in the fact that it has set the tone for many hundreds of Zen dialogues, commentaries, mondo ('question and answer'), and koans, those apparently senseless Zen conundrums which do not lend themselves to solution by ordinary thought processes, and which are in fact deliberately designed by their nonsensical formulation to break down habitual mental patterns.

The Zen belief that the Buddha nature is immanent not only in man, but in everything that exists, animate or inanimate, is reflected in the traditional culture of Japan; qualities such as tranquillity and emptiness are expressed in the design of gardens and house interiors, in plays and poetry Above Sand garden in Kyoto, symbolizing the sea Below right A temple garden, also in Kyoto

Vast Emptiness

The emperor began the interview with Bodhidharma by describing his personal efforts on behalf of the newly transplanted religion, Buddhism. He told of the many temples he had built, the scriptures he had ordered copied, the special privileges he was granting Buddhist monks in his kingdom. What special merit, he wished to know, had accrued to him from these activities. Without hesitation Bodhidharma bluntly replied, 'No merit whatsoever.'

The astonished but not yet daunted emperor went on to inquire which among the holy teachings his learned visitor con-

Zen teachings stress that it is not possible to take hold of the true merely by abandoning the false, nor can one reach peace of mind or any final answer by argument or the use of logic sidered a first principle of Buddhism. 'Vast Emptiness,' replied the sage. Taken aback, in fact a little nettled by this second statement, the emperor then demanded, 'Who are you who thus reply to me?': to which he received the jolting answer, 'I do not know'. Then, without further words, Bodhidharma took himself off (some legends and many paintings have him journeying upright on a reed, a leaf, or a straw across the wide Yangtze river – calmly fearless because one-with-all) to take up a nine year term of deep meditation (zazen in the Zen vocabulary), facing a cave wall.

One of Japan's most valued national treasures, a monumental painting by Sesshu, the famous 15th-century artist-monk, depicts Bodhidharma in this cave with the disciple Hui-Ko (in Japanese, Eko) who has cut off a hand to indicate his invincible will to work for enlightenment.

In his part of the dialogue with the conventionally pious emperor, Bodhidharma was not being merely cheeky or captious. By denying any 'merit', that is, reward or value, to formal temple worship or the copying and slavish study of approved scriptures, he was placing emphasis on the more profound and subtle, indeed the ultimate Buddhist, goal of self-knowledge, the one true road to final liberation from life's anxieties and enigmas.

His answer 'Vast Emptiness' to the question of the nature of Buddhism's first principle was a positive, not a negative, retort. His words did not imply mere emptiness in the usual sense of the term. In Zen the non-dualistic eternal Void, when truly comprehended, is seen as the rich source of all life and all wonders.

Bodhidharma's third reply, 'I do not know', to the Emperor's question concerning his personal identity is a conundrum on which Zen students have been testing their powers of comprehension for centuries. It suggests the impossibility of replying in words to the immense question 'Who are you?' Yet the question is considered answerable in non-verbal terms for, as the Buddha nature is inherent in every sentient being, there can be achieved, with the right effort, a lasting realization that one's own consciousness is the very Buddha Mind itself, or Absolute Reality.

Picturepoint London

The Shortcomings of Reason

Zen's unswerving centuries-old emphasis on direct intuitive experience, rather than reliance on words about experience, has been described in modern psychological terms as a way of connecting with the deep unconscious to the end that one becomes what one truly is, as the tree grows, the bird flies, the cloud forms.

Zen holds that the so-called rational mind is incapable of solving an individual's deepest problem: his meaning to himself and life. In Zen reason is not allowed to assume the place of mastery that it has occupied for centuries in Western philosophy, the inheritor of the Greek viewpoint. Reason, in the Zen view, is incapable of bringing lasting spiritual or psychological equilibrium, for it is the very nature of the reasoning process to produce contradictory, yet equally valid, theories that lead on and on endlessly, arriving nowhere. Talking about water will not quench a thirst any more than speaking of food will satisfy hunger. Again and again Zen teachings stress that it is not possible to take hold of the true merely by abandoning the false, nor can one attain peace of mind or any final answer by argument or the use of logic. Final awareness and lasting freedom can come only when the deepest intuitional faculties of the human being are tapped and put to use.

In reaching these perceptions, and releasing these invisible energies, Zen employs its own singular techniques. In the Soto school, founded by a brilliant religious genius, the Japanese Zen master Dogen (1200-1253), one finds rather more emphasis on 'quiet sitting' than in the Rinzai school with its dynamic use of the koan. Since each school, however, employs specific periods of meditation (walking and running, as well as sitting) along with the mind-boggling koan, it seems safe to say that their similarities are more numerous than their differences.

The Rinzai School was founded somewhat earlier than the Soto by another brilliant spiritual genius, Eisai (1141-1215), generally accepted as the actual founder of Japanese Zen. It was Eisai who, after several visits to Chinese Zen centres, became convinced that this religious philosophy or way of life, then at its height, could be transplanted to Japan and bring about there a Buddhist awakening. Although Eisai was forced by circumstances to make concessions to types of Buddhism considered less pure, he belongs in the true Zen lineage and stands out among many names of missionary monks who brought the teaching across the sea from China to Japan. Eisai is also honoured as the father of Japanese tea culture, although tea itself had already been introduced from China some time before.

Michael Holford Library

Since the Soto school teaches what is called 'sitting with a single mind', 'observing one's mind in tranquillity' or even 'sitting just to sit', it has been designated as the 'Gradual School', in contrast to the Rinzai, which is popularly known as the 'Sudden School', due to its greater emphasis on the abrupt breakthrough into a new state of consciousness, of heightened awareness, by means of the dynamic thrust of the koan.

The word koan comes from the Chinese term kung-an and originally meant a precedent-establishing formulation in the legal sense. In its origin the koan was a spontaneous expression of the exuberant enlightenment which came to the spiritual heirs of Bodhidharma during the Tang era in China; part of a general desire to get rid of religious rules, to throw away form and ritual in order to be carried 'by the storm of the spirit', as Heinrich Dumoulin has expressed it. In due course this highly original and vigorous expression of a rejuvenated

Zen teachings stress that final awareness and lasting freedom come only when man's deepest intuitional faculties are tapped, a concept that is reflected in Japanese art; in this the world was perceived intuitively from within, and the artist attempted to represent not physical space but an internally apprehended space: print by Yashima Gatutei

Buddhism faded away and it was then deemed expedient, by certain wise teachers, to maintain some records of this first flowering to serve as guidelines in less inspired or vital periods. Thus it came about, in spite of Zen's strong emphasis on 'that which goes beyond the word', that a surprising number of koan, mondo, chronicles, dialogues and sayings from the past are to be found in the

Picturepoint London

Enlightenment may be found in every moment of life, according to Zen belief, and it is possible to discover the deepest mystery and wonder in what appears to be the commonplaceness of existence: flower arranging, a highly regarded art in Japan, reflects the Zen philosophy of joy in simplicity, and unfaltering awareness literature of the Zen branch of the many-branched Buddhist tree.

The irrational Lewis Carroll nonsensicality of the koan has, in recent years, caught the imagination of many Westerners who find in them what Alan Watts has described as 'an itchy fascination'. The koan is deliberately designed to throw the mind off its accustomed track, to detach it from familiar habits of classification and division, comparison of this with that.

There can be no mentally worked-out answer to 'What is the sound of one hand clapping?' or 'What was your original face before you were born?' Answers, when they come, come in the form of illuminating perceptions and they are found not by thinking about the koan, but rather by trying to gaze at it quietly. The student is advised to become concentrated, but not in thought.

To achieve this kind of perception requires total absorption day and night in the koan itself. Even when attending to the duties of everyday life it should remain firmly fixed in the unconscious mind. Zen does not believe it necessary to occupy Bodhidharma's cave in order to practise zazen; there is needed only an unshaken determination to find the Buddha's answer. Yet, paradoxically, the seeker should never strive for the goal itself. He should just sit, breathe properly (very important in Soto) or concentrate single-pointedly on the koan until he perceives 'What Is'. Then he has at last grasped the truth that one's self and the everyday world in all its manifold manifestations, forever active in flux and transformation, are together only an eternally changing and transforming, appearing and disappearing, expression of 'This', of 'Is-ness' or 'Such-ness'. Once this state has been reached the Zennist does not give up all action, but rather his actions rise spontaneously out of the flow of Being itself. Understanding and use of 'This-ness' or 'Is-ness' is well described in Eugen Herrigel's small classic, Zen in the Art of Archery, which tells how, after long and arduous effort, the author at last learns to let 'it' shoot for him, so that the arrow reaches its target as effortlessly, as naturally, as a fruit which is ripe falls from a tree.

Two favourite characters in Zen art are the so-called 'idiots', Han-shan (Kanzan) and Shih-te (Jittoku), invariably depicted in rustic garb, often leaning on garden brooms, watching leaves fall or birds quarrel, or just standing, laughing. They are not only expressing their simple joy in life's 'Is-ness' but also sharing their amusement at the folly of man's usual way of living. The haiku that might well accompany these carefree lunatics is one which reads:

> Sitting quietly, doing nothing
> Spring comes and the grass grows by itself.

Any interpretation of these lines, however, as an argument for non-participation, idleness or lack of concern could hardly be farther off the mark. In Zen no labour is beneath one's dignity; in fact all work is considered a basic and necessary part of existence. An ancient Zen monastery rule states baldly, 'No work, no food!'

Humour: Antidote to Smugness

One of Zen's outstanding characteristics is a zany sense of humour which has found expression not only in its literature but in a coexisting art of sharp and subtle commentary. The famous roshi Hakuin (1685-1768), known in his time as 'the greatest sage in 500 years', was not only a master teacher but also a great artist in the spontaneous free style favoured by Zen painters and calligraphers. Among his astringent masterpieces there is a cartoon-like drawing of a one-eyed monster in company with a simple blind man. The grotesque creature, depicted with a single fierce headlight eye in the centre of his forehead, is glaring at the

Described as 'a unique blend of Indian mysticism and Chinese naturalism sieved through the special mesh of the Japanese character', Zen claims to be the direct inheritor of the principles of thought and behaviour promulgated by the historic Buddha in the 6th century BC: worshippers entering the Kamigam unconcerned blind man as he exclaims, 'Hey! I am a one-eyed monster. Aren't you afraid of me?' 'I have no eyes,' replies the blind man, 'Why should I be afraid of you? You should be scared of me'.

A comical sketch, by another painter-monk, shows a neophyte warming his backside at a burning statue of a Bodhisattva. The accompanying anecdote tells that, when caught in this irreverent act, the culprit innocently replied that, since there had appeared in the ashes no sign of sarira (a special substance found only in the remains of cremated saints), he concluded it was only a wooden statue – and it was a very cold day.

This kind of rough humour and seeming irreverence has in no way prevented Zen temples and monasteries from remaining repositories of great religious art, nor has it stopped Buddhists from prostrating themselves before Buddha images as an act which 'horizontalizes the ego-mast', as one interpreter has put it. Zen's countless humorous anecdotes spring from the wish to avoid self-conscious religiosity or pompous smugness about spiritual attainment.

Picturepoint London

Satori, in Zen annals, is often accompanied by a kind of transcendental laughter, as in the story of the monk who came to his roshi for help with one of the classic questions assigned to neophytes: 'What is the meaning of Bodhidharma's coming from India?' The master, to whom the question was put, suggested that before proceeding with the problem the inquiring monk should make him a low salaam. As he was dutifully prostrating himself the teacher administered a good swift kick. At this unexpected impact the disciple's murky irresolution was instantly resolved. Afterwards he told everyone he met, 'Since I received that kick from Ma Tsu, I haven't been able to stop laughing.'

A number of modern students of Zen feel that the koan exercise has been overstressed in Western literature about Zen, and that too much has been made of practices followed in certain training centres: the swift thwack on the drowsy or irresolute student's shoulders by an attendant with a special stick (invariably accompanied, however, by low bows on the part of both the dealer of the blow and its recipient), or the loud rude shouts of disapproval and dismissal from an impatient roshi to whom a student has brought an obviously thought-out answer.

There are also critics who are disturbed by the West's over-emphasis on the idea of the suddenness of the breakthrough into satori which tends to give the impression of 'instant Zen', when in truth illumination, though it may be sudden in its impact, is experienced only after prolonged effort and a number of satori-like experiences (kensho) prior to the Great Enlightenment in all its stunning finality.

Something of the nature of Zen may be discovered from the words of an old poem:

> When one looks at it, one cannot see it;
> When one listens for it, one cannot hear it;
> However, when one uses it, it is inexhaustible.

Zen claims to point a paradoxical Way, at once abstract and personal, that is markedly different from the practices of more conventional religions.

NANCY WILSON ROSS

FURTHER READING: Heinrich Dumoulin, A History of Zen Buddhism (Pantheon Books, 1963); Erich Fromm, D. T. Suzuki and Richard de Martino, Zen Buddhism and Psychoanalysis (Harper and Row, 1960); Eugen Herrigel, Zen in the Art of Archery (Random, 1971); Nancy Wilson Ross ed, The World of Zen (Random House, 1960) and Three Ways of Asian Wisdom: Hinduism, Buddhism and Zen (Simon and Schuster, 1966); Philip Kapleau, Zen East & West (Doubleday, 1980).

Olympian Zeus, lord of storms and rain, supreme in his mountain stronghold, had an earthly prototype in the Mycenean Great King, but Cretan and other influences also contributed to his nature

ZEUS

THERE IS GOOD REASON to suppose that the hierarchical organization of the Olympian deities of the Homeric poems reflects the social and political conditions of the Mycenean period, when the gods and goddesses were gathered together in a single heavenly stronghold under the monarchical hegemony of Zeus (see GREECE). Their dwellings, built by Hephaestus, surrounded the central palace of Zeus.

The authority of the supreme male deity was now fairly stable, but it was still by no means unchallenged. The Mycenean pantheon spread its influence as the Mycenean social and economic system became dominant elsewhere. The ensuing conflict and fusion is paralleled by an increasing complexity in cult and mythology and reflected in the composition and organization of the pantheon.

In its most dramatic form this process had assumed the character of a struggle between the older conception of an Aegean goddess and a newer conception of a dominant male god, Zeus, whose name is certainly Indo-European. Crete had been the centre of Minoan civilization and had now become part of the fringe of the Mycenean. The study of the all-pervasive cult of Zeus in Greek religion helps us to understand the means whereby, and in what diverse forms, the Minoan religion, with its prime allegiance to a Great Goddess (although it was already familiar with the growing power of its own Cretan male god), became progressively reconciled with the Mycenean pantheon (see CRETE).

Significantly, it has been claimed that the earliest representation of Zeus occurs on the Geometric lid from a tomb at Fortetsa near Cnossus. That this representation is traditionally Cretan is indicated by the presence of birds, one of them carried on the left hand of the figure traditionally supposed to be Zeus, who strides towards a tripod. There is another bird on top of the tripod. Between the figure and the tripod is yet another, larger, bird with its head lifted towards the handle of the tripod.

The principal figure carries in his right hand an object which consists of three wavy verticals – the thunderbolt, or at least fire, perhaps resembling the bolts depicted on Syro-Hittite reliefs. Underneath the tripod is a human bust – perhaps the Minoan goddess herself, associated with, but not yet displaced by, Zeus. We could then have here represented a double epiphany or manifestation of Cretan Zeus and the older Cretan goddess, heralded by the birds of Minoan tradition.

The thunderbolt of Zeus was itself traditionally regarded as a means of bringing death so that immortality might be conferred. The tripod, a three-legged cauldron to be put over a fire, goes back in its origins to the 14th century BC.

The Cauldron of Rebirth

Real or simulated boiling in a cauldron is a familiar prelude to rejuvenation, immortality and apotheosis. The infant Dionysus-Zagreus, for instance, was slain, his limbs cooked in a cauldron, and restored to life again. In the boiling cauldron mortality and old age are shed, perennial youth is gained, rebirth follows upon death, the initiate is born again. Thunderbolt and tripod can be accompaniments of initiation; and Cretan Zeus, pre-Olympian in origin, was an initiation god.

It is tempting to imagine that the mystery of Cretan Zeus himself is celebrated in this scene on the Fortetsa lid in the form of a double epiphany, reflecting the combination of the new Dorian with the traditional

God of the sky and of storms, Zeus is traditionally depicted carrying a thunderbolt, which was itself regarded as a means of bringing death so that immortality might be conferred Below left Bronze statue of Zeus, c 5th century BC Below Bronze cast for a statue of Jupiter, the Roman god who was identified with the Greek Zeus, 2nd century AD
Right* Both Zeus and Jupiter, his Roman counterpart, were renowned in mythology for their many love affairs; Semele, the mother of Dionysus, was loved by Zeus but consumed by the fire of his thunderbolt when the god appeared to her in his divine form: Jupiter and Semele, painting by Gustave Moreau

C. M. Dixon

Cretan background, as it were newly Hellenic yet abidingly Minoan.

Background of the Gods

However that may be, other evidence illustrates the growth of the cult of Mycenean Zeus against the old Minoan background in Crete itself. Homer and Hesiod were the first to compose theogonies, to give the gods their epithets, allot them their offices and occupations and describe their forms, in the tradition reported by Herodotus. This means that these customary Greek theogonies derived from the epic tradition, rooted in the Mycenean period.

In the Homeric Catalogue of Ships (in the Iliad, book 2) Crete is described as having 100 towns. Seven of these are mentioned by name, including Cnossus, Gortyna and Phaistus, all of them from central Crete, which was apparently the chief area of Achaean occupation.

Though they are by no means principal characters in the Iliad, it is quite clear that the Cretan captains were of some importance, consistent with the island's contribution to the Trojan expedition, for Idomeneus and Meriones had a considerable contingent of 80 ships. This number can be compared with 100 ships under the command of Agamemnon himself, 90 under Nestor, 60 under Menelaus, brother of Agamemnon, and a mere 12 under Odysseus.

Idomeneus boasts of his descent from Zeus. Like other similar leaders of the Heroic Age of Greece, he had quite a short pedigree, which goes up to a god in the third generation before the Trojan War. Aerope, his first cousin, was connected by marriage with the Atreidai, the family of his allies. She married Atreus and was herself a grand-daughter of Minos. In the Iliad, Idomeneus kills Phaistus, son of the Maionian Boras from Tarne and the eponymous hero of this great Cretan city. There was another Phaistus in the Peloponnese, and again another in Thessalian Achaia. The opponents of Idomeneus, Oinomaos and Alkathöos have associations with Pelops and the Peloponnese; and his father Deucalion has associations with Thessaly. The implication is that he was an intrusive northerner by extraction, a bringer of strife to Crete before he went to Troy.

Europa and the Bull

Zeus, the god ancestor of Idomeneus, the one member of the Olympian pantheon with an Indo-European name, rose to his eminence with the growing power of the Achaeans. The result was that, in Crete, the name of their sky god was attached to a Minoan deity, whose original ritual and character can be discerned from the evidence of later times. It was not until after the Minoan period that this originally secondary deity, this youthful god, pushed his way to the forefront in a variety of forms and under a variety of names.

The myth of the Minotaur (see BULL; MAZE; THESEUS) implies that he was identified at Cnossus with the bull; and the story of the love of Queen Pasiphae for the Minotaur may derive from a form of the sacred marriage, the male partner in the ritual being played by the king masked in the head of a bull. The sacred marriage was closely involved with the fertility of the crops. This association is clearly to be observed – as is also the association with central Crete – in the famous legend of Zeus and Europa.

An archaic kind of Europa, riding on a bull, features in the earliest (5th century BC) coins of the city of Gortyna and also of Phaistus. The type persists on the coins of Gortyna throughout the 5th century. Their pictorial character has plausibly suggested a derivation from local frescoes. This relation is even more conspicuous in the 4th-century coins both of Gortyna and of Phaistus. On one type of coin from Phaistus Europa is sitting on a rock and is welcoming with her raised hand the bull who is approaching her. A coin series from contemporary Gortyna tells vividly the story of the marriage of Zeus and Europa, with Zeus changing from a bull into an eagle. Coins of Cnossus, probably struck in 220 BC, when that city was closely allied with Gortyna, are similar to the Gortynian type which features Europa; and Europa on the bull remained as one of the chief coin types of the Roman province of Crete – probably struck at Gortyna between 66 and 31 BC.

It appears to be likely that the final evolution of the male deity from a bull into an anthropomorphic Zeus, the Zeus who later became involved with Europa, must have occurred in the Mycenean period. Zeus is featured as the partner of Europa not only in Hesiod, but already in the Iliad. Animal sacrifices continued to be conspicuous in the rituals of Zeus, the victims normally being either rams or, more frequently, oxen. Both of these animals are associated with sky gods in general and with Zeus in particular. They were the most precious victims that pastoral peoples could offer, considered to be most possessed of fertilizing power and most essential to their economic survival. Various traditions combine to associate mainland settlers at Gortyna, or its neighbourhood, with the Arcadian area where the Achaean dialect survived. It is therefore perhaps significant that Gortynian Zeus shared the title of Hekatombaios ('to whom hecatombs are offered') with the Arcadian Zeus.

A celestial Zeus of Gortyna called Zeus Asterios ('Starry Zeus') was known to Byzantine writers and he was associated with Europa by earlier writers including Hesiod and Bacchylides. After his affair with Europa, Zeus reputedly gave her in marriage to the Cretan king Asterion (or Asterios, or Asteros) who, childless himself, reared the children of Zeus and Europa; and, according to the Byzantine writer Tzetzes, Sarpedon, Minos and Rhadamanthys were sons of Zeus Asterios. The Minotaur was also called Asterios or Asterion. There were sacred herds of cattle at Gortyna, a cult of a solar deity called Atymnos, brother of Europa, whose early death was mourned; and an inscription of the 5th century BC confirms the worship of the sun.

The art and the literary and numismatic evidence of historical times all indicate how the sacred marriage of Zeus and Europa combined Mycenean with Minoan – and even more primitive – traditions of cult. Europa often features in art on the bull, holding in one hand his fertilizing horn and in the other hand a flower, symbol of her fertility and also of earlier magical associations before the bull had been deified.

The marriage of Zeus and Europa traditionally occurred in or under a plane tree near a stream at Gortyna. Coins of Gortyna of the 5th century BC show a goddess in a tree, generally considered to be Europa possessed by Zeus in the form of an eagle and thus identified with Hera (see HERA). A bull's head, however, is apparently often fixed to the trunk of the tree. The tree on the coins seems to be a pollard willow and not a plane tree. Yet we need not go so far as to accept the suggestion that Europa was actually a willow goddess and that Zeus, as a nursling of the willow, might naturally be mated with a willow bride. Magical plant and tree associations of this kind must have existed long before either Zeus or Europa. Such earlier connections were indicated in the mention of the tree where the sacred marriage took place and the stream nearby, where the goddess bathed.

Putting Away Childish Things

The cult of the goddess Leto at Phaistus, not far away from Gortyna in southern Crete, is of particular interest. We have evidence to prove that Cretan youths, when they reached the last stage of initiation into manhood and citizenship, cast aside their boys' garments before assuming their warriors' costumes. The formality of this particular ritual was embedded in the festival which was known at Phaistus as the Ekdysia ('casting off'), during which the youth cast off his boys' clothes. This festival was associated with the local cult of Leto and was connected with the myth of Leucippus, who was changed from a girl into a boy. According to the myth, Galatea, daughter of Eurytus and wife of Lamprus, bore a daughter; and she persuaded Leto to let the girl change sex when she grew up.

The change was commemorated in the Phaistian festival of the Ekdysia. When the Phaistians married they lay down beside the statue of Leucippus, which was presumably in the sanctuary of Leto. The festival and the mythology suggest a combination of fertility, initiation and marriage ritual. The youths of Phaistus were apparently initiated into manhood, citizenship and marriage at the same period of life. The local Leto, as her epithet Phytia ('causing growth') indicates, promoted growth and fertility in the young. When growth had been promoted, the boy died and was reborn as a man, casting away his boy's clothes and dressing like a man.

Leto Phytia and her Phaistian festival were rooted in the earliest stratum of Cretan religion. It has been suggested that, because the cock was dear to Leto (as to all women in childbirth), since he stood by to lighten her labour, Leto Phytia was somehow related to Zeus Welkhanos of Phaistus, whose sacred bird was the cock.

Zeus as an eagle, abducting Ganymede: a painting by Rembrandt

Giraudon

Coins of Phaistus in the period from about 430 to 300 BC show Welkhanos as a youthful, beardless god, his right hand caressing a cock; on the reverse side there is a bull. The Cretan identification of Zeus with Welkhanos is also confirmed by lexicography.

The discovery of numerous tiles with the name of the god Weukhanos (Welkhanos) was made years ago at neighbouring Hagia Triada. Significantly, the temple of Zeus Welkhanos was here built upon the ruins of the old palace of Hagia Triada. An associated month name and spring festival is attested in three other towns of Crete.

A. B. Cook (author of Zeus) thought the meaning of Welkhanos could have been 'god of the willow-tree', confirming his idea that Zeus at Phaistus, as at Gortyna, was consort of a willow goddess. For he had a cock (instead of his usual eagle), since the cock, as the crest of the Phaistian Idomeneus, had a long-standing mythical association with the town. There was also a tradition that Idomeneus was descended from the sun, sire of Pasiphae, and that the cock was sacred to the sun. Though these associations may be true, there is no reason but to suppose that Cook's identification strained the evidence.

It is nevertheless possible to conclude, from the nature and provenance of the cult, that Zeus Welkhanos was a product of the Minoan god of fertility. There is clear similarity between the coins of Phaistus showing Welkhanos with a cock in the branches of a tree and the coins of Gortyna showing Zeus, Europa and the eagle. The cock, like the eagle, seems to signify a bird epiphany. Welkhanos must surely have been yet another male partner in a sacred marriage with the old Minoan mother goddess.

Thunderbolt and Aegis

The evidence about Zeus Welkhanos and the representation (if it be of Zeus) on the lid from Fortetsa serve alike to emphasize the difficulty of clearly distinguishing Olympian Zeus from the specifically Cretan Zeus. The weather god, lord of storms, rain, lightning and thunder, who acquired supremacy in his mountain stronghold, had an earthly prototype in the Mycenean Great King. Nevertheless, the Cretan Zeus who survived with such dominant traits of his original nature long after the Olympian pantheon became supreme in officially sponsored religion, is but one symbol – though one of outstanding importance – through which old prehistoric cult exercised its influence. The later Zeus, Olympian though he might be, exhibited himself in many forms, as is evident in those various distinguishing epithets attached to his name, which not only reveal his many-sided nature but often a pre-Olympian basis.

In eastern Crete, 'the Cretan-born Zeus' was specifically associated with Dicte by the epithet Diktaios (Dictean). The geographer Strabo expressly connected the temple of Dictean Zeus with the old Bronze Age population of the area. Although the Hellenic temple which stood on the site of the Minoan town of Palaicastro had been destroyed, sufficient numbers of votive offerings were found there in the course of archeological investigation to define its position; and the site of the alter was fixed by a bed of ashes. It was the discovery of the inscription of the famous Hymn of the Curetes (see CORYBANTES), addressed to Zeus of Dicte, which confirmed with certainty that the temple was that of Dictean Zeus. Or again, there is Zeus Idaios ('of Ida'), similar to Dictean Zeus, mentioned in a much-discussed fragment of The Cretans of Euripides, delivered by a chorus of inspired devotees of Zeus.

The ancient Greeks themselves believed that the Pelasgians were the aboriginal inhabitants of Greece and they tended also to associate Pelasgians with Carians (people from south-west Asia Minor) and the Leleges of the Greek islands. The name survived in the ancient shrine of Zeus Pelasgios at Dodona in Epirus, in north-west Greece. Here was the most ancient oracle in Greece, the divine responses obtained from the rustling of sacred trees and from brazen vessels suspended from them (see ORACLES). The cult of Zeus Karios ('Carian Zeus'), centred at Mylasa, the Carian capital, was also found in Boeotia and Attica, in mainland Greece.

As well as the bull and the cock, the eagle was also associated with Zeus in mythology, and the god is said to have assumed the form of this bird when he carried off the young Ganymede to heaven to make him his cup-bearer: statue of Ganymede astride the eagle, by Benvenuto Cellini

Scala

'The portion of Zeus is the broad heaven among the clouds in the upper air,' says Homer in the Iliad. Hence a repeatedly recurrent Homeric epithet of Zeus is the Cloud-gatherer, sending rain, lightning, thunder. Small wonder that altars have been found in Greek houses dedicated to Zeus Kataibates – Zeus who descends (in thunder and lightning) – and sacrifices were made on these altars to appease him and ward off destruction from the house.

Beside the thunderbolt, the aegis (skin shield) is a peculiar attribute of Zeus. In keeping with his rise to eminence in the Heroic Age of Mycenean Greece, Zeus, as god of manly strength and prowess, was especially honoured at two of the four great athletic festivals of Greece, the Olympian and the Nemean, besides many others. From the 4th century BC onwards, Greek historians reckoned time in Olympiads, the periods corresponding to the Olympic Games, which were quadrennial and claimed uninterrupted celebration from 776 BC (see GAMES).

The sacred precinct of Zeus at Olympia, the Altis, was surrounded by a wall with several entrances. In the southern part stood the great temple of Zeus, with the famous gold and ivory statue of Zeus by Pheidias, which was classed as one of the seven wonders of the world until it perished in 462 AD, and which was more praised in antiquity than any other work of art.

Lord of the City State

Zeus was of supreme importance in the daily life of the Greek city state. As Nilsson explained, in A History of Greek Religion: 'Just as the father of the household is Zeus's priest, so Zeus himself in the patriarchal monarchy of earlier times is the special protector of the king and hence the supreme custodian of the social order. Thus in Homer Agamemnon is under the special protection of Zeus. The god was not dethroned with the fall of the monarchy. As Zeus Polieus he is the divine overlord of the city state.'

As protector and guardian of the house he was Zeus Herkeios ('Of the front court'). As Zeus Ktesios ('the Acquirer') he was similarly protector of house and property. Hence Nilsson's conclusion that where Zeus appears in the shape of a snake under such names as Ktesios, Meilikhios ('the Kindly One') and Philios ('the Friendly One'), the name of Zeus had been added to the house deity which appeared as a snake, because Zeus was also protector and guardian of the house. A deity, male in later Greece, female in the Minoan Age, developed out of a domestic snake cult.

Zeus was also protector of the fugitive suppliant, as Zeus Hikesios. He had a part to play in the sanctity attaching to the duties of friendly hospitality (Ksenios). From the beginning of the 5th century BC, there grew up, in the city of Athens and its neighbourhood, a special class of resident aliens called metoikoi. They were attracted by the opportunities of trade in a flourishing commercial centre, and the government encouraged them, despite the fact that, as foreigners, they were really excluded from civic rights and from public ceremonies associated with the official religion of the state. Nevertheless, once a year, at the national festival of the Panathenaea, these resident aliens were not merely permitted to take part but were allowed special marks of honour. They also had a separate Zeus Metoikios as their special patron.

As the governments of the city states, like that of Athens, tended to become more democratic in form, they still continued to have allegiance in council and assembly to Zeus as, for example, to Zeus Agoraios ('Of the market place'). That epithet was not peculiar to Zeus, but no doubt derived from the location in the market place of a shrine or altar of the deity to whom it applied. Functional shades of meaning must have been derived from the various functions of the agora, the market place, chiefly as a place of assembly and also as a market place in the strict sense. Zeus Agoraios would therefore have been a special patron of those mustered in assembly at the agora. From this special association with the assembly of citizens, Zeus Agoraios could be described in literature as patron of eloquence or of public supplication.

In later antiquity, among the more sophisticated, as religious belief tended to become more monotheistic, there was a tendency for Zeus to become conceptualized as the one, single god, the beginning and the end of all things.

(See also HIGH GODS; SKY.)

R. F. WILLETTS

FURTHER READING: A. B. Cook, Zeus (Biblo & Tannen reprint, 3 vols); M. P. Nilsson, Minoan-Mycenaean Religion (Lund, Sweden, 1950); M. P. Nilsson, A History of Greek Religion (Greenwood, 1980); W. K. C. Guthrie, The Greeks and their Gods (Beacon Press, 1968); R. F. Willetts, Cretan Cults and Festivals (Greenwood, 1980).

Zeus rose to pre-eminence with the growing power of the Achaean Greeks, but traces of the Cretan Zeus survived in Greek mythology: according to legend, the god was born in Crete and hidden in a cave from his father Cronus, who would otherwise have devoured him: the cave of Zeus, Crete

Ronald Sheridan

Zion

Or Sion, one of the hills of the city of Jerusalem, often used in the Old Testament as an alternative name for the city itself as the spiritual centre and capital of the world; in Christian literature frequently used to mean the heavenly city of God, or the Church; Zionism is the modern movement to create a Jewish national home in Palestine, which culminated in the establishment of the state of Israel.

See JERUSALEM.

Mansell Collection

Zodiac

In astrology, a circle in the sky through which the sun, moon and planets appear to move; divided into 12 'signs', each allotted 30 degrees; a planet's position in the zodiac is believed to affect the way in which it influences people and events on earth; the signs of the traditional 'tropical' zodiac are not identical with the actual constellations in the sky, the 'sidereal' zodiac.

See AQUARIUS; ASTROLOGY; and articles on each of the signs.

Mansell Collection

The risk of being turned into a zombie, a soulless, automaton-like body or a disembodied soul, by poison or enchantment, is still feared and guarded against in Haiti

ZOMBIES

ONE CANNOT live long in Haiti without hearing talk of zombies, dead bodies brought back to a half-life by magic, and many stories about them have appeared in print. In 1939, for instance, Zora Hurston published a now classic account of a young girl from a well-to-do family who was discovered four years after her death working as a slavey in a shop; she was rescued by French nuns and placed in a nunnery.

The tale was still current in Haiti 20 years later, with several additions: four or five quite different towns were named as the place where she had been found, and some said that her rescuers had been Baptists. They also declared that she had been recognized on account of her bent neck, the result of her having been buried in a coffin too small for her, and by a scar on her foot made by a candle which had overturned and burnt her during the wake. But these distinguishing marks are first known in a story told to the writer Alfred Métraux in about 1950. It concerned a young woman who over-brusquely turned down the amorous advances of a houngan, or Voodoo priest (see VOODOO), who bewitched her in revenge, dug her up after her presumed death and used her as a zombie until the Catholic anti-superstition campaign caused him to set her loose.

Whatever the original truth of these stories, their combination has produced something approaching a myth which will probably be gaining credence 100 years from now, because of its apparently factual detail and its compact sense of the superstitions involved. It is certain anyhow that few stories told about zombies are to be taken literally.

Many of the people thought to be zombies are in fact morons or idiots, of which Haiti has its fair share. Métraux tells of one such who escaped from the house where her parents had locked her up, and whose behaviour alarmed the neighbouring peasants sufficiently to make them believe she was a zombie. Zora Hurston took a photograph of a woman zombie in a hospital who almost certainly was a mental defective. The mistake is easy enough to make, for both zombies and morons have certain things in common. The zombie, for instance, walks with a shambling gait and downcast eyes, speaks gibberish in a nasal voice if it speaks at all, does not answer when spoken to, and is bereft of the usual marks of sanity.

Equally important, Haitians delight in telling tall stories about things supernatural, which serve to amaze their audience and even to convince themselves, if only for a moment. A magistrate, for instance, told a convincing story about a Catholic priest who went blind after seeing a troupe of zombies in the hills, remarking that one shouldn't laugh at such matters. But he immediately followed up his cautionary tale with an eye-witness account of a corpse being dug out of its grave and then re-animated, which was a mere hoax: he examined the grave the following day and found a pipe leading from it to the air so that the supposed corpse – the houngan's accomplice – could breathe before his exhumation.

Few people have actually seen zombies. The following incident was said to have occurred in 1959, and was vouched for by a Catholic priest. (It must be remembered, however, that Voodoo and its superstitions are the great enemy of the Church in Haiti, and that even the most upright of men will slander his enemy in a good cause.) A zombie had come wandering into the village where he lived, entered the courtyard of a house and promptly had his hands tied together by the owner, who took him to the police station. The police wished to have nothing to do with such an ominous creature, and so he was left outside the station for some hours, chewing at his bonds, until he was given salt water to drink – the instant cure for zombification. He then found his voice again and told his name. His aunt, who was living in the Tales of zombies, dead bodies magically brought back to half-life, proliferate in Haiti where the superstitions of Voodoo are an integral part of life; President Duvalier's private army was named after the tontons macoute, or magicians of Haiti, and some were believed to be zombies village, was sent for: she not only recognized him but declared she had seen him dead and buried four years previously.

The Catholic priest also arrived on the scene and learnt from the man that he had been one of a large number of zombies set to work by the houngan who had enchanted them. This announcement frightened the police even more, and they sent word to the houngan that he could have his zombie back for a consideration. Two days later, however, the man died, and it was generally presumed that the houngan had murdered him for having spilt the beans. He was arrested, but his wife fled into the hills with the remaining zombies.

The educated classes also tell of zombies, as in Métraux's account of a monsieur whose car broke down outside the house of a houngan. The houngan, assuring him that the matter was no mere accident, invited him inside and showed him a zombie, in whom the monsieur recognized a great friend, dead some six months previously. Full of pity the monsieur offered the zombie a drink, but was stopped by the houngan who warned him of terrible dangers if he did so.

Return to the Grave

Perhaps the most sensational zombie tale is the one recounted by W. B. Seabrook, about a number of zombies owned by a houngan called Joseph and looked after by his wife. One day, not realizing what she was doing, she gave them salted biscuits to eat. Awoken from their deathly trance and knowing themselves for the walking corpses they were, they made straight for the cemetery, brushing aside all who would stop them. There they hurled themselves upon their graves and tried to dig themselves back into the earth, but turned into carrion as they did so.

The most feared consequence of releasing a zombie from his bondage is that he will revenge himself physically and magically upon his owner. Those who own zombies thus make a point of treating them with great harshness – another point which they have in common with the mentally deranged, for it is normal practice in Haiti to beat lunatics and keep them frightened. The parallel is in fact recognized obliquely by all who claim knowledge of how to make a man into a zombie: there are two major ways, by poison and by enchantment. The plants usually cited as poison are manchineel, whose apple-like fruit was often used by resentful slaves in plantation days to kill their owners and their livestock, and datura, the thorn apple, which contains atropine, and belladonna or deadly nightshade. A further poison can be made from the legendary three drops which escape from the nose of a corpse hung upside down.

Besides these, houngans also prepare a number of leaf powders of different kinds with various magical and, it is said, pharmacological properties. One of these powders, containing pepper wood, is very effective in bringing on possessions by the gods. The powder seems to have no effect other than to stimulate the mucous membranes of the nose, but this is enough to trigger off a dissociation when people are highly suggestible, as they are during a ceremony. It is quite possible, therefore, that such a powder used in the right context can magically zombify a man, by entrapping his soul and leaving him with nothing but his body (called the corpse body in Haitian parlance) and his spirit, also termed the zombie.

Spider into Zombie

Initiates into Voodoo pass through a similar state but with proper safeguards. To become possessed by a god their souls must first be displaced or, as we should say, they must be dissociated. During their initiation, their souls are incubated and finally transferred into a sacred vessel called the pot de tête, or head-pot, where they are safe from the attacks of evil-doers and under the protection of the gods. At their death, a rite called dessounin is practised which sends their spirits into the waters of death and again captures their souls in a head-pot to await their spiritual resurrection. An initiate is thus a purified zombie whose activity when possessed is controlled by a god, not a magician.

Significantly enough, the dessounin rite is copied by those who want a dying man's zombie. This is done by placing a pot, containing 21 seeds of pois congo and a length of string knotted 21 times, under the pillow of the moribund. After his death the string turns into a spider, and the pot containing it is placed in a dark room. To turn the spider into the dead man's zombie all you need do is to knock three times at the door, taking care to stand with your back to it, and to threaten it with a whip when you give it its orders.

In southern Haiti this kind of zombie is known as a vivi: it is the equivalent of a jinn trapped in a bottle. Another way of making a vivi is to exchange a man's soul while he is still alive for that of a lizard, chicken, butterfly or other small animal. The man is no wiser for the substitution, but the animal which embodies his soul cannot die, and merely vanishes if an attempt is made to kill it. The word 'soul' is probably a misnomer here: a better word is 'talent', for it is men talented in law, accountancy, business or some such skill who are sought for as zombies, and for whom the dessounin rite is practised even if they are not initiates into Voodoo proper.

In any case, it is difficult to tell a vivi from a baka, that monster of the supernatural created by black magic to bring luck, power or wealth. Both have to be served in the proper manner or their owner is destroyed by their ungoverned force; both are best invoked in cemeteries. One kind of zombie can be made of a man long dead (by whipping his grave with sticks of pois congo) and is used in several branches of magic: for instance a tired prostitute can have her private parts inhabited by such a 'mort' or dead man, paradoxically to liven them up and make her clients come back for more.

It is to stop this kind of zombification that people enter into Voodoo, have their souls placed in head-pots and undergo the dessounin rite. But even this is not enough to stop the corpse answering the magician's voice as it lies in its grave, and being turned into a zombie. In certain parts of Haiti, therefore, the corpse is buried face down with its mouth full of earth, or its lips are sewn together; sometimes a knife is placed in its hand with which it can defend itself. In other places sesame seed is scattered in the grave so that the ghost will be eternally occupied in counting how many there are. As a last resort the corpse is strangled or shot through the head.

Zombies thus come in two major forms: as a body without a soul, and as a soul without a body. These last are not easily distinguishable from magical spells, and both from confidence tricks. The word zombie itself, however, comes from the Arawak Indian term zemi, a god or a spirit, which also lies at the origin of the name Baron Samedi, god of the dead: by which we may infer that a zombie is properly to be understood in religious terms, as a body resurrected by spiritual means. It is not impossible for such means to be used for profane ends, nor that a man can truly exist as a body without a soul. So far, however, this is still a moot point.

FRANCIS HUXLEY

Banquet with Corpses

In the centre of the room was an elegantly set table with damask cloth, flowers, glittering silver. Four men, also in evening clothes, but badly fitting, were already seated at this table. There were two vacant chairs at its head and foot. The seated men did not arise when the girl in her bride-clothes entered on her husband's arm. They sat slumped down in their chairs and did not even turn their heads to greet her . . .

As she sat down mechanically in the chair to which Toussel led her, seating himself facing her, with the four guests ranged between them, two on either side, he said, in an unnatural strained way, the stress increasing as he spoke:

"I beg of you . . . to forgive my guests their . . . seeming rudeness. It has been a long time . . . since . . . they have . . . tasted wine . . . sat like this at table . . . with so fair a hostess . . . But, ah, presently . . . they will drink with you, yes . . . lift . . . their arms, as I lift mine . . . clink glasses with you . . . more . . . they will arise and . . . dance with you . . . more . . . they will . . ."

Near her, the black fingers of one silent guest were clutched rigidly around the fragile stem of a wine-glass, tilted, spilling. The horror pent up in her overflowed. She seized a candle, thrust it close to the slumped, bowed face, and saw the man was dead. She was sitting at a banquet table with four propped-up corpses.

W. B. Seabrook The Magic Island

FURTHER READING: Zora Hurston, Tell My Horse (Lippincott, 1938); Francis Huxley The Invisibles (Humanities, 1966); Alfred Métraux, Voodoo in Haiti (Schocken, 1972); W. B. Seabrook, The Magic Island (Folcroft, 1977).

From a monotheistic faith with Ahura Mazdah as its supreme deity, Zoroastrianism progressed towards a dualistic concept of Ohrmazd, principle of goodness and light, and Ahriman, principle of evil and darkness; in all its phases, however, Zoroastrianism remained primarily a religion of free will

ZOROASTRIANISM

ZOROASTRIANISM is the name given to the religion founded by the Iranian prophet Zoroaster, probably in the 6th-7th centuries BC. Modern scholarship tends to accept the traditional date of the prophet, '258 years before Alexander'. For the Iranians, 'before Alexander' could only mean the final extinction of the First Persian Empire at the sack of Persepolis by Alexander the Great in 330 BC. Hence Zoroaster's 'date' would be 588 BC. But what period in his life would this refer to? It might refer to his birth, to his first revelation at the age of 30, to his conversion of the local king Vishtaspa at the age of 40, or to his death at the age of 77.

Whichever date we accept, Zoroaster's life will have spanned the 7th and 6th centuries BC. This, however, like so much in Zoroastrian studies, cannot be regarded as at all certain. So too with the place in which he operated. The later tradition placed him in western Iran, in what is today Azerbaijan; but this is almost certainly not true, for the internal evidence – the dialect and the place names mentioned in the early Zoroastrian texts – points to the east, the country near the Oxus River, now in Soviet Central Asia. Modern scholarship would have it that Zoroaster's field of activity was in ancient Chorasmia, corresponding roughly to what is today the Turkmen Republic of the Soviet Union. This again is highly probable but far from certain.

Roger Wood Studio

Gods and Demons

It must be emphasized at the outset that in practically every aspect of Zoroastrian studies uncertainty prevails, and this for a variety of reasons. The principal reason is that our main sources do not agree. The sacred text, the Avesta, itself only a fraction of the original scripture and handed down orally for at least 1000 years, is (as is the way of sacred scriptures) not consistent with itself, nor is it consistent with the contemporary sources – the inscriptions of the Achaemenian kings and the various Greek accounts of the Iranian religion from Herodotus onwards.

The same is true of the second period of Zoroastrian supremacy during the Second Persian Empire, the so-called Sassanian Empire, which lasted from 226-651 AD. It cannot be claimed, then, that all that will be said in this brief article is authoritative; for Zoroastrian scholars have disagreed with a vehemence of acerbity rare even among academics.

Zoroaster, or Zarathushtra, as he is called in the Avesta, was born some time in the 7th century BC, fled from his native land because he preached a doctrine which his fellow-countrymen refused to accept, and found asylum with a certain King Vishtaspa in eastern Iran, who finally accepted his teaching. That his teaching was at variance with the traditional religion is clear. Just what that earlier religion was is less clear. One thing is certain, however: that the Aryans, the common ancestors of the 'Aryan' invaders of India (who were responsible for the earliest sacred book of the Hindus, the Veda), and the Iranians who inhabited the Iranian plateau had a common religion which was polytheistic (see INDIA).

Two Groups of Deities

The original Aryan pantheon was, it seems, divided into two distinct groups of deities, the asuras (or ahuras) on the one hand and the daivas on the other. The asuras seem to have been remote gods who dwelt in the sky, while the daivas were nearer to men and more intimately

Right Head of a Persian king, in the Teheran Museum: like other religions, Zoroastrianism developed and changed, and in its strictly dualist form as the official state religion of the Sassanian kings from the 3rd century BC to the 7th century AD, its doctrine of the great opposing principles in the universe influenced Judaism, Christianity and Islam

Left Ruins of a fire temple at Naqsh-i-Rustam, near Persepolis: fire was called the 'son' of Ahura Mazdah, and the rite of sacrificing the plant haoma centred round the sacred fire

William MacQuitty

Right The Parsees, the Indian Zoroastrians, believing that neither earth nor fire should be defiled by corpses, place their dead in the 'towers of silence', where they are exposed to the sun and the vultures Above Plan of a tower of silence: one side of the building is for men's bodies, the other for women's associated with them. From the beginning there seems to have been tension between the two groups. In India the asuras, because they were held to possess magic powers which they were likely to use against mankind, finished up by becoming demons. But in Iran precisely the opposite happened.

The ahuras (the Iranian form of the Indian asuras) were able to retain their divine status, whereas the daivas were reduced to the status of demons. This probably happened before the appearance of Zoroaster, as the terms ahuro-tkaesha ('the religion of the ahuras') and daevo-data ('the law of the daivas') would seem to show. Already, it would appear, the ahuras were considered to be beneficent powers, and the daivas were maleficent.

New Message from God

Zoroastrianism has been described both as an ethical monotheism and as a classical form of dualism (see DUALISM; EVIL). How can one religion be described in two such contradictory ways? The answer is that Zoroastrianism, like any other religion, developed and changed, now emphasizing one aspect of the prophet's message, now another. In any case, the Zoroastrianism of the prophet himself was very different from the form of Zoroastrianism which became prevalent in the later stages of the First (Achaemenian) Persian Empire (550-330 BC), and this again differed considerably from the official Zoroastrianism of the Second (Sassanian) Empire (226-651 AD). The first could be designated monotheism, the second modified monotheism, and the third dualism.

Zoroaster was born into a priestly family, but he saw himself as a prophet, the bringer of a new message from a god called Ahura Mazdah, the 'Wise Lord', who revealed himself as the true God. This message is preserved in the oldest part of the Avesta, the Gathas or 'Songs' of Zoroaster himself.

Zoroaster was a prophet every bit as much as were the Hebrew prophets – who prophesied at much the same time. He was convinced that he was inspired by God and that he was charged with a message from him to man. He claimed to 'see' him and also to hear his voice. Indeed, his relationship is so close that he can speak of it as one of 'friend to friend'.

The essence of Zoroaster's message is that God is One, holy and righteous, the Creator of all things, both material and spiritual, through his Holy Spirit, the living and the giver of life. He is good because he is productive and gives increase. His 'oneness', however, is a unity in diversity, for he manifests himself under many various aspects: the Holy Spirit, as and through whom God creates; the Good Mind, as and through which he inspires the prophet and sanctifies mankind; Truth, Righteousness, or Cosmic Order (Asha), as and through which he shows mankind how to conform to the cosmos in accordance with true righteousness; Sovereignty, as and through which he rules over the entirety of creation; Wholeness, which is the plenitude of his being; and Immortality, as and through which he will annihilate death.

The Bounteous Immortals

These aspects of the Wise Lord were later to be called the 'Bounteous Immortals', and in the later periods of Zoroastrianism they were to be associated with various material elements: they appear as God's creatures and are thus assimilated to the archangels of other traditions. Two of them demand particular notice: Truth and the Holy Spirit. Like the other Bounteous Immortals, they have acknowledged opposites or 'adversaries' which thwart and restrict them. Ahura Mazdah, as Supreme Deity, has no opposite but, insofar as he is associated with Truth and the Holy Spirit, he is (indirectly) at variance with the 'Lie' and the 'Destructive Spirit' – the later Ahriman – just as the Hebrew God is opposed to Satan in the later Judaeo-Christian scriptures.

Hence it is not wholly illogical to describe the Zoroastrianism of the prophet himself as both a 'monotheism' and a 'dualism'; and in so far as Ahura Mazdah reveals himself under different aspects, it is not wholly absurd to describe it as a modified 'polytheism'.

Roger Wood Studio

Truth and the Lie

In the Gathas the basic dualism is between Truth and the Lie – Asha and Druj – which can also mean the established cosmic order and whatever disrupts it. This dualism remains throughout all the phases of Zoroastrianism. The Lie also means the disruption of the established political order (Darius described the rebels against his authority as 'liars'), and the disruption of the truthfully spoken word, or what we normally understand by a lie. As God, Ahura Mazdah is beyond both Truth and the Lie, but as and through Truth he is inexorably opposed to its opposite, which is also the spirit of disruption.

Similarly in the case of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is irreconcilably opposed to the Destructive Spirit (see AHRIMAN) and this opposition was later to be regarded as characteristic of Zoroastrian dualism. Of these two Spirits it is written:

> In the beginning those two Spirits who are the well-endowed(?) twins were known as the one good and the other evil in thought, word and deed... And when these Spirits met they established in the beginning life and death that in the end the followers of the Lie should meet with the worst existence, but the followers of Truth with the Best Mind. Of these two Spirits he who was of the Lie chose to do the worst things; but the most Holy Spirit, clothed in rugged heaven, (chose) Truth as did (all) who sought with zeal to do the pleasure of the Wise Lord by (doing) good works.

Although the two Spirits choose to do good and evil, the Holy Spirit can nevertheless say to 'him who is Evil: "Neither our thoughts, nor our teachings, nor our wills, nor our choices, nor our words, nor our deeds, nor our consciences, nor yet our souls agree".'

Ahura Mazdah, the Wise Lord, is himself described as being the 'father' of the Holy Spirit (as he is of several other Bounteous Immortals), but he is also in a sense identical with him. As and through the Holy Spirit, then, he is as irreconcilably opposed to the Evil or Destructive Spirit, the author of death, as he is to the Lie, for he is both Life and Truth. But if he is the father of the Holy Spirit, and the Holy Spirit is the Destructive Spirit's twin, does it not follow that he is the father of the Destructive Spirit too? In the later literature, the Wise Lord is roundly identified with the Holy Spirit, and once this has happened Zoroastrianism becomes a classically dualist religion (see OHRMAZD).

A minority, however, remembering that the two Spirits had been spoken of as twins, insisted that they must have had a common father. This could no longer be Ahura Mazdah (the later Ohrmazd), so some other entity had to be found. They finally settled on 'Infinite Time' (see ZURVAN), who thus became the supreme principle beyond good and evil.

The Two Houses

In all its phases Zoroastrianism is the religion of free will. Man is judged in accordance with the nature of the thoughts, words and deeds he has thought, spoken and done in his lifetime. The reward of the good is heaven, the 'Best Existence'; that of the wicked is hell, an 'evil existence'. At death the soul must cross the 'Bridge of the Requiter' which, in the later literature, is broad and free from danger for the righteous but becomes as narrow as a razor's edge for the wicked, who thereby fall helplessly into hell (see BRIDGES; JUDGEMENT OF THE DEAD). In the Gathas it is Zoroaster himself who guides the righteous across the awesome bridge, but when the wicked reach it 'their souls and consciences trouble them when they come to the Bridge of the Requiter, guests for all eternity in the House of the Lie'.

Heaven and hell are states rather than places – the best existence and the worst existence or, more graphically, the House of the Good Mind and the House of the Worst Mind, the House of Song and the

William MacQuitty

On New Year's Day, in celebration of the beginning of spring, a great festival was held at Persepolis under the auspices of Ahura Mazdah, supreme deity of Zoroastrianism, during which representatives of all the nations of the Persian Empire brought tributes to the king: relief at Persepolis showing a procession of Median nobles

William MacQuitty/Teheran Museum

House of the Lie. In the one there is 'ease and benefit', in the other discomfort and torment, 'a long age of darkness, foul food, and cries of woe'.

In addition there is a final reckoning 'at the last turning-point of existence', when there will be a Last Judgement in the form of an ordeal by fire and molten metal which will allot to the righteous and the unrighteous their final destiny of weal or woe. The Last Judgement then, merely confirms the individual judgement at death: salvation and damnation are fixed for all eternity. This 'black and white' doctrine was to enter Judaism and, through Judaism, Christianity and Islam. The Zoroastrians, however, were later to modify it themselves, for in the later texts the Last Judgement (which seems unnecessary anyhow) becomes not a judgement at all but a purgation by molten metal in which the wicked are finally purged of their sins and the just suffer nothing since the molten metal has no terrors for them: they experience it as if it were warm milk.

These, then, are the basic doctrines preached by the prophet Zoroaster himself: there is one supreme God, Creator of all things, spiritual and material; aside from him there are two irreconcilable principles – Truth and the Lie, the Holy Spirit and the Destructive Spirit. Alongside these there are 'aspects' of God and also, though less markedly, 'aspects' of the Lie and the Destructive Spirit. Man must choose between the two, and in accordance with his choice he will either be blessed with eternal bliss or chastized with everlasting torment. By 'good' is meant Truth, the proper ordering of things, life, and prosperity: by evil, the Lie, disorder, death, and misery. The dualism is not one of spirit and matter but one of spirit and spirit, matter being in itself good because created by God, though later corrupted by the Devil.

The Later Avesta

Only the Gathas purport to be the work of the prophet Zoroaster himself. The rest of the Avesta (or rather what survives of it) is later and contains much material that seems to be totally at variance with the prophet's teaching. According to the later tradition the 'original' Avesta consisted of 21 Nasks or 'books', a summary of which survives in the Denkart, a work, like all the works written in Pahlavi (Zoroastrian 'middle' Persian), that dates from after the Mohammedan conquest but which draws on much earlier material. Of these 21 Nasks only one remains in its entirety – the Videvdat or 'Law against the Demons', a tiresome book largely concerned with the punishments of sins, ritual purification and mythology. Apart from this there is the Yasna, the 'sacrifice', or ritual texts accompanying the main Zoroastrian liturgy together with minor liturgical texts, and the Yashts or 'hymns of praise' celebrating a whole gamut of pre-Zoroastrian deities which the prophet had certainly ignored and may even have proscribed.

British Museum

The Yasna, or sacrificial liturgy, centres round the immolation of the sacred plant haoma (the Iranian equivalent of the Indian soma), the juice of which is considered to be the elixir of immortality. The Yasna is both sacrifice and sacrament: the plant god is slain by being pounded in a mortar and its juice is consumed in order to win eternal life. There seem to be references to this cult in the Gathas themselves, and it seems certain from these references that the prophet disapproved of it strongly, at least as practised by the 'worshippers of the daivas'. Be that as it may, the haoma cult appears very soon to have become central to Zoroastrian worship and it has remained so to this day, both among the

Zoroaster saw himself as a prophet, the bringer of a new message from the god Ahura Mazdah, the 'Wise Lord': Zoroaster in his study, a 15th-century miniature Facing page The symbol of Ahura Mazdah

10,000 Zoroastrians who still survive in Iran and among the 100,000 Parsees ('Persians'), as the Zoroastrians who emigrated from Iran to India some centuries after the Mohammedan conquest are called (see PARSEES). The haoma sacrifice is the central act of the liturgy, but from beginning to end the material object around which the rite is celebrated is the sacred fire which, like haoma itself, is called the 'son' of Ahura Mazdah.

The Sacrificial Haoma

The sacrifice opens with a confession of faith in the following terms: 'I confess myself a worshipper of Mazdah, a Zoroastrian, a renouncer of the daivas, an upholder of the ahuras.' The formula helps us to see how the Zoroastrians of a later date regarded their religion. They are worshippers of (Ahûra) Mazdah, the only God, proclaimed by Zoroaster as supreme Creator and Lord: hence they are 'Zoroastrians'. But when they add that they are 'renouncers of the daivas' and 'upholders of the ahuras', they seem to be upholding a religion that probably preceded the coming of the prophet and in which there were many ahuras or gods just as there were many daivas or demons who, like Satan and his angels in the Judaeo-Christian tradition, had once themselves been gods. In any case the ahuras, now called yazatas or 'worshipful ones', are constantly invoked throughout the Yasna. They may either be material manifestations of divinity, pre-eminently fire and water, but also the winds, mountains, and so on, or they may be spiritual, invisible beings who are in fact the ancient Aryan gods, once common to Iran and India; slightly refurbished, it is true, in that they are subjected to the ultimate authority of Ahura Mazdah, the Wise Lord.

But these divinities though they are constantly invoked throughout the Yasna, are not essential to it. The central figure, as we have seen, is the sacrificial haoma, but next to him and the sacred fire is a 'god' who figures quite prominently in the Gathas, Sraosha. In the Gathas he is, like the Bounteous Immortals, an abstract idea. He is the faculty of 'hearing' God's word and therefore of obeying it. In the Yasna he is fully personified and is, in a sense, the mediator between man and God. As the spirit of obedience, he also enforces obedience among men and chastizes the wicked, as he chastizes the demons. His continued importance, his relevance, and his popularity are attested by the fact that he alone among all the Zoroastrian pantheon was later identified with a Mohammedan angel (with the angel Gabriel, so familiar to Christians too).

The second main division of the later Avesta is the Yashts and it is in some ways remarkable that they have survived; for they are hymns of praise to deities, some of whom are quite certainly pre-Zoroastrian and others almost certainly so. In the Yasna these deities are always clearly subordinate to Ahura Mazdah but this is not always so in the Yashts, for in two cases at least Ahura Mazdah himself is represented as doing obeisance to them – to Vayu, the wind god, and to Anahita, the goddess of the waters.

The Faith of the Achaemenids

From the Achaemenian inscriptions, from proper names like Mithradates, from rock reliefs of much later date, and from the extraordinary diffusion of the cult of Mithras (see MITHRAS) throughout the Roman Empire shortly after the rise of Christianity, it is clear that the most important of these ancient deities was Mithra – like Ahura Mazdah himself originally a god of the sky and later identified with the sun.

As with everything connected with Zoroastrianism, there has been furious debate as to whether or not the Achaemenid kings were Zoroastrians. About the religion of the earliest of them, Cyrus and Cambyses, there is no evidence, but about that of Darius the Great (521–485 BC) there is plenty, for there are many inscriptions dictated by him. Ahura Mazdah is the only god the Great King invokes. He is the great god 'who created this earth, who created yonder sky, who created man, who created happiness for man, who made Darius king.' This is recognizably the same god as that of Zoroaster. Similarly, when speaking of the rebels against his authority, Darius says they 'lied' in that they claimed to be kings, 'lying' thus being equivalent to the disruption of the established order – again a Zoroastrian conception. Thus, in his conception of the nature and supremacy of Ahura Mazdah and in his identification of evil with the 'Lie', Darius is at one with Zoroaster. Though it can be argued that he was not formally a 'Zoroastrian', he was certainly a 'worshipper of Mazdah'.

The case of Darius's successor Xerxes (485–466) is even clearer, for he claims to have suppressed the cult of the daivas and to have established some sort of 'Mazdean' orthodoxy: 'Where the daivas had previously been worshipped, there did I worship Ahura Mazdah in accordance with Truth and using the proper rite.' Further he refers to an afterlife in which the good will be 'blessed': 'The man who has respect for the law which Ahura Mazdah has established and who worships Ahura Mazdah in accordance with Truth and using the proper rite, may he be both happy when alive and blessed when dead.' Xerxes, then, was both a 'worshipper of Mazdah' and a 'renouncer of the daivas', and since he refers to 'the law which Ahura Mazdah established', presumably through his prophet Zoroaster, he was almost certainly a 'Zoroastrian'.

During the reign of Artaxerxes I (465–425) the Zoroastrian calendar was introduced, but in this calendar the days and months are named not only after Ahura Mazdah and the Bounteous Immortals but also after the ancient gods who now appear beside them. The Zoroastrianism of the later Achaemenian kings was that of the Yasna rather than that of the Gathas. And so we find in the rare inscriptions of Artaxerxes II and III the god Mithra and the goddess Anahita invoked together with the supreme god, Ahura Mazdah.

The Last Contest

With the collapse of the Achaemenian Empire, Zoroastrianism disappears as an organized religion until it becomes once more the state religion of the Second (Sassanian) Empire from 226 to 651 AD. To judge from rock reliefs during this period, it would appear that Mithra and Anahita still enjoyed considerable favour both with the royal house and among the people. It was, however, the policy of the new dynasty to seek to establish religious conformity throughout the empire. Now for the first time one can speak of religious orthodoxy; and this, to judge from the Pahlavi books which draw their material from this period, was a rigid dualism in which the Bounteous Immortals and the ancient gods resuscitated in the late Achaemenian period were reduced to the status of angels. The scene was now dominated by two eternal principles, Ohrmazd (Ahura Mazdah) and Ahriman, Ohrmazd being identified with all goodness and light and dwelling in the Endless Light above, Ahriman being equated with all evil and darkness and dwelling in the Endless Darkness below. The two kingdoms are totally separate and independent, but the time comes when Ahriman becomes conscious of the light of Ohrmazd, envies it, attacks it, and invades the material world which Ohrmazd had created as a bulwark against him. For 3000 years the issue of the battle is in doubt, but in the last 3000 years of the existence of this world the power of evil is slowly but relentlessly ground down until the Saviour, the Saoshyans, appears to make all things new. The souls of men, whether they be in heaven or in hell, are reunited with their bodies and are purged in a sea of molten metal. When this is done, Ahriman is expelled back into his native darkness and rendered unconscious for ever. Then the whole creation enjoys eternal bliss in the presence of Ohrmazd, the Lord.

This dualist orthodoxy, however, was questioned by a theological deviation called 'Zurvanism' which subordinated both Ohrmazd and Ahriman to a higher principle, Infinite Time or Zurvan. However, no matter what the main theological trend may have been at the time, Sassanian Zoroastrianism was so wedded to the Sassanian state that, when the latter was overthrown by the forces of the new religion, Islam, which had arisen in the Arabian desert in the 7th century AD, the Zoroastrian Church, no longer being the 'established' Church, rapidly and irreversibly declined. Iran, once the centre of two great empires of which Zoroastrianism had been the official religion, now became a Moslem country; and the Zoroastrian community, having steadily lost ground throughout the centuries, has now been reduced to a mere 10,000 souls living mainly in Yazd and Kerman in the south-east, while another 100,000 or so, descendants of refugees from persecution, survive as the rich and enlightened community of the Parsees in Bombay and other Indian cities. Such has been the fate of a religion that once ruled proudly throughout the Iranian lands.

R. C. ZAEHNER

FURTHER READING: tr. by M. Henning, The Hymns of Zarathustra (Hyperion, 1980); M. Boyce ed., Zoroastrianism (Barnes & Noble Imports, 1984); R. C. Zaehner, The Dawn and Twilight of Zoroastrianism, (Putnam, 1961), The teachings of the Magi (Oxford University Press, 1976).

Men become sorcerers by their own choice, but women become witches because they are inherently evil; yet it is the female whom the ancestor spirits possess, who has the power to heal and make the crops grow. Deep-seated conflicts of this sort are reflected in Zulu social customs

ZULU

TO UNDERSTAND the religion and the magic of the Zulu, it is necessary to know something of their historical background. The Zulu kingdom existed as an independent unit in south-eastern Africa (the present province of Natal in the Republic of South Africa) in the 19th century. It was established when Shaka (or Chaka), the chief of a small tribe, conquered many of the tribes of the region between 1818 and 1824, while others either fled from him or fled under attacks from tribes driven away by his onslaught. The repercussions of these events were far-reaching, and various nations were created as a direct or indirect result of Shaka's wars.

The Boers inflicted a first major defeat on the Zulu, then under one of Shaka's brothers, in 1838, and took over part of the Zulu territory. The Zulu were finally beaten as a major military power in the region by the British in 1880: they were then ruled by Cetshwayo (or Cetewayo), son of another of Shaka's brothers. Part of the kingdom was ruled by the British, who by then had taken over Natal from the Boers, and the remainder was divided under independent chiefs, including Cetshwayo, who was left with a remnant of his kingdom. Internecine war between these chiefs led to the British establishing rule over the remainder of the kingdom. The former united nation was now organized within British (and from 1910, South African) administration; but in the 1930s there was a revival of Zulu nationalism in adherence to the head of the Royal House, then established as chief of one of the many small chiefdoms into which Zululand was divided. In the 1960s, the Zulu homeland was established as one of the Bantustans under the then-repressive South African apartheid policy, and subsequently Zulus established an active political presence during the period that preceded the advent of universal suffrage in the 1990s.

Early Zulu history has been worked out from tribal traditions, from the records of shipwrecked mariners, and from the records of white travellers, traders, missionaries and administrators, of whom some English settled among the Zulu in 1825.

Zulu homeland is one of the pleasantest regions of Africa, the main part consisting of rolling, well-pastured hills, lying between the Indian Ocean and the Drakensberg Mountains. The soils were fertile, but are now much eroded. It has a monsoon climate, and records show that, on average, there are bad droughts only once in five years. Rain often comes in severe thunderstorms accompanied by lightning, of which the forked form is most destructive. Then the rivers come down from the hills in walls of flood. Cattle thrived, though since the early 1900s they have been plagued by various diseases. The main crops of the Zulu were sorghum and millet, and in later years maize, with gourds, pulses and pumpkins. Their houses were originally made of grass on a framework of branches, beehive-shaped, but later these were replaced by mudded cylinders with a thatched conical roof. The houses were spread in small clusters over the hillsides, each inhabited by an extended family, the core of which was an agnatic lineage, men related to one another by descent through males. The capitals of the kings, and the military barracks in which they housed their warriors and their royal women, were once inhabited by thousands, and were three to four miles in circumference. They were destroyed after the Anglo-Zulu War.

Regicide and Civil War

Records show that until late in the 18th century the region was inhabited by many small tribes, ranging in total population from 500 to perhaps 5000. The relationships between the tribes oscillated between friendly peaceable intermarriage and short sharp skirmishes. The tribes were also split up periodically by civil wars, or sections of a tribe would move off amicably to newfound independence.

This system came to an end about the end of the 18th century, when a number of stronger tribes began to extend their sway over their neighbours. The most plausible explanation for this change is that the population of both human beings and cattle (which bred quickly) had increased in the well-favoured region until it exceeded the carrying capacity of the land under the prevailing methods of husbandry.

A series of battles between dominant tribes ensued: Shaka, head of a very small tribe, took over the disintegrating kingdom of his overlord when the latter was killed, and in a few years built a great nation of 250,000 people. His wars solved the crisis of population; he was successful because he invented more lethal weapons and methods of fighting, as well as new tactics for battle.

Shaka administered his nation in a system almost, but not absolutely, dictated by the system of husbandry, which entailed a widespread dispersal of population. The land was divided into counties ruled by chiefs. Some of the counties comprised defeated tribes: they were ruled sometimes by their legitimate chiefs or their heirs, sometimes by a scion of the chiefly family who was favoured by Shaka, while occasionally he placed favoured 'strangers' over them. Other counties he constituted out of broken tribes, or by settling people in areas whose inhabitants had been killed or had fled; the chiefs appointed there were those who had helped him in his struggles.

Shaka himself had experienced an unhappy childhood, for his mother and he had both been driven from their home: he therefore killed all his paternal half-brothers (the Zulu were polygamous), except for three. He did not give these surviving halfbrothers counties to rule; however, he gave a distant cadet of the Zulu royal family such a county. Shaka's major innovation was to organize the men of his kingdom into

Camera Press London

A proud and warlike people, the Zulu were welded into a formidable fighting force by Shaka, the warrior chief, who organized all men within a certain age group into regiments, and housed them in royal barracks: this martial history is reflected in the ritual dances still performed by Zulus on ceremonial occasions regiments, consisting of all the men of a narrow age range, housing them for most of the year in royal barracks. The men were forbidden to marry until they were in their mid-30s, when they were allowed to marry a much younger regiment of women (similarly organized), who at that point would be around 23 years old.

Shaka ruled tyrannously, and 12 years after he acceded to the Zulu chieftainship, he was killed by two of his brothers, one of whom succeeded him. The successor was also a tyrant, and 12 years later another brother fled with 17,000 people to the Boers, and with their help defeated and drove out the king. The new king was the last of that generation: he was also the first Zulu king to marry, and he had many wives and sons. Seventeen years later the sons of two of the queens fought over the succession to the throne, and Cetshwayo was successful. He ruled till his defeat by the British 23 years later. Thus assassination of kings and civil war were endemic in the Zulu nation, as they had been in the earlier polity of small tribes: and this fact was reflected in certain ceremonies.

The Maiden Goddess

The Zulu have a conception of a High God, who broke off the nations from a reed-bed, but he plays little part in their daily life and is not worshipped. Distinct from him is Heaven, a concept of a great power in the sky, barely anthropomorphized, present in storms and particularly in lightning, and manifested in the thunderbolts which are numerous because of the violence of the storms. These thunderbolts are thought to be the excreta of a thunderbird. Heaven is believed to influence certain persons who begin to get drowsy, become ill, and wander far from the habitations of men. They are then initiated as Heaven doctors, and can plant magical substances around villages to protect them from lightning, while during storms they go out on the hilltops and fight the storms with weapons and magic. Several people are killed each year by lightning, and these magicians are much respected.

These beliefs about lightning are not reconciled with the idea that dangerous forked lightning is female, while harmless sheet lightning is male, or with a belief in a goddess who is supposed to make the rain and who is associated with the rainbow, which is believed to be the rafter of her hut in the sky. This goddess is graphically described: '. . . presenting the appearance of a beautiful landscape with verdant forests on some parts of her body, grass-covered slopes on others, and cultivated slopes on others . . . robed with light as a garment . . .' The Zulu had few myths of origin or of creation, but they speak of the goddess, who is a maiden, as having come from heaven to teach people to make beer, to plant, to harvest, and all the useful arts.

The most important spiritual beings in Zulu belief are the spirits of their ancestors. These are believed to live below the earth or in the sky, or to appear in the villages in the form of particular kinds of snakes, sometimes dangerous species, but believed to behave peaceably and to be recognizable as their deceased 'inhabitants' by marks on the body. The ancestors are one of the two principal agencies in Zulu belief influencing good and ill fortune: they expect their descendants, those related to them by descent through males, to place all milk and beer in the 'great hut' of the village for them to taste and to pour it into the ground of the cattle corral round which houses are built, in periodic offerings. They also require that sacrifices of cattle be offered to them. Should their descendants neglect to make these offerings, the ancestors will send disease; and they will also do so if their descendants default in their obligations to other kinsmen. They are prayed to at ceremonies for birth, initiation and marriage, and at funerals, and also at sowing first fruits, and harvest, as well as on other occasions. The ancestors of kings and chiefs look after their political dependents.

During illness, diviners of various kinds are consulted to find which ancestor is sending the misfortune so that it can be besought to remove the disease. It is believed that male ancestors are reasonable and will remove the misfortune if it has been sent for neglect of offerings, or when the breach of obligation which provoked the affliction has been redressed. On the other hand, female ancestral spirits are capricious, and may allow the misfortune to continue even after amends have been made.

Inherently Evil Female

This belief, like the belief in the femaleness of forked lightning, reflects a deep-seated conception in Zulu belief that femininity is inherently full of threatening evil occult power. This fear appears in the many taboos that attach to menstruating women and their effluxes, which threaten all things male and all virile enterprises. The belief is marked in a distinction made between sorcerers and witches who, like the ancestral spirits, are occult agencies of good and evil. The Zulu have a very rich assortment of magical substances to treat disease in humans and livestock (50% of which achieve their intended purposes, according to pharmacological tests), to obtain fertility of women, cattle and crops, to protect themselves against thieves and lightning, to influence those in power, to reintroduce murderers into social life, and so forth. Some of these substances are also believed to be used for sorcery, for making others fall ill or even to kill them. It is believed that men, and not women, make the conscious moral decision to learn these evil arts: men are evil deliberately. But women become witches by an inherent evil in their voracious sexuality, which attracts to them sexual familiars, who then demand the lives of the close kinsmen of the husband, or of his children by his other wives. Again, there is an inherent evil in femininity, since a woman does not deliberately seek a familiar.

Camera Press London

On the other hand, women also contain much occult power for good: the great majority of those who become possessed by ancestral spirits, which speak through them and divine the cause of illness and dictate cures, are women. Nevertheless, for a woman to become socially valuable in this way she has to pass through a very painful illness. In addition, women provide rituals of fruitfulness: pregnant women perform rites to bless the crops, and women and girls enact ceremonies to the maiden goddess at seedtime and when blight affects the grain.

Songs of Hate

These ceremonies exhibit the ritualization of social roles and relationships which is characteristic of tribal societies (see RITES OF PASSAGE; RITUAL). In supplicating at seedtime for a good harvest, the young unmarried girls would don men's garments and carry shields and spears. They drove out the cattle (normally taboo to them) to pasture and milked them. Meanwhile their mothers planted a garden far out in the veld, and poured a libation of beer to the goddess. Thereafter this garden was neglected. At various stages of the ceremonies women and girls went naked, and sang lewd songs. Men and boys hid inside their huts, and might not go near the females; if they did, they were attacked by the women.

Above and left Young Zulu warriors and the maidens they were to marry performing a marriage dance in the royal kraal; although women were traditionally regarded as inherently evil, they were required to exercise a power for good in ceremonies to the maiden goddess at seedtime, and to bless the crops

In order to understand how this ceremony, so expressive of conflict in society, operated, it is necessary to probe deeply into the position of women. The present writer has maintained that women's position in Zulu society was highly ambivalent. A woman was expected to bear many sons to strengthen the agnatic lineage of her husband, and it was feared that if she was barren she might turn to witchcraft, and she was generally treated very harshly by others.

On the other hand, when a woman produced sons she in fact produced competitors for the limited property and social positions in the lineage, thus introducing strife into the lineage that was supposed to be strengthened. It is arguable that the occult beliefs about women concealed this deep contradiction in their social position and that in the rites previously mentioned the ambivalent emotions generated were transposed to social ends.

Similar analysis can be applied to the national ceremonies performed at festivals of the first fruits. During these ceremonies, warriors sang songs of hate and hurled insults against the king, in order to strengthen the nation through the king. Comparative research shows that such ceremonies occur where civil war and royal assassination are endemic, but where king and subjects are not cut off from one another by class barriers. The symbolic representation of deep existing conflicts seems to release emotions which become fixed positively on socially approved groups and values.

Of the many Zulu who have been converted to Christianity since 1880, the majority are women. As in European Christianity, many sects have developed and, as throughout South Africa, they are markedly influenced by the colour bar under apartheid. Some Zulu independent sects are organized as are mission churches; others are syncretistic of Zulu and Christian belief, and combine possession by the Holy Spirit, speaking with tongues, laying on of hands for healing, cults against witchcraft and sorcery (demons), with sometimes the ancestral spirits reappearing as angels.

MAX GLUCKMAN

FURTHER READING: M. Gluckman, Custom and Conflict in Africa (Barnes and Noble, 1969); Analysis of a Social Situation in Modern Zululand (Manchester Univ. Press, Manchester, 1958), Order and Rebellion in Tribal Africa (Free Press, 1963), Politics, Law and Ritual in Tribal Society (Biblio Dist., 1977); E. J. Krige, The Social System of the Zulus (Tri-Ocean); D. Burness, Shaka, King of the Zulus (Three Continents, 1976).

ZURVAN

ZOROASTRIANISM and Manicheanism are commonly regarded as being the two classical dualist religions: and this is true. But there is all the difference in the world between them, for Manicheanism is a dualism of spirit and matter, spirit being identified with good, matter with evil. Zoroastrianism, on the other hand, is a spiritual dualism of two spirits, the one good and the other evil, and they are irreconcilably opposed. Matter, however, is created by Ohrmazd, the good God, though it comes to be corrupted by Ahriman, the 'pure' spirit of evil (see AHRIMAN; DUALISM; MANICHEANS; OHRMAZD; ZOROASTRIANISM). The basic text for this dualism is to be found in the Gathas or 'Songs' of Zoroaster himself where the prophet is represented as saying: 'I will speak out concerning the two Spirits of whom, at the beginning of existence, the Holier thus spoke to him who is Evil: "Neither our thoughts, nor our teachings, nor our wills, nor our choices, nor our words, nor our deeds, nor our consciences, nor yet our souls agree."'

The irreducible antagonism between the two Spirits seems clear enough here. But there is another text (quoted in the article on Zoroastrianism) in which it is unambiguously stated that the two Spirits were twins; and that would imply that they had a common father.

God of Infinite Time

Now in the later Avesta, as the sacred book of the Zoroastrians is called, an entity with the name of Zrvan akarena ('Infinite Time') is sometimes mentioned. Nothing much is said about him, but at least he is infinite, whereas Ohrmazd and Ahriman, God and the Devil, had by now become independent principles, each limiting the other. A different view is quoted by Eudemus of Rhodes, a pupil of Aristotle, who lived in the 4th century BC. He is reported as having said that 'the Magi and the whole Aryan race call the whole intelligible and unitary universe either Space or Time from which a good god and an evil demon were separated out, or, according to others, light and darkness before these . . . One of these (higher principles) is ruled by Ohrmazd, the other by Ahriman.'

This is the philosophical account of the 'Zurvanite' position. Light and darkness are ruled respectively by Ohrmazd and Ahriman, God and the Devil; but the highest principle is beyond all these, and this principle is Space-Time, Zrvan akarena, who in the later language becomes Zurvan i akanarak, 'Infinite Zurvan-Time.'

By the time of the Sassanian Empire (226-651 AD), however, Zurvan had become a proper name and a personal god, the word for 'time' in Persian now being zaman, as it is to this day. During the Sassanian period, to judge from the Zoroastrian books which, though actually written as late as the 9th century AD, are generally held to represent the views of Zoroastrian orthodoxy during the last century or so of the Sassanian Empire, one would not realize that the god Zurvan was of any importance at all, let alone that he was regarded by some as being the father of both Ohrmazd and Ahriman. Indeed, in these so-called 'Pahlavi' books, Zoroastrianism (or the 'Good Religion' as the Zoroastrians themselves now called it) was defined as the religion of the two principles as distinct from the monotheism of the Jews and Christians. 'I must have no doubt,' a Zoroastrian catechism reads, 'but that there are two first principles, one the Creator, and the other the Destroyer. The Creator is Ohrmazd who is all goodness and all light; and the Destroyer is the accursed Ahriman who is all wickedness and full of death, a liar and a deceiver.' Nothing could be clearer than that.

There is no question that there is a principle beyond these two. In the whole corpus of the Pahlavi books there is only one mention of the theory (explicitly stated in the Gathas though it is) that Ohrmazd and Ahriman are twins, and in this one passage it is denounced as a doctrine thought up by a demon.

The Pahlavi books, as they now stand, reflect a doctrine that was current at the end of the Sassanian period, and we can be fairly certain that this complete dualism was official doctrine then. So too was it after the death of Shapur (Sapor) I in 271 AD as we now know from a long inscription of the high priest of that time, one Kartir. Unfortunately this agreement between the 9th century books and the 3rd century inscription is not conclusive; for if neither had survived and we had to rely exclusively on Christian, Manichean and Moslem sources, we would be inclined to think that Zurvanism was the predominant trend in the Zoroastrianism of the Sassanian period, not the neat dualism of the Pahlavi texts, and this for two principal reasons. First, when the Christians attack Zoroastrianism, they attack not the dualism we know from the Pahlavi books but the theory that Ohrmazd and Ahriman are twins. Secondly, when the Manichees started to translate their own scriptures into Persian they called their own supreme Spirit, the 'Father of Greatness' and king of the kingdom of light – not Ohrmazd but Zurvan. And this is very odd indeed since the Zoroastrian Ohrmazd who is 'all goodness and all light' corresponds as exactly as you could wish to the Manichean 'Father of Greatness'. The Zoroastrian Zurvan, on the other hand, as we know him from the Christian sources, is rather 'the whole intelligible and unitary universe, either Space or Time', of Eudemus, but now transferred onto a purely mythological plane.

The Zurvanite myth is preserved in several sources which substantially agree and must go back to a common original. In this myth (quoted in the article on Ahriman) Zurvan is the father of Ohrmazd and Ahriman.

The message of the myth is clear. In the beginning, all is One in Zurvan who, philosophically, is Time-Space. Basically he is good and light, but there is a fundamental flaw in his nature represented by his 'doubt', and this is materialized in the shape of Ahriman who is 'dark and stinking', 'a liar and a deceiver'. Unless Zurvan is to be false to his vow, he must make Ahriman king of this world for 9000 years, though Ohrmazd may be high priest in heaven above. In any case, Ahriman's power will be broken in the end, and then Ohrmazd will be 'all in all' in 'infinite time' of which Zurvan is the mythological representation.

Form of Fire

In the Selections of Zadspram, the only one of the Pahlavi books where Zurvan plays a prominent part, we learn a little more about his 'testament' to Ohrmazd and Ahriman and about Ahriman's 9000-year rule:

> When first creation began to move and Zurvan, for the sake of movement, brought that form, the black and ashen garment to Ahriman, he made a treaty in this wise: 'This is that implement like unto fire, blazing, harassing all creatures, that hath the very substance of Az (Greed, Lust, Concupiscence). When the period of nine thousand years comes to an end, if thou hast not perfectly fulfilled that which thou didst threaten at the beginning, that thou wouldst bring all material existence to hate Ohrmazd and to love thee, . . . then, by means of this weapon, Az will devour . . . thy creation; and she herself will starve.'

From other texts we can deduce that Zurvan gave a corresponding 'implement' or 'form' to Ohrmazd – 'a form of fire – bright, white, round, and manifest afar', which is associated with priesthood and wisdom as it is in the 'classic' Zurvanite myth.

How are we to interpret all this? The birth of Ahriman from Zurvan's doubt is a 'Fall' in the divine nature itself, the manifestation of an essential imperfection in the godhead. To compensate for this Fall Zurvan endows Ohrmazd with wisdom, the priestly virtue par excellence, but to Ahriman he gives Az who is Greed, Lust, Concupiscence, Acquisitiveness, and who is insatiable. Ultimately, then, Az is self-destructive and so in the end Ahriman's kingdom is destroyed by the very 'implement' he had accepted from Zurvan and made into his own 'selfhood'. Having supplied Ohrmazd and Ahriman with the 'implements' appropriate to each, Zurvan plays no further part in the cosmic struggle. Only at the very end does he appear to help Ohrmazd administer the coup de grâce to Ahriman, Az, and their evil creation. Even so, Zurvan must be seen as a God that failed.

(See also TIME.)

R. C. ZAEHNER

FURTHER READING: R. C. Zaehner, The Dawn and Twilight of Zoroastrianism (Putnam, 1961); Zurvan, a Zoroastrian Dilemma (Biblo and Tanner, 1973).

MAN, MYTH & MAGIC

The Illustrated Encyclopedia of Mythology, Religion and the Unknown

994

Digitized by the Internet Archive
in 2013

http://archive.org/details/manmythmagici21cave

SAUSALITO PUBLIC LIBRARY
2-28-95

3 1111 01487 6922

REFERENCE LIBRARY USE ONLY

For Reference

Not to be taken from this room

MAN, MYTH & MAGIC

INDEX

Editor-in-Chief
Richard Cavendish

Editorial Board
C. A. Burland; Professor Glyn Daniel;
Professor E. R. Dodds; Professor Mircea Eliade;
William Sargant; John Symonds;
Professor R. J. Zwi Werblowsky;
Professor R. C. Zachner.

New Edition edited and compiled by Richard Cavendish and Brian Innes

MARSHALL CAVENDISH
NEW YORK, LONDON, TORONTO, SYDNEY

Sausalito Public Library
Sausalito, California 94965

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor-in-Chief	Richard Cavendish
Editorial Board	C. A . Burland Glyn Daniel E. R. Dodds Mircea Eliade William Sargant John Symonds R. J. Zwi Werblowsky R. C. Zaehner
Special Consultants	Rev. S. G. F. Brandon Katherine M. Briggs William Gaunt Francis Huxley John Lehmann
Deputy Editor	Isabel Sutherland
Assistant Editors	Frank Smyth Malcolm Saunders Tessa Clark Julie Thompson Polly Patullo
Art Director	Brian Innes
Art Editor	Valerie Kirkpatrick
Design Assistant	Andrzej Bielecki
Picture Editors	John McKenzie Ann Horton

REVISED 1985

Executive Editor	Yvonne Deutch
Editorial Consultant	Paul G. Davis
Editors	Emma Fisher Mary Lambert Sarah Litvinoff

REVISED 1995

Editors	Richard Cavendish Brian Innes
Assistant Editor	Amanda Harman

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication Data

Man, myth and magic: the illustrated encyclopedia of mythology, religion and the unknown / editor in chief, Richard Cavendish

Rev. ed. of Man, myth & magic.
Includes bibliographical references and index
ISBN 1-85435-731-X (set)
1. Occultism – Encyclopedias. 2. Mythology – Encyclopedias. 3. Religion – Encyclopedias.
I. Cavendish, Richard. II. Man, myth & magic.
BF 1407.M34 1994
133'.03 – dc20

94-10784
CIP

Published by Marshall Cavendish Corporation
2415 Jerusalem Avenue
North Bellmore, New York 11710

© Marshall Cavendish Corporation 1995
© Marshall Cavendish Ltd 1983, 1985
© B. P. C. Publishing Limited 1970

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced or utilized in any form or by any means electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system, without permission from the copyright holders.

Printed and Bound in Italy by L.E.G.O. S.p.a. Vicenza.

INDEX

Throughout this index, the volume number of each text reference is given in bold type. When a reference is the subject of an encyclopedic article in the work, both volume and page numbers are given in bold type. Related illustrations are indicated in italic. The extracts from published works that appear in ruled boxes throughout the encyclopedia have not been indexed.

A

Aarne, Antti, 7: 925
Aaron, rod of, 20: 2766-7
Abadie, Jeannette d' (witch), 7: 961
Abbots Bromley, horn dance of, 1: 46, 5: 641, 643, 9: 1243, 1250, 18: 2477
Abbot of Unreason, 3: 418
Abdul-Baha (Bahai leader), 2: 190, 191
Aberdeen witches, 1: 46-7, 89
Abhidharma schools (Buddhism), 18: 2507
Abode of Love (Spaxton, Somerset), 12:1723*, 15: 2091, 2091
abominable snowman (yeti), 1: 48
aborigines, Australian, see Australia
Abracadabra, 1: 48, 12: 1628
Abracax (demon), 1: 48
Abraham (Old Testament patriarch):
  promised land and, 6: 739
  sacrifice of Isaac and, 7: 900, 900, 17: 2357, 19: 2679
Abra-Melin, see Sacred Magic of Abra-Melin
Abrams, Dr Albert, 15: 2151
Abrams' Box (Black Box, Oscilloclast), 15: 2151
Abraxas (god), 1: 48, 7: 1029
Abu Gurob (Egypt), temple of Re at, 16: 2182
Abulafia, Abraham (Jewish mystic), 13: 1823-4, 19: 2615
Accad (Mesopotamia), see Akkad Achaemenids (Persian dynasty), 14: 1912 capital of, see Persepolis
  Zoroastrianism and, 20: 2872, 2876
Acheron (river), 3: 385
Achilles, 1: 49-50
  Agamemnon and, 1: 49
  father of, see Peleus Hector and, 1: 49 horses of, 8: 1118
  mother of, see Thetis Patroclus and, 1: 49
  Penthesilea and, 1: 50, 95
  as type of the Homeric hero, 1: 49-50
    see also Hero
Acholi (Nilotic people), 13: 1869
acorn, 1: 50, 9: 1264, 14: 1902, 1904
Acropolis (Athens), 16: 2183
Actaeon, Artemis and, 4: 514, 18: 2475, 2477, 2478-9
acupuncture, 1: 51-2
Adad (god), see Baal
Adam (first man), 4: 476
  in Cabala, see Adam Kadmon
  Eve and, 6: 791-2, 7: 902, 903-4, 12: 1608, 17: 2344-5, 20: 2829
    apple and, 1: 117
    Gypsy myth of, 8: 1101
    as hermaphrodites, 9: 1195
    Manichean view of, 7: 905, 11: 1527, 12: 1612-13, 1621
    see also Eden, garden of Lilith and, 11: 1532
  Martinists and, 12: 1646
  meaning of the name, 2: 277, 7: 903
Adamites (heretics), 7: 905
Adam Kadmon (Cabala), 11: 1573, 12: 1612
  Luria and, 11: 1566, 12: 1612
Adamski, George, 1: 85
Adam's Peak (Ceylon), 15: 2043
adderwort (plant), see bistort
Adena Indians, 14: 1880
Adonai (name of God), 20: 2839
Adonis, 1: 53, 113, 5: 676-7
  Aphrodite and, 1: 113
  as dying god, 5: 676-7
  Good Shepherd symbol and, 8: 1049
  by Michelangelo, 3: 319
  myrrh tree and 1: 113
  as vegetation god, 1: 113, 5: 676
Adrasteia (Greek goddess), see Nemesis
Adventure, An (Moberly and Jourdain), see Versailles adventure
A.E., see Russell, G.W.
Aeetes (King of Colchis), 3: 422
Aegisthus (Greek mythology), 7: 969
Aegus (legendary king of Athens), 19: 2600, 2602
Aelian (Elian), St, cursing well of, 4: 521, 18: 2473-5
Aeneas (Trojan hero), 7: 942-3
  Aphrodite and, 1: 112, 19: 2323
  Harpies and, 8: 1119
  as a Lar, 11: 1510
  see also Aeneid
Aeneid (Virgil), 4: 542-3, 7: 942
  divination by, 11: 1547
  Hades in, 11: 1453
  purgation of souls in, 15: 2135
  Sibyl of Cumae in 17: 2368-9
Aeschylus, Eumenides of, 7: 969
Aesculapius (Roman god), 8: 1150
  Asclepios identified with, 8: 1149
Aesir (Scandinavian deities), 7: 965, 966
Aeternitas (Roman personification of time), 19: 2629
Aetherius Society, 6: 759
aetiological myths, distinguished from ritual creation myths, 4: 460, 471
Africa, 1: 54-61
  ancestor worship in, see ancestor worship,
  burial in, 1: 59-60
  Christianity in, 1: 56-8, 5: 713
    Congo, 4: 446,
    Ethiopia, 6: 773-8
    Zulus, 20: 2879
    see also African Orthodox Churches
  cicatrization in, see cicatrization circumcision in, see circumcision
  creation myths of, 1: 61
  death in, 1: 59, 4: 554-7 see also reincarnation, below disease in, 5: 594
  drum in, see drum,
  fertility and, 6: 855, 860, 860
  fetishes of, 6: 862, 862, 863
  hyena in, 9: 1271
  initiation rites of, see initiation, Islam in, see Islam,
  life after death, beliefs concerning, 1: 59-60
  magic, black and white, in, 1: 60
  masks in, 12: 1656-7, 1657, 1658
  menstruation, beliefs concerning, 12: 1699
  nature worship in, 1: 55-6
  new religious movements in, 12: 1725-7, 17: 2330
    see also Church of the Cherubim and Seraphim; Church of the Lord, Aladura
  phallic symbolism in, 6: 855
  reincarnation, beliefs concerning, 1: 55 rock paintings in, see rock paintings
  secret societies in, 1: 60, 4: 452
    see also Leopard Societies, Mau Mau
  snake in, 1: 55
    Congolese myth, 4: 451
    Ethiopia, 6: 776
  spirits in, see spirits
  taboo in:
    Bushmen, 3: 320
    Congo, 18: 2549
  thunderbird in, 19: 2618
  witchcraft in, 1: 57-60, 7: 880-1, 17: 2415-17, 20: 2817-18
    Azande, 2: 178-9, 6: 799, 7: 880, 20: 2815
    Bantu, 7: 880
    Cewa, 20: 2817
    Congo, 4: 450-1
    familiars of witches, 20: 1818
    Nilotes, 13: 1871
    sorcery distinguished from witchcraft, 2: 178, 20: 2815, 2878
    Tallesi, 7: 880
    Zulus, 20: 2878-9
    see also witch-doctor
  see also Ashanti; Azande; Berbers; Bushmen; Congo; Dahomey; Dogon; Ethiopia; Kikuyu; Masai; Ndembu; Nigeria; Nilotes; pygmies; Swazi; Touareg; Zulu
African Orthodox Churches, 20: 2769-70
Afro-American lore, 1: 62-4 see also Ananse; Brer Rabbit afterlife, see life after death
Aga Khan, 10: 1374
Agamemnon, 8: 1076
  Achilles and, 1: 49
  dragon and, 5: 633
  sceptre of, at Chaeronea, 16: 2177
agape (Christian love feast), Eucharist and, 12: 1668
Agapemonites (messianic sect), 12: 1723, 1724
  see also Prince, Henry James Agar, Margaret (witch), 17: 2414
agate, 10: 1413
Agatha, St, 5: 594, 16: 2272
Agave (Greek mythology), 5: 584
Agdistis (monster; later Cybele), 4: 523
Aglaia (Greek mythology), 8: 1057
Agni (Indian firegod), 3: 307, 10: 1335

Agricola, Michael (Finnish church reformer), 7: 884
agriculture,
dance and, 4: 530-1
fertility in, 6: 855-6, 859
Greek goddess of, see Demeter
its origin not established, 19: 2718
in Roman religion, 16: 2232-3
see also corn; harvest; vegetation spirits Agrippa, Heinrich Cornelius, 1: 64-5 on astral travel, 1: 137
magic and, 1: 64-5, 3: 327, 8: 1090, 11: 1581
magic circle, 11: 1583
magic squares, 12: 1593-4
on man as microcosm, 1: 64, 12: 1612
on talismans, 16: 2194
witchcraft and, 6: 840
Ahasuerus, see Wandering Jew
ahimsa*, 20: 2848-9
Ahmad, Ghulam (Mahdi), 12: 1602
Ahriman (Zoroastrianism), 1: 66-8, 20: 2873
Angra Mainyu and, 14: 1912
Ohrmazd and, 1: 66-8, 5: 667-8, 11: 1527, 14: 1912, 20: 2876, 2880
Ahura Mazdah (Zoroastrianism), 1: 66, 68, 14: 1912, 1912, 20: 2873, 2873, 2875
Azhi Dahaka (dragon) and, 5: 631
Ohrmazd and, 1: 66, 14: 1912
Aidoneus, see Hades
Ainu (Japan), 2: 209, 210, 14: 1949 Aion (child of Isis), 5: 678
air, 1: 68
as element, 6: 742-3
see also breath; pneuma
Airavata (elephant of Indra), 6: 745, 7: 913
Aisai (Greek mythology), see Fates
Aix-en-Provence nuns, 1: 69-70
see also Demandolx de la Palud, Madeleine Aiyetoro Community (Nigeria), 4: 445
Aizen-e (Japanese religious sect), 10: 1398
Ajax (Greek hero), Athene and, 2: 154
Ajello, Elena (stigmatist), 18: 2482
Akasha (occultism), see Astral Light
Akashic Records (occultism), see Cosmic Memory
Akhematen (El Amarna; Egyptian city), 6: 732, 735, 9: 1296
Akhenaten (pharaoh), see Ikhnaten
Akkad (Accad; Mesopotamia), 2: 189, 12: 1714
see also Sargon, King; Babylonia
Aksobhya (Buddha), 3: 301
Aksum (Ethiopian city), 6: 769, 774
'Aktion Hess', 13: 1831
al-. For Islamic names beginning with al-, see under the following part of the name
Alaça Hüyük, burial at, 4: 511
Alalu (Alalus, Hittite god), 9: 1223
al-Alawi, Ahmad (Sufi), 18: 2496
Alba Longa (city), 7: 943
albedo (alchemical process), 15: 2027
Albertus Magnus:
on crystals, 4: 505
on the eagle, 5: 682
on divisions of the skull, 15: 2037
on succubi, 6: 794
Albigenses, Albigensian heresy, 3: 358-60, 9: 1192
alchemy, 1: 71-7
Boehme and, 2: 254
in China, 1: 75, 6: 749
diamond and, 10: 1416
dragon and, 5: 633
four elements theory and, 1: 75, 6: 744
Goethe and, 8: 1039
gold in, 1: 71-6, 6: 749, 751-2, 8: 1041
hermaphrodite in, 14: 1924, 1924
Hermetica and, 9: 1198
hexagram in, 9: 1204
Jung and, 1: 77, 11: 1458-9
lead in, 11: 1513
Lull and, 9: 1198, 11: 1565
macrocosm and microcosm in, 11: 1573
marriage, allegorical, in, 12: 1705, 14: 1925 mercury (metal) in, 1: 72, 6: 744, 8: 1041, 12: 1704-5, 14: 1925
ourobouros in, 1: 72
Paracelsus and, 1: 72, 75, 6: 749, 750-1, 12: 1704-5, 14: 1975-6, 15: 2028 planets and, 1: 75-6
psychokinesis and, 1: 75
Rosicrucians and, 16: 2243-4
salt in, 12: 1704-5
silver in, 17: 2371
sulphur and mercury theory in, 8: 1041, 12: 1704-5 Sun in, see Splendor Solis
in Tantrism, 18: 2558
unicorn in, 19: 2690
water in, 20: 2776
see also elixir of Life; emerald tablet; homunculus; Philosophers' Stone alcohol, 20: 2772
Aldebaran (star), Dakota Indian legend of, 14: 1883
Alecto (Greek mythology), 7: 968
alectromancy (divination), 14: 1922
Alexander, Bishop Daniel William, 20: 2769
Alexander III (pope), 20: 2760, 2762
Alexander VI (pope), 16: 2190
Alexander the Great, 1: 78-82
Amazons and, 1: 81, 95
his horse Bucephalus, 1: 82, 19: 2732 lunar eclipse as good omen for, 5: 708
yogis and, 17: 2331
see also Gordian knot Alexandria (Egypt):
Eleusinian cult at, 13: 1807
temple of the Muses at, 13: 1789
alexandrite, 10: 1413
Algazel, see Ghazali
Algonquin Indians, 1: 82-4 culture-hero of, see Kuloskap death, myth of origin of, 4: 556
High God of, 9: 1206
reincarnation belief of, 2: 277
shamans of, 1: 83
see also Chippewa; manitou
Ali (cousin of Mohammed), 10: 1373, 12: 1601
Ali, Mirza Hussain, see Baha-Ullah
Alice in Wonderland (Carroll), 10: 1348, 13: 1790, 1791
alicorn (horn of unicorn), 19: 2689-90
alien visitors, 1: 85-6
and megaliths, 12: 1693
see also Men in Black; UFOs
Allah (Islam), 10: 1369, 13: 1759
Allegro, John, on the Dead Sea Scrolls, 4: 552 and sacred mushroom, 13: 1791
All Hallows' Eve (Hallowe'en), 1: 87-9
bonfires and, 1: 87
divination on, 11: 1560, 17: 2408
fairies and, 1: 87-8
Sir James Frazer on, 1: 87
mumming plays of, 7: 920 snail and, 17: 2408
witches and, 1: 89, 6: 785
alligator, 1: 89
in Mexican myth, 2: 183
All Souls' Day, palm tree and, 14: 1964
almond tree, origin of, in agdistis myth, 4: 523
aloes, 1: 89
alphabet, 1: 90-1
divination by (alectromancy), 14: 1922
Hebrew, see Hebrew alphabet
incense and, in Islamic incantation, 10: 1328
North American Indians, first alphabet of, 14: 1885 see also gematria; hieroglyphics; magic squares; O; runes; S; T; writing Alpha et Omega Temple, 8: 1045
alrunes (amulets), 12: 1618
Altamira (Spain), cave art of, 3: 305, 367
altar, 1: 92-3, 18: 2490
Aztec, 1: 93
Chinese, 1: 93
Christian, 1: 92, 93, 19: 2607
Egyptian, 1: 92
Greek, 1: 92-3
Hindu, 1: 93
Japanese, 1: 93
Jewish, 1: 92
Mesopotamian, 1: 92
Nigerian, 1: 93
Persian, 1: 93, 93
prehistoric, 1: 92
Roman, 1: 92-3, 16: 2234
Alur (Nilotic people), 13: 1869-70
Amalthea (nymph), Zeus and, 5: 456, 14: 1900
Amana Society (Community of the Truly Inspired), 4: 440, 442-3
Amanita muscaria, see fly agaric
Amaterasu-Omikami (Japanese sun goddess), 17: 2361
Amazons, 1: 94-5
Alexander the Great and, 1: 81, 95
Hercules and, 1: 95, 9: 1188-9
Theseus and, 1: 95, 19: 2601
see also Penthesilea amber, 10: 1413
ambergris, 20: 2788
Ambika (Indian goddess), 13: 1777
ambrosia (food of the gods), fly agaric, mushroom identified as, 13: 1790
Amduscias (demon), 6: 794, 19: 2689
Amen (Egyptian god), see Amun
Amen (end of prayer or incantation), 13: 1824
Amenhotep/Amenophis (pharaoh) see Ikhnaten
Amenta (Egypt), 2: 278, 279
America, discovery of, 2: 282
American Indians, North, see North American Indians
amethyst, 10: 1413-4, 1414
Amish sect, 4: 440
Amida, Amidaism (Japanese Buddhism), 1: 95-7, 10: 1394
Amitabha identified with Amida, 3: 301
Amitabha (Amitayus; Buddhism), 3: 301, 13: 1872
Ammonius (philosopher), 13: 1841
Amor (Roman god), see Cupid
A.M.O.R.C. (Ancient and Mystic Order Rosae Crucis), 16: 2243
Amorites, 1: 132, 2: 188
Amos (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2098-9
Amphiaraus, dream cures of, 13: 748
Amphion and Zethus (Greek mythology), 19: 2685
Amphitrite (nereid), 16: 2235
Amritsar (India), 17: 2369, 2370, 2371
amulets, 1: 97, 18: 2550-1
cowrie-shell, 4: 463
eagle (Germanic), 8: 995
Egyptian, 18: 2545, 2550, 2552-3
in Tutankhamen's tomb, 10: 1358
see also scarab
in Ethiopia, 6: 778
Inuit, 10: 1355
mandrake, 12: 1618-19

Maori, see tiki
phallic Greek, 17: 2344
Phoenician, 18: 2545
Polynesia, see tiki
as protection against the evil eye, 6: 818
talismans distinguished from, 18: 2550
see also fetish; Gnostic gems
Amun (Egyptian god), 4: 473, 6: 736
Ikhnaten and, 6: 732, 9: 1296
ram and, 6: 730, 17: 2357
Re and, 6: 731, 9: 1296, 17: 2357
temple of, at Karnak, 16: 2183
An (Anu, Anum; Mesopotamian god), 5: 682, 687, 12: 1714-5, 17: 2394
Alalu and Kumarbi and, 9: 1223 horned cap of, 9: 1245
Ishtar and, 10: 1363
Anabaptists, 1: 97, 4: 441, 6: 762, 9: 1269, 17: 2328, 2329
Anahita (Iranian goddess), 13: 1780, 20: 2876
analogies, in magic, 15: 2058-9
see also correspondences
analytical psychology, Jung's adoption of the phrase, 11: 1456-7
Ananai-kyo (Japanese religious sect), 10: 1398
Anandamayi Ma (Indian sage), 1: 97-8
Ananse (spider trickster), 1: 98, 17: 2435
see also Brer Rabbit
Ananta (serpent; Hinduism), 17: 2402
Anaon (Breton hell), 2: 285
anaphrodisiac, 11: 1557-8, 1561
camphor as, 14: 2011
Anat (Phoenician goddess), 1: 132-3
Astarte identified with, 15: 2030
Baal and, 1: 133, 2: 189, 15: 2030-1, 18: 2540-1, 19: 2720-1
as Mother Goddess, 13: 1779, 1780
anathema (excommunication ceremony), 4: 522
Anaxagoras (Greek philosopher), 9: 1191
Anaximander (Greek philosopher), 18: 2499
ancestor worship, 7: 1001, 4: 512-16
in Africa, 4: 531-14
Ashanti, 1: 128, 128, 4: 512-14, 5: 664
Dahomey, 4: 524-5
Kikuyu, 11: 1469-70
Nilotes, 13: 1871
Zulu, 20: 2878
in China, 3: 393, 395, 4: 513
in Laos, 17: 2428
in Micronesia, 15: 2072
in New Guinea, 12: 1657-8, 13: 1848
in Papua, 4: 509
Andaman Islands, 16: 2177, 17: 2391
Andras (demon), 14: 1949
Andreae, Johann Valentin, 16: 2247
Andrew, St, 13: 1854, 1857
androgyne, see hermaphrodite Andromeda (Greek mythology), 5: 633, 634, 9: 1201
anemone, 9: 1185
Adonis and, 1: 113, 9: 1181
Angad (Sikh leader), 17: 2370-1
Angela of Foligno, Blessed, 20: 2748 angelica (herb), 9: 1181-2
angels, 1: 100-2
in the Bible, 1: 100-2
Daniel, 4: 542, 8: 1094
Revelation, 19: 2679
John Dee and, 4: 560-1
in dome of St Saviour (Constantinople), 16: 2185
fairies and fallen angels, 6: 832 Fall of the Rebel Angels:
by Le Brun, 17: 2388
guardian angels, 8: 1094, 12: 1621
Jesus ministered to by (Tissot), 20: 2791
of Mons, 20: 2749
Moslem, 1: 102, 8: 1094, 17: 2393 soul weighed by, at Last Judgement, 1: 102 trumpets and, 19: 2679, 2679
wings of, 20: 2807
Zoroastrian,
see cherub; Gabriel; Lucifer; Michael; Raphael; seraph; Uriel; Watchers Angkor Wat, 17: 2429
Angra Mainyu (Zoroastrianism), 14: 1912
animal magnetism, see magnetism
animals, 1: 103-7
in African rock paintings, 16: 2277-8
in astrology, 1: 107
banished by poets, 15: 2057-8
in cave art, 3: 366
Celts and, see Celts, animals and in Christian symbolism, see Christianity, symbolism in, animals dances, animal, 4: 530, 9: 1243
see also Abbots Bromley
Dionysus and, 1: 106
bull, 9: 1246
dolphin, 5: 614
goat, 8: 1033
divination by, omens from, 14: 1921
entrails of, see haruspicy
hare, 8: 1116
horse, 9: 1255
in Mesopotamia, 12: 1722
in Egypt:
dog, 5: 607
pig, 15: 2039, 2039
see also Egypt, animal gods of
in Finland, 7: 885
ghosts of, 7: 1005
hare, 9: 1253-4
Inuit, spirits of animals and, 10: 1352
in magic, 1: 107
medieval lore of, see bestiary
moon and, 13: 1767
in phallic symbolism, 15: 2025
sacrifice of, 1: 106
bear, 1: 92, 2: 210, 19: 2638
bull, 2: 196, 5: 678, 13: 1751, 1752, 1753-4, 15: 2094
at Carthage, 15: 2029
cat, 6: 839
by Etruscans, 6: 781-2
horse, 7: 966, 9: 1251, 10: 1310, 1335
in Malta, 12: 1602
by the Nuer, 14: 1891
in Polynesia, 14: 1899
ram, 17: 2357
in ritual magic, 16: 2220
Rome and, 16: 2235
in the Veda, 10: 1335
saints and, 16: 2273-9
white animals, 20: 2792
see also alligator; anteater; ass; bat; bear; boar; buffalo; bull; cat; crab; crocodile; dog; dolphin; East Indian humped zebu; elephant; ferret; fox; frog; goat; hare; hedgehog; horse; hyena; jackal; jaguar; lion; lizard; llama; monkey; mouse; ocelot; opossum; oyster; panther; pig; polecat; rabbit; rat; reindeer; rhinoceros; scorpion; seal; serpent; sheep; shrew; snail; spider; stag; tiger; toad; tortoise; unicorn; whale; wolf
also birds; fish; insects; monsters also horns; hunting magic; shape-shifting; totemism animism, 1: 108
in Borneo, 2: 263-5
in Ethiopia, 6: 773
fairies and, 6: 832
Inuit and, 10: 1351
soul and, 1: 108, 17: 2418
ankh (Egyptian symbol), 4: 490, 491, 6: 727, 734, 10: 1313
Christian use of (crux ansata), 4: 490
Ankou (Breton deity), 2: 285
Anne, St, 18: 2473
Annunciation, festival of the, 2: 280, 11: 1533, 12: 1650
Annwfn, cauldron of, 3: 362, 8: 1061
anointing, see unction anorexia, religious inedia compared with, 18: 2485
ant (insect), 10: 1345
Antaei, of Arcadia, shape-shifting by, 17: 2355
anteater, 2: 274
Anteros (Greek mythology), 6: 766
Anthesteria (Greek festival), 20: 2809
Anthony, St, 1: 109, 16: 2272
lion and, 16: 2276
St Paul the Hermit and, 11: 1503, 16: 2276
pig and, 15: 2040
St Anthony's fire and, 16: 2272 temptation of, 1: 109
Bosch, 2: 266-8, 266
Grünewald, 17: 2333
Anthony of Padua, St, 2: 226, 16: 2272, 2278-9
Anthroposophy, Anthroposophical Society, 18: 2480-1
Antichrist, 1: 110
Beast of Revelation and, 8: 1066
Rome as, 8: 1066
anting (bird behaviour), 15: 2034
Antiochus IV Epiphanes (Syrian king), 1: 110, 4: 549
Antiochus of Ascalon (Platonist), 13: 1840
Antiope (Amazon), 1: 95, 19: 2601
antisemitism, 1: 110
in the Middle Ages, 10: 1433
in Modern Europe, 13: 1840
Germanen Order, 8: 991-2
völkisch movement, 13: 1838
Anu (Celtic goddess), see Danu Anu (Mesopotamian god), see An Anuak (Nilotic people), 13: 1869-70
Anubis (Egyptian god), 1: 110, 4: 558, 6: 734
Nefertiti and, 9: 1271
Osiris and, 5: 681
Anum (Mesopotamian god), see An Anzu (Mesopotamian deity), see Zu Apep (Egyptian serpent), see Apophis
aphrodisiac, 11: 1557-9
ambergris, 20: 2788
honey, 9: 1238
love potion (philtre), 11: 1556, 1557
mandrake, 11: 1557
oyster, 7: 909, 12: 1558
perfumes, 14: 2011
Roman, 12: 1558
Aphrodite, 1: 111-113
Adonis and, 1: 113
Aeneas and, 1: 112, 19: 2723
Ares and, 1: 113
Astarte and, 1: 132
birth of, 1: 111
Cnidian (Praxiteles), 1: 113
copper and, 4: 459
Cyprus, her cult derived from, 1: 111, 113, 4: 459
dove and, 4: 459, 5: 620
Eros and, 1: 111-12, 6: 765, 766
goose and, 8: 1050, 1052
green and, 4: 459
Hephaestus and, 1: 113, 9: 1177
Hera and, 1: 112
Hermaphroditos and, 9: 1194
meaning of the name, 1: 111
myrtle sacred to, 19: 2726
Pan with, 1: 113

Philommedes, 1: 111
prostitution and, 1: 113, 15: 2104
sanctuaries of, 1: 111
sparrow sacred to, 4: 459
Trojan War and, 1: 112
Venus identified with, 1: 111, 19: 2723
Zeus and, 1: 112, 113
see also Judgement of Paris
Apis (Egyptian god),
bull and, 3: 306, 307, 6: 732, 9: 1245
moon and, 3: 307
Osiris and, see Serapis
Aplu (Etruscan god), Apollo identified with, 6: 781
Apocalypse, 16: 2198
Great Beast of the, see Great Beast horsemen of the, 3: 319
by Traini, 6: 756-7
by Turner, 9: 1251
by G F Watts, 16: 2196-7
of St John, see Revelation, book of see also Daniel apocalypses, apocryphal, 13: 1854, 1860
Apocrypha (Bible)
giants in, 8: 1015
wisdom literature of, 20: 2814
see also New Testament Apocrypha
Apocryphon of John (Gnostic text), 8: 1030
Apollinaris (Christian heretic), 9: 1191
Apollo (Greek god), 1: 114-15, 8: 1078, 9: 1289, 12: 1611, 19: 2604
Apulunas identified with, 1: 114
Artemis and, 4: 574
Cassandra and, 1: 115, 17: 2368
Chiron and, 8: 1150
Coronis and, 4: 496, 8: 1150
Crete and, 8: 1097
Cupid and, 6: 767
Daphne and, 6: 767, 11: 1511, 1511
Dionysus and, 5: 583, 586
dolphin and, 5: 614
hawk sacred to, 8: 1138
as healing god, 8: 1150
Hermes and, 9: 1196
Hyperboreans and, 1: 114
Midas and, 1: 115
mother of, see Leto
Muses and, 13: 1789
Niobe and, 1: 115
oracles of, 14: 1927, 1931-2
see also Delphi, oracle of Apollo at Orestes and, 6: 842, 7: 969-70
serpent killed by, at Delphi, 1: 114, 17: 2337
sibyls and, 17: 2368
Stonehenge and, 5: 659
summer associated with, 20: 2809
sun and, 1: 114
wolf and, 1: 105, 114, 20: 2819
Apollonia, St, toothache and, 5: 594, 16: 2272
Apollonius of Tyana, 1: 115-16, 10: 1412, 17: 2311
Apophis (Apep, Apop; legendary monster, Egypt), 5: 630
apostles (of Jesus), 19: 2681
Acts of the, 14: 1994-5
apocryphal acts of the, 13: 1857-60 see also Andrew, St; James, St; John, St; Judas Iscariot; Peter, St; Simon, St also Pentecost
apotheosis, 1: 116
Appaliunaas (Hittite god), see Apulunas
apparition, 1: 116
astral body and, 1: 136
collective, 20: 2750
'crisis', 15: 2107, 20: 2747
religious, see visions
Society for Psychical Research and, 15: 2105-9, 20: 2748
see also ghosts; phantasms of the living apple (tree and fruit), 1: 116-7
Adam and Eve and, 1: 117
Avalon and, 1: 116
of the Hesperides, 1: 116, 117, 9: 1189, 1190
immortality and, 1: 116
in Judgement of Paris, 1: 117, 117
mistletoe and, 13: 1750
Volsung and, 7: 965
of youth, in Scandinavian mythology, see Idun apportation (teleportation), 12: 1687, 14: 2012, 18: 2588
Apsu (Mesopotamian mythology), 4: 474, 12: 1718
Ea and, 5: 682, 12: 1715, 1717
Tammuz (Dumuzi) and, 18: 2554
Apuleius (author of The Golden Ass), 10: 1377-8 Apulunas (Appaliunaas; Hittite god), Apollo identified with, 1: 114
aquamarine, 10: 1413, 1414
Aquarius (the Water-carrier; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 118, 140, 143
Aquila of Pontus (Christian writer), age of, 1: 117
Aquinas, St Thomas, 10: 1315-16, 16: 2270
on the pelican, 14: 2002
on possession, 6: 800
on predestination, 15: 2080
on visions, 20: 2748
Aradia (goddess of witches), 10: 1378, 1380
Aradus (Phoenician city), 15: 2028
Arapaho Indians, medicine pipes of, 8: 1072
Arbatel of Magic (grimoire), 8: 1090
arbutus, as maypole, in America, 12: 1673
Arcadia (Greece), 14: 1899
Artemis and, 14: 1899
Pan and, 14: 1972
Zeus born in, 8: 1076
archangel, 1: 102
Archer, the (zodiac sign, in astrology), see Sagittarius
archetypes, Jung's concept of, 11: 1457-8 architecture, religious, 16: 2183-7
Buddhist, 16: 2185
see also stupa; Tooth, Temple of the
at Catal Hüyük, 16: 2183
Celtic, 8: 1141-2
Christian, 16: 2183, 2185, 2192
cathedrals, see Canterbury; Chartres; Kremlin, Cathedral of the Assumption in; St Peter's, Rome; Salisbury
churches facing east, 5: 588
Egyptian, 6: 735-6, 16: 2182, 2184-5
see also pyramids, Egyptian
Etruscan, 6: 781
Greek, 16: 2183, 2185
Hindu, 16: 2188, 2188, 2264
erotic carvings of, 6: 857, 9: 1219, 18: 2555
Islamic, see mosque
Jewish, 10: 1433, 1436
see also Jerusalem, temple of Yahweh at lotus in, 11: 1548
of Malta, 12: 1602-4
Mesopotamian, 16: 2184
Mexican, see pyramids,
Parsee, 14: 1985-6, 20: 2872
Phoenician, 18: 2542, 2543
Polynesian, 15: 2071, 2072
Roman, 16: 2183, 2185
sacrifice and, 16: 2264
sexual symbolism in, 15: 2025-6
Zoroastrian fire temple, 20: 2870
Arch of Titus (Rome), 20: 2853
arcosolium (catacombs), 8: 1049
Ares (Greek god), 1: 119
Amazons and, 1: 94
Aphrodite and, 1: 113
Eros and, 6: 765-6
Mars identified with, 12: 1644
Arethusa (Greek mythology), 7: 945-6
Argonauts (Greek mythology)
Argo built of oak, 14: 1901
eyes on prow of Argo, 6: 819
Orpheus and, 14: 1934, 17: 2382
Phineus and, 8: 1118
see also Golden Fleece
Argus (Greek mythology), 6: 821, 14: 1998
Ariadne (Greek mythology), 19: 2600, 2601
Aries (the Ram; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 119, 139, 140, 143
'Arigo' (psychic surgeon), 15: 2115
Arinitti (Hittite Goddess), 9: 1222
Arion (Greek mythology), 5: 614, 615
Ariosophie (esoteric system), 13: 1852
Aristides, Aelius, 8: 1150
Aristotle, 15: 2079
Hermetica and, 9: 1197, 1286
Aritimi (Etruscan goddess), Artemis identified with, 6: 781
Arius, Arian heresy, 3: 408-9, 9: 1191
Arjun (Sikh leader), 17: 2371 ark, of Noah, see Noah
Ark, of Yahweh, 6: 778, 20: 2840-1
Arkona (Slav religious centre), 17: 2398-9
Armanen sect, 11: 1537
Arminianism, 6: 741
Arminius, Jacobus, 6: 741
Armstrong, Anne (witch), 19: 2607
Arnim, Joachim von, 8: 1082
Arnold, Eberhart, Arnoldites, 9: 1270
Arnold of Villanova, 9: 1236, 10: 1318
Arnquagssaq (Inuit sea spirit), see Sedna aromatherapy, 1: 119
arrow, 7: 974-5
Cheyenne Indians and, 8: 1702
see also elf-bolts
Ars, Curé of (J.-M.-B. Vianney), see Curé of Ars Arsacid dynasty (Persia), 14: 1990-1
Arsenius (hermit), 20: 2829
art,
automatic, see automatic art
art modern, see Chagall, Marc; Dali, Salvador; Ernst; Redon prehistoric and primitive, see cave art
see also Blake; Bosch; Dadd; Doyle; Russell
Artemidorus (Greek writer), on dreams, 5: 633, 645
Artemis, 4: 574-6, 8: 1078
Actaeon and, 4: 574, 18: 2475, 2477, 2478-9
Amazons and, 1: 94
Apollo and, 4: 574
Arcadia and, 14: 1899
bears and, 2: 210, 4: 574, 14: 1899
at Brauron, 2: 210, 14: 1899
Callisto and, 2: 210, 4: 574-5, 14: 1899
in Crete, 4: 480
the daughter of Zeus and Leto, 4: 574 Diana identified with, 4: 574
at Ephesus, 4: 576
Hecate and, 4: 576, 9: 1166, 1167
lesbianism and, 4: 576
moon and, 4: 576
as mother goddess, 4: 574
nymphs and, 14: 1899
trees and, 19: 2658
Artha (Hinduism), 9: 1217
arthame (athame; magic knife), 13: 1756
Arthur, 1: 120-5, 8: 1024, 9: 1203, 1248, 16: 2216
St Brendan and, 2: 281
Brittany and, 2: 284

Celtic legends of, 1: 121-2, 8: 1061, 11: 1570, 1572 not dead but sleeping, 17: 2402-3
fairies and, 6: 829, 832
giant of St Michael's Mount slain by, 10: 1382
Glastonbury and, 1: 125, 3: 331, 8: 1022-3, 1027
knights of, see Round Table and Bedivere; Bors; Galahad; Gareth; Gawain; Kay; Lancelot; Mordred; Parsifal; Tristan, in Arthurian legend Merlin and, 1: 122, 125, 12: 1706-7
sword of, see Excalibur
Tudors and, 1: 124
Wild Hunt associated with, 20: 2796
see also Camelot; Forest Perilous; Grail; Guinevere; Morgan le Fay Arunachala (Tiruvannamalai; Indian holy mountain), 15: 2156
Arundale, Dr George S. (Theosophist), 18: 2590-1, 2591, 2592
Arval Brothers (Roman priesthood), 12: 1643
Aryans (early invaders of India), 10: 1334-6, 20: 2870-1
Arya Samaj (Hindu reformist sect), 9: 1218
Asallukhi (Mesopotamian god), Marduk equated with, 12: 1716 asanas (bodily positions; yoga), 19: 2715, 20: 2849, 2850
lotus position, 19: 2713, 20: 2847, 2849
Ascension (of Christ), 10: 1409
in Cypriot paintings, 15: 2154
in 15th cent miniature, 10: 1316
asceticism, self-denial, 17: 2331-4 abnormality or madness and, 11: 1574-5
in Buddhism, 13: 1872, 17: 2331, 2334
in Christianity, 11: 1574-5, 17: 2331, 2332, 2334
see also Anthony, St; fasting; Simeon Stylites
dualism and, 17: 2332
Graeco-Roman, 17: 2331, 2334
Hindu, 17: 2331, 2332-3
see also sadhu
in Islam, see fakir
Asclepios (Greek healing god), 1: 137, 8: 1079-80, 1149-50, 13: 1748
Aesculapius identified with, 8: 1149
cock and, 3: 426
in Crete, 8: 1079
Epidaurus and, 8: 1080, 1149-50, 16: 2177
Pergamum and, 8: 1150
snake and, 8: 1079-80, 1150, 17: 2337
Ascoli, Cecco d' (magician), 5: 588
ash (tree), 1: 126
oak and, 14: 1903
in Scandinavian mythology, see Yggdrasill
snakes and, 1: 126
warts cured with, 1: 126
Ashanti (Africa), 1: 126-8
ancestor worship in, 1: 128, 128, 4: 512, 513, 514, 5: 664 charms and amulets of, 1: 128
creation myths of, 1: 127
dreams in, 5: 633-4
gods of, 1: 127-8, 17: 2391
human sacrifice in, 3: 303
nature spirits of, 1: 128 priests in, 1: 128
al-Ashari, 10: 1373
Asherah (Canaanite goddess), 1: 132-3
Athirat identified with, 18: 2541
ashes, 1: 129-30
of cremated bodies, 4: 479
divination by, 1: 129, 9: 1165
in fertility rites, 1: 129
in weather magic, 1: 129
Ashkenazim (Jews), 10: 1432
Ashtart (Phoenician goddess), 1: 132
Ashtoreth (demon), see Astaroth
Ashur (Assyrian city), 10: 1364
Ashur (Assur; Assyrian god), 1: 131, 12: 1716 winged sun disc symbol of, 9: 1289
Asmodeus (demon), 1: 131
Jewish tales of, 1: 131
Madeleine de Demandolx and, 1: 134
in The Magus (Barrett), 1: 131
Asoka, Emperor, Buddhism and, 3: 299-300
ass, 1: 131
Assassins, the, 10: 1376
Assemblies of God (Pentecostalism), 14: 2005
Assenden Spring (Oxfordshire), 18: 2472
Association of Invisible Aryans, 16: 2251
Association for Rune Research, 16: 2251
Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary, see Mary, the Virgin, Assumption of Assur (Assyrian god), see Ashur
Assyria (Mesopotamia), 1: 131, 12: 1714 clay figurine from, 13: 1778
death in, 4: 558
Gilgamesh and, 8: 1018
gods of, 12: 1714-22
Ishtar, 10: 1364
Marduk, 12: 1634
see also Ashur
hunting magic in, 9: 1265
Israel invaded by, 11: 1544
kingship in, 11: 1478
Astaroth (Ashtoreth; demon), 1: 132-3, 133, 134
Astarte (goddess), 1: 132-4, 6: 856
Anat identified with, 15: 2030 animals sacred to, 1: 134
Aphrodite identified with, 1: 132
Asherah, Ashtart, and Ishtar identified with, 1: 132
Astaroth and, 1: 134
castration in worship of, 1: 134, 13: 1797
Etruscans and, 6: 781
moon and, 1: 134
as Mother Goddess, 13: 1779
prostitution and, 1: 134, 15: 2103
Tanit and, 15: 2032
astragalomancy, see lots astragyromancy, see lots astral body (body of light), 1: 135-7, 11: 1531 apparitions and, 1: 136
ghosts, 7: 1008
dreams and, 1: 137
physical body, connection with, see plexus physical body, failure to return to, 15: 2114
pneuma and, 1: 137 soul distinguished from, 1: 135
yoga and, 1: 136
Kundalini, 11: 1494
see also aura
astral light (Akasha), 11: 1531
Madame Blavatsky and, 2: 245
Eliphas Levi on, 15: 2114
astral plane, 11: 1531, 15: 2113-14
astrology, 1: 138-44, 5: 601-3
in China, 3: 401-2
Ebertin system, 1: 144
Goethe and, 8: 1039
Hamburg school 1: 144
Jung and, 1: 140, 11: 1460
macrocosm/microcosm theory and, 11: 1573
in Mesopotamia, 12: 1722
'mutable' signs in, 20: 2743
Nazism and, 13: 1829-30, 1831-2
Paracelsus and, 14: 1975
planets in, 1: 139-44, 7: 936
Jupiter, 1: 139, 143, 11: 1462
Mars, 1: 139, 143, 12: 1644
Mercury, 1: 139, 143, 12: 1703-4
moon, 1: 139, 143
Neptune, 1: 139, 143, 144, 13: 1844
Pluto, 1: 139, 143, 144
Saturn, 1: 139, 143, 144, 16: 2286
sun, 1: 139-44
Uranus, 1: 139, 143, 144, 19: 2699
Venus, 1: 139, 143, 144, 19: 2727
seasonal changes and, see 'mutable' signs above
see also horoscope; zodiac
Asvins (Indian twin gods), 10: 1335, 19: 2684 Atar (Zoroastrian god), 5: 631
ataraxia, 17: 2332
Atargatis (goddess), 5: 620, 8: 1119
atavism, 2: 151-2
Ate (Greek deity), 2: 152
Aten (Aton; Egyptian sun disc), 2: 152, 6: 732, 736, 9: 1296 temple of, at Akhetaten, 6: 735, 9: 1296
athame (magic knife), Athanasius, St:
on St Anthony, 1: 109
Arian heresy and, 3: 408-9, 9: 1191
on the Virgin Mary, 12: 1649
Athena (Greek goddess), see Athene
Athenagoras (Christian Platonist), on immortality, 10: 1315
Athene (Athena), 2: 153-5
Athens and, 2: 154-5
birth of, 15: 2093
cap of darkness worn by, 15: 2054
cock and, 3: 426
in Crete, 4: 480
Delphi, her temple at, 2: 154
Minerva identified with, 2: 155
olive and, 14: 1920
Orestes and, 7: 970
in Orphism, 2: 155
owl and, 2: 153, 155, 14: 1949
Perseus and, 10: 1341-2
Poseidon and, 14: 1920
Prometheus and, 15: 2095
statue of, by Pheidias, 9: 1290
Stoicism and, 2: 155
Trojan War and, 1: 117, 2: 154, 19: 2672
Zeus and, 2: 153-4
see also birth above
see also Judgement of Paris
Athens (Greece),
Athene and, 2: 154-5, 14: 1920
Dionysus and, 5: 586
Eleusis and, 6: 745-8
olive and, 14: 1920
ox sacrifice (bouphonia), 2: 176
Pan and, 14: 1973
Theseus and, 16: 2177, 19: 2599-600, 2603
see also Acropolis
Atholl, earls of, 20: 2802
Athos, Mount, skulls of monks on, 16: 2177
Athirat (Phoenician goddess), 18: 2541-2
Athtar (Ethiopian morning star), 6: 774
Atlantic Ocean, early exploration of, 2: 281-2
Atlantis, 2: 156-9
Madame Blavatsky and, 11: 1514
bull cult in, 2: 157
Crete and, 2: 158
Plato on, 2: 156-9, 15: 2052
Poseidon and, 2: 157
Santorini as, 2: 158
Troy as, 2: 159
and Western Mystery Tradition, 20: 2784 Atlas (Greek giant), 2: 160
atlas (maps), first use of term, 2: 160
Atlas Mountains, 2: 160
Atman (Indian religion), 2: 160, 270, 9: 1211
Brahman and, 2: 160, 270, 19: 2711-12

union with (yoga), 19: 2712
see also Mahatmas; Ramana Maharshi Aton (Egyptian sun disc), see Aten atonement, 2: 160
in Christianity, 2: 160, 12: 1610
Jewish day of (Yom Kippur), 2: 160, 10: 1438, 16: 2266
repentance and, 2: 160 sacrifice as, 2: 160
see also scapegoat
Atropos (Greek mythology), 6: 842
Attale, St, hand of, at Strasbourg, 16: 2179
Attila (leader of the Huns), 2: 161
in the Nibelungenlied, 2: 161, 13: 1867
Pope Leo I and, 2: 161
Attis (god), 2: 161, 4: 523
boar and, 4: 523, 5: 678
bull and, 5: 678, 18: 2582
castration of, 4: 523, 5: 678
Cybele and, 2: 161, 4: 523, 5: 678, 7: 891, 19: 2721
as dying god, 5: 678
Roman cult of, 5: 678, 18: 2466
as vegetation god, 2: 161, 4: 523, 7: 891, 19: 2721
attribute (in mythology), 2: 161
Atum (Egyptian god), 2: 195, 4: 471
Re and, 2: 257, 4: 471, 6: 731-2
temple of, at Heliopolis, 6: 735
Aubrey, John, on Druids, 5: 659
Audumulla (cow: Scandinavian mythology), 4: 468, 475
Augean stables, cleansed by Hercules, 9: 1188
augury, 2: 162, 5: 601,
birds in, 2: 162, 4: 497, 507, 5: 601, 683-4, 6: 776
in Borneo, 2: 265
comets in, 2: 162
in Ethiopia, 6: 776
Etruscans and, 2: 162
Hittites and, 9: 1224
omens, various, in, 2: 162
Romans and, 2: 162, 5: 601, 683-4, 11: 1538, 14: 1922, 16: 2235
thunder and lightning in, 2: 162, 6: 780
Augustine, St (of Hippo), 16: 2270
on the antiquity of Christianity, 16: 2190
by Botticelli, 2: 216
on dualism, 5: 671 on evil, 5: 671
on heaven, 14: 1983
on hell, 2: 193
on incubi, 6: 794
on the just war, 3: 410
original sin and, 7: 905, 12: 1649
on the peacock, 14: 2000
on predestination, 6: 741, 15: 2080
on the Satanic pact, 14: 1959
on time, 19: 2627
Augustine, St (missionary to England), 18: 2473
Augustus (Roman emperor):
Lares and, 11: 1510
Mars and, 12: 1644
Auldearne witches:
see Gowdie, Isabel Auliya, Nizam-ud-din, Thugs and, 19: 2617
aura, 2: 163, 5: 619, 15: 2150, 2150
halo and, 5: 619
aureole (halo), 5: 619
Aurésku (Basque dance), 3: 351
Aurobindo, Sri, 9: 1219
aurochs (animal), 3: 305
unicorn (Re'em) and, 19: 2689
aurora,
Inuit and, 10: 1351
Australia, aborigines of, 2: 164-70
black magic among, 2: 170
see also bone-pointing body-painting and, 18: 2581
cave and bark paintings of, 2: 168, 169, 12: 1611, 14: 1992
creation myths of, 2: 277, 4: 476
cult heroes of, 2: 168-9
dancing and, 2: 167, 19: 2642
imitative magic, 10: 1309
death, beliefs concerning, 2: 170, 4: 516, 4: 556, 557
disease, beliefs concerning, 2: 170
flood legend of, 7: 968
frost, myth of origin of, 20: 2813
initiation rites of, 2: 166, 167
lightning spirit of, 20: 2777
lizard and, 11: 1539
medicine-men of, 2: 170
Melanesia compared with, 12: 1697
mutilation in, 13: 1797
phallic symbolism and, 17: 2346 Pleiades and, 20: 2813
quartz and, 15: 2146
rainbow and, 15: 2153
snakes and, 2: 169, 169
soul, beliefs concerning, 4: 516, 14: 1992, 19: 2642
sun and moon myth of, 18: 2501-2 totemism among, 2: 166-8, 19: 2641-2 dingo, 19: 2641
wallaby, 2: 104, 166
whale, 19: 2641
witchety grub, 7: 928
auto da fe, 9: 1192, 1193
autoganzfeld, in ESP research, 6: 810 automatic art, 2: 171-5
see also Gill, Madge
automatic writing, 2: 171-5
see also cross-correspondences
automatisms, 14: 1942
see also automatic art; automatic writing; mediums
Auxonne nuns, 2: 175
Avalokitesvara (Bodhisattva), 3: 301, 19: 2619
Dalai Lama and, 16: 2174
Avalon (Celtic paradise), 2: 176, 14: 1980
apple trees and, 1: 116
Arthur and, 1: 121, 125, 2: 176
Glastonbury as, 2: 176, 8: 1022-24, 1027
Morgan le Fay and, 13: 1768
Western Mystery Tradition and, 20: 2786
avatara (incarnation; Hinduism), 10: 1320
Aventine Hill (Rome), 4: 574, 11: 1460
Avebury, 12: 1692
Avesta (Zend-Avesta; Zoroastrian sacred texts), 7: 981, 14: 1912, 1985, 20: 2870, 2872, 2874-6
Avicenna (Arab physician), 2: 251
Avitus (bishop), on the Devil, 4: 573
Avvakum, Archpriest, Old Believers and, 14: 1918
axe, 2: 176
in Athenian bouphonia, 2: 176
in Crete, see double axe
divination and, 2: 176
Donar and, 7: 996
Parthians and, 14: 1990, 1991
prehistoric, as amulet, 7: 996
in witchcraft, 2: 176
ayurveda, 2: 177
Azande (African people), 2: 178-9
blood-brotherhood ritual of, 4: 521
circumcision of, 2: 179
E. Evans-Pritchard on, 2: 178, 20: 2815
oracles of, 2: 179, 7: 880
witchcraft among, 2: 178-9, 6: 799, 7: 880, 20: 2815
Azazel, 8: 1033, 9: 2487
Azhi Dahaka (Zoroastrian dragon), 5: 631
Aztecs, 2: 180-7
calendar of, 2: 185-6
creation myths of, 2: 182-5
end of the world, beliefs concerning, 6: 754, 755
gods of, 2: 180-7
see also Chalchihuitlicue; Coatlicue; Huitzilopochtli; Tezcatlipoca; Tlaloc; Tlazolteotl
history of, 2: 180-2, 187
human sacrifice and, 2: 182, 183, 184, 16: 2262, 2265
jade and, 10: 1382
peyote and, 5: 652-3
priests of, 2: 186
rain and, 2: 186
skull (Tezcatlipoca) of, 2: 183 soldiers of, ocelot and eagle groups of, 19: 2643
see also Tenochtitlan

B

ba (Egypt), 6: 733
Baal (Adad, Hadad; Phoenician god), 1: 133, 2: 188-9, 15: 2030-1, 17: 2392, 18: 2542, 2545
Amorites and, 2: 188
Anat and, 1: 133, 2: 189, 15: 2030-1, 18: 2540-1, 19: 2720-1
in the Bible, 2: 188-9
bull and, 2: 188
cedar tree and, 2: 188
Dagon and, 15: 2030, 18: 2542
as demon, 2: 189
as dying god, 15: 2031, 18: 2541
in Egypt, 2: 188-9
Hercules and, 2: 189
Mot and, 2: 189, 15: 2030, 18: 2541, 19: 2720-1 sea-monster and, 18: 2540
as storm god, 2: 188, 17: 2394, 18: 2541
temple of, in Tunisia, 18: 2543
as vegetation god, 2: 188, 189, 15: 2030-1, 18: 2541, 19: 2720-1
as weather god, 15: 2030
Zeus and, 2: 189
see also Baal Hammon; Tanit Pene Baal
Baal Hammon (Carthaginian deity), 15: 2032, 18: 2544
Baal Shem Tov, see Eliezer, Israel ben Bab (Bahai title), 2: 190
Baba Yaga, 20: 2798
baboon, in Egypt, 1: 105
Babylonia (Mesopotamia), 2: 189, 12: 1714
bull in, 9: 1245, 18: 2582
Chaldeans and, 3: 383
creation myth of, see Enuma elish
death and, 4: 558
divination in, 5: 602, 11: 1538, 14: 1921
dragon in, 5: 630
eclipse cycle discovered in, 5: 708
end of the world and, 6: 755
flood legend of, 6: 755, 7: 912-13
forty and, 7: 940
gods of, 12: 1714-22
hero myth of, see Gilgamesh
Hittites and, 9: 1223, 12: 1633
Jerusalem captured by, 11: 1544
kingship in, 11: 1478
last king of, see Nabonidus
maze in, 12: 1674
monotheism in, 12: 1717
see also An; Ea; Marduk; Shamash
moon and, 13: 1764, 1767
new year festival (Sacaea), 4: 475, 5: 630, 6: 770, 859, 12: 1633, 1634, 20: 2809

see also Hammurabi
Bacchae (Bacchantes; worshippers of Bacchus), 2: 189
ivy and, 9: 1228
Orpheus and, 14: 1935
Bacchanalia, 2: 189
Bacchantes, see Bacchae
Bacchus, 2: 189, 16: 2288
Agdistis and, 4: 523
Dionysus identified with, 2: 189, 16: 2288
fig tree and, 6: 864
see also Bacchae
Bach, Dr Edward, 9: 1181
Bachelard, Gaston, on the four elements, 6: 743 bachelor, origin of the word, 11: 1511
backbone, see spine Bacon, Francis (writer and politician), 12: 1669
on flying ointment, 7: 918 as one of the Masters, 12: 1669
Bacon, Roger, 4: 564, 14: 1960-1
Baghdadi Jews (Indian Jews), 14: 1933
Bahais, 2: 190-1
Baha-Ullah (Mirza Hussain Ali, Bahai leader), 2: 190-1
Baigas (Indian tribe), tattooing and, 18: 2580
Bailey, Alice (occult author), 12: 1669
Baker, George, see Father Divine baker's dozen, 19: 2607
balance, concept of:
in New Guinea, 13: 1847-8
Balder (Scandinavian god), 2: 192, 11: 1542, 13: 1750, 16: 2289, 2292
Balfour, Arthur, Catherine Mary Lyttelton and ('Palm Sunday' case), 20: 2804
Balfour, Gerald W., cross-correspondences and, 18: 2554, 20: 2804
Bali, 4: 479, 7: 997
Balius (horse of Achilles), 8: 1118 ballads, Scottish, see Scottish and Border Ballads ball games, 7: 975-7
Balmung (sword of Siegfried), 18: 2522
Balor (Irish king), eye of, 6: 822
Bal Plá (dance), 3: 351
Bamberg witches, 2: 193-4, 4: 513, 6: 787, 7: 990, 17: 2415
Banerjee, Prof. Hemendra, reincarnation investigated by, 16: 2176
Bangkok (Thailand), temple of the Emerald Buddha at, 3: 296
Banneux, Virgin Mary at, 20: 2749
banyan tree, 6: 864, 19: 2658
Baphomet (idol), 2: 195
Crowley as, 4: 501
Knights Templar and, 2: 195, 11: 1484
baptism, 2: 195-8
Christian, 2: 195, 196, 197-8, 16: 2257-8, 20: 2772-3
exorcism and, 6: 800
Gypsies and, 8: 1103
of the Holy Spirit, Pentacostalist movement and, 14: 2003-4, 2006, 17: 2434
Jehovah's Witnesses and, 2: 198, 10: 1401
of Jesus, 2: 197, 3: 409
Mennonite, 4: 443
Mormons and, 13: 1772, 1773
St Paul on, 2: 197-8, 20: 2775
thumb in, 7: 997
torches in early ceremony of, 11: 1531
unbaptized infants, fate of, 15: 2080
see also Anabaptists; Dunkers; font Mircea Eliade on, 20: 2775
in Judaism, 2: 196
see also John the Baptist Barabbas, 10: 1411-12
baraka (spiritual power):
in Berber belief, 2: 216
dervishes and, 4: 566
Barcelona, Church of the Holy Family (Gaudí) at, 16: 2187
Barclay, Margaret (witch), 10: 1308, 18: 2494
bards, 2: 199
Celtic, 5: 657, 15: 2055-6
see also Eisteddfod Bards, Ovates and Druids, Order of, 5: 661
bark painting, in Australia, see Australia
Barlaam and Joasaph, Saints, 19: 2687
Barnabas, epistle of, 13: 1853
barnacle goose, 2: 199, 8: 1051-2, 1052
Barnsdale (Yorks), Robin Hood and, 16: 2224
Baron Samedi, 20: 2753
Barratt, T. B., Pentecostalism and, 14: 2004, 17: 2433
Barrett, Francis (author of The Magus), 2: 199-200
demons drawn by, 1: 131, 134, 2: 200
on magic squares, 12: 1593, 1595
Barrett, Sir William, 15: 2106
on Kathleen Goligher, 12: 1690
Society for Psychical research and, 13: 1801, 15: 2106
basil (herb), 9: 1182, 17: 2311
Basil, St, Proterius saved by, 14: 1959
Basilides, 1: 48, 2: 277, 5: 668
basilisk, 3: 426, 6: 816, 19: 2638
Basque witchcraft, 2: 201-3
see also Lancre, Pierre de Bassain (Nepalese festival), goat sacrificed at, 16: 2265
Bast (Egyptian cat goddess), 1: 104, 3: 354, 357, 6: 732, 13: 1788
bat (animal), 2: 204-6
vampires and, 19: 2704 battle of bewitchment, 2: 206-7 bay (tree), 2: 1264
laurel of mythology identified with, 11: 1511
Bayts, Margaret (witch), 15: 2082
beads, see necklace; rosary; wampum beads Beale, Mgr Herbert, 20: 2767
bean:
Harranian taboo on eating, 8: 1119
head and, in invisibility formula, 10: 1356
bear, 2: 208-10
Ainu and, 2: 209, 210, 6: 859
Artemis and, 4: 574, 14: 1899
Astarte and, 1: 134
bees and, 2: 208
Beowulf and, 2: 209
Bodvar, 14: 1909-10
Celts and, 2: 210
St Columban and, 16: 2276
in Crete, 14: 1899-1900
in fertility cults, 2: 210
in Finland, 7: 885
in Greece, 2: 210
Gypsies and, 8: 1105
Inuit and spirit of, 10: 1353
in Lapland, 11: 1507-8
North American Indians and, 2: 209, 210, 4: 530, 6: 859
Odysseus and, 2: 209
Pelasgian bear goddess, 14: 1899
sacrifice of:
Gilyaks (northern Asia), 19: 2638
Neanderthal, 1: 92, 2: 210
shape-shifting and, 11: 1566, 14: 1909-10
Slavs and, 17: 2400
unicorn and, 2: 208
Bear (constellation), see Great Bear beard:
in Mesopotamia, 3: 307
Parsees and, 14: 1987
Peter the Great and, 8: 1110
Sikhs and, 17: 2371
of St Uncumber, 19: 2687
St Wulfstan and, 8: 1110
Beardsley, Aubrey, 11: 1556, 19: 2670
Beast 666, 8: 1066, 12: 1593-4
Crowley as, 4: 499
beating the bounds, 14: 1903
Beauraing, Virgin Mary at, 20: 2749
Becket, Thomas, 15: 2043
bed, celestial, of James Graham, 8: 1110
Bedford, Mirabel (witch), 17: 2437
Bedivere (Arthurian knight), 1: 122, 123, 125
bee:
bear and, 2: 208
in Cretan cave, Zeus and, 14: 1900
as Ethiopian symbol of royalty, 6: 776
as omen, 14: 1921
see also honey Beelzebub, 1: 70, 2: 211
beetle, 10: 1345-6
dung-beetle, see scarab
Re and, see scarab, Re and Befana (Italian Christmas fairy), 3: 421
Beghards, 6: 763, 15: 2148
Beguines, 6: 763, 15: 2148
Behemoth (book of Job), 20: 2787
Behrens, Henry (dwarf), 5: 675
Bekker, Balthasar, 6: 796
Belial (Beliar; demon), 2: 211, 4: 570
Belkis, Queen (Queen of Sheba), 15: 2146-7
Bell, Arthur L, Mankind United and, 12: 1625
bell, book and candle, 4: 522, 522
Bell, John (18th cent, clergyman), on witches' marks, 15: 2082
Bellerophon (Greek hero), 3: 391
Bellona (Anatolian mother goddess) see Ma
bells, 2: 212-13
burial and, 2: 213
Easter and, 5: 720
evil eye averted by, 6: 844
harvest and, 8: 1124
of lost lands, submerged villages, 17: 2323 necromantic bell of Giraldus, 13: 1836
shamans and, 7: 886
storms and, 2: 213
witches and, 2: 213
Beltane (Celtic festival), 1: 87, 3: 374
Benares (India), 19: 2715
pilgrimage to, 15: 2043
Benedict XIV (pope), on supernatural phenomena attributed to saints, 18: 2482
Benedict XVI (pope), on miraculous cures, 6: 834
Bene Israel (Saturday Oilmen; Indian Jews), 14: 1933
Benin, mask from, 12: 1657
Bennett, Allan, 2: 280
bennu (Egyptian mythical bird), 15: 2033
Bentley, Dr J.Irving, victim of spontaneous combustion, 17: 2447, 2447
Beowulf, 2: 214, 9: 1202, 13: 1867
bear and, 2: 209, 214
sword and, 18: 2522, 2524, 2526
Béraud, Marthe (medium), see C., Eva Berbers (African people), 2: 215-16
Islam and, 2: 216
jinn, belief in, 2: 216
women, treatment of, 2: 215
Berbiguier, Alexis Vincent Charles (bottler of demons), 10: 1317
Bergelmir (Nordic giant), 8: 1017
Berkeley, Bishop George, 13: 1744
Bermuda Triangle, 2: 217
Bernadette, St (Marie-Bernard Soubirous), 11: 1553, 1555, 18: 2485

Bernard, St, 12: 1650, 17: 2334
Bernières, Jean de (Quietist), 15: 2149
berserkers, 14: 1909-10, 20: 2780
drugs perhaps used by, 5: 652, 13: 1790
shape-shifting and, 14: 1909-10, 20: 2780
Bertin, St, His soul carried up to God (Simon Marmion), 17: 2418
Bertrand, A. (physician), 12: 1596
beryl, 10: 1413, 17: 2315
Bes (Egyptian god), 6: 733, 814, 18: 2552-3
Besant, Annie, 2: 218-19, 246
hand of, 14: 1970
Theosophy and, 2: 218, 18: 2590, 2591, 2592
Besold, Christoph, Rosicrucians and, 16: 2245
bestiary, 14: 2002, 15: 2034
caladrius in, 5: 592
elephant in, 1: 107
peacock in, 14: 2000
pelican in, 14: 2002, 2002
phoenix in, 15: 2034
whale in, 20: 2787
Bethel College (Topeka, Kansas): Pentecostalist movement and, 14: 2003
betony (herb), 9: 1182, 1185
Bettiscombe Manor (Dorset), 8: 1132, 9: 1263
Beukels, John (John Bockelson, John of Leyden), 6: 762, 17: 2329
Beuno, St, 18: 2473
Bev, R. Dov, 8: 1125, 1126 bewitchment, see Battle of, 2: 206-7
see also psychic attack
Bhagavad Gita*, 2: 220-5, 9: 1215, 13: 1818, 20: 2746
sacrifice in, 9: 1209, 16: 2264
Bhagavata Purana*, 9: 1216, 11: 1488, 1491-2
Bhaiji (Indian holy man), 1: 97
Bhairava (Shiva), 18: 2561
bhakti (Hinduism), 9: 1216, 1218, 11: 1491-2
Christianity and, 11: 1468
see also bhakti yoga
bhakti yoga, 19: 2712-13, 20: 2846
Bhavani (Kali), 19: 2616
Bible, 2: 225, 9: 1222, 13: 1745-6
angels in, 1: 100-1
divination by, see bibliomancy
divination in, 5: 645
dogs in, 5: 607
eagle in, 5: 682, 14: 2002
eye in, 6: 814
fig tree in, 6: 863-4
forty in, 7: 940-1
giants in, 8: 1017
Gog and Magog, 8: 1039
interpretation of, see exegesis
Judaism and, 10: 1433-4
light associated with God in, 11: 1526
lily in, 11: 1532
oak in, 14: 1901
olive in, 14: 1920
scorpion in, 17: 2311
sexual references in, 15: 2025
unicorn in, 19: 2689
vulture in, 14: 2002
witches weighed against, 6: 786
see also Apocalypse; Apocrypha; mystery plays; New Testament; New Testament Apocrypha; Old Testament Bible Christians, see Walworth Jumpers
bibliomancy (divination by a book), 11: 1547
Biddenden cakes, 5: 699
Bifrost (rainbow bridge, Scandinavian mythology), 15: 2153, 16: 2290
Bigfoot, 2: 225
bile, 6: 742
bilocation, 2: 226
birch (tree), 17: 2352
birds, 2: 227-31
in augury, 2: 230, 16: 1922
Borneo, 2: 263
Ethiopia, 6: 776
Etruscans, 2: 162
Romans, 2: 162, 16: 1922
in Borneo, 2: 263-5
in cave art, 2: 227, 3: 368
Celts and, 3: 378
colours of, 2: 231
in creation myths, 2: 228
in Crete, 8: 1079
mythical, see bennu; Garuda; halcyon; phoenix; Roc; thunderbird weather and, 19: 2617-18
see also barnacle goose; blackbird; brahminy kite; cock; crossbill; crow; cuckoo; diver; dove; eagle; falcon; goose; hawk; hoopoe; hornbill; ibis; kite; magpie; nightingale; ostrich; owl; partridge; peacock; pelican; petrel; raven; robin; rook; sparrow; stork; swallow; swan; turkey; vulture; woodpecker; wren; wryneck
see also feather
birth:
Bushmen and, 3: 320
Gypsies and, 8: 1103
harvest and, 8: 1122-3
knots and, 18: 2492
of twins, 19: 2683
see also caul; couvade; horoscope; umbilical cord; virgin births Birth Number, 14: 1892
bisexuality, see hermaphrodite
Bishop, Ann (witch), 17: 2414
Bishop, Bridget (witch), 6: 838, 10: 1308, 16: 2280
al-Bistami, Abu Yazid (Sufi), 18: 2497
bistort (adderwort, Easter Ledger, snakeweed), 9: 1182 bitter-sweet (woody) nightshade, 15: 2049
bitumen, in mummification, 13: 1787 black, 3: 430-1
black deities, 11: 1464
Kali, 11: 1462-3
crow and, 4: 496
lead and, 4: 459, 11: 1513
Morris dances and, 13: 1774, 1775
Saturn and, 4: 459
see also black magic; black mass
blackberry (bramble), 9: 1182-3,1185
blackbird,
St Kevin and, 16: 2276
as witches' familiar, 6: 838
Black Box (radiesthesia), see Abrams' Box
Black Death, 17: 2416
'Black Fast' (Judaism), 10: 1438
black fast (magic), 15: 2112
Blackfoot Indians, 4: 557, 8: 1069, 1072
Black Jews (Cochin Jews), 14: 1933 black madonnas, 2: 232
black magic, 2: 233
Australian aborigines and, 2: 170
black mass in, 2: 235
distinguished from white magic, 4: 559
in Africa, 1: 60
Gurdjieffon, 8: 1095-6
Kikuyu and, 11: 1470
as the left-hand path, 11: 1514
see also black fast
black mass, 2: 235, 6: 785, 7: 961
Black Muslims, 2: 236-8
Black Pagoda, see Konarak
Black Stone (in the Kaaba at Mecca), 12: 1676
Mohammed and, 18: 2490
Blake, William, 2: 172, 239-43, 15: 2100
Druids and, 5: 659
Golden Dawn influenced by, 2: 242
Great Red Dragon and the Woman Clothed with the Sun, 16: 2199
Hecate, 9: 1166
Satan Before the Throne of God, 16: 2284
Satan in Council, 4: 568
Satan smiting Job with boils, 10: 1425
Swedenborg and, 2: 242, 18: 2519
Thomas Taylor and, 18: 2584 Valley of Dry Bones, 6: 823
visions of, 2: 241, 20: 2748
Yeats and, 20: 2843
Blavatsky, Helena Petrovna, 2: 244-7, 18: 2591
Atlantis and, 11: 1514, 20: 2784
Mrs Besant and, 2: 219
J. W. Keely and, 19: 2730
Lemuria and, 11: 1514
Mahatmas and, 2: 245-7, 12: 1600
on the moon, 13: 1764
on the sapphire, 10: 1414
Society for Psychical Research's report on, 2: 247
Spiritualism and, 2: 244-7
theosophy and, 2: 219, 245-7, 18: 2590
vibration and, 19: 2729-30
writings of, 2: 245-7, 20: 2784
Blocula (Sweden), 6: 787, 7: 918, 18: 2521 Blodeuwedd (wife of Lleu), 11: 1540
blood, 2: 248-9, 252
elder tree and, 6: 737
four humours, blood in theory of, 6: 742
Furies and, 7: 968
homunculus and, 9: 1236
of Jesus, 2: 248, 8: 1062-3, 1062-3
Lapps and, 11: 1509
of Nessus, Hercules and, 9: 1189
in New Guinea initiation rites, 13: 1849 oath-taking and, 14: 1905
see also blood-brotherhood
pact with the Devil signed in, 14: 1961
of the pelican, 2: 227, 14: 2002
red and, 3: 431
robin, 16: 2222
rose and, 16: 2237
sacrifice and, 2: 248, 16: 2265
stigmata and, 18: 2482-3
taboos and, 2: 248-9
witchcraft and, 2: 249, 6: 840
see also menstruation; vampire blood-brotherhood, Azande ritual of, 4: 521
bloodstone (jewel), 10: 1414
bloodwort (plant), see yarrow blue, 2: 249, 3: 432
fairies and, 6: 830
Jupiter and, 4: 459
tin and, 4: 459
Bluebeard, 2: 249, 8: 1020
Bluejay (trickster), 19: 2623
Blue Mosque (Istanbul), 10: 1370-1, 1372, 16: 2185
boar, 2: 250
Adonis killed by, 5: 676
on Anglo-Saxon helmets, 7: 965
Attis killed by, 4: 523, 5: 678
in Arthurian legend, see Twrch Trwyth of Ben Gulban (Irish legend), 7: 890
Celts and, 1: 106, 3: 377
see also Arthurian legend, above; Ben Gulban, above of Erymanthus, Hercules and, 9: 1187, 1188
fertility and, 2: 250
William Firmat and, 16: 2276
in New Guinea, 13: 1849
in Scandinavia, 2: 250, 5: 674, 7: 965-6
Vishnu as, 1: 106, 16: 2175, 20: 2746

Boban, Claudine (witch), 2: 286
Bockelson, John (Anabaptist), see Beukels, John Boddy, Rev. Alexander A., 14: 2004, 17: 2433
Bodhidharma (Zen monk), 20: 2860
Bodhisattva (Buddhism), 2: 253, 3: 301, 302, 19: 2622
in Ceylon, 17: 2380, 2381
in Tibet, 11: 1496, 19: 2619, 2620
in Zen, 20: 2857
see also Maitreya; Manjusri
bodhi tree (Buddhism), see bo-tree
Bodin, Jean (witch-hunter), 2: 286, 7: 961 Bodvar Bjarki (Scandinavian champion), 14: 1909-10
body, 2: 251-2
omens from, 14: 1921
orifices of:
in Kikuyu oath-taking ceremony, 11: 1470
penetrated by demons, 17: 2413 preservation of, after death, see dried bodies; mummification in yoga, see hatha yoga
see also blood; bones; breast; ear; entrails; eye; fingers; foot; hair; hand; head; heart; kidneys; liver; moles; navel; nose; penis; spittle; testicles; urine also birth; cannibalism; corpses; death; faceless goddesses; mutilation; out-of-the-body experiences; physiognomy; sex; shadow body of light, see astral body body-painting, 4: 464, 18: 2576, 2581
in Australia, 18: 2581
in Melanesia, 18: 2581
North American Indians and, 14: 1882
in South America, 18: 2581
Brazil, 4: 464
body-snatching, feared by tinkers, 19: 2636
Boehme, Jacob (mystic), 2: 253-4, 11: 1531
alchemy and, 2: 254
Cabala and, 3: 327
on the Fall of Man, 7: 905
on man as microcosm, 2: 253, 254
on opposites, 2: 254
on predestination, 2: 253-4
Boer, Walter (astrologer), 1: 143
Boethius, on free will, 15: 2080
bogey beasts (fairies), 6: 829
boggarts (fairies), 6: 829, 830
Puck related to, 15: 2127
Boghaz Koi, see Hattusas
bogies (Scottish spirits), 15: 2127
Puck related to, 15: 2127
Bogomils, 2: 255-6
Cathars and, 3: 358
Boguet, Henri (witch-hunter), 2: 211, 7: 961 Bohr, Niels, 11: 1576
Bois, Jules, 2: 207
Boleyn, Anne, six fingers of, 7: 883
Bombay (India), Parsees and, 14: 1984
bomos (Greek altar), 1: 92
Bon (pre-Buddhist religion of Tibet), 19: 2620
Bonaventure, St, 15: 2080, 16: 2270 bone-pointing (Australian magic), 2: 170, 10: 1310
bones, 2: 256
divination by:
Bushmen, 3: 318
Congo, 4: 450
of sheep, 17: 2358
in Ezekiel, 6: 824
of Sir Charles McCarthy, Ashanti and, 7: 928
as relics, 16: 2177-8
see also bone-pointing; skeleton; skull; spine; wish-bone
bonfire,
Balder and, 13: 1750
at Easter, 5: 700
at Hallowe'en, 1: 87
on St John the Baptist's Day, or Eve, 16: 2269, 19: 2728, 20: 2813-14
at Midsummer, 1: 129, 13: 1743
at onset of winter, 14: 2010, 20: 2809
Book of Change(s), see I Ching
Book of Creation, see Sefer Yetsirah
Book of Days, The (Chambers), 16: 2204
Book of the Dead (Egypt), 2: 257-61
Thoth and, 16: 2196-7
weighing of the heart in, 9: 1161
Book of the Dead (Tibetan), 2: 262, 262, 9: 1176, 19: 2625
Book of James, see Protoevangelium
Book of the Spirits, 11: 1577
Book of Splendour (Cabala), see Zohar
Book of the Two Ways (Egypt), 2: 259
Book of the Yellow Emperor, see Nei Jing
Boone, Daniel, 19: 2694
Booth, William (founder of Salvation Army), 9: 1227
al Borak (Mohammedan winged horse), 20: 2806
Border Redcaps (fairies), 6: 830
Borley Rectory, 15: 2064
Borneo, 2: 263-5
headhunting in, 2: 264, 264
Bors (Arthurian knight), 7: 973, 8: 1065
Bosch, Hieronymus, 2: 266-9
Adoration of the Magi, The, 14: 2007
Crowning of Thorns, The, 8: 1134
Death of a Miser, 16: 2211
Garden of Delight, The, 2: 266, 7: 945
Temptation of St Anthony, The, 1: 109, 2: 266-8, 266
Bosco, St John, 18: 2486-7
Bosdeau, Jane (witch), 3: 340
Boston (Mass.), Christian Science church at, 3: 415, 417, 5: 716
Bosworth Hall, haunting of, 8: 1127
Bothwell, Francis Hepburn, Earl of, North Berwick witches and, 14: 1886
bo-tree (Bodhi tree, sacred fig; Buddhism), 6: 864, 864, 17: 2381
Bottadio, John (Wandering Jew legend), 20: 2770 Botticelli, his Primavera, 16: 2194, 2194
bottle, demon in a, 10: 1317
see also witch-bottle
Boullan, Joseph-Antoine, 2: 206-7
bouphonia (Athenian ox sacrifice), 2: 176
Bourne, Hugh (Primitive Methodist), 6: 764
Boxing Day (St Stephen's Day), 3: 421
wren hunt on, 14: 1896, 20: 2837
boxwood, true cross and, 18: 2551
Bra (Jutland), cauldron of, 3: 363
bracken, see ferns
Bradlaugh, Charles, Mrs Besant and, 2: 218-19
Bragi (Scandinavian god), 16: 2289
Brahma (Hindu god), 2: 271, 271, 20: 2746
goose and, 8: 1050, 1051
Rod of, 11: 1494
wife of, see Sarasvati
brahmacharya (yoga), 20: 2849
Brahman (Hinduism), 2: 224-5, 270-1, 9: 1211-16, 30: 2744-5
Atman and, 2: 160, 270, 19: 2711-12
Brahma (god) and, 2: 271
Buddhism and, 2: 270
hearth and, 10: 1335
threefold concept of, 19: 2614-15
union with, see yoga
see also Brahmins (caste)
Brahmanas (Hindu sacred texts), 9: 1209-10
Brahmins (caste; Hinduism), 2: 271, 3: 353-4
brahminy kite (bird), in Borneo, 2: 265
Brahmo Samaj (Hindu reformist sect), 9: 1218
Braid, James (surgeon), 12: 1597, 1711
Brak, eye temple of, 6: 816
bramble (wild blackberry), see blackberry
Bran (Celtic mythology), 2: 271, 3: 336
Bran, son of Febail, voyage of, 2: 271
Bran the Blessed, 2: 271
cauldron of, 3: 363, 8: 1061
Fisher King and, 8: 1061
head of, 2: 271, 8: 1143
in the Mabinogion, 2: 271, 11: 1571
raven and, 2: 271
Brandan, St, see Brendan, St
Branwen, daughter of Llyr (Mabinogion), 2: 271, 11: 1571
Brauron (Attica), Artemis and, 2: 210, 14: 1899
Brazil, 2: 272-5
anteater and, 2: 274
burial in, 10: 1314
cannibalism in, 2: 272-3
carnival in, 18: 2469, 2469-70
Christianity in, 17: 2423-4, 2427
cult of the dead in, 2: 272-3, 4: 510
culture hero of, see Maira ecstatic cults of coastal cities of, 5: 713 female figurine from, 13: 1778
hallucinogenic plants in, 5: 649-50
hunting and taboo in, 9: 1267
incest taboo in, 2: 273
initiation rites in, 2: 273-4, 10: 1337
jaguar and, 2: 273, 273, 274, 275, 4: 464, 10: 1307, 1384
masks in, 12: 1700, 18: 2469
new religious movements in, 14: 2006, 17: 2421-7, 20: 2754, 2755
opossum and, 2: 275
sexual myth of snake in, 2: 273
shamanism in, 2: 275
souls, beliefs concerning, 2: 275 twins in (Mikur myth), 2: 274
see also Conselheiro bread, 2: 276
see also unleavened bread breast, St Agatha and, 5: 594, 16: 2272 breath, 2: 277-80
in acupuncture, 1: 52
in Australian creation myth, 2: 277 control of, in yoga, see pranayama
Egyptian beliefs concerning, 2: 278, 279
Fijian beliefs concerning, 2: 277
in Hinduism, see prana
the Virgin Mary and, in legend, 2: 272-8
soul and, 2: 277, 17: 2418
in Tibet, 2: 280
see also air; animism; orenda; pneuma; Psyche Brendan (Brandan), St, 2: 281-2
Atlantic voyage of, 2: 281-2 discovery of America and, 2: 282 earthly paradise and, 2: 281, 282, 14: 1980
Judas met by, 10: 1440
Brennan, J.H., and regression, 16: 2217
Brentano, Clemens, 8: 1082
Brer Rabbit, 1: 62, 83, 2: 283, 19: 2664, 2664, 2665
Breuer, Josef, Freud and, 7: 963
Breughel, Pieter, the Elder:
Battle between Carnival and Lent, 7: 926-7
Children's Games, 3: 388-9
drawings of witches, 6: 838
Brian (Celtic god), 3: 377
Bride, St, see Bridget, St
bridges,
in children's games, 3: 387
over hell:

in Islam, see Sirat
in Zoroastrianism, 11: 1453, 14: 1985, 1988, 20: 2873
rainbow as a bridge, 15: 2153-5, 16: 2290
Roman rite on Tiber bridge, sacrifice at, 3: 303
Bridges, William (founder of Plumstead Peculiars), 3: 427, 14: 2001
Bridget, St (St Bride), 3: 340
Bridget, St (of Sweden), 20: 2749
Brigantia (Celtic goddess), 2: 283, 283, 3: 377
Brigge, Mabel, 15: 2113
Brigit, St, 2: 283-4
Danu and, 3: 377
Brigit, St (of Kildare), 2: 283, 284
Brisingamen (necklace of Freyja), 7: 965
British Association of Progressive Spiritualists (1865-8), 17: 2440
British Israelites, 11: 1545-6, 15: 2144
British National Association of Progressive Spiritualists, see London Spiritualist Alliance
Britomartis (Cretan deity), 4: 480, 11: 1532
Brittany, 2: 284-5
Arthurian legends and, 2: 284, 11: 1498
Bluebeard legend of, 8: 1020
life after death, beliefs concerning, 2: 285
lost land legends of, 2: 285, 7: 916
saints of, 2: 285
springs in, 2: 285, 18: 2473
standing stones of, 2: 285, 4: 512, 5: 656
Brocken (Harz Mountains), 2: 286, 17: 2435
Brodie-Innes, J.W., 11: 1583
Brome, Theophilus, skull of, 8: 1038
broom (plant), as herb, 9: 1183
broomstick, 2: 286-7
made of heather, 9: 1166
superstitions concerning, 2: 287
broomstick wedding, 2: 287
witchcraft and, 2: 286-7, 6: 785, 839, 10: 1317
painting by Goya, 8: 1057
Alice Kyteler, 2: 286
painting by Teniers, 2: 287
Brown, Rosemary (automatic musician), 2: 172
Browne, Sir Thomas, on the human body, 2: 251
brownies (fairies), 6: 832
Browning, Robert (poet), D. D. Home and, 9: 1233
Browsers (ascetics), 11: 1574
Bruno, Giordano, 2: 288, 16: 2194-5
Brut (Brute, Brutus; legendary king of Britain), 1: 122, 8: 1017
bryony (herb), 9: 1183, 12: 1620
Buber, Martin (Jewish mystic), 8: 1126, 13: 1819
bucan (Scottish spirit), Puck related to, 15: 2127
bucca (Cornish fairy), 4: 457
Bucephalus, 1: 82, 19: 2732
Bucke, R. W., cosmic consciousness and, 13: 1814
buckie (Scottish spirit), Puck related to, 15: 2127
Buckland, Raymond (modern witch), 13: 1757, 1757
Buda (Ethiopian spirit), 6: 777
Buddha, 3: 296-8, 20: 2857
conception of, by Queen Maya, 19: 2733, 2733
death of, 13: 1816-17
iconography of, 9: 1290, 12: 1677
as ascetic, 13: 1872, 17: 2331
in Ceylon, 17: 2381, 2381
with Confucius and Lao Tze, 18: 2563
in Kamakura, 20: 2854
from Katmandu, 3: 296
Tibetan, 9: 1291
as incarnation of Vishnu, 20: 2746
more than one Buddha, belief in, 3: 301 personal description of, 2: 252
relics of, 15: 2043, 16: 2177
see also stupas, Tooth, Temple of ritual gestures of, 7: 997
as tree spirit, 19: 2657
see also bo-tree, Buddhism
Buddhaghosa (Buddhist writer), 17: 2379-80
Buddh Gaya (Buddhist pilgrimage centre), 15: 2043
Buddhism, 3: 295-302
architecture of, 16: 2188
see also stupas; Tooth, Temple of ascetism in, 13: 1872, 17: 2331, 2334
in Ceylon, see Sinhalese Buddhism
in China, 3: 299, 300, 393, 395, 399, 4: 558, 11: 1549, 16: 2174
see also Zen Buddhism
death and, 6: 790, 793
death personified in, 4: 558
end of the world and, 6: 755
evil and, 6: 790, 793
guardian spirits in, 3: 296
Hinduism and, 3: 301
Bhagavad Gita, 2: 221
Brahman, 2: 270
incarnation in, 10: 1320
in Japan, 10: 1390-7, 14: 2008, 17: 2362
Chinese influence on, 10: 1391, 1392
judgement of the dead in, 4: 556, 558, 11: 1452
see also Amida; Jizo: Kwannon; Zen
lotus and, 10: 1415, 11: 1549
man, Buddhist view of, 12: 1611
mandalas in, 12: 1614, 1615
meditation in, 3: 298, 301, 12: 1679
monks in, 3: 298-9, 299
in Ceylon, 17: 2380-1
in Southeast Asia, 17: 2430
see also lamas
mysticism in, see mysticism, Buddhist paradise and, 14: 1977, 1982
pilgrimage in, 15: 2042, 17: 2381
reincarnation in, see reincarnation relics in, see Buddha
rosary in, 16: 2336
selfhood in, 12: 1611
see also Nirvana
sin and, 17: 2376
in Southeast Asia, 17: 2428-9, 2430
Tantric, 3: 301
in Tibet, 19: 2620-5
see also lamas, Tibetan see also Bodhisattva; Buddha; Mahayana; prayer wheel buffalo, Great Plains Indians and, 3: 303, 8: 1068, 1069, 1071
'Buffalo Bill' (William Frederick Cody), 19: 2694
bug-a-boo (Scottish spirit), 15: 2127
Buganda (Africa), drums in, 5: 663 builders' rites, 3: 303-4
human sacrifice and, 3: 303
in Hawaii, 15: 2011
orientation, 3: 303
shadow and, 3: 303, 17; 2348
Bulgaria, 2: 555-6, 6: 796
bull, 1: 105-6, 3: 305-9
Astarte and, 1: 134
in Atlantis, 2: 157
Attis and, 5: 678, 18: 2582
Baal and, 2: 188
in Babylonia, 9: 1245, 18: 2582
in burial at Maikop in Russia, 4: 511
at Catal Hüyük, 1: 92
in cave art, 3: 305-6, 369
Celts and, 3: 376, 9: 1248-9
in Crete, 3: 305, 307-9, 307, 4: 482, 483, 8: 1079, 9: 1246
captured by Hercules, 8: 1077, 9: 1188
Zeus and, 8: 1077, 9: 1180
see also Minotaur
Cybele and, 2: 196, 5: 678, 18: 2582
Earth Mother and, 19: 2719
in Egypt, see Apis; Mnevis
El (Phoenician god) and, 6: 737, 15: 2028
fertility and, 3: 306, 9: 1244, 19: 2719
in Greece, 9: 1246
Prometheus and, 15: 2094
see also Minotaur; Zeus, below
Hebrews and, 9: 1245-6
horns of, 9: 1244
India, bull gods of, 3: 307, 9: 1244-5
Shiva, 17: 2366, 2367
in Malta, 12: 1604
Mithras and, 13: 1751, 1752, 1753-4
in Sumer, 3: 307, 9: 1245
Zeus and, 8: 1705, 9: 1180, 1246, 20: 2864
see also Europa
zodiac sign, see Taurus
see also ox
Bulwer, Dr John, 11: 1568
Bulwer Lytton, see Lytton
bundling, 12: 1637
Buri (Scandinavian god), 4: 468
burial, 3: 310-17
in Africa, 1: 59-60
Bushmen, 3: 318
anointing and, 14: 1914
in Brazil, 10: 1314
cannibalism in lieu of, 3: 315
Celtic, 3: 373, 4: 511
in China:
shadow and, 17: 2348
of Shang dynasty, 4: 511
Christian, 3: 312-13, 317
bells and, 2: 213
in churches, 15: 2136-7 weather at, 17: 2394-5
see also catacombs
cremation and, 4: 477
in Crete, 4: 482, 512
at crossroads, 3: 315, 4: 495
curses as grave-protection, 4: 521
in Egypt, see Egypt, cult of the dead
first, in new cemetery, 7: 901
ghosts and, 3: 315, 7: 1004
Gypsies and, 8: 1103
of the heart, 9: 1163
Inuit, 10: 1355
see also Ipiutak
Parsees and, 3: 315, 14: 1986, 1987-8
Parthians and, 14: 1991
prehistoric, 3: 311, 314, 4: 510-11, 5: 589, 591, 17: 2385
Neanderthal, 4: 510, 9: 1241-3
religious beliefs cannot be inferred from, 10: 1313
see also dolmen premature, Lytton's fear of, 11: 1568
as a rite of passage, 16: 2211 Scythian, 4: 512, 10: 1313
in ships, see ship-burial
Veddas and, 19: 2716
see also coffin; corpses; cult of the dead; grave goods; life after death; urn, funerary; wake Burma, 17: 2428-30
Burnet, Thomas, on the end of the world, 6: 760
Burney relief (Mesopotamian terracotta), 10: 1364 burning, 3: 318
sacrifice and, see sacrifice,

see also cremation; fire
burning bush, Moses and, 20: 2839-40
Burning the Clavie (New Year custom), 9: 1165, 13: 1865
burnt offerings, see sacrifice
Burton Agnes (Yorks), skull and ghost of Anne Griffith at, 8: 1131-2, 1133 burying-beetle, 10: 1346
bushido (Japan), 11: 1465
Bushmen (Africa), 3: 318-20
jackal and, 10: 1382
rock paintings of, 3: 320, 9: 1268, 16: 2227, 2228
butterfly, 3: 320, 10: 1345, 1346-7 see also caterpillar
Buvée, Barbara, Auxonne nuns and, 2: 175
Buxton (Derbyshire), St Anne's Well at, 18: 2473 buzzard, in augury, 2: 162, 3: 320
Byblos (Phoenician city), 15: 2028, 18: 2545

C

C., Eva (Marthe Béraud; medium), 5: 714, 12: 1688, 15: 2108
C., Stella (medium), 12: 1688
Cabala (Cabbala, Kabbalah, Qabbalah; Jewish mystical system), 3: 321-7
Boehme and, 3: 327
Cathars and, 3: 323
Christianity and, 3: 326
creation/emanation in, 1: 91, 3: 323-7, 13: 1823
see also sefiroth
first man myth of, see Adam Kadmon
Fludd and, 3: 326, 326, 7: 918
Freud and, 7: 963
gematria and, 7: 985
Gnosticism and, 3: 323, 324
Hasidism and, 3: 323, 326, 8: 1125-6
Hebrew alphabet and, 1: 91, 3: 323, 13: 1823
light, imagery of, in, 11: 1531
Lull and, 11: 1565
magic and, 3: 326, 327
meditation in, 12: 1678
Neoplatonism and, 3: 324, 13: 1842
origin of, 3: 322-3
Papus and, 14: 1973
sefirotic tree in, see tree of Life, Cabalist
Shekhinah in, 3: 325
A. E. Waite and, 3: 327, 20: 2759
see also Luria, Isaac; Sefer Yetsirah
Cabiri, 4: 460, 20: 2849
Cabrini, St Frances, 16: 2270
cactus, 3: 328
Cadbury Castle (Somerset), Arthur and, 3: 330-1, 332, 333, 336, 20: 2796
Cadmus (king of Thebes), Dionysus and, 5: 584
caduceus, 2: 279-80, 3: 328
Caeneus, battle of centaurs and Lapiths and, 3: 379
Cagliostro, Count Alessandro, 3: 328-9, 10: 1380
Cahagnet, A. 12: 1713
Cailleach (Scottish monster), 4: 497, 6: 830
Caindia (Irish god), see Fothad Canainne cairns, 18: 2489
Hermes and, 9: 1196, 18: 2489
Calabrese, Hayyim Vital (disciple of Luria), 11: 1566
Caladbolg (sword), 6: 797
caladrius, in the bestiary, 5: 592
Calcutta, origin of the name, 11: 1464
calendar:
astrological, medieval, 6: 770
Aztec, 2: 185-6
Druids and, 5: 659
lunar, 13: 1764-5
Maya, 12: 1670, 1672
Parsees and, 14: 1984
Peruvian, 6: 771
Caliburnus (sword of Arthur), see Excalibur
caliph (Islamic title), 10: 1373
Callimachus, Drusiana and (Christian legend), 13: 1857-60
Calliope (Muse), 13: 1789
Callisto (Kallisto; Greek mythology), 2: 210, 4: 574-5, 14: 1899
calumet, 3: 329
Calusari (Rumanian dancers), 13: 1774, 1775
Calvin, John, 6: 784
on predestination, 6: 742, 15: 2080
Servetus and, 9: 1193
witchcraft and, 6: 783, 786
Cambrai (France), possessed nuns at, 9: 1274
Camelot and Arthurian Britain, 3: 330-6
Camisards (Cévenols; French Protestants), 3: 337-8, 17: 2433
Shakers and, 4: 441
camphor, as an aphrodisiac, 14: 2011
Camulos (Celtic god), 3: 377
Canaan, as promised land of the Israelites, 6: 739-40, 20: 2840-1
Canaanites, see Phoenicians and Canaanites
Cancer (the Crab; zodiac sign, in astrology), 3: 338, 14: 2001
candle, 3: 339-40
hand of glory and, 8: 1113-14
Judaism and, 3: 339
witches and, 3: 340, 14: 1887
Candlemas, 3: 340, 421
candombles (Brazil), 17: 2424
Canewdon (Essex), 7: 1005
cannibalism, 3: 341
in Brazil, 2: 272-3
instead of burial, 3: 315
in Kwakiutl initiation rite, 10: 1340
among the Maori, 12: 1631-2
in Melanesia, 12: 1694
New Guinea, 3: 315, 13: 1848
Canon Episcopi, 4: 576, 6: 785, 7: 918, 17: 2356
canonization, 3: 341, 16: 2273
Canopic jars, 13: 1788
Canterbury cathedral:
foliate heads in, 19: 2719
cantharides, see Spanish fly
Capeau, Sister Louise (possessed nun), 1: 69-70
Capitoline Hill (Rome), temple of Saturn on, 16: 2285
capnomancy (divination by smoke from sacrifice), 14: 1923
Capricorn (the Goat; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 107, 142, 143, 3: 341
placed in sky by Zeus, 4: 456
Cardan, Jerome, personality judged from lines on forehead by, 15: 2036
Cardiac, Jean (child prodigy), 16: 2174
cards, playing, 3: 342-7
fortune-telling with (cartomancy), 3: 342-7 superstitions associated with, 7: 977
see also Tarot
cargo cults, 3: 348-50, 12: 1698, 20: 2816
Carlisle (Cumberland), origin of the name, 11: 1541
Carmel, Mount (Israel):
Bahai shrine on, 1: 190, 191, 191
cave burial on, 4: 510
see also Carmelite Order
Carmelite Order, 18: 2588-9
Carnac (Brittany), standing stones at, 2: 285
Carneades (Greek philosopher), 15: 2079
carnelian, 10: 1415
carnival, 18: 2467-70
Mexican, 7: 934
see also Mardi Gras
carol (seasonal song), 3: 352
carole (dance), 3: 351-2, 4: 531
Caroline of Brunswick (wife of George IV) imitative magic allegedly practised by, 10: 1308
carp (fish), in Japan, 7: 909
Carrica, Tia (wise woman), 20: 2793
Carrington, Hereward (psychical researcher), 14: 1963, 15: 2067
Cartaphilus (Wandering Jew legend), 20: 2770
Carter, Howard and John (Pentecostalists), 14: 2006
Carteret, Lady Louisa, ghost of, 8: 1131
Cartesian philosophy, see Descartes, Rene Carthage, 15: 2028, 15: 2031-2
animal sacrifice and, 15: 2029
child sacrifice and, 7: 900, 15: 2032, 18: 2544
gods of, 15: 2031, 2032
Rome and, 15: 2028, 2032
cartomancy, see fortune-telling, by cards
Carus Karl (physician), on the unconscious, 7: 963
Case, Paul Foster (Builders of the Adytum), 8: 1045
Cassandra (Trojan princess), 1: 115, 17: 2368
cassock, 4: 466
caste, 3: 353-4, 9: 1217
Indian Jews and, 14: 1933
in Sinhalese Buddhism, 17: 2380-1
see also Brahmins, untouchables Castelmellano (Italy), white magic at, 20: 2793
castle:
in Grail legend, 8: 1058, 1061, 1065
symbolism of, 11: 1505
see also Cadbury castle; Krak des Chevaliers; Tintagel Castle Dore (Cornwall), King Mark and, 3: 331 Castor and Polydeuces (or Pollux), see Dioscuri
castration, 13: 1797
of Attis, 4: 523, 5: 678
castrati, 13: 1797
castration complex (psychological theory), 20: 2823
of Origen, 13: 1797, 17: 2384 Skoptsy and, 13: 1797, 17: 2384
of Uranus, 1: 111
in worship of Astarte, 1: 134, 13: 1797
cat, 3: 355-7
in Arthurian legend (demon cat of Losanne), 1: 121, 122
in Egypt, as goddess, see Bast mummified, in Egypt, 13: 1788
as omen, 14: 1921
sacrifice of, 6: 839
in witchcraft:
as familiar, 3: 356, 356, 5: 691, 6: 796, 838-40, 15: 2112, 17: 2414
in shape-shifting, 3: 356, 17: 2356
in storm-raising, 14: 1887
catacombs:
of Rome, 9: 1290-1
Christ in, 9: 1292
Good Shepherd symbol, 8: 1049, 9: 1292
Jonah in, 9: 1292, 10: 1430
of Sicily, 3: 312
Catal Hüyük, Neolithic settlement at, 16: 2183

female figurines from, 9: 1287, 1288, 13: 1778
fertility rites at, 1: 92
headless figures at, 8: 1149, 1149
caterpillar, 10: 1347
in Alice in Wonderland, 10: 1348, 13: 1791
Cathars, 3: 358-60, 9: 1192, 16: 2283-5
Basque witchcraft and, 2: 202
Bogomils and, 3: 358
Cabala and, 3: 323
dualism of, 3: 358-9
cathedrals, Christian, see Canterbury; Chartres; Kremlin, Cathedral of the Assumption in; St Peter's, Rome
Catherine of Alexandria, St, 16: 2272
Catherine of Genoa, St, 15: 2137, 2148, 18: 2484
Catherine of Ricci, St, 18: 2485
Catherine of Siena, St, 3: 361-2
incombustibility of, 18: 2485
by Sodoma, 18: 2483
stigmata of, 3: 361
by Veronese, 13: 1813
catherine wheel, 16: 2272
Catholic Apostolic Church (Irvingites), 10: 1362-3 Catholic church, see Roman Catholic church catoptromancy, see mirror, divination by cat's cradle (string game), 18: 2492
cat's eye (jewel), Sun and Leo associated with, 10: 1413
Caucasus, earthquake myth of, 15: 2095 cauldron, 3: 363
of Annwn (Arthurian cycle), 1: 122, 3: 363, 8: 1061
of Bran the Blessed, 3: 363, 8: 1061
Celts and, 3: 363, 8: 1059-60
in Crete, 20: 2862
of Goibniu, 8: 1059
of Gundestrup, 3: 363, 363, 374, 5: 708, 9: 1248, 20: 2791, of Tyrnoc, 8: 1061
causation, cause and effect, 13: 1745, 15: 2079
Jung's principle of synchronicity and, 11: 1460, 1548
Cavalier, Jean (Camisard), 3: 338
cave art, 3: 364-9, 6: 859
of Africa, see rock paintings of Australia, see Australia
dating of, 3: 364-7
of Paleolithic Europe, 3: 305-6, 365-90, 9: 1288
animals in, 3: 366
birds in, 2: 227, 3: 368
as fertility cult, 3: 367
fish in, 3: 365
horns in, 9: 1243
as imitative magic, 3: 367-9 of post-Paleolithic Europe, 3: 365 caves, 3: 370
of Cappadocia, early Christians in, 3: 370, 405
in Crete, as sanctuaries, 3: 370, 4: 483
dwarfs and, 5: 675
Mithras and, 16: 2185-6
subterranean race and, 18: 2494-5
symbolism of, 11: 1505
in Tristan legend, 19: 2670
Zeus born in a cave, 3: 370, 4: 460, 14: 1900, 16: 2288, 20: 2867
see also cave art; Choukoutien; Guattari cave; Teshik-tash Cayce, Edgar, 3: 371, 20: 2784
Cecilia, St, 16: 2276
cedar (tree): 2: 188
Baal and, 2: 188
cross of Jesus and, 14: 1920, 1964, 18: 2551
Ea and, 19: 2660
Cefalu (Sicily), Aleister Crowley at, 4: 502-3 Celeus (Greek mythology), 20: 2836
celibacy:
of Christian monks, 3: 410
of Christian priests, 3: 411
among communistic religious movements, 4: 442-5
Shakers, 4: 441, 17: 2349
Walworth Jumpers, 20: 2764
Cellini, Benvenuto, magical ceremony described by, 10: 1380
Celtic cross, 3: 372, 4: 491
Celts, 3: 372-8
animals and, 3: 377
boar, 1: 106, 3: 377
bull, 3: 376, 9: 1248-9
horse, 1: 104, 106, 2: 284, 9: 1250, 1255
ram, 3: 377, 9: 1248-9
ram-headed serpent, 1: 105, 3: 377, 9: 1248
stag, 1: 105, 3: 377, 9: 1248-9, 18: 2475-7
see also horns, below
Arthurian legends of, 1: 121-2, 8: 1061, 11: 1570, 1572
birds and, 3: 378
crane, 3: 378, 4: 470
burial among, 3: 373
cauldron and, 3: 363, 374, 8: 1059-60
Christianity of, 3: 333, 336
Celtic cross, 3: 372, 375
see also Brendan, St; Columba, St; Patrick, St
festivals of, 3: 375
see also Beltane; Imbolc; Lugnasad; Samain glass and, in myth, 8: 1083
Glastonbury and, 8: 1022, 1023
gods of, 3: 376-7
triple gods, 2: 283, 3: 377, 7: 890, 8: 1143
see also Bran; Brigit; Cernunnos; Epona; Goibniu; Lugus; Matunus; Rhiannon; Teutates head cult of, 2: 271, 3: 375, 5: 660, 8: 1141-4 heroes of, 4: 506, 507, 9: 1202-3
cauldron and, 3: 363
see also Arthur; Cu Chulainn; Finn mac Cumail; Furbaide the Horned; Gwydion horns and, 3: 376, 9: 1246-50 human sacrifice by, 3: 363, 363, 375-6
life after death, beliefs concerning, 3: 373, 374
oak and, 11: 1540
priests of, see Druids stones and, 18: 2489, 2566
story-telling and, 11: 1572
three and, 3: 377, 7: 889-90, 11: 1540
see also gods, triple gods, above Urnfield culture and, 3: 373 vessels of plenty and, 8: 1059-60 wells and, 8: 1144
see also Brittany; Mabinogion
censer, from Ramsey Abbey, 14: 2009
Census of Hallucinations (S.P.R.), 15: 2107
centaurs, 3: 379
Lapiths and, 3: 379, 9: 1252-3, 19: 2601
Theseus and, 19: 2601
see also Chiron; Nessus
centaury (herb), 19: 1183
Centini, Giocinto, Urban VIII and, 10: 1380
Central America, modern, see Mexico and Central America Central America, Pre-Columbian, see Aztecs; Maya; Mixtecs; Olmecs; Toltecs; Zapotecs
centre, the:
pentagram and, 14: 2002
symbolism of, 18: 2536
see also world mountain; world tree
see also navel
Cerberus (three-headed dog; Greek mythology), 5: 611, 9: 1168, 1176, 1189
Cercyon (Greek mythology), 19: 2600
cerealis (plant), see vervain
Ceres (Roman goddess), 3: 379, 4: 575-6, 16: 2230
acorn and, 14: 1902
Demeter identified with, 4: 563, 16: 2230
Janus and, 10: 1388
Cerialia (festival of Ceres), 4: 563
Cerne Abbas, giant of (Dorset), 6: 854
Cernunnos (Celtic god), 1: 105, 3: 377, 9: 1248, 18: 2475
Ceryneian hind, captured by Hercules, 9: 1188, 18: 2475
Cetshwayo (Cetewayo; Zulu chief), 20: 2876, 2878
Cévenols, see Camisards
Cewa (Central African people), witchcraft among, 17: 2416, 20: 2815, 2817
Ceylon (Sri Lanka), 3: 379
Buddhism in, see Sinhalese Buddhism indigenous tribe of, see Veddas
Chac (Maya rain god), 12: 1672
Chagall, Marc:
The Dream, 5: 644
Time is a River without Banks, 18: 2535
The Vision, facing title page, 20
chain of being, see great chain of being chain dances, 3: 351-2, 4: 534-5
Chaka (Zulu chief), see Shaka
chakras, 3: 380-2, 11: 1493, 1494, 18: 2558
lotus and, 11: 1549
Chalcedon (Council of, AD 451), Jesus's dual nature defined by, 3: 409, 10: 1320, 12: 1649
chalcedony, 10: 1414-15
Chalchihuitlicue (Aztec goddess), 20: 2777, 2778
Chaldean Oracles, 13: 1842, 19: 2603
Chaldeans (Mesopotamia), 3: 383
chalice, 4: 516
Grail as chalice of the Last Supper, 8: 1062-3
Chalice Well (Glastonbury), 8: 1027
Chamberlain, Houston Stewart, 13: 1838
chamber tomb, see dolmen Chambre Ardente case, 15: 2062-3
chance:
divination by chance happenings, see cledonomancy
ESP and, 6: 804-5, 806
see also lots; luck
Chan Chan (Peru), 10: 1324
changeling, 3: 383, 6: 830
in Cornwall, 4: 457
foxglove and, 9: 1185
Changing Woman (Navaho Indian deity), 13: 1825 Channel Islands, 2: 286
channelling, 3: 384
Chantal, St Jeanne Françoise de, 15: 2149
chaos, 6: 754
in Babylonian mythology, see Tiamat
in Genesis, 4: 475
in Sumerian mythology, see Zu water or sea and, 2: 189, 5: 630, 8: 1066, 20: 2775
Charcot, Jean Martin (neurologist), Lourdes and Asclepios compared by, 13: 1748
Chariot (Tarot card), 18: 2570, 2570
charismatic movement (Christianity),

17: 2435
Charites (Greek mythology), see Graces
Charlemagne, 9: 1203, 20: 2811 legendary ring of his mistress, 16: 2207 sword of (Joyeuse), 18: 2526
Charles II:
oak and, 14: 1903
charm, 3: 385, 18: 2508-9
Ashanti, 1: 128
hare's foot as, 5: 589, 8: 1116
in love magic, 11: 1557-9
sleep induced by, 17: 2401-2 vervain and, 19: 2728
see also amulet; cimaruta; hand of glory; milpreve
Charmouth (Dorset), haunted house at, 5: 628
Charon (Greek mythology), 3: 385, 11: 1505
Charta Borgiana (magical papyrus), 12: 1591
Chartres Cathedral, 16: 2186
Charun (Etruscan god), 3: 385, 6: 782
Chaudron, Michelle (witch), 15: 2082
Chelmsford (Essex), witches and, 5: 689, 691-2, 693
see also Francis, Elizabeth Cherokee Indians, 14: 1884
cherub, cherubim, 3: 385, 20: 2807
in the Old Testament, 1: 101
chess, 7: 977
Chester, mystery play cycle of, 13: 1804, 1805, 1806
Cheyenne Indians, 8: 1069, 1072
Chi, 3: 386
in Feng-shui, 6: 852
Chichen Itza, 12: 1672
chicken:
in augury, 2: 162
as oracle among the Azande, 7: 880
wishbone of, 8: 1051
see also cock
chicory, 9: 1183, 1185
Childermas (feast of the Holy Innocents), 4: 547 child prodigies, 16: 2174-5
Children of God, see Walworth Jumpers
Children of Light (associates of George Fox), 7: 947
Children of the Resurrection (Agapemonites), 15: 2092
children's games, 3: 387-90, 19: 2698
death and, 3: 387, 4: 539
fertility as theme of, 3: 390
marriage and, 3: 387, 390
singing games, dance origin of, 3: 351
soul and, 3: 390
chimaera, 3: 390-1
chimney, 9: 1165
Chimu culture (Peru), 10: 1324, 1326-7
China, 3: 392-400
alchemy in, 1: 75, 6: 749
altars in, 1: 93
ancestor worship in, 3: 393, 395, 4: 513
astrology in, 3: 401-2
Buddhism in, 3: 299, 300, 393, 395, 399, 4: 558, 11: 1549, 16: 2174
see also Zen Buddhism
burial in:
shadow and, 17: 2348
Shang dynasty, 4: 511
Communism in, 3: 399-400, 19: 2722
couvade in, 10: 1312
crane in, 4: 470
creation myths in, 4: 476, 5: 717
demons in, 3: 398
dragon in, 5: 631, 633-5, 15: 2036
eclipses and, 5: 708
divination in, see I Ching eclipses in, 5: 708, 18: 2505
elements, five, theory of the, 3: 393, 6: 743
emperor of, 11: 1480
fate, beliefs concerning, 6: 843
four spiritual creatures of, 5: 633, 15: 2036
see also dragon above; phoenix below; unicorn below
gods of, 3: 392, 393, 400, 14: 1983, 18: 2564
guardian spirit of, 8: 1094
hell, beliefs concerning, 3: 398, 399, 4: 558
horse in, 1: 104
Islam in, 3: 399
jade in, 10: 1382, 1383, 1384
lotus in, 11: 1549
man view of, 12: 1612
medicine in, 3: 399
see also acupuncture
meditation in, 12: 1678
messianic movements in, 3: 399
see also Taiping rebellion
owl in, 14: 1949
peacock in, 14: 1998
philosophers of, see Confucius; Lao Tze; Tsou Yen
phoenix in, 5: 633, 6: 851, 15: 2034-5, 2036
religions of, see Buddhism above; Confucianism; gods above; joss-stick; Tao secret societies of, 3; 397, 399, 18: 2565, 19: 2640 shadow in, at funerals, 17: 2348
soul, beliefs concerning, 3: 395, 396
thunderbird in, 19: 2618
Tibet and, 19: 2619, 2624
tortoise in, 5: 633, 15: 2036
unicorn (ki-lin) in, 5: 633, 15: 2036, 19: 2690
universe, Chinese view of, 12: 1612
see also Yin and Yang
see also Fo-hi; Peking Chinese astrology, 3: 401-2
Chintamani (wishing-gem), 10: 1416
Chippewa (Ojibway; Algonquin Indian tribe), 1: 83, 14: 1884
chi-rho monogram (Christian symbol), 4: 490
chiromancy, see palmistry
Chiron (centaur), 3: 379
Asclepios and, 8: 1150, 1151
betony and, 9: 1182
centaury and, 9: 1183
Choctaw Indians, 14: 1884
cholera, origin of the name, 6: 743
chorea, convulsive, St Vitus and, 4: 540 chosen people, see election
Choukoutien caves (China), 3: 370, 4: 510
Chrétien de Troyes (French poet):
Arthurian legend and, 1: 123
Camelot, 3: 330
Gawain, 7: 982
Grail, 8: 1061-2, 1065
Lancelot, 11: 1498
Morgan le Fay, 13: 1768
Perceval (Parsifal), 8: 1061, 14: 1988-9
Christ, meaning of the word, 3: 404, 14: 1914
Jesus Christ, see Jesus
Christadelphians, 6: 761, 17: 2329
Christian Israelites (Southcottian sect), 10: 2646
Christianity, 3: 403-13
absurdity of, as reason for belief, 11: 1576
in Africa, see Africa
altars in, 1: 92-3, 17: 2428
angels in, 1: 100-2
see also guardian spirits below
Apollonius of Tyana and, 1: 116
architecture of, 16: 2183, 2184, 2186, 2186, 2192
cathedrals, see Canterbury; Chartres; Kremlin, Cathedral of the Assumption in; St Peter's, Rome; Salisbury
churches facing east, 5: 588
burial and, 3: 312-13, 317
bells and, 2: 213
in Sicily, 3: 316
see also catacombs
Cabala and, 3: 326-7
Celtic, 3: 333, 336
chastity, celibacy and, 3: 410, 411, 17: 2332
Constantine and, 3: 408
creation as expression of the will of God in, 8: 1067 cross in, see cross, Christian
death and, 4: 559, 6: 791-2
see also dance of death
dying god myth and, 5: 679-80
election and, 6: 738, 740-1
end of the world in, 6: 753, 756-9
see also Second Coming esoteric, 6: 768-9
eternal return myth contrasted with, 6: 770-71
evil and, 6: 791-2
see also Devil
exorcism and, see exorcism, Christian
fasting and, 6: 841
first man myth of, see Adam
Good Shepherd symbol in, 8: 1049
guardian spirits and, 8: 1094, 12: 1621
see also angels
heaven and, see paradise
heresy in, see heresy, Christian
Hinduism and, 9: 1218, 16: 2186, 2188
history and, 19: 2630 iconography in, 9: 1289, 1290-3
Iconoclastic Controversy, 3: 410, 9: 1293
incense and, 10: 1328
Jerusalem and, see Jerusalem
Judaism and, 3: 404, 5: 703-4
judgement of the dead in, 11: 1454
see also Last Judgement
life after death, beliefs concerning, see hell; immortality; judgement of the dead; limbo; paradise; purgatory; refrigerium
love feast of, see agape man, Christian view of, 12: 1610
marriage and, 3: 408
as a sacrament, 16: 2258, 2259-60
martyrs of, see martyrs
meditation and, 12: 1679-80
missionaries of, see missionaries
monasticism in, 3: 410-11
mountains and, 13: 1784
music and, 13: 1793-4
Mystery religions of Rome and, 13: 1811
St Paul and, 14: 1996-7
mysticism in, see mysticism Neoplatonist influence on, 13: 1842
in New Zealand, 12: 1632-3
omniscience of God in, 15: 2080 opus anglicanum and, 14: 1925
origins of, 3: 404, 5: 703-4
Jesus and, 10: 1406-12
St Paul and, 3: 407, 6: 740-1, 10: 1409-10, 14: 1994-6
palm tree and, 14: 1964
peyote cults and, 14: 2016 pilgrimage and, see pilgrimage predestination in, see predestination and free will
priests in, 15: 2089
prophecy and, 15: 2099-100
reincarnation and, 16: 2172
relics and, 5: 594-5, 16: 2177-9
Renaissance and, 16: 2190-1
resurrection in, 12: 1610 see also Jesus, resurrection of revelation and, 16: 2197-8
see also Revelation, book of

rose and, 16: 2237
sacraments in, 16: 2257-60
see also baptism; Extreme Unction; marriage; Mass, penance
sacrifice and, 16: 2266
salvation of the individual in, 15: 2080
science and, 3: 413
separation of Eastern (Byzantine) and Western (Roman) churches, 3: 411 sin and, see sin
soul in, 10: 1315-16, 12: 1610
see also life after death above; mysticism
in Southeast Asia, 17: 2428
spiritual healing and, see faith healing
symbolism in, 18: 2536
animals, 1: 106-7, 16: 2279
ass, 1: 131
fish, 7: 906, 908
lion, 1: 106, 9: 1292, 11: 1536, 16: 2279
mouse, 16: 2279
pig, 16: 2279
stag, 18: 2475
unicorn, 19: 2689
birds:
cock, 3: 426
crow, 18: 2536
dove, see dove, in Christian symbolism
peacock, 14: 2000
pelican, 2: 227, 14: 2002
evangelists, symbols of, 9: 1292
Good Shepherd, 8: 1049, 17: 2357, 18: 2534
heart, 9: 1160
key, 18: 2534
the Mass, 18: 2534
net, 13: 1844, 18: 2534
ship, 17: 2363
white (colour), 7: 973, 20: 2791
see also anchor; chi-rho, crook; hand of God; IHS war, Christian attitudes to, 3: 408, 410
see also crusade
see also Antichrist; Aquinas; Augustine, St; Bible; Christmas; creed; Dead Sea Scrolls; Easter; Epiphany; friars; grace; Grail; Holy Ghost; Jesus; Mary, the Virgin; miracles; monasticism, Christian; papacy; Paul, St; Pentecost; sabbath (Christian); saints, Christian; speaking in tongues; Trinity; Whitsun
see also Anabaptists; Arnoldites; Camisards; Christadelphians; Christian Science; Cokelers; convulsionaries; Copts; Divine Principles; Doukhobors; Dunkers; Ebionites; Elkesaites; Exclusive Brethren; Holiness movement; Huguenots; Hutterian Brethren; Irving, Edward; Jehovah's Witnesses; Jezreel, James Jershom; Maronites; Melchiorites; Methodism; Peculiar People; Pentecostalist movement; Pietism; Plymouth Brethren; Protestantism; Quakers; Quietism; Reformation; Roman Catholic Church; Shakers; Taborites; Walworth Jumpers; wandering bishops
Christian Science, 3: 414-17
animal magnetism and, 3: 414, 416
Mrs Eddy and, 3: 414-17, 5: 715-16
healing and, 3: 414, 416, 5: 715, 716
P. P. Quimby and, 13: 1861-2
Christmas, 3: 418-21, 20: 2811
formerly called Midwinter Feast, 3: 418
holly and, 9: 1229
ivy and, 9: 1229
laurel and, 11: 1511
mistletoe and, 3: 419, 13: 1750
origins of, 3: 418
see also carol; Christmas tree; Lord of Misrule; mummers; plough plays; Saturnalia; Twelfth Night; Yule Christmas, Annie, 1: 63
Christmas tree, 3: 419, 420, 7: 892
Christopher, St, 14: 1964
Christ's Church of the Golden Rule, 12: 1625
chrysolite, sun associated with, 10: 1413
chthonian deities, 5: 688
Hades as, 15: 2054
serpents and, 5: 688, 17: 2336-7, 2340
church ales, 5: 699
Church of the Ark of the Covenant (Clapton, London), 12: 1724, 15: 2092
see also Prince, Henry James
Church of the Carmel (sect), 2: 206
Church of the Cherubim and Seraphim (West Africa), 4: 445, 5: 713
Church of God of Prophecy, 9: 1231
Church of God (Tomlinson), 9: 1231
Church of the Lord, Aladura, 5: 713
Church of the Nazarene (Holiness sect), 9: 1228
Churchward, Colonel James, Mu and, 11: 1514-15
churinga (Australia), 19: 2642, 2642
Ciaran, St, 16: 2278
ciborium (container of the host), 8: 1059
Grail as, 8: 1059, 1060
cicada, 10: 1347
cicatrization, 18: 2576, 2580-1
in Africa,
Bushmen, 3: 320
Chad, 10: 1342
Ibo, 4: 1278-9
Kikuyu, 11: 1471
Sudan, 13: 1796
in Australia, 2: 166, 18: 2581
in Brazil, 18: 2581
Cicero, on divination, 5: 599
cimaruta (charm), 5: 594
Cinderella, 7: 923, 20: 2828
cinema, see films
cinnamon, 4: 459
cinquefoil, creeping (five leaf grass), 9: 1183-4, 15: 2048
Cinteotl (Mexican god), 1: 185
ciphers, John Dee and, 4: 560
Circe, 3: 422
Circe's Plant, see mandrake
circle, 3: 422-3
in Celtic cross, 4: 491
see also cycles of time; magic circle; mandala; megalithic mysteries; ourobouros; ring; spheres; stone circles circle dances, see carole; ring dances circumcision, 13: 1797-8
in Africa, 16: 2210-11, 2212-13
Azande, 2: 179
Bushmen, 3: 320
Kikuyu, 11: 1471-72
Masai, 12: 1654
in Judaism, 10: 1432
psychoanalytical explanation of, 16: 2212
circumpolar stars, in the Pyramid Texts, 6: 734 city, symbolism of the, 11: 1504
Jerusalem, 10: 1404
Civil War, English:
adventist groups among Puritans, 17: 2328-9
portents and marvels associated with, 6: 840
witchcraft and, 6: 840
clairaudience, 3: 424
clairvoyance, 3: 424, 6: 803, 806-9
E. Osty and, 15: 2108
Charles Richet and, 15: 2118
telepathy and, 6: 805
see also psychometry
Clarke, Elizabeth (witch), 5: 691
Clark-Kennedy, Dr A. E, 6: 833
Claros, oracle of Apollo at, 14: 1931-2
Claver, St Peter, 16: 2270
Clay, Cassius, see Ali, Muhammad
cledonomancy (divination by chance happenings), 5: 602
Clement, St, 13: 1853, 17: 2406, 2406
Cleopatra, 14: 2001, 20: 2831
cleromancy (divination by dice, etc.), 5: 602
see also dice
Clifton Hampden (Oxfordshire), ghost at, 8: 1131
Climax (Climacus), St John, 11: 1455
Clio (Muse of history), 18: 1789
Closed Brethren see Exclusive Brethren clothes, see costume
Clotho (Greek mythology), 6: 842
Cloud of Unknowing*, 3: 425
clove, 4: 492
clover, 3: 425, 15: 2050
Clovis (French king), 14: 1914
Clyack (Scottish feast), 16: 2208
clyack chief (corn sheaf), 4: 456
Clymer, Dr R. Swinburne (writer on Rosicrucianism), 16: 2247
Clytemnestra, 7: 969-70
Cnossus (Knossos, Crete), 7: 933
excavation of, by Sir Arthur Evans, 8: 1075 labyrinth at, 2: 176, 9: 1180, 12: 1674-5
coal, 3: 425
Coatlicue (Aztec goddess), 2: 187, 5: 688, 19: 2720
coca (drug), 5: 652 cocaine, Freud and, 5: 652
Cochin Jews (Indian Jews), 14: 1933
cock (bird), 3: 426
in Christian symbolism, 3: 426
St Colman and, 16: 2278
Dionysus and, 18: 2532
divination by (alectromancy), 14: 1922
in Ethiopia, 6: 776
Leto and, 20: 2864
at Ragnarok, 11: 2292
Slavs and, 17: 2400
sun and, 3: 426
Zeus and, 20: 2864
see also chicken
cockchafer (insect), 10: 1345
cock-fighting, 3: 426
Cockie, Isobel (witch), 1: 47
'cocking a snook', 7: 997
cockle-shell (scallop-shell; pilgrims' emblem), 3: 427
cockroach, 3: 427
Cody, William Frederick, see 'Buffalo Bill'
coffins:
Egyptian, 2: 258-9, 6: 728-9, 13: 1788
see also Coffin Texts
Parthian, 14: 1991
Coffin Texts (Egypt), 2: 257, 258-61, 4: 557-8, 11: 1448-9
Cokelers (Society of Dependants; Puritanical sect), 3: 427
Colas, Aristide (witch), 7: 961 Coleridge, Samuel Taylor, 3: 428-9
on dreams, 3: 429
on the imagination, 3: 429
laudanum taken by, 5: 651
as Platonist, 3: 428-9
on reason, 3: 429
Thomas Taylor and, 18: 2584
collective unconscious, 3: 429-30, 11: 1457
Yeats and, 20: 2844
Colman, St, 16: 2278
colobrium (Christian iconography), 19: 2687
Colossians, St Paul's epistles to, 14: 1994 colours, 3: 430-2
metals associated with, 4: 459

planets associated with, 4: 459
see also black; blue; green; white; yellow colour therapy, 4: 439
Columba St, 16: 2270
crane and, 4: 470
St John's wort and, 16: 2269
St Ronan buried by, 3: 303
Columban, St, 16: 2276
Columbus, Christopher, 2: 282
eclipse and, 5: 708
Columcille, St, oak wood of Derry saved by, 14: 1902
Comanche Indians, 8: 1069, 1072
comets, 14: 1921, 1923
in augury, 2: 162
commendation ninepence, 11: 1560
Communism, Chinese, 3: 399-400, 19: 2722
communistic religious movements, 4: 440-5
see also Anabaptists; Shakers; Taborites; Walworth Jumpers Community for Germanic Beliefs, 13: 1838
Community of the Truly Inspired, see Amana Society comparative religion, 4: 445
Compendium Maleficarum (Guazzo), 1: 46, 9: 1275, 10: 1379, 13: 1837, 15: 2111, 16: 2255, 2255, 20: 2815
Compitalia (Roman festival), 11: 1510 complex (psychology), 11: 1456
Compostela (Spain), pilgrimage to shrine of St James at, 3: 427 concentration:
meditation distinguished from, 12: 1677
in yoga, see dharana
Condwiramurs (Arthurian legend), 14: 1990 confession, see sin, confession of confetti, 12: 1639
confirmation (Christian sacrament), 16: 2258, 2259
Confucianism, 3: 393-5
Confucius (Kung Fu-tze), 3: 393, 4: 445, 18: 2562, 2563
on Lao Tze, 18: 2562
see also Confucianism
Congo, 4: 446-52
divination in, 4: 450
gods of, 4: 449-50
initiation rites in, 4: 448-9
life after death, belief in, 4: 450
magic in, 4: 452
myth of origin of death, 4: 557
secret societies in, 4: 452
spirits and ghosts in, 4: 450
taboo in, 18: 2549
witches and 'masters' in, 4: 452
Conn of the Hundred Battles (Irish hero), 8: 1062, 18: 2565
Conselheiro, Antonio ('the Counsellor', Antonio Maciel), 4: 453
Constantine (Roman emperor), 3: 408, 4: 490
Constantinople:
First Council of (381 AD), 9: 1191
Second Council of (553 AD), 16: 2172
constellations, see Dolphin; Great Bear; Orion; Pleiades; zodiac contagious magic, Frazer's use of term, 5: 590-1, 10: 1309
contemplation,
meditation distinguished from, 3: 425
contrapas (Spanish dance), 3: 351 control (Spiritualism), 12: 1683
Convulsionaries (Jansenist group), 4: 454
dancing mania and, 4: 540
see also Paris, François de Conway Bay (Wales), lost land legend of, see Tyno Helig
Cook, Florence (medium), Sir William Crookes and, 4: 486
Cook, Captain James, death of, 15: 2070
Cook Islands (Polynesia), 15: 2070, 2072
Coombe, George (phrenologist), 15: 2037
Coombe Tennant, Mrs Charles, see Willett, Mrs
Cooper, Joe (statistics in astrology), 1: 144
Copernican theory, Bruno and, 2: 288
Copertino, Joseph of, see Joseph Mary Desu, St
copper (metal), 4: 459
Copts, Coptic Christianity, 3: 409, 15: 2085
Egyptian influence on, 6: 730, 734
coral, 10: 1416
Coraule (Swiss dance), 3: 351
Corinthians, St Paul's epistles to, 14: 1994, 1996
Cormelian (giant), 10: 1382
corn (wheat), 4: 455-6
dogs and, 5: 611
in Egyptian tombs, see corn-mummies
Eleusis and, 6: 747, 748
Greek goddess of, see Demeter
hare and, 8: 1116
last sheaf of, 4: 455, 456, 8: 1120-1, 19: 2722
Roman goddess of, see Ceres see also corn-springs; maize
corn dolly (corn sheaf), 4: 455, 456, 8: 1123, 20: 2792
Cornely, St, 2: 285
corn-mummies (Egypt), 19: 2719-20 corn-springs (levants), 18: 2472
cornucopia, 4: 456
Cornwall, 4: 457-8
corn dolly (neck) in, 4: 456
fairies of, 4: 457, 6: 832
mines of, 4: 457
mystery plays in, 13: 1805
rocking stones (logans) of, 4: 56-8
standing stones of, 4: 458, 458, 18: 2489
wells in, 18: 2472-73
witches and, 4: 458
see also Helston furry dance; Lyonesse; Mark (king of Cornwall); Padstow Old Hoss; St Michael's Mount coródes (Belgian dance), 3: 351
coronation:
anointing and, 11: 1480, 14: 1914
of King Arthur (15th cent. MS), 16: 2216
crown and, 4: 504
oath, 14: 1906
sceptre and, 20: 2767
Coronis (nymph), Apollo and, 4: 496, 8: 1150
corposant, see St Elmo's Fire corpse candle, see will-o'-the-wisp corpse light, see will-o'-the-wisp
corpses:
divination by (necromancy), 13: 1834-7
healing powers of, 5: 595
relics from, 16: 2177-8
on a ship, 17: 2365
see also dried bodies; hand of glory; mummification; vampire; zombies
Corpus Hermeticum*, 9: 1197-8
correspondences, 4: 459, 11: 1580-1
Cabala and, 4: 459
of colours, 4: 459
of days, 4: 459
of jewels, 10: 1412-16 land and sea, 7: 909
macrocosm/microcosm and, 11: 1573
of metals, 4: 459
of planets, 4: 459
see also forces; Law of Correspondences Corybantes (Greek mythology), 4: 459-60, 16: 2288
cosmetics, 4: 460
see also body painting; cicatrization; tattooing cosmic consciousness, 13: 1814-15 Cosmic Joker, 4: 461
see also Puck
Cosmic Memory (Akashic Records; occultism), 11: 1521
cosmic order:
Egyptian view of, see Maat in Zoroastrianism, see Truth
cosmogony, 4: 460
see also creation myths
cosmos, see universe
Costa Rica, 13: 1736-7
costume, clothes, dress, robes, 4: 462-6, 16: 2221
amuletic, Zoroastrian, 18: 2550-1
dance and, 4: 536
Easter and, 5: 699
magical associations of, 4: 463-4
North American Indians and, 14: 1882
nudity and, 4: 464
priestly, 4: 464-6 reasons for wearing, 4: 462-5
royal, 4: 465
see also cosmetics; garter; head-dress; stockings
Cotta, John (writer on witchcraft), 5: 615, 13: 1836
Coubertin, Baron Pierre de, modern Olympic Games and, 7: 978
Coulomb, Mme, Mme Blavatsky and, 2: 247 councils of the church, see Chalcedon; Constantinople; Nicaea; Toledo; Trent; Vienna
'Counsellor, the' (Brazil), see Conselheiro, Antonio
counter-charm, 4: 466
Court de Gebelin, on the Tarot, 18: 2573
couvade (birth custom):
in China, 10: 1312
coven (of witches), 4: 467, 19: 2607
in modern witchcraft, 13: 1755-6
Coventry:
Lady Godiva and, 8: 1034
mystery play cycle of, 13: 1804, 1806
cow, 4: 468-9
in Egypt:
Hathor as, 1: 104, 2: 261, 4: 468, 468, 6: 732
Isis and, 10: 1364
Nut as, 4: 468
Hera and, 9: 1180
in India, 4: 468-9, 9: 1208
in Scandinavian mythology, see Audumulla
cowrie shell:
as fertility amulet, 4: 463
Cox, Edward, W. Stainton Moses and, 12: 1687
Cox, Julian (witch), 2: 287, 17: 2414
Coyote (trickster), 4: 469, 5: 668, 8: 1069, 15: 2132, 19: 2663, 2664, 2665
crab, 4: 469
in Tarot card, see Moon (Tarot card)
zodiac sign, see Cancer
Craik, Henry (of Plymouth Brethren), 6: 797 cramignon (Belgian dance), 3: 351
cramp-rings, 4: 469, 16: 2206, 2207
Crandon, Margery (medium), 12: 1687, 15: 2107, 2109
crane (bird), 4: 470
Celts and, 3: 378, 4: 470
in China, 4: 470
dance of, 4: 470
sun and, 4: 470

Crawford, Dr W. J., Kathleen Goligher and, 12: 1687
creation:
as expression of will of God, 8: 1067
creation myths, 4: 471-6
African, 1: 61
Ashanti, 1: 127
Australian, 2: 277, 4: 476
Babylonian, see Enuma elish
birds in, 2: 228
Cabalist, see Cabala, creation/emanation in central Asian, 7: 967-8
Chinese, 4: 476, 5: 717
eggs in, 2: 227-8, 5: 717, 719, 7: 886
Egyptian, 2: 195, 4: 471-2, 5: 717, 6: 814-15, 7: 967, 12: 1608, 13: 1823
end of the world and, 6: 753-60
Etruscan, 6: 781
Finnish, 7: 886
frogs in, 7: 967-8
giants in, 8: 1015, 1017
Ymir, 8: 1017, 16: 2290
Greek, 1: 111, 4: 476
Prometheus and, 15: 2095, 2095, 2096
see also Deucalion and Pyrrha
Gypsy, 8: 1101-2
Hittite, 9: 1224
Indian, 3: 354, 4: 476, 5: 717, 20: 2746
Inuit, lack of, 10: 1351
Japanese, see Shinto below
Jewish, 4: 475-6
Lapp, 11: 1509
Mexican, 2: 182-5, 4: 476
Micronesian, 15: 2072
North American Indian, 14: 1883
Algonquin, 1: 83
Kwakiutl, 14: 1954
Navaho, 13: 1783, 1825
trickster in, 19: 2664
opposites in, 14: 1924
Peruvian, see Viracocha
Polynesian, 15: 2070
Scandinavian, 8: 1017, 11: 1526, 16: 2290
Shinto, 17: 2361
sky and earth in:
Egypt, 4: 472
Greece, 17: 2391
Polynesia, 15: 2070
Sumer, 5: 687
Sumerian, 4: 473-4, 5: 687, 12: 1717
trickster in, 19: 2664
two types of, distinguished, 4: 460, 471
water in, 2: 195, 4: 471, 473, 474
Zoroastrian, 14: 1912, 20: 2870, 2880
see also eternal return; first man
creed (Christianity), 4: 476
Cree Indians, 1: 83, 8: 1072
Creek Indians, 14: 1884
creeping to the Cross, see Veneration of the Cross
cremation, 4: 477-9
burial and, 4: 477
in India, 7: 896
see also suttee
crescent, 4: 480
Crete, 4: 480-3
Apollo and, 8: 1079
Atlantis and, 2: 158
bear in, 14: 1899-1900
birds in, 8: 1079
bull in, 3: 305, 307-9, 307, 4: 482, 483, 8: 1079, 9: 1246
see also Minotaur
burial in, 4: 482, 512
cave sanctuaries of, 3: 370, 4: 483
dance in, 4: 482
dying god in, 8: 1075
goddess of, 4: 480, 8: 1075, 1076-7, 1079, 9: 1289
Greece and, 4: 483, 8: 1074-5, 1076-80, 20: 2862-4
Hera and, 4: 480, 9: 1179-80
Hermes and, 9: 1196
horns in, 9: 1246, 19: 2602
initiation in, 20: 2862
labyrinth in, see Cnossus, Leto and, 8: 1079, 20: 2864
lily in, 11: 1532
marriage of sun and moon in, 9: 1180
moon in, 3: 317, 4: 555, 9: 1180 Mycenae and, see Greece above
snake in, 4: 482, 483, 8: 1079
Zeus born in, 3: 370, 4: 460, 8: 1075, 14: 1900, 16: 2288, 20: 2867
see also Cnossus; Curetes; double axe; Minos cricket (insect), 10: 1347
in Borneo, 2: 263
Crockett, Davy, 14: 1950-1, 19: 2693, 2694, 2695
crocodile:
in Egypt, see Sebek; Taurt
in New Guinea shape-shifting myth, 17: 2356
see also alligator
Cromwell, Oliver, 3: 412, 6: 840
Cronus (Greek god), 4: 484-5, 5: 687
Golden Age myth and, 4: 484, 14: 1980, 19: 2630
Saturn and, 16: 2285
Uranus and, 1: 111, 4: 484, 19: 2699
crook, shepherd's, as Christian symbol, 4: 485
Crookes, Sir William, 4: 485-6
D. D. Home and, 4: 485, 9: 1233, 12: 1687
Spiritualism investigated by, 4: 485-6, 15: 2105
crop circles, 4: 487-8
cross, 4: 489-92
Christian, 4: 490-2
of St Andrew, 13: 1854
Bogomils and, 2: 256
Celtic, 3: 372, 375, 4: 491
of Jesus, see Crucifixion; Judgement of the Cross; stations of the cross; True Cross; Veneration of the Cross
symbolism of, 18: 2536
see also T-shaped cross
and the four directions, as symbol of the world, 18: 2536
pre-Christian, 4: 490
prehistoric, 4: 490
rose and, see Rose Cross
Touareg and, 19: 2645
see also swastika
crossbill (bird), Crown of Thorns and, 18: 2514
crossbow, in Abbots Bromley horn dance, 9: 1250
cross-correspondences, 2: 174-5, 4: 493-4, 12: 1686, 15: 2107, 20: 2804
'crossing the line' (rite of passage), 16: 2210
crossroads, 3: 315, 4: 495
Croton (Greek city), Sybaris and, 17: 2334
crow, 4: 496-7
Apollo and, 4: 496
in augury, 1: 162, 4: 497
Cu Chulainn and, 4: 497
owl and, 4: 497
raven and, 4: 496-7
storms and, 4: 496
as witch's familiar, 6: 838
Crow Indians, 19: 2640, 2663
Crowley, Aleister, 4: 498-503, 11: 1583-4, 13: 1758, 16: 2176
Beelzebub invoked by, 2: 211
Cabala and, 3: 327, 4: 459
at Cefalu, 4: 500-1
Choronzon summoned by, 16: 2219
Christianity and, 4: 499, 502, 16: 2283
episcopal status of, 20: 2768-9
Dion Fortune and, 7: 940
Gnostic Catholic Mass of, 20: 2757
God defined by, 11: 1581
Golden Dawn and, 4: 499-500, 8: 1044-5
as the Great Beast 666, 4: 499
Iao (name), his comments on, 13: 1824
Liber Samekh, ritual of, 10: 1318-19
magic defined by, 11: 1578
Mathers and, 2: 211, 4: 499-500, 8: 1044-5
names of his daughter, 13: 1822
Victor Neuburg and, 17: 2345-6, 19: 2651
Papus and, 14: 1974
Theodor Reuss and, 4: 500-1, 20: 2768
Sacred Magic of Abra-Melin and, 16: 2260
Serpent of Wisdom and Tree of Life drawn by, 16: 2220
sexual magic and, 4: 500-1, 8: 1046, 15: 2078, 17: 2345-6
Tarot and, 4: 502-3
trance and, 19: 2650-1
Wagner and, 20: 2757, 2758-9
weapons, magical, listed by, 16: 2218
crown, 4: 504, 8: 1145-6
see also coronation, Crown of Thorns, Iron Crown of Lombardy Crown of Thorns (of Jesus), 8: 1134, 1135, 18: 2514 stigmatization in the form of, 18: 2482, 2483
crozier, 4: 485
Crucifixion (of Jesus), 4: 492, 9: 1292-3
by Antonello da Messina, 18: 2532
catacombs, not depicted in, 9: 1292 clothed and unclothed representations of, 19: 2687
by Dali, 10: 1427
magpies in legend of, 12: 1598
St Paul on, 10: 1410, 14: 1997
by Raphael, 4: 492
reasons for, 3: 405
relics of, see True Cross
in 16th cent. woodcut, 5: 680
skull in representations of, 3: 904
swallows in legends of, 12: 1598, 18: 2514
tree as the cross, 4: 492
boxwood, 18: 2551
cedar, 14: 1920, 1964, 18: 2551
cypress, 4: 524, 14: 1920, 1964
elder, 6: 737
mistletoe, 13: 1750
oak, 18: 2551
olive, 14: 1920, 1964
palm, 14: 1920, 1964
pine, 18: 2551
rowan, 16: 2247
Tree of Life, 4: 492, 12: 1609
see also Crown of Thorns; deposition from the cross; Pontius Pilate; Wandering Jew crucifixion (of persons other than Jesus):
St Andrew, 13: 1854
St Peter, 13: 1855
St Uncumber, 19: 2687
Zealot leaders, 20: 2852-3
crusade, 4: 504
Islamic, see jihad
Knights Templar and, 11: 1482-3
the People's Crusade (1076), 15: 2041
sword and, 18: 2526, 2530
crux ansata,* 4: 490 crux commissa, see T-shaped cross crux decussata, see X-shaped cross crux immissa, see Latin cross crux quadrata, see Greek cross crystal-gazing see clairvoyance; scrying

crystal therapy, 4: 505
Cu Chulainn (Celtic hero), 4: 506-7
cauldron of Mider and, 3: 363
dog and, 4: 507
Finn compared with, 7: 888
Lugh and, 11: 1541
spear of, 4: 506
as type of the Celtic hero, 4: 506
cuckoo, 4: 507-8, 19: 2630
wryneck and, 20: 2839
Culhwch and Olwen (Mabinogion), 7: 890, 8: 1059-60, 11: 1569, 1570, 1572
Cullenden, Rose (witch), 5: 692
Culpeper, Nicolas, 9: 1180
on basil, 9: 1182
on betony, 9: 1182
cult of the dead, 4: 509-16
in Brazil, 2: 272-3, 4: 510, 515
in Egypt, 2: 197, 4: 511, 7: 933
see also ankh; Book of the Dead; Coffin Texts; corn-mummies; mummification; Pyramid Texts; ushabti
fairies and, 6: 832
harvest and, 8: 1121-2
in Papua, 4: 509
in Peru, 10: 1323
in Phoenicia, 18: 2544
prehistoric, 4: 510-11
Slavs and, 17: 2400
in Uganda, cursing and, 4: 521
see also ancestor worship; life after death; sin eater
cult hero:
Australian, 2: 168-9
Brazilian, see Maira
Celtic, see Gwydion
North American Indian (raven), 4: 496
Algonquin, see Kuloskap
Prometheus as, 15: 2095
of the Shilluk (Nyikango), 13: 1870
Siberian, 4: 496
Cumae, Sibyl of, 5: 597, 17: 2368-9
Cumall (Umall; Irish legend), 7: 889
Cummins, Geraldine, 2: 171, 20: 2804
cunning men, 5: 690-1, 693, 8: 1109, 20: 2793
see also Browning, Robert cup, 4: 516
see also Grail
Cupid (Amor; Roman god), 4: 516, 6: 766-7
Apollo and, 6: 767
Eros identified with, 4: 516, 6: 766
Psyche and, 6: 766, 767, 15: 2105, 16: 2231
Venus and, 6: 767
curandera (Mexican wise woman), 13: 1740
Curé of Ars (St Jean-Marie-Baptiste Vianney), 4: 517-19, 15: 2064 spontaneous flight of the host and, 18: 2486
cures, magical, see healing
Curetes (Greek mythology), 4: 459-60, 480, 11: 1514
Curran, Mrs J.H., 2: 171, 15: 2108
curse, 4: 519-22
cursing well of St Aelian, 4: 521, 18: 2473-5
as grave-protection, 4: 521
in Greece, 4: 521-2
Kikuyu and, 11: 1471
lead and, 11: 1513
in magical papyri, 12: 1592
words sanctified by Christianity used as, 15: 2111 see also Mass, in magic
see also excommunication
Cuthbert, St, 8: 1146
Cutlerites (Mormon sect), 13: 1772
Cuzco (Peru), 10: 1323, 1324, 1325, 18: 2494
Cybebe (Lydian goddess), 4: 523
Cybele (goddess), 4: 523
Agdistis and, 4: 523
Attis and, 2: 161, 4: 523, 5: 678, 7: 891, 19: 2721
bull and, 2: 196, 5: 678, 18: 2582
as the Great Mother, 4: 523, 5: 678, 13: 1780 keys of the earth held by, 20: 2812
pine tree sacred to, 7: 891
prostitution and, 15: 2104
Rhea identified with, 4: 459
Roman cult of, 4: 523, 5: 678, 13: 1780 cycles of time, 6: 770-1, 19: 2630-1
Aztecs and, 2: 182
in Eastern thought:
India, 19: 2630
Etruscans and, 6: 781
in Greece, 19: 2631
see also seasons
cyclopean buildings, giants and, 8: 1017
Cyclops, 4: 524, 6: 814
cylicomancy (method of scrying), 17: 2315
Cynon (Mabinogion), 9: 1248-9, 20: 2803
Cynopolis (Egypt), dogs and, 5: 607
cypress, 5: 524
cross of Jesus and, 4: 524, 14: 1920, 1964, 18: 2551
as symbol of Ohrmazd, 19: 2657
Cyprus, Aphrodite and, 1: 111, 113, 4: 459
Cyrene (Libya), faceless goddess from, 6: 824
Cyrus (king of Persia), 11: 1545

D

Da (Dahomean spirit), see Dan
Dactyls, Idaean (Greek mythology), 4: 460
Dadd, Richard, fairy paintings by, 6: 828, 15: 2127
Daedalus (Greek mythology), 3: 307, 9: 1180
see also Icarus, fall of Dagan (Phoenician god), see Dagon dagger, exorcizing, Tibetan, 20: 2795
Dagon (Dagan: Phoenician god):
as corn god, 15: 2030, 18: 2542
fish and, 7: 908, 8: 1146
Dahn, Felix (historical novelist), 13: 1838
Dahomey, 4: 524-6, 20: 2756
ancestor worship in, 4: 524-5
divination in, 4: 526
drumming to summon spirits in, 14: 1931
fetishes in, 6: 863
human sacrifice in, 4: 516
lizard myth of, 11: 1539
possession, spirit, in, 4: 524
serpent deity of (Dan), 4: 526, 17: 2337
Voodoo and, 4: 524, 19: 2664-5
Dakota Indians, 8: 1072, 14: 1883
Dalai Lama, 4: 527, 11: 1496, 1497, 1497, 16: 2176, 19: 2623, 2624
as incarnation of Avalokitesvara, 16: 2174
meaning of 'Dalai', 19: 2624
Damascius (Neoplatonist), 13: 1842
Damballa (Voodoo), 17: 2337
Dame Habonde (goddess of witches), 6: 785
Damian and Cosmas, SS, miracle of, facing title, 13
Damocles, sword of, 18: 2522
Dan (Da; Dahomean spirit), 4: 526, 17: 2337
Danaë, Zeus and, 17: 2394, 19: 2734
Dana o'Shee (Irish fairies), 6: 829, 830
Danby, William, builder of miniature Stonehenge, 5: 660
dance, 4: 528-37
in Africa, 1: 56, 57, 4: 529, 533, 534
Congo, 2: 449, 452
Nigeria, 4: 528
Zulu, 20: 2877, 2878, 2879
agriculture and, 4: 530-1 animal dances, 4: 530, 9: 1243
see also Abbots Bromley
Australian aborigines and, 2: 167, 10: 1309, 19: 2642
in Bali, 7: 997
in Brazil, 2: 274
chain and circle dances, see chain dances; ring dances costume in, 4: 536
crane dances, 4: 470
in Crete, 4: 482
dervishes and, see Mevlevi dervishes
fertility and, 9: 1250
see also Morris dances
gesture in, 4: 533
Hindu, 7: 997
in Greece, 3: 351
Dionysus and, 5: 584-6
healing dances, 4: 529-30, 537
horn dance, see Abbots Bromley
as hunting magic, 4: 530
in India, 7: 883, 997
in initiation rites, 4: 529, 529
madness and, 11: 1575
see also dancing mania
masks in, 4: 536, 12: 1656-65
maze and, 12: 1675
Muses and, 13: 1789
music and, 4: 535-6, 13: 1793
of North American Indians:
Algonquin, 1: 83, 84
Great Plains Indians, 8: 1070-1
Iroquois, 4: 530, 532, 10: 1361-2
Pueblo, 15: 2128-9, 2130-2, 2133, 2134
see also Ghost Dance
pattern in, 4: 533
Shakers and, 17: 2349
shamans and, 1: 83
Shiva and, 17: 2367
stilt dance, Nigerian, 4: 528
Sufis and, 18: 2496
see also Mevlevi dervishes war dance, African, 4: 534, 20: 2878
witches and, 10: 1380, 16: 2256
see also Corybantes; dance of death; May Day; Morris dances dance of death, 4: 538-9, 8: 1040
dancing dervishes, see Mevlevi dervishes dancing mania, 4: 539-40, 11: 1575
hysteria and, 4: 540
St John the Baptist and, 4: 539-40
tarantism and, 4: 540
St Vitus and, 4: 540
Daniel (Old Testament prophet), 4: 540-2, 541
angels and, 4: 542, 8: 1094
beast of Revelation and, 8: 1066
Dante Alighieri, 4: 542-4, 15: 2137
dantza khorda (Basque dance), 3: 351
dantza prima (Spanish dance), 3: 351
Danu (Anu; Celtic goddess), 3: 377
Daphne (nymph), Apollo and, 6: 767, 11: 1511, 1511
Darazi (Druze), 5: 665, 666
Darby, John Nelson (founder of the Exclusive Brethren), 6: 797-8, 798
Dardanus (Greek mythology), 7: 915
al-Darqawi, Arabi (Sufi), 18: 2498 Darius the Great (Persian king), 20: 2876 darkness:
cap of, (Greek myth), 15: 2054
evil and, 11: 1525-31
invisibility and, 10: 1356
see also black; night
Darling, Thomas (bewitched boy), 9: 1273
darshan (Hinduism), 12: 1599
Darwin, Charles, Sir William Crookes and, 4: 514-15
Das, Amar (Sikh leader), 17: 2371

Das Ram (Sikh leader), 17: 2371
Dashwood, Sir Francis, 12: 1690, 1691
Davenport, James (revivalist), 6: 764
Davenports (mediums), 4: 545-6
Davey, S. J., 15: 2106
David, King, tomb of, at Jerusalem, 15: 2042
David-Neel, Alexandra, 19: 2679
Davies, William, grave of, 2: 248
Davis, Andrew Jackson (seer), 12: 1711
Davy Jones, 4: 546
Dayananda (Hindu reformer), 9: 1218
Day of Judgement (Tarot card), see Judgement days, 4: 546-7
finger-nails cut on various, 7: 883
planets associated with, 4: 459, 546
see also Friday; Thursday; Tuesday; Sunday Dazhbog (Slav god), 17: 2396 dead, cult of the, see cult of the dead deadly nightshade (plant), 15: 2048, 2049-50
deadman's fingers (plant), see foxglove
Dead Sea Scrolls, 4: 548-53
on the angel of darkness, 4: 567
Christianity and, 4: 551, 5: 703
'Copper scroll', 4: 452
on the baptism of Jesus, 2:196
the Bible and, 4: 551
Essenes and, 4: 551, 553
Halakhic Letter, 4: 453
Judaism and, 4: 549-51
Temple scroll, 4: 452
death, 4: 554-9
in Africa, 1: 59, 4: 554-7
Bushmen, 3: 318
in Australia, 2: 170, 4: 516, 4: 556-7
in Buddhism, 4: 558
in children's games, 3: 387, 4: 539
Christianity and, 4: 559, 6: 791-2
dove and, 5: 622
in Egypt, 4: 557, 12: 1606-8
in Greece, 4: 559, 12: 1608
Hebrews and, 12: 1608
in Hinduism, 4: 558
house and, 9: 1261-2
initiation and, 10: 1337, 1343
Inuit and, 10: 1353-5
maze and, 12: 1674-5
in Mesopotamia, 4: 558, 12: 1608
night and, 13: 1868
North American Indians and, 4: 556, 557
in Oceania, 4: 555, 557, 12: 1697
origin of, 3: 317, 4: 554-8, 6: 790-4
African myths, 4: 554-8
Melanesian myths, 12: 1697
moon and, 3: 317, 4: 555
Polynesian myth, 4: 555
personified, 4: 557-9
as fourth horseman of the Apocalypse, 6: 756-7, 9: 1251, 16: 2197, 2199
as skeleton, 4: 554, 559
see also dance of death
rose and, 16: 2237-8
salt and, 16: 2282
in South America, 4: 554-5
Stoicism and, 6: 790
white and, 20: 2792
will-o-the-wisp as warning of, 20: 2805
willow and, 20: 2805-6
in Zoroastrianism, 4: 558, 14: 1912
see also burial; cult of the dead; dying god; judgement of the dead; immortality; life after death
Death (Tarot card), 5: 601, 18: 2571, 2571, 2607
death masks, 12: 1660-3
death wish (Freudian term), 7: 963
Deeker, Frank (medium), 15: 2109
Dee, John, 4: 559-62
and Enochian, 6: 760
scrying by, 4: 560-1, 13: 1749, 17: 2315
deer (animal), see stag
Defoe, Daniel, on the plague, 1: 48
Deianeira (wife of Hercules), 9: 1189, 17: 2342
Deir-el-Bahari (Egypt), see Hatshepsut, temple of deism, 4: 562, 13: 1744
déja vu*, 16: 2176
Dekanawida (Iroquois law-giver), 10: 1359-60
Delaage, Henri, 14: 1974
De la Warr, George, 15: 2151-2
Deleuze, J. P. F., 12: 1596
Delhi (India), as the centre of the earth, 13: 1828
del Paradiso, Venerable Domenica, 18: 2485
Delphi (Greece), 4: 562
Athene's temple at, 2: 154
Dionysus cult at (oreibasia), 5: 586-7
oracle of Apollo at, 1: 114, 4: 562, 14: 1930
as the centre of the earth, 13: 1828
Christianity and, 14: 1932
chthonian aspects of, 5: 688
colonizers and, 1: 115
Dodona and, 14: 1931
foundation of, 1: 114, 5: 614
hawk and, 8: 1133
laurel and, 11: 1511, 19: 2649
omphalos at, 1: 114, 13: 1828
priestess of (Pythia), 1: 114, 17: 2337
python and, 1: 114, 17: 2337 rock of the sibyl at, 14: 1927
trance and, 19: 2649
Del Rio, Martin, on the Devil's mark, 15: 2082
Deluge, see flood
Demandolx de la Palud, Madeleine de (possessed nun), 1: 69-70, 134, 16: 2255-6
Demeter (Greek goddess), 4: 563-4, 8: 1078
Carthaginian cult of, 15: 2032
Ceres identified with, 4: 563, 16: 2230
Cretan origin of, 4: 480, 8: 1079
Demophon and, 6: 746
as earth goddess, 5: 688
as mother goddess, 13: 1780
mysteries of, 4: 563
see also Eleusis
Persephone and, 4: 563, 6: 745, 14: 2012, 2014, 19: 2721-2
pine tree and, 7: 892
Plutus and, 4: 563
Triptolemus and, 4: 563, 6: 745, 747
demetria (plant), see vervain
demiurge, 4: 564
in Gnosticism, 4: 564, 5: 668, 8: 1028, 1029
Manichean, 12: 1621
demons, 4: 564, 6: 793-6
Baal as, 2: 189
Francis Barrett and, 1: 131, 134, 196
bodily orifices penetrated by, 17: 2413
casting out, see exorcism
disease and, 15: 2111-12
of the four directions, 5: 588
Krishna and, 11: 1488, 1489
sexual, see incubus and succubus summoning, see ritual magic see also Abracax; Amduscias; Andras; Asmodeus; Astaroth; Beelzebub; Belial; Belphegor; Hind Etin; Lilith; Mephistopheles also asafoetida; evil spirits; evocation; ghoul; imp Demophon, Demeter and, 6: 746
Denck, Hans (mystic), 11: 1527
Dendrites (ascetics), 11: 1574
Dengyo Daishi (Saicho; Japanese priest), 10: 1391 deosil (clockwise), 3: 423
de Quincey, Thomas, 5: 651, 10: 1316
Deren, Maya, Voodoo and, 19: 2650
dervish, 4: 564-6
dancing dervishes, see Mevlevi dervishes
hemp used by, 13: 1814
howling dervishes, see Rufai dervishes
origin of the word, 4: 564, 18: 2496
river crossed on prayer mat by a, 16: 2271
Desana (South American tribe), 9: 1267
Desbarolles, Adolphe (palmist), 11: 1520
Descartes, Rene, 13: 1744
desert, wilderness, symbolism of, 11: 1501, 1503
dessounin (Voodoo rite), 20: 2869
destiny, see Fate; predestination determinism, see Fate; predestination
Deucalion and Pyrrha (Greek mythology), 7: 915, 15: 2095
Deuson, Edmund van, (statistics in astrology), 1: 144
Devi, Shanti, 16: 2176
Devi, Shrimati Rukmini, 18: 2591, 2592
Device, Elizabeth (witch), 6: 839
Devil, the (Lucifer; Satan; Christianity and Judaism), 4: 567-70, 6: 795-6
Belial and, 4: 570 defined at Council of Toledo, 9: 1246
as dragon, 4: 572-3, 5: 622, 631, 6: 758
not a dualist concept, 5: 671
Levi and, 2: 195, 195
Lucifer, 4: 569, 570, 11: 1562
in the New Testament, 16: 2283
in the Ozarks, 14: 1951
pact with, see pact, Satanic
as Satan, 5: 569-70
Wild Hunt led by, 20: 2796
witches and, 2: 235, 4: 573, 6: 784-8, 788, 16: 2283
animal forms of, 4: 573, 6: 785, 788, 7: 961, 8: 1031, 1033
Basque witches, 2: 201-2
French witches, 7: 957, 960-1, 8: 1031
Gowdie and, 8: 1056
phallus, artificial, of, 8: 1056, 16: 2256
Swedish witches, 18: 2520-1
see also Devil's Mark, familiars, pact; pricking of witches; sabbath
wolf and, 20: 2821
see also Satanism
Devil (Tarot card), 4: 569, 6: 814, 863, 18: 2570, 2571
The Devil in the 19th Century*, 2: 235
devil's bane (plant), see St John's wort devil's-bit scabious (plant), 9: 1184
devil's coach-horse (beetle), 10: 1346
Devil's mark:
Grandier and, 11: 1551
witches and, 6: 785, 786, 7: 958
see also pricking of witches Devil-worship, see Satanism
dew, on May Day, 12: 1674
de Wohl, Louis (astrologer), 13: 1380, 1381
dharana (concentration; yoga), 12: 1677, 19: 2715, 20: 2850
dharma*, 9: 1209
in Buddhism, 3: 397
in Hinduism, 9: 1209, 1217, 19: 2714
in Jainism, 10: 1385-6
Dhat Himyam (Shams; Ethiopian sun god), 6: 774
dhyana (meditation; yoga), 12: 1677, 19: 2715, 20: 2850
origin of the word 'Zen', 20: 2854
dhyana yoga, 20: 2846-7
diamond, 10: 1414, 1415-16

in alchemy, 10: 1416
Saturn associated with black, 10: 1414
sun associated with yellow, 10: 1413
in Tantric Buddhism, 10: 1415 diamond necklace (of Marie Antoinette), affair of the, 3: 329, 10: 1416
Diana (goddess of witches), 4: 576, 10: 1380
Basque counterpart, 'la Dama', 2: 203
in Canon Episcopi, 4: 576, 6: 785
Margaret Murray and, 4: 576
Roman Diana and, 4: 576
Diana (Roman goddess), 4: 574-6
Artemis identified with, 4: 574
by Cranach the Elder, 4: 575
at Ephesus, 4: 576
moon and, 4: 574, 576, 6: 742
sacred grove of, at Nemi, 4: 574, 13: 1838, 19: 2722
water and, 6: 742
see also Diana (goddess of witches)
Diarmait mac Duinn (Irish legend), 7: 888
Diarmuid and Grania (Irish legend), rowan and, 16: 2247
Dibble, Jennet (witch), 6: 839
Dicaearchus (Greek philosopher), 19: 2631
dice:
divination by, 5: 602, 7: 977, 11: 1548
Hittites, 9: 1224
fall of, mental influence on, see psychokinesis gambling with, 7: 975, 977
Dickens, Charles, Christmas and, 3: 419
Didache (Christian text), 13: 1853
Didyma, temple of Apollo at, 14: 1928-9, 1931, 1932
Digambaras (Jain sect), 10: 1385
Digby, Sir Kenelm, sympathetic powder of, 2: 249
Diggers (Puritan group), 17: 2328
Diktynna (Cretan deity), 4: 480
Dilbat (Venus; Mesopotamia), 10: 1364
dill (herb), 9: 1184
Dindyma (Dindymum), Mount (now Gunusu Dagh), Cybele and, 4: 523
Dinka (Nilotic people), 13: 1869-71
Diomedes (Greek hero), Aphrodite and, 1: 112
Dione (Greek goddess), Aphrodite and, 1: 112
Dionysia (Greek festival), 20: 2809
Dionysius of Alexandria, 16: 2201
Dionysus (Greek god), 5: 583-7, 678-9, 8: 1076, 13: 1810, 14: 1933, 18: 2532
Ambrosia festival of, 13: 1791
animals and, 1: 106
bull, 9: 1246
dolphin, 5: 614
goat, 8: 1033
Apollo and, 5: 583, 586
Athens and, 5: 586
Bacchus identified with, 2: 189, 16: 2288
birth of, 5: 583
dance and, 5: 584-6
dismemberment of, 5: 583, 584, 678, 14: 1937
drama and, 5: 586, 636-7, 16: 2288
as dying god, 5: 678
Eleusis and, 5: 678-9
flagellation in cult of, 5: 584, 7: 911
ivy and, 9: 1228, 19: 2618
Lycurgus and, 5: 583
mushroom and, 13: 1791
Mysteries of, 13: 1807-8, 14: 1938
see also Villa of the Mysteries (Pompeii)
nymphs and, 14: 1900
Olympian gods contrasted with, 5: 584
Orphism and, 6: 791, 14: 1937-8
Osiris identified with, 14: 1938
Pan and, 14: 1972
pine tree and, 7: 892, 19: 2618
at Pompeii, cult of, see Villa of the Mysteries
satyrs and, 16: 2287-8
Silenus and, 5: 583, 13: 1808-9, 17: 2371
spring festival of, 18: 2466
Thebes and, 5: 584
Titans and, 5: 678, 6: 791, 14: 1937
underworld and, 14: 2012
wine and, 5: 583, 584
winter festivals and, 20: 2809
Zeus and, 5: 583, 6: 791, 8: 1075, 1076, 9: 1228
see also maenads
diopet (from Ephesus), 4: 576
Dioscorides, 9: 1182, 11: 1558
Dioscuri (Castor and Polydeuces [or Pollux]; Greek mythology), 5: 587, 19: 2683, 2684
daughters of Leucippus and, 8: 1073
St Elmo's Fire and, 19: 2685
Gemini and, 7: 986, 19: 2685
hatched from egg laid by Leda, 5: 718
Theseus and, 19: 2602
dirae (omens), 2: 162
directions, 5: 588
cross and, as symbol of the world, 18: 2536
demons associated with, 5: 588
in Feng Shui, 6: 852-3
jade and, in China, 10: 1384
mountains and, 13: 1783
pentagram and, 14: 2002
see also east; left; widdershins Dis (Roman god), see Pluto disc, see disk
disease, illness, sickness, 5: 589-95
African view of, 5: 594
Ethiopia, 6: 777-8
Zulus, 20: 2878
Australian aborigines and, 2: 170
demons and, 15: 2111-2
dowsing and, 5: 623
forty and, 7: 941
four humours theory and, 5: 594
Inuit view of, 10: 1353
magic as cause of, 5: 589-95 palmistry and, 14: 1967-8
treatment of, medicine, see healing see also epilepsy; leprosy
also poisoning
disk (disc; sun-symbol):
in Egypt: winged, 9: 1289, 20: 2788, 2808
see also Aten
in Mesopotamia, winged, 9: 1292
Stone Age, 20: 2788
see also wheel, as symbol of the sun
dismemberment:
of Dionysus, 5: 583, 584, 678, 14: 1937
of Lycurgus, 5: 583-4
of Pentheus, 5: 584
of shamans, 5: 652, 17: 2356
Dispensationalism, 6: 797
displacement (psychical research), 6: 804-5
Distinctionists (Buddhist sect), see Vibhajyavadins diver (loon; bird), 5: 596, 19: 2618
divination, 5: 597-603, 15: 2058-9
on All Hallows' Eve, 11: 560, 17: 2408
in Babylonia, see Mesopotamia below
in Dahomey, 4: 526
Etruscans and, see Etruscans
Hittites and, 9: 1224
Bulwer Lytton and, 11: 1568
in Mesopotamia, 5: 601, 602, 11: 1538, 12: 1722, 14: 1921 methods of, 5: 602
arrows, 7: 974
ashes, 1: 129, 9: 1165
axe, 2: 176
birds, see augury
books, see bibliomancy
by bones:
Bushmen, 3: 318
Congo, 4: 450
of sheep, 17: 2358
chance happenings, see cledonomancy
comets, 2: 162
corpses, see necromancy
crystal-gazing, see scrying
the dead, spirits of, see necromancy
dice, 5: 602, 7: 977, 11: 1548
dreams, see oneiromancy drums, 5: 663
earth, pebbles, etc., see geomancy eggs, 5: 719
entrails, see haruspicy
fingernails, 7: 883
forehead, 5: 599, 15: 2036
ghosts, see necromancy
hand, see palmistry
hare, 8: 1116, 14: 1921
hazel nuts, 8: 1136
horses, 9: 1255
I Ching, 9: 1281-5
ivy, 9: 1229
liver, see liver
lots, see lots
mirror, 13: 1749, 17: 2315
moles on the body, 5: 598
shadow, 17: 2348
smoke, see capnomancy; empyromancy sortilege, see lots
stars (and planets), see astrology thunder and lightning (augury), 2: 162, 6: 780 wedding rings, 16: 2208-9
willow, 20: 2806
Navaho Indians and, 13: 1828
Phoenicians and, 18: 2542
prophecy distinguished from, 15: 2098, 2100
Romans and:
augury, 2: 162, 5: 601, 684, 11: 1538, 14: 1922, 16: 2235
Cicero on, 5: 599
haruspicy, 11: 1538, 16: 2235
sortes (lots), 11: 1547, 16: 2235
Scandinavian, see seidr
see also fate; fortune-telling; omens; oracles
Divine Life Society, 17: 2383
Divine Principles (millenarian sect), 5: 604-6
divine right (of kings), 5: 606, 11: 1474
Divine Science (philosophical group), 13: 1862
Dixon, Jeane, 15: 2101
Docetists (Christian heretics), 9: 1191
Dodona (oracle of Zeus at), 5: 606, 14: 1930-1 destruction of, 14: 1931, 1932 founded by a dove, 5: 620-1
laurel and, 11: 1511
oak tree and, 5: 606, 14: 1901, 1930-1
dog, 5: 607-11
in the Bible, 5: 607
corn and, 5: 611
of Culann, slain by Cu Chulainn, 4: 507
in Egypt, 5: 607
ghosts of, 7: 1005
Gypsies and, 8: 1104
Hebrews and, 5: 607
Hecate and, 9: 1167
Hinduism and, 5: 611
in Inuit myth, 10: 1351
Islam and, 5: 607
mandrake and, 12: 1617, 1618, 1618, 1619
in Mesopotamia, 5: 607
as omen, 14: 1921
Parsees and, 14: 1987

in Persia, 5: 609
of Sango (Nigerian god), 9: 1266
in Scandinavian mythology, see Garm three-headed:
Greek, see Cerberus
Parthian, 14: 1990, 1991
as witches' familiar, 5: 691, 693, 6: 839
see also Wild Hunt
dogma, 5: 612
Dogon (Sudanese tribe), 5: 612, 613
dualism among, 5: 669
masks and, 12: 1656
dog star, see Sirius
Dol, St, 20: 2837
dolls:
Kachinas, of Pueblo Indians, 14: 1885, 15: 2132
in magic, see image magic see also Héraut, Henri dolmen (chamber tomb; prehistoric burial), 3: 314, 18: 2489
dolphin (animal), 5: 614, 614
Dome of the Rock (Jerusalem), 10: 1404, 1404
Dominic, St (Dominic Guzman), 3: 359-60, 359
Dominican Order (friars), founded by Dominic Guzman, 3: 359-60
Domovoy (Slav spirit), 17: 2400
Donar (Germanic god), 7: 996
Donn of Cualnge (Irish mythical brown bull), 9: 1249
Donnelly, Ignatius, and Atlantis, 20: 2784
Doom of the Gods (Scandinavian mythology), see Ragnarok Dooms, Doom paintings (Last Judgement), 11: 1454 Virgin Mary in, 12: 1650
see also Last Judgement
door, doorway, see threshold
doppelgänger, 5: 615
Dorn, Gerhard (alchemist), 6: 749
Dornheim, Prince-Bishop Gottfried von (the 'Witch Bishop'), 2: 193, 194
double, 5: 615-19
animal, in New Guinea, 9: 1267
Finnish beliefs concerning, 7: 885
various names for, 5: 615
in occultism, see astral body
in out-of-the-body experiences, 14: 1945-8
shadow and, 5: 615
soul and, 5: 615, 17: 2418
in witch trials (spectral evidence), 5: 615, 20: 2817
see also ka; phantasms of the living double axe (Cretan, labrys), 2: 176, 4: 483
Dougga (North Africa):
Odysseus and the Sirens (mosaic) from, 10: 2590, 17: 2382
Roman temple at, 16: 2183
Doukhobors (religious sect), 4: 444, 445, 5: 620
dove (pigeon), 5: 620-2
in alchemical symbolism, 15: 2027
Aphrodite and, 4: 459, 5: 620
Astarte and, 1: 134
in Babylonian flood legend, 7: 913
in Christian symbolism, 5: 622
as the Holy Ghost, 2: 228, 278, 5: 622
in Cypriot mural, 10: 1407
by El Greco, 2: 280, 6: 761
in English 13th cent. MS, 5: 622
in Ethiopian MS, 3: 409
in French 15th cent. Book of Hours, 17: 2434
by Giotto, 13: 1857
death and, 5: 622
Dodona founded by, 5: 620-1
Jesus (alpha and omega) as, 7: 985
Noah and, 5: 620, 622, 7: 912
Venus and, 5: 621, 622
dowsing, 5: 623-6
extra-sensory perception and, 5: 625, 6: 804
hazel used in, 5: 623, 8: 1135, 1136
illness and, 5: 623
radiesthesia and, 5: 625
T.C.Lethbridge and, 11: 1518, 15: 2152
Doyle, Sir Arthur Conan, 5: 626-8, 17: 2441
Doyle, Richard (artist):
fairy paintings by, 6: 832
Jack the Giant-Killer, 8: 1016
Dracula (vampire), 5: 628, 19: 2702, 2703-4
in film, 7: 874, 875, 876, 19: 2706, 2707
dragon, 5: 629-35, 7: 896
in alchemy, 5: 633
in Babylonia, see Musrussu dragon; Tiamat
Beowulf and, 2: 214
in China, 5: 631, 633-5, 15: 2036
the Devil as, 4: 572-3, 5: 622, 631, 6: 758
in Egypt, 5: 630
eye of, 5: 630
in Greek mythology, 5: 633
in Hindu mythology, 5: 631
in Hittite mythology, 9: 1223
in Iranian mythology, 5: 631
in Japan, 5: 635
Midsummer and, 13: 1743
Perseus and, 5: 633
serpent and, 5: 630
St Simeon Stylites and, 16: 2279
sun gods and, 5: 630
from Sutton Hoo, 2: 214, 214
treasure and, 5: 633
Tristan and, 19: 2668
water and, 5: 630
wings of, 20: 2807
Yahweh and, 5: 631
see also George, St; Taresque; wyvern
dragonfly, 10: 1345, 1347
Drake, Sir Francis:
his drum, 5: 663
Wild Hunt associated with, 20: 2796
drakos (modern Greek folklore), 5: 633 drama, 5: 636-9
comedy, origin of, 5: 637
earliest known play, 5: 636
Greek, 5: 636-7, 12: 1664, 16: 2288, 18: 2466
Dionysus and, 5: 586, 636-7, 16: 2288
imitative magic and origin of, 5: 636
in Japan, 10: 1390
Saturnalia and, 5: 637
spring and, 18: 2466
tragedy, origin of, 5: 637
see also folkplays; mummers; mystery plays; Plough Monday
Draupnir (ring of Odin), 5: 639, 674
Dravidians, 5: 639, 9: 1211
Dreaming (Australian aborigines' myth), see Dreamtime Dream of Macsen Wledig (Mabinogion), 11: 1570
Dream of Rhonabwy (Mabinogion), 11: 1570, 1572
Dream of the Rood (Anglo-Saxon poem), 4: 491 dreams, 5: 640-8
in the Bible, 5: 645
in Canaan, 5: 644
Coleridge on, 3: 429
divination by, see oneiromancy
extra-sensory perception and, 6: 803, 15: 2110, 18: 2455-64
Greeks and, 5: 645
see also healing gods
Hebrews and, 5: 644-5
healing by, see healing gods
in Mesopotamia, 5: 644, 12: 1722
modern study of, 5: 647-8 Nebuchadnezzar's, 19: 2631
out-of-the-body experiences and, 14: 1947
astral body and, 1: 137
in Polynesia, 15: 2071
psychology of, 5: 645-9
Freud and, 5: 646-8, 7: 963
Romans and, 5: 645
see also healing gods
visions compared with, 20: 2748
Wundt on, 11: 1575
see also nightmare
Dreamtime (Dreaming; Australian aborigines' myth), 2: 166-70, 19: 2641-2
dress, see costume
dried bodies (other than Egyptian mummies):
of North American Indians, 14: 1881
at Palermo, 13: 1787
in Peru, 10: 1323
drink, see food and drink Drown, Dr Ruth, 15: 2151
drugs, 5: 649-54
in Mexico, 5: 649, 13: 1740
North American Indians and, 14: 1883
see also peyote cults
shamanism and, 5: 650-1, 652
trance and, 19: 2649
yoga powers compared with drug state experience, 20: 2851
see also soma; tobacco
Druids, 5: 655-61
Celtic priests, 3: 373, 374, 375-6, 5: 657-9
astronomical knowledge of, 5: 658-9
Stonehenge and, 5: 660, 18: 2487
Blake and, 5: 659
human sacrifice and, 3: 375-6, 5: 658
in Ireland, 5: 657
life after death, beliefs concerning, 5: 658
mistletoe and, 5: 657, 13: 1750
oak and, 3: 375, 5: 657
'snake's egg' badge of, 4: 458
standing stones and, 5: 656
Stonehenge, 5: 660
modern, 5: 657, 658, 659, 660-1
colours of robes of, 3: 430
midsummer (summer solstice) and, 13: 1743
oak and, 14: 1902
Stonehenge and, 5: 659, 659, 13: 1743, 14: 1902, 18: 2487
drum, 5: 662-4, 13: 1792
in Africa, 5: 662, 663, 13: 1793
Ashanti, 5: 663-4
Buganda, 5: 663
Dahomey, 14: 1931
Nigeria, 5: 662
divination by, 5: 663
Drake's, 5: 663
in Ethiopian wall painting, 13: 1794
in initiation rites, 5: 663
in Lapland, 11: 1507, 1508, 1509
in New Guinea, 5: 663
shamans and, 5: 663, 7: 886, 887, 10: 1355, 11: 1507, 1508, 17: 2352, 2352
Tibetan, 5: 664
see also Drummer of Tidworth; Drumming Well
Drummer of Tidworth (poltergeist), 5: 664, 15: 2065
Drumming Well (Oundle), 18: 2472
Drummond, Henry (Irvingite), 10: 1363
Drusiana, Callimachus and (Christian legend), 13: 1857-60
Druzes (Moslem sect), 5: 665-6
dryads (Greek tree spirits), 5: 666, 14: 1899
Dryope (mother of Pan), 14: 1972-3

dualism, 5: 667-71, 6: 791
asceticism and, 17: 2332
Bogomils and, 2: 256, 5: 668
Cathars and, 3: 358-9
in China, 5: 669, 6: 791
Christianity and, 5: 671, 6: 791
Dogon and, 5: 669
ethical, 5: 671
Gnosticism and, 5: 668, 669, 6: 791, 8: 1028
in Greece, 5: 669, 6: 791, 12: 1610
in India, 5: 669, 6: 791
Manicheans and, 5: 668, 6: 791, 12: 1621
Parsees repudiate, 14: 1985
Yezidi and, 5: 668
in Zoroastrianism, 1: 66-8, 5: 667-8, 6: 791, 20: 2872-3, 2876, 2880
Dubus, Edouard, 2: 207
Duguid, David (automatic painter), 2: 172
Duke, Alice (witch), 17: 2414
Duke University, 6: 807-12, 808, 15: 2109, 2118-19
Dumuzi (Mesopotamian god), see Tammuz
Duncan, Gilly (witch), 14: 1886, 1887
Duncan, Helen (medium), 17: 2441
Dundhi, King, horse of (Indian mythology), 9: 1254
dung-beetle, see scarab
Dunkers (Christian sect), 5: 671
Dunmow flitch, 5: 671, 12: 1680
Dunne, J. W., 15: 2081, 2101, 19: 2634
Dunstan, St, 8: 1023, 17: 2407
Duny, Amy (witch), 5: 692
Durandal (sword of Roland), 18: 2526
Durga (wife of Shiva; Hinduism), 9: 1216, 13: 1781, 17: 2367
goat sacrificed to, 16: 2265
Kali and, 11: 1464
durian (fruit; Borneo), 2: 265
Dutugamunu (King of Ceylon), 17: 2379 dwarfs, 5: 672-5
in Greece, 5: 672
origin of belief in, 5: 674-5 Scandinavian and Teutonic, 5: 672-5
smiths and, 17: 2408
treasure and, 5: 674-5
Vishnu as, 20: 2746
Dyaus (Indian god), 1: 105, 10: 1334, 17: 2391
bull and, 3: 307
dying god, 5: 676-80
Adonis as, 5: 676-7
Attis as, 5: 678
Baal as, 15: 2031, 18: 2541
Christianity dissociated from the myth, 5: 679-80
in Crete, 8: 1075
divine king and, 5: 676
Dionysus as, 5: 678-9
Osiris as, 5: 677, 14: 1940
Tammuz as, 5: 676, 18: 2554
Zeus as, 8: 1075, 1076
dynasties, Egyptian, dates of, 6: 730 Dyrnawg (giant), see Tyrnoc

E

Ea (Enki; Mesopotamian god), 4: 473-4, 5: 682, 12: 1714-15, 13: 1823
Apsu and, 5: 682, 12: 1715, 1717 cedar and, 19: 2660
creation myth and, 12: 1717, 1718 Enki identified with, 5: 682, 7: 913
flood legend and, 7: 912-13
form of, 7: 906
forty and, 7: 940
Inanna and, 12: 1718
in magical incantation, 12: 1720
eagle, 5: 682-4
Astarte and, 1: 134
Aztecs and, 1: 107, 19: 2643
in the Bible, 5: 682, 14: 2002
in divination, 2: 162, 5: 683-4
in India, 5: 682
in Mesopotamia, 5: 682
lion-headed (Imdugud), 12: 1716
Odin and, 8: 995
Pawnee Indians and, 8: 1072
Prometheus and, 15: 2095
Pueblo Indians, eagle dance of, 15: 2128-9
serpent and, 5: 682
storms and, 5: 683
as symbol of St John, 9: 1292
Wodan and, 8: 995
Zeus and, 6: 683, 20: 2864, 2865
see also griffin ear (body), 2: 252
earth, 5: 685-8
Ashanti spirit of, 1: 127
Aztec alligator myth of, 2: 183
Aztec goddess of, see Coatlicue
as element, 6: 742-3
first man and, 7: 903
Greek gods and, 5: 687-8
see also Ge Maori goddess of, see Papa
as mother goddess, 5: 685-6, 6: 680, 14: 1778, 19: 2719
in Finland, 7: 884
Roman god of, see Tellus
in Scandinavia, 7: 965, 19: 2608
sky and, 5: 687, 19: 2699
in creation myths, 4: 472, 5: 687, 15: 2070, 17: 2391
Dahomean spirits of, 4: 526
in serpent myths, 17: 2337
Slavs and, 17: 2400
as symbol of female body, 11: 1505 treasure buried in, 19: 2653-4 see also agriculture; chthonian deities; fertility earthquakes, 5: 688
Caucasian myth of, 15: 2095
Poseidon and, 5: 688, 15: 2074
east, 5: 588
churches, etc. facing, 3: 303, 5: 588
East Anglian and Essex witches, 5: 689-695
flying by, 2: 286
see also Canewdon; Chelmsford witches Easter, 3: 696-702
bonfires and, 5: 700
eggs and, 5: 699, 702, 717, 720
hare and, 8: 1117
lamb and, 5: 696
Maltese procession at, 3: 407
Virgin Mary in Sicilian procession at, 12: 1648
Mexican fiesta at, 7: 934
origins of, 5: 680
water and, 5: 699
Easter Island, 15: 2069, 2069, 2071
Easter ledger (plant), see bistort
East Indian humped zebu, in Indian cow-worship, 4: 468
Ebenezer (Amana Society settlement), 4: 442
Ebertin, Reinhold (astrologer), 1: 144
Ebionites (Nazarenes; Christian sect), 5: 703-4, 12: 1621
Ecce Homo, 5: 704
Eccles, Solomon (prophet of doom), 7: 899
Echo (Greek mythology), 5: 704
Eckankar, 5: 705
Eckart, Dietrich, 13: 1829
Eckhart, Meister, 5: 705-7, 11: 1527, 15: 2148
Pseudo-Dionysius and, 5: 706
eclipse, 5: 707-8
Chinese and, 5: 708, 18: 2505
Urban VIII and, 11: 1582
Economy (Harmony Society colony), 4: 442
ecstasy, 5: 709-13, 11: 1574
Christian, 5: 709-13
St Catherine of Siena, 3: 361
Curé of Ars, 4: 519
Roman Catholic use of the term, 5: 709, 712
in Hinduism, 5: 712
in Judaism, 5: 712
levitation and, 18: 2486-7
mysticism and, 5: 709-13, 18: 2480-7
orgies and, 14: 1933
priests and, 15: 2086
shamans and, 15: 2086, 17: 2352-3
spirit possession and, 5: 713
in Sufism, 5: 713
trance and, 5: 713, 18: 2480-7
visions and, 20: 2748
ectoplasm, 5: 714, 7: 1788, 1789, 8: 2277, 2278
Edda (Poetic Edda and Prose Edda), 5: 714
Poetic Edda, end of the world in, 6: 755, 16: 2290
Prose Edda, 16: 2289
Balder in, 2: 192
giants in, 8: 1017
Eddy, Mary Baker, 3: 414-17, 414, 417, 5: 715-16
P. P. Quimby and, 5: 715, 12: 1713, 13: 1861
Eddy, William and Horatio, 2: 244, 245
Edelin, Guillaume (witch), 2: 286
Eden, garden of, 4: 476, 7: 903, 14: 1977
by Bosch, 2: 267
by Jan Breughel, 14: 1978-9
by Cranach the Elder, 17: 2375
by Goes, 4: 474
in 13th century 19: 2659
in the Très Riches Heures du Duc de Berry, 11: 1500, 1501 Edessa, Atargatis cult at, 8: 1119
Edict of Nantes, 3: 337
edim (etimmu; Mesopotamia), 12: 1608
Edric, Wild, see Wild Edric
Edward III, Order of the Garter founded by, 7: 981, 19: 2607
Edward the Confessor, King's Evil and, 5: 590
Edwards, Harry (faith healer), 6: 833
Edwards, Jonathan (revivalist), 6: 764
Edwards, Susanna (witch), 6: 817
Eeman, L. E., 15: 2151
Egeria (nymph), 14: 1902
egg, 5: 717-20
in alchemy, see Philosopher's Egg Castor and Pollux hatched from, 5: 718
in creation myths, 2: 227-8, 5: 717, 719, 7: 886
Chinese, 5: 717
Egyptian, 2: 227-8, 279, 4: 472, 5: 717
Finnish, 7: 886
Hindu, 5: 717
Dionysus and, 18: 2532
divination by, 5: 719
Easter and, 5: 699, 702, 717, 720
as fertility symbol, 5: 717
Helen of Troy hatched from, 5: 718
Mithras and, 5: 719, 13: 1754
of ostrich, 14: 1940
of owl, 14: 1949
as protection against the evil eye, 5: 720
witches' use of, for transport, 5: 719 egg rolling (Easter game), 5: 720
Eglinton, William (medium), 15: 2107
ego (Freudian term), 7: 963

Egypt, 6: 677, 727-736
altars in, 1: 92
amulets in, 10: 1358, 18: 2545, 2550, 2552-3
see also scarab
animal gods of, 1: 103, 104-5, 6: 732
ba, 6: 733
Baal in, 2: 188-9
bull in, 3: 307, 6: 732, 9: 1245
burial in, see cult of the dead, below cat goddess of, see Bast
creation myths of, 2: 195, 4: 471, 5: 717, 6: 814-15, 7: 967, 12: 1608, 13: 1823
cult of the dead in 6: 736 coffins used in, 2: 258-9 eye and, 6: 814
food for the dead, 7: 933
Osiris and, 5: 681, 6: 732
water in, 2: 195, 197, 16: 2169, 2170
see also Amenta; Book of the Dead; Coffin Texts; corn-mummies; judgement of the dead below; letters to the dead; mummification; pyramids, Egyptian; Pyramid Texts; ushabti
death in, 4: 557, 6: 736, 12: 1606-8 see also life after death, below
dogs in, 5: 607
dragon in, 5: 630
dreams of kings in, 5: 641 dynasties of, dates of, 6: 730
election in, 6: 638
eye in, 6: 814, 817, 822
falcon in, 2: 231, 6: 836, 9: 1256, 1257
gesture, ceremonial, in, 7: 997
gods of, 6: 732
healing gods, 8: 1152, 10: 1305
see also Serapis
iconography of, 9: 1288
see also Amun; Anubis, Aten; Bast; Bes; Geb; Hathor, Horus; Isis; Khnum; Maat; Nephthys; Nut; Osiris; Ptah; Re; Sekhmet; Seth; Tefnut; Thoth
Greece and, 10: 1365, 12: 1591, 14: 1938, 17: 2335-6 harvest in, 8: 1122, 1122
head-dress in, 8: 1145
ib, 6: 733
immortality and, 13: 1788
incense in, 10: 1328
judgement of the dead in, 6: 733, 9: 1169, 11: 1447-1449
Anubis and, 1: 110
heart weighed in, 6: 851, 9: 1161, 11: 1449, 1450-51, 1569, 16: 2295
Maat and, 6: 851, 11: 1565
Osiris and, 6: 851, 11: 1449, 14: 1940
Thoth and, 6: 733, 11: 1449
ka, 6: 733
kings of, see pharaoh; Ptolemy see also dreams of kings, above
life after death, beliefs concerning, 2:195, 6: 732-3, 734, 736, 9: 1169, 12: 1608, 19: 2627-8
see also cult of the dead above; judgement of the dead, above; soul, below
lotus in, 11: 1548-9, 1549
magic in 6: 734
man, Egyptian view of, 12: 1606-8 see also creation myths above; death above
maze in, 12: 1674
moon and, 3: 307, 13: 1765
music in, 6: 736, 13: 1792
new year and, 10: 1365
ointments in, 14: 1913
owl in, 14: 1948
path symbolism in, 14: 1993
perfume in, 14: 2008-9
phallic symbolism in, 15: 2024
phoenix in, 15: 2033
pig in, 15: 2039, 2039
priests of, 6: 735 Sirius and, 10: 1364-5
soul beliefs concerning, 6: 733, 10: 1313, 12: 1606, 16: 2170, 17: 2419
see also life after death above
stars in:
see circumpolar star; Great Bear, in Egypt; Orion, Osiris and; Sirius, in Egypt
sun and, 6: 730, 814, 10: 1318, 18: 2504, 2505
Apophis and, 5: 630
Horus and, 5: 731, 731, 9:1257
Mnevis and, 3: 307
pharaoh and, 18: 2504
see also Aten; disk, in Egypt; Re
tattooing in, 18: 2577
temples of, see architecture, religious, tombs of, 16: 2182-4
see also pyramids
tree spirits in, 16: 2170, 18: 2656
women at their toilet in, 20: 2023
see also ankh; execration texts; hieroglyphs Egypt, Islamic, 10: 1374, 12: 1601
eight, 14: 1894
as number of Jesus, 8: 1066
eight-legged horse of Odin, see Sleipnir eight-pointed star as symbol of Ishtar, 10: 1363
names adding to, 14: 1894
Eightfold Path (Buddhism), 3: 296
Eilithyia, see Ilithyia
Eire (Ireland), origin of the name, 5: 685
eiresione (Greece), 14: 1920, 19: 2659
Eisai (Zen teacher), 20: 2858-9
Eisenman, Robert, and Dead Sea Scrolls, 4: 552
Eisteddfod, 2: 199, 5: 660, 6: 737
'ekenergy', postulated by Michael Harrison, 17: 2448
El (Phoenician god), 1: 132-3, 6: 737, 15: 2028-30, 18: 2540-2, 2542
bull and, 6: 737, 15: 2028
dreaming by, 5: 644, 18: 2541
Elaine (Arthurian legend), 7: 973
Elam (Mesopotamia), Babylon and, 12: 1633
El Amarna (Egypt), see Akhetaten
Eldad, lost tribes of Israel and, 11: 1545
elder (tree), 6: 737, 15: 2049
Elders (Sthaviras; Buddhist sect), 3: 299 election, 6: 738-741
in Christianity, 6: 738, 740-1
in Egypt, 6: 738
Jehovah's Witnesses and, 10: 1402
in Judaism, 6: 738, 10: 1437, 20: 2840
in Mesopotamia, 6: 738
predestination and, 6: 741, 15: 2080
elementals, 6: 742-4
artificial, magically created, 11: 1583, 15: 2113
elements and, 6: 743
fairies as, 6: 832
Paracelsus on, 6: 743
see also gnomes; sylphs elements, 5: 594, 6: 742-4
in alchemy, 1: 75, 6: 744, 12: 1704
Chinese theory of, 3: 393, 6: 743
elementals and, 6: 743
fifth element, see quintessence
four humours and, 6: 742-3 Neoplatonists and, 6: 743
pentagram and, 14: 2002
elephant, 6: 745
in bestiary, 1: 107
conception of Buddha and, 19: 2733, 2733
in Ghana ceremonial, 1: 58
Indra and, see Airavata
Kama and, 11: 1464
Krishna and, 11: 1469
Mohammed's enemies mounted on, 10: 137
see also Ganesha
Eleusis, Eleusinian Mysteries, 4: 563, 6: 745-8, 13: 1780- 1807
at Alexandria, 13: 1807
bathing as purificatory rite of, 2: 195, 6: 748
chief priest of, see hierophant corn revelation at, 6: 747, 19: 2722
Cretan origin of, 8: 1079
Demeter and, 4: 561, 6: 745, 19: 2721
Dionysus and, 5: 678-9
Hades and Persephone and, 6: 748, 15: 2054, 19: 2721
Orphism and, 14: 1935, 1937
sacramental drink in, 16: 2257
sacred marriage and, 6: 747
sexual symbolism in 15: 2025
Zeus and, 6: 747
elf-bolts, elf-arrows, 6: 830, 18: 2490
Isabel Gowdie and, 8: 1056
elf light, see will-o'-the-wisp
Elian, St, see Aelian, St Eliade, Mircea:
on baptism, 20: 2775
eternal return theory of, 6: 770
Eliezer, Israel ben (the Baal Shem Tov), 8: 1125
Elijah (Old Testament prophet), 11: 1544, 13: 1745, 15: 2098
fed by ravens, 4: 497, 497
Elijah of Chelm, Rabbi, golem and, 8: 1048
Eliot, T. S., The Waste Land , 8: 1064
Elixir of Life, 6: 749-752
as the panacea, 6: 749
Philosophers' Stone and, 6: 749, 15: 2027
'Elizabeth' (stigmatic), Dr Adolph Lechler and, 18: 2483
Elizabeth I, 16: 2206, 2208
Elizade, David and Hellen (psychic surgeons), 15: 2115-6
Elkesaites (Christian sect), 1: 102
Elliot, Mrs Warren (medium), 12: 1685
Elliotson, John, 15: 2106
Elmo, St, 16: 2277, 20: 2805
Elohim (name of God), 18: 2590, 20: 2839
El Shaddai (name of God), 20: 2839
Elysium (Elysian Fields), 14: 1980, 1982
emanations:
in Cabala (sefiroth), 3: 323
embalming, in mummification, 13: 1785
see also Opening of the Mouth
emerald, 10: 1413, 1414
Emerald Buddha, temple of, 3: 296
Emerson, Ralph Waldo, New Thought and, 13: 1861
Emico, Count of Leiningen, 17: 2326
Emma-O (judge of the dead; Japanese Buddhism), 4: 556, 558, 11: 1452
Emmerich, Catherine (stigmatic), 18: 2482
Empedocles (Greek philosopher), 5: 669
four elements theory advanced by, 6: 742
reincarnation, his belief in, 16: 2174, 19: 2631
Emperor (Tarot card), 18: 2569, 2570
Empress (Tarot card), 18: 2569, 2570
empyromancy (divination by smoke from burning incense or plants), 5: 603
Encausse, Dr Gerard, see Papus
end of the world, 3: 348, 6: 753-59
Aztecs and, 6: 754, 755
Babylonians and, 6: 755
Buddhism and, 6: 755
Christianity and, 6: 753, 756-9
see also Second Coming creation and, 6: 753-60

fire and, 6: 755, 756, 759, 16: 2292
Greek myths of, 6: 755-6
Hinduism and, 6: 755
in Judaism, 6: 756-7
in Scandinavian mythology, see Ragnarok
water and, 6: 755
sea, 16: 2292
winter and, 20: 2809, 2811
see also Fimbul winter
in Zoroastrianism, 14: 1912
see also Apocalypse; eschatology
Endymion (Greek mythology), 13: 1764, 17: 2330
Engel, Leopold (reviver of the Illuminati), 10: 1304
English Shakers, see Walworth Jumpers
Enki (Mesopotamian god), see Ea
Enkidu (Mesopotamian mythology), 5: 558, 8: 1019, 20: 2829
Enlil (Mesopotamian god), 5: 630, 12: 1714
in creation myth, 5: 687
flood legend and, 7: 912
Marduk and, 12: 1716
as ox, 1: 105, 3: 307
sack of Ur and, 17: 2394
Eno (Zen master), see Hui-Neng, 4: 562 Enochian (language), 6: 760, 760
enthusiasm (religious), 6: 761-4
Camisards and, 3: 337
entrails, divination by, see haruspicy
Entremont, Celtic temple at, 8: 1143
Enuma elish (Babylonian creation myth), 4: 474, 5: 630, 6: 770, 12: 1633, 1718
ephemerides (astrology), 1: 142
Ephesus (Greece), 4: 576
Sleepers of, see Seven Sleepers of Ephesus epic poetry, Greek, 19: 2672
Epictetus (Stoic philosopher) 12: 1609,
Epicurus (Greek philosopher), 15: 2079
Epidaurus (Greece), Asclepios and, 8: 1080, 1149-50, 16: 2177
epilepsy, 11: 1574
Epimetheus, Pandora and, 15: 2095, 20: 2828
Epiphanius (bishop of Salamis), on the Virgin Mary, 12: 1650
Epiphany (Christianity), 11: 1576
Isis and, 5: 678
episcopi vagantes, see wandering bishops
Epistle to Diognetus (Christian text), 13: 1853
epistles, apocryphal, 13: 1854, 1860
Epistles of St Paul, see Paul, St epitaph of Shakespeare, 4: 521, 521
epitaphion (Byzantine embroidery), 14: 1925
Epona (Celtic goddess), 1: 104, 106, 9: 1250
Rhiannon equated with, 11: 1571-2
Equinox, The (Crowley), 8: 1046, 16: 2170
Equinoxes, precession of, 1: 118
Erato (Muse), 13: 1789
Erech (Uruk; Mesopotamian city), 8: 1019, 10: 1363, 1364, 12: 1717
eremite, see hermit
Ereshkigal (Mesopotamian goddess), 12: 1608
Eridu (Mesopotamian city), 12: 1717
Erin (Ireland), origin of the name, 5: 685
Erinyes (Greek mythology), see Furies
Eriu (Irish goddess), 5: 685
Ernst, Max
The robing of the bride, facing title, 3
Eros (Greek god), 1: 111-12, 6: 765-7, 17: 2347
Aphrodite and, 1: 111-12, 6: 765, 766
Ares and, 6: 765-6
Cupid identified with, 4: 516, 6: 766
dolphin and, 5: 614
Hermes and, 6: 765
Plato's myth of the birth of 15: 2052
Zeus and, 6: 765, 766
Erra (Mesopotamian pestilence god), 12: 1719
Erto, Pasquale (medium), 12: 1689, 15: 2109
Erythrae, Sibyl of, 17: 2368,
Eryx, Mt (Sicily), goddess of, 19: 2723
Esalen, Institute, 6: 767
eschara (Greek altar), 1: 92
eschatology, 6: 767
see also end of the world; Judgement of the dead Eschenbach, werewolf of, 20: 2781
Eshmun (Phoenician god), 15: 2031, 2032, 18: 2542, 2545
Eskimo, see Inuit
Esoteric Christianity, 6: 768-9
ESP, see extra-sensory perception
Espagnet, Jean d' (alchemist), 6: 751
Essenes (Jewish sect), 4: 551, 6: 769
secret lore of, 3: 323
Essex, witchcraft in, see East Anglian and Essex witches Estan (Hattic sun god), 9: 1222
Esus (Celtic god), 3: 376, 377
eternal return, 6: 770-1, 859
Ethiopia, 6: 772-8
amulets in, 6: 778
animism in, 6: 773
augury in, 6: 776
bee in, 6: 776
Christianity in, 6: 773-8
baptism of Jesus, 3: 409
the flood, 7: 915
St George and the Dragon, 9: 1203, 16: 2278-9
Massacre of the Innocents, 4: 520 disease, Ethiopian view of, 6: 777-8 drum in, 13: 1794
gods of, 6: 774
Islam in, 6: 773
Judaism in, 6: 774
magic in, 6: 776-8
Nilotes of, 13: 1869
possession in, 6: 777, 15: 2078
Queen of Sheba and, 6: 775, 15: 2146-7
Rastafarian movement and, 12: 1728
snake and, 6: 776
Solomon and, 6: 775
spirits in, 6: 777
etimmu (Mesopotamia), see edim
Etna (volcano): Hephaestus and, 9: 1178
saints invoked against eruptions of, 5: 593
Etruscans, 6: 780-2
creation myth of, 6: 781
divination and:
augury, 2: 162
haruspicy, 11: 1538
hepatoscopy, 6: 780, 11: 1538, 1538
gods of, 6: 781
Saturn, 16: 2285
see also Charun
life after death, beliefs concerning, 6: 780, 781, 782
phallic symbolism and, 15: 2023, 2024
Roman religion influenced by, 16: 2232
Roman gods identified with Etruscan, 6: 781
sacrifice and, 6: 781-2
satyr, 16: 2287
temples of, 6: 2287
'Etteilla' (Alliette), on the Tarot, 18: 2574
Eucharist, see Mass
euhemerism, 6: 782, 16: 2180
Eumenides (Greek mythology), see Furies
Euphrates aspen (tree), 20: 2805
Euphrosyne (Greek mythology), 8: 1057
eurhythmy, 18: 2481
Europa, 3: 307, 18: 2582, 20: 2864
Hera identified with, 9: 1180
European witchcraft, 6: 783-8, 15: 2111-4, 17: 2415-7, 20: 2816
All Hallows' Eve and, 1: 89, 6: 785
axe and, 2: 176
bells as protection against witches, 2: 213
Bible, witches weighed against, 6: 786
black magic distinguished from witchcraft, 2: 233
black mass and, 2: 235, 6: 785
blood and, 2: 248-9,
broomstick in, 2: 286-7, 6: 785, 839
Teniers, 2: 287
in Bulgaria, 6: 796
candles and, 3: 340
cat and, see cat
in the Channel Islands, 2: 286
dancing by witches, 10: 1380, 16: 2255
the Devil and, see Devil, disease caused by, 15: 2111-2 dolls and wax images used by, see image magic double (spectral evidence) and, 5: 615
dragon and, 5: 635
eggs used for transport, 5: 719
elder (tree) and, 6: 737, 15: 2049
in England, 6: 783-4, 786, 17: 2415
in Cornwall, 4: 458
last conviction, see Wenham, Jane witchcraft laws in, 5: 689, 693, 11: 1560, 19: 2654
see also East Anglian and Essex witches; Hopkins, Matthew; Malmesbury witches: Somerset witches; Warboys
evil eye and, 6: 817
finding of witches, 6: 785-6, 7: 880-1
see also pricking of witches
in Finland, 7: 886
flying by witches, 6: 785, 16: 2255
see also broomstick above; Canon Episcopi; flying ointment in France, see French witchcraft
frogs and, 6: 838, 7: 968
in Germany, see German witchcraft
goat and, 2: 255, 4: 573, 6: 785, 788
Eliphas Levi, 2: 195, 195
goddess of, see Diana hailstorm created by, 20: 2778
hair and, 8: 1110
hare and, 8: 1117
heart and, 9: 1161
herbs and, 9: 1182-6
heresy and, see Inquisition
horse and, 9: 1252
horseshoe and, 9: 1255
hysteria and, 9: 1273, 15: 2111
impotence caused by, 9: 1273,10: 1356
Inquisition and, see Inquisition
in Ireland, 6: 783-4
St Patrick and, 6: 800
see also Kyteler, Alice in Italy, see Italian witchcraft
in Lapland, 11: 1506-9
lead, witches immune to, 11: 1513
mandrake and, 12: 1618
at Midsummer, 13: 1743
persecution of witches, 6: 783-8, 7: 988-9
see also finding of witches; floating of witches; Malleus Maleficarum; torture of witches; trials below
plants as protection against, 15: 2048
possession and, 6: 800-1, 9: 1272-7
primitive societies compared with, 7: 880, 17: 2415-6, 20: 2816
psychology of witches and witchcraft accusations, 9: 1272
mental disorder as a characteristic of witches, 9: 1272, 14: 1917, 15: 2111, 17: 2416

sexual repression and, 9: 1274
social tension relieved by accusations, 7: 881, 14: 1917, 17: 2415-7, 20: 2816-7
red as protection against witches, 6: 818
rowan and, 16: 2247
in Scotland, 6: 783
in ballads, 17: 2313-4
goddess of witches, 4: 576
silver bullet, 11: 1513
Weir and, 20: 2779
see also Aberdeen witches; Auldearne witches; North Berwick witches sexual disabilities induced by witches, see impotence above
sexual repression and, 9: 1274
shape-shifting and, 3: 357, 20: 2781, 2821
silver bullets and, 8: 1117, 11: 1513,
in Spain, 2: 201-3
in Sweden, see Swedish witchcraft
trials of witches, 6: 785, 7: 988-90
spectral evidence in, 5: 615, 20: 2817
white magicians and, 20: 2795, 2816
wolf and, 20: 2821
see also coven; hex; sabbath; Walpurgisnacht; witch bottle
Euryale (Gorgon), 8: 1053
Eurydice, Orpheus and, 14: 1934
Eurylochus, Circe and, 3: 422
Eurynome (demon), 6: 795
Eurystheus (Greek king), Hercules and, 9: 1187
Eurytion (centaur), 3: 379
Euterpe (muse), 13: 1789
Evans, Sir Arthur, Cretan excavations of, 8: 1075
Evans, Frederick (Shaker Evans), 17: 2349, 2349,
Evans, Jane, 2: 249
Evans-Pritchard, E.E.: on the Azande, 2: 178, 20: 2815
on the Shilluh, 11: 1475
Eve (first woman), 6: 788
Adam and, see Adam
meaning of the name, 7: 903
Eve, the Three Faces of, 13: 1784-5
Evening Star:
in Mexican myth, see xolotl
North American Indians and, 13: 1882
evergreens (trees and shrubs):
Christmas and, 3: 418, 11: 1511
see also Christmas tree; holly
First Foot and, 9: 1229
in Renaissance symbolism, 16: 2189
Saturnalia and, 9: 1229
see also cypress; fir; ivy; laurel; myrtle; pine; yew Everyman (morality), 13: 1806
evil, 6: 789-793
Buddhism and, 6: 790-795
Christianity and, 6: 791-2
see also Devil
darkness and, 11: 1525
death and, 6: 790
Hinduism and, 6: 794, 19: 2712
Judaism and, 6: 791-2
the left and, 5: 588
in Mesopotamia, 6: 791
owl and, 14: 1948
transcended by magic, 11: 1584
woman, evilness of, 7: 904, 20: 2822
in Zoroastrianism, see Ahriman
see also demons; dualism; evil eye; sin evil eye, 6: 816-22, 818, 819
in Ethiopia, 6: 777
pig and, 6: 818
protection against:
amulets, 6: 818
bells, 6: 844
egg, 5: 720
gestures, 6: 818
iron, 10: 1358
lemon, 10: 1358
mirror, 13: 1749
owl, 14: 1949
plants, 6: 818
spell, 20: 2793
spittle, 6: 818, 17: 2446
wolf's skin, 20: 2821
toad and, 6: 817
witchcraft and, 6: 817, 15: 2112
evil spirits, 6: 793-6
see also demons; Devil; keres evocatio (Roman rite), 6: 799
evocation (magic), 6: 797, 11: 1582
invocation and, 11: 1583
evolution, Teilhard de Chardin on, 18: 2587
Ewen, C. L'Estrange, on diseases caused by witches, 15: 2111
Excalibur (Caliburnus; sword of Arthur), 1: 122, 123, 125, 6: 797, 18: 2522
sword in the stone distinguished from, 18: 2526
Exclusive Brethren (Closed Brethren), 6: 797-8
excommunication, 4: 520, 522
execration texts (Egypt), 4: 522
Exodus (Jewish history), 20: 2840
see also Passover
exogamy, 10: 1328
exorcism, 6: 799-801, 12: 1574
Christian, 6: 800-1
of Aix-en-Provence nuns, 1: 69-70
baptism and, 6: 800
in Brittany, 2: 284-5
Father Steiger and 'Mary', 13: 1784
foul smells used in, 14: 2010
of Jeanne de Anges, 11: 1551
Judaism and, 6: 799-800
in Tibet, dagger used in, 20: 2795
exstispicy (divination), in Mesopotamia, 12: 1722 Externsteine rocks (Germany), 13: 1840
extra-sensory perception (ESP), 6: 803-12
animals and:
mice, 15: 2122
chance and, 6: 804-5, 806
classification of ESP experiences, 18: 2455
the dead, active part played by, in ESP, 18: 2457
dowsing and, 5: 625, 6: 804
dreams and, 6: 803, 15: 2110, 18: 2455-64
Freud and, 7: 963
hallucination and, 6: 803, 18: 2457
intuition and, 6: 803, 18: 2457
mediums and, 6: 805
psychical research and, 6: 805-12, 15: 2109-10
psychokinesis and, 6: 804, 806-12, 15: 2117, 2118-22, 18: 2464
religion and, 6: 804
Spiritualism and, 6: 805
seen as a unitary process, 18: 2460
see also clairaudience; clairvoyance; psychometry; second sight; telepathy extravert, introvert distinguished from, by Jung, 11: 1457 Extreme Unction, 14: 1914, 16: 2258
eye, 6: 813-22
in the Bible, 6: 814
black diamond and, 10: 1414
of dragons, 5: 630
in Egypt, 6: 814, 817, 822
of Atum, 6: 814
of Bes, 6: 814
of Horus, 6: 814, 16: 2294
of Re, 2: 258-9, 6: 733
Gorgons, eyes of, 8: 1053
St Lucy and diseases of, 6: 813, 16: 2272
of Marduk, 6: 813, 9: 1289
multiplicity of, significance of, 6: 814
of Odin, sacrificed, 7: 946
in the peacock s tail, 6: 820, 821, 822, 14: 1998
stars and, 6: 814
sun and, 6: 814
third eye, in Hindu belief, 6: 814
see also evil eye; iridology eyebright (herb) 9: 1184, 1185, 15: 2050 eye idols, eye goddess, 6: 816, 816-17
Eysenck, Hans (psychology and astrology), 1: 144
Ezekiel (Old Testament prophet), 6: 814, 823-4, 15: 2099, 19: 2616, 20: 2790-1 and the chariot of the Merkabah, 12: 1706

F

Fa (Dahomey), 4: 526
faceless goddesses, 6: 824
Greek, 6: 824
Paleolithic (Venus figures), 6: 824, 860
of Laussel, 6: 824, 9: 1241, 1243, 1287,
of Malta, 12: 1603, 1604
of Willendorf, 6: 824
Fafnir (dragon; Teutonic mythology), 5: 633
Fahrenkrog, Prof. Ludwig, 13: 1838-40, 1839, 18: 2517
fairies, the 'Little People', 6: 825-32, 11: 1537
on All Hallows' Eve, 1: 87-8
of Arthurian legends, 6: 829, 832 classification of, 6: 829
of Cornwall, 4: 457, 6: 832
explanations of fairy beliefs, 6: 831-2
hawthorn and, 8: 1134-5
of Ireland, 6: 830, 832
see also leprechauns plants associated with, 15: 2050
Scandinavian, see troll
of Scotland, 6: 830, 832
Isabel Gowdie and, 8: 1056
in Scottish and Border ballads, 17: 2313
tinkers and, 19: 2636
wings of, 20: 2807, 2808
see also changeling; Dadd, Richard, fairy paintings by; Doyle, Richard, fairy paintings by; elf; elf-bolts; fairy rings; Puck fairy fire, see will-o'-the-wisp fairy rings, 16: 2209
faith, 6: 833
faith healing, spiritual healing, 6: 833-5, 13: 1746-8
Christian attitudes to, 6: 834
Christian Science, 3: 414-7, 5: 715-6, 6: 834
Curé of Ars, 4: 518
Jansenists, 4: 454
Jesus and his disciples, 6: 834-5
miracles and, 13: 1748
pilgrimage and, 5: 594-5, 15: 2043
see also Lourdes
saints and, 5: 594-5, 6: 834-5
New Thought and, 13: 1861
psychic surgeons, 15: 2115-6
psychosomatic medicine, 6: 835
scientific attitudes to, 6: 835
Spiritualism and, 6: 834
in Brazil, 17: 2426
by touch, 6: 834, 7: 882 see also Cayce, Edgar; Greatrakes, Valentine; healing gods; namapathy; Philippe, Nizier fakir, 5: 713, 6: 836-7

Indian, see sadhu
Islamic, 6: 836
origin of the word, 18: 2496
Falasha (Ethiopian Jews), 6: 773
falcon, 6: 836
in Egypt, 2: 231, 6: 836
Falconi, Juan (Quietist), 15: 2149
Falling Tower (Tarot card), see Tower Struck by Lightning fall of man (Christianity), 6: 836
see also Adam
False Face society, 8: 1123, 10: 1359, 1361-2
Fama Fraternitatis (Rosicrucian text), 16: 2240-7, 2243
familiars (witches' imps), 6: 796, 838-41, 15: 2113, 20: 2817
in Africa, 20: 2817
blackbird as, 6: 838
cat as, 3: 356, 356, 5: 691, 6: 796, 838, 17: 2414
crow as, 6: 838
dog as, 5: 691, 693, 6: 839
in East Anglia, 5: 691, 693
ferret as, 5: 693
fish as, 7: 908
frog as, 6: 838
hedgehog as, 17: 2414
of Alice Kyteler, 6: 838
lamb as, 6: 796
mouse as, 3: 356, 10: 1317
owl as, 3: 356
polecat as, 5: 691
rabbit as, 5: 691
of Somerset witches, 17: 2414
spider as, 17: 2437
toad as, 5: 691, 6: 796, 838, 17: 2414, 19: 2637
see also witches' mark fan, 6: 841
fana (Sufism), 13: 1872
fanatic, origin of the word, 13: 1782
farandole (dance), 3: 351
Fard, Wallace D. (Farrad Muhammad; Black Muslim), 2: 236
Farr, Florence, and the Golden Dawn, 8: 1044-5 fascination (enchantment), 15: 2112
fasting, 6: 841
Christianity and, 6: 841
in eastern religions, 6: 841
in Islam, 6: 841, 10: 1370
Judaism and, 6: 841, 10: 1438
see also inedia
Fata Morgana (mirage), 13: 1770
fate, 6: 842-4
Greek view of, 12: 1609
see also Fates, Nemesis
Isis and, 10: 1366
see also fortune telling; luck; predestination and free will Fates, the (Aisai, Moirae, Parcae; Greek mythology), 6: 842-3, 13: 1762, 18: 2492-3
in 15th cent. tapestry, 19: 2692-3
Hittite forerunners of, 9: 1289
Father Christmas, 3: 418-421, 7: 920
Father Divine (George Baker), 12: 1726, 1724, 1725
Father Time, 4: 559, 19: 2630
Fatima, Virgin Mary and, 12: 1652, 20: 2749
Fatimid Caliphate of Egypt, 10: 1374, 12: 1601
Faunus (Roman god), Pan identified with, 8: 1033
Faust, 6: 844-9, 14: 1961
Goethe and, 6: 846, 847, 847-8, 8: 1036, 1036-7, 1039, 14: 1960
grimoire attributed to, 11: 1513
Mephistopheles and 6: 846, 12: 1702
Simon Magus and, 17: 2374
fay (fairy), 6: 825
Fay, Annie Eva,12: 1684, 1685, 1687
Feast of Booths (Judaism), see Feast of Tabernacles Feast of Dedication (Judaism), see Hanukkah Feast of Fools, 5: 637
Feast of Orthodoxy (Greek Orthodox Church), 9: 1293
Feast of Tabernacles (Succoth, Feast of Booths; Judaism), 2: 188, 8: 1120, 10: 1438, 20: 2772
Feast of Trumpets (Judaism), 19: 2679
Feast of the Visitation (of the Virgin Mary), 11: 1534
feather, 6: 851
in Egypt, in judgement of the dead, 6: 851, 851, 11: 1569
in Mexican festival, 13: 1735
of the peacock, 14: 1998
Prince of Wales and, 6: 851
shamans and, 7: 886
Feathered Serpent (Plumed Serpent), 17: 2337
in Mexico, see Quetzalcoatl
February, in Les Très Riches Heures, 20: 2810
Feilding, Hon. Mrs Everard (medium), see Tomzcyk, Stanislawa
Felkin, Dr R. W., Golden Dawn, Stella Matutina and, 8: 1045, 16: 2246
Female Pope (Tarot card), see High Priestess Fénelon, Abbé de, 15: 2150
feng (feng-hwang; Chinese mythical bird), 15: 2036
Feng Shui, 6: 852-3
ley lines and, 11: 1523
Fenian Cycle, 7: 888, 890
fennel (herb), 9: 1184-5
Prometheus and,15: 2094-5
Fenris wolf (Scandinavian mythology), 20: 2819
bound by Tyr, 7: 994, 20: 2820
Loki the father of, 8: 1017
Odin killed by, 6: 755, 16: 2291, 2292
ferns (bracken), rain and storm and, 17: 2394
ferret, as witch's familiar, 5: 693
Ferrete, Bishop Julius, 20: 2768
fertility, beliefs and rites concerning, 6: 854-61
in Africa, 6: 855, 860, 860
of animals, 6: 855-6
bear, 2: 210, 4: 935
ashes and, 1: 129
Brigit and, 2: 284
Canaanites and, 2: 188
at Catal Hüyük, 1: 92
cave art and, 3: 367, 6: 859
in children's games, 3: 390
cowrie shell amulet, 4: 463
dance and, 4: 530-1, 9: 1250
see also Morris dances
divine king or dying god and, 5: 676
egg as symbol of, 5: 717 fir and pine as symbols of, 7: 892
fountains and, 7: 946
Greek goddess of, see Demeter
harvest and, 8: 1122
high gods and, 6: 859, 860
king and, 11: 1474, 19: 2721
in Malta, 12: 1604
Mars and, 12: 1643
maternity and, 6: 861
see also Mother Goddess
modern witchcraft and, 13: 1755
phallic symbolism and, 6: 860, 15: 2024, 2026
of plants, agriculture, 6: 855, 859
boar and, 2: 250
bull and, 3: 306, 9: 1244
dance and, 4: 530
see also harvest above plants and, 15: 2050
prostitution and, 15: 2102
sacred marriage and, 6: 859
Scandinavian deities of, see Vanir
sex and, 6: 860, 17: 2343
see also phallic symbolism, above; prostitution, above; sacred marriage, above spirits and, 6: 855
water and, 6: 860
woodpecker and, 20: 2836
see also vegetation spirits Festival of Lights (Judaism), see Hanukkah fetch (double), 5: 615-9, 674
fetch candle, see will-o-the-wisp fetch light, see will-o-the-wisp
fetish, 6: 862-3
Fian, John (Scottish wizard), 8: 1111, 14: 1886
Ficino, Marsilio, 6: 863, 16: 2190, 2194
Fides Publica (Roman deity), 16: 2230, 2231
fifteen, 6: 863
Fifteen Men For Sacrificing (Roman priests), see Ten Men For Sacrificing Fifth Monarchy Men, 4: 542, 17: 2329, 2330
fig (tree and fruit), 6: 863-4
in the Bible, 6: 863-4
Adam and Eve and, 6: 863-4
Buddha and, 6: 864
see also bo-tree
Roman myths of, 6: 864
Romulus and Remus and, 7: 943, 944,
on seals from Mohenjo-daro, 10: 1335, 1336
in sexual symbolism, 15: 2024
Fiji, 2: 277, 3: 348
filbert (hazel), origin of the name, 8: 1136 Filippov, Danila (founder of the Khlysty), 17: 2384
films, 7: 871-9
Dracula in, facing title, 7, 7: 875, 876, 19: 2706, 2707
science fiction in, 7: 877, 16: 2300
Fimbul winter (Scandinavian mythology), 6: 755, 20: 2809
finding of witches, 7: 880-1
in Africa, 7: 880-1
in Europe, 6: 785-6, 7: 880-1
see also pricking of witches
fingernails, 7: 883
fingers, 7: 882-3
crossed for luck, 7: 996
Evil Eye averted by, 7: 996
of God, in art, 7: 996
healing by, 7: 882
mutilation of, 7: 883
to nose, 7: 997
in palmistry, 8:1108
pointing of, 7: 883 wedding ring and, 16: 2209
see also thumb
Finland, 7: 884-8
gods of, 7: 885
see also Ukko
mountains and, 13: 1784
Finney, Charles G. (revivalist), 6: 764, 9: 1227, 1230
Finn mac Cumaill (Irish hero), 2: 271, 7: 888-891
Cu Chualainn compared with, 7: 888 father of, 7: 889
head and, 8: 1143

salmon and, 7: 890, 16: 2281
shadow of Cuirrech and, 17: 2348
shape-shifting by, 1: 103
fir (tree), 7: 891-2
fire, 7: 893-9
Celtic festivals of, see Beltane; Samhain
as element, 6: 742
end of the world and, 6: 753, 756, 760, 16: 2292
immunity to, of saints, see incombustibility Indian god of, see Agni
oak tree and, 7: 895
Parsees and, 1: 93, 7: 894, 14: 1985
at Pentecost, 6: 761
in Persian religion, 1: 93
phoenix and, 7: 896, 15: 2033, 2036
robin and, 16: 2222, 20: 2837
sacred:
of Brigit at Kildare, 2: 284
of Parsees, 14: 1985
of Sai Baba, 16: 2267
sacrifice and, 1: 92-3, 3: 318, 4: 970, 7: 894
Shetland festival of, see Up-helly-aa
Slavs and, 17: 2396
stolen from the gods, 15: 2094-5
by Prometheus, 7: 894, 15: 2094
by trickster, 19: 2664
wren and, 20: 2837
Zoroastrian fire temple, 20: 2870
see also ashes; bonfire; cremation; fire-fly; Fire of Heaven (Tarot card); fireworks; hearth; May Day; need-fire; will-o-the-wisp; Yule
fire-fly, 10: 1347
Fire of Heaven (Tarot card) see Tower struck by Lightning
firmament, 7: 899
Firmat, William, boar and, 16: 2276
first, 7: 900-1
first-born, sacrifice of, 7: 900
Janus as god of beginnings, 10: 1388
in New Year customs, 7: 901
see also First Foot; first fruits; first man; first woman
Firstborn Church of Christ, 14: 2016
First Foot (New Year custom), 7: 901, 13: 1865
evergreens and, 9: 1229
salt and, 16: 2282
first fruits, 7: 900, 16: 2211
Swazi ceremonies of, 16: 2213
first man, creation of man, 7: 902-5
African myths of, 4: 556
in Cabala, see Adam Kadmon
in Christianity, see Adam earth and, 7: 903
in Gnostic beliefs, 7: 905
Indian myth of, see Yama
Melanesian myths of, 12: 1697
Sumerian myth of, 4: 473-4, 12: 1717
in Zoroastrianism, see Gayomart
first woman:
in Christianity, see Eve
in Greece, see Pandora
in Teutonic mythology, see Embla
fish, 7: 906-9
as aphrodisiac, 11: 1558
Astarte and, 1: 134
Atargatis and, 8: 1119
in cave art:
Australian, 2: 169
European, 3: 365
as Christian symbol, 7: 906, 908
gods as, 7: 906
Vishnu, 20: 2746
imitative magic used to obtain, in Mauritius, 20: 2793
Jonah and, 10: 1429
sex and, 7: 909
as witch's familiar, 7: 908
zodiac sign of the Fishes, see Pisces
see also herring; mermaids and mermen; salmon; trout Fisher King (Maimed King; Grail legend), 7: 909, 8: 1058f, 1061, 1064, 14: 1988
Bran and, 8: 1061
Joseph of Arimathea and, 8: 1062, 1065
Waste Land of, 8: 1059, 1064f
Fishes, the (zodiac sign, in astrology), see Pisces Fisk University Singers, 1: 63
five, 14: 1895
fingers, 7: 882
fifteen and, 6: 863
five-pointed star, see pentagram
names adding to, 14: 1895
in Pythagoreanism, 15: 2146
five-leaf grass (herb), see cinquefoil
flabellum,* 6: 841
Flagellants, 7: 910, 910, 17: 2331
flagellation, 7: 910
in cult of Dionysus, 5: 584, 7: 991
medieval Christian sect, see Flagellants as purification, 7: 910
sex and, 7: 910
flamen (Roman priest), 15: 2089, 16: 2234
Flamen Dialis, 11: 1460-1
flea, 10: 1347, 14: 1964
Fletcher, Sarah, ghost of, 8: 1131
fleur-de-lis, 11: 1534
Fliess, Wilhelm, Freud and, 9: 1195
flight into Egypt, the (Holy Family):
in Bulgarian mural, 10: 1406
fig tree and, 6: 864
flint, 18: 2490
see also elf-bolts, Grimes Graves floating (swimming) of witches, 6: 786
flood, deluge, 7: 912-6
Australian legend of, 7: 968
in Genesis, see Noah
Greek legends of, 7: 715, 15: 2095
Indian legends of, 7: 915
Mesopotamian legends of, 6: 755, 7: 912-3, 8: 1019, 16: 2264
North American Indian legends of, 4: 496, 7: 968, 14: 1883-4
see also lost lands
Floralia (Roman festival), 18: 2466
Flower, Joan (witch), 14: 1904, 15: 2112
Flower, Margaret and Philippa (witches), 6: 839
flower arrangement, Japanese, 20: 2860
flowers, see plants and flowers
Fludd, Robert, 3: 326, 326, 327, 7: 917-8
blood distilled by, 9: 1236
Cabala and, 3: 326, 326, 7: 918
geomancy and, 7: 986
macrocosm/microcosm and, 2: 251, 7: 917, 918, 11: 1573, 12: 1612
Rose Cross and, 16: 2241
on the ruby, 10: 1413
on the universe, 3: 322, 19: 2370, 2371
flute (musical instrument):
of Marsyas, preserved at Sicyon, 16: 2177
in Roman religion, 16: 2230
sacred, in Brazil, 2: 273, 275
fly (insect), 10: 1348
St Colman and, 16: 2278
fly agaric (Amanita muscaria; hallucinogenic mushroom), 5: 649, 652, 15: 1790, 1790
flying ointment (witchcraft), 7: 918-9
Francis Bacon on 7: 918
Basque witches and, 2: 201, 202, 203
bat's blood used in 2: 205
broomstick and, 2: 286
Canon Episcopi on, 7: 918
French witches and, 7: 918, 7: 957
Isabel Gowdie and, 8: 1056
physiology of, 7: 918
Reginald Scot on, 7: 918
Flying Roll, 10: 1416
flying saucers (unidentified flying objects, see UFOs),
Fo-hi (legendary founder of Chinese empire), 19: 2733
foliate heads, in medieval churches, 14: 1903, 19: 2719, 2723
folkplays, 5: 638, 7: 920-2, 933
see also mummers; Plough Monday folktales, 7: 923-5
lion in, 11: 1536
see also Grimm; Jack font (Christianity), 6: 737, 8: 1022
food and drink, 5: 649, 7: 926-33
as aphrodisiacs, 11: 1557, 1558-9
honey, 9: 1238
oyster, 7: 909, 11: 1558
Celts and, 8: 1059
cauldron and, 3: 363, 8: 1059
fish as, 7: 908
Gypsies and, 8: 1105
imitative magic used to obtain, 7: 928
Islamic dietary rules, 7: 932
Jewish dietary rules, 7: 931-2
see also kosher
marriage and, 12: 1637-9
peacock as, 14: 2000
pig as, 15: 2039
Roman household spirits of, see Penates
taboos concerning, 7: 929
at witches' sabbath, 16: 2255
see also alcohol; bread; corn; fasting; harvest; honey; kava; libation; mushroom; rice; salt; sin eater; wine fool, 7: 933-6
in Abbots Bromley horn dance, 9: 1250
of Finn, see Lomna
in folkplays, 7: 920-22
North American Indians and, 7: 934-5
Pueblo, 7: 934, 15: 2132, 2134
Fool (Tarot card), 2: 278, 279, 7: 936, 18: 2568, 2569, 2570
foolish fire (ignis fatuus), see will-o-the-wisp foot (body), 2: 251
divination by, see foot reading reflexology, 16: 2169
see also toe
football, 7: 976, 976,
footprint, sacred, on Adam's Peak, 15: 2043
foot reading (solistry; divination), 14: 1967
forces, 7: 936-7
see also correspondences
ford, symbolism of, 11: 1504 forehead, lines on, as key to personality, 5: 599, 15: 2036 forest, in Finland, 7: 884
see also Forest Perilous; wildwood
Forest Perilous (Arthurian legend), 20: 2799
Forgione, Father Pio (Padre Pio), 14: 1961-2, 18: 2483, 2485, 2485, Forman, Simon, 15: 2061, 2063
Fort, Charles, 4: 461, 7: 937-8, 17: 2447
Fortuna (Roman goddess of fortune), 16: 2235, 20: 2789
Isis and, 10: 1365, 1366
Fortunate Isles, see Isles of the Blest
Fortune, Dion (Violet Mary Firth), 7: 939-40
on artificial elementals, 11: 1583
Crowley and, 7: 940
on the Devil, 4: 573
Fraternity of the Inner Light founded by, 7: 940
Golden Dawn and, 7: 940
on the magic circle, 3: 423

psychic attack and, 7: 939, 15: 2114
Western Mystery Tradition and, 20: 2784-6
fortune , wheel of, 20: 2789
in fortune-telling (cards), 3: 343-4
in medieval symbolism, 20: 2789, 2790
Tarot and, see Wheel of Fortune
fortune-telling:
by cards (cartomancy), 3: 342-7
Tarot cards, 3: 344-7, 18: 2567, 2572
Gypsies and, 8: 1108
by scrying, 17: 2315, 2317
see also palmistry; tea-leaf reading
forty, 7: 940-1
Forwald, Haaken (PK researcher), 15: 2120
Fothad Canainne (Caindia, Fair God; Irish god), 8: 1143 Foundation for Research on the Nature of Man, 15: 2110
founding of Rome, 7: 942-5, 12: 1644 see also Palilia; Romulus and Remus
fountain, 7: 945-6
symbolism of 7: 945, 11: 1504
of youth, 7: 946, 20: 2771
four, 14: 189, 19: 2613
four directions, see directions
four elements, see elements four humours, theory of, see humours kuphi and, 10: 1328
names adding to, 14: 1893
in Pythagoreanism, 15: 2146
Fournet, St Andrew, 18: 2486, 2488
Four Noble Truths (Buddhism), 3: 297 fox, 9: 1271
jackal and 9: 1271,
in Japan, 10: 1395, 14: 1941
Samson and, 13: 1791-2
Fox, George (founder of the Quakers), 7: 946-7, 11: 1531
Fox, Oliver, out-of-the-body experiences and, 14: 1947
Fox family (Spiritualism), 17: 2438, 2438,
fox fire, see will-o'-the-wisp
foxglove (deadman's fingers; plant), 9: 1185, 15: 2050
Frances of Rome, St, 20: 2749
Francis, Elizabeth (Chelmsford witch), 6: 840
Francis I (of France), as hermaphrodite, 16: 2190
Francis of Assisi, St, 7: 947-8, 16: 2278
by Bellini, 7: 948, 11: 1501
by Giotto, 16: 2273
stigmata of, 7: 947, 948, 18: 2482, 2486
wolf of Gubbio and, 20: 2819, 2821
Francis de Sales, St, 7: 949, 13: 1812
Francis of Paola, St, 18: 2485
Frankenstein (novel) 9: 1236, 16: 2300
film of, 7: 872
frankincense, 10: 1328
Fraternity of the Inner Light, 7: 940
Fraudulent Mediums Act (1951), 13: 1757
Frazer, Sir James George:
on divine king and dying god, 5: 676
folktales, his theory of origin of, 7: 925
on Jewish pig taboo, 7: 932
magic, his classification of, 5: 590, 10: 1309, 18: 2538
on the threshold, 19: 2615
see also Golden Bough, The Frederick II, Emperor (of Sicily), 10: 1379
Frederick the Great, Freemasonry and, 7: 954
Freemasonry, 7: 950-6
Cagliostro and, 3: 328
Christianity and, 7: 951, 952, 956
French Revolution and, 7: 954
Golden Dawn and, 8: 1043
Illuminati and, 10: 1303-4
Mormonism and, 13: 1773
Nazism and, 13: 1829
Papus and, 14: 1974
Rosicrucians and, 16: 2245
Free Spirit, Brethren of the, 6: 763 free will, see predestination and free will French Revolution, 7: 957
Freemasonry and, 7: 954
French witchcraft, 2: 235f, 6: 783, 7: 918, 957-61, 8: 1031
in Basque region, 2: 201-3, 7: 958-959, 961 Freud, Sigmund, 7: 962-4
bisexuality and, 9: 1195
Breuer and, 7: 963, 15: 2068
Cabala and, 7: 963
cocaine taken by, 5: 652
death wish defined by, 7: 963
on dreams, 5: 646-8, 7: 963
extra-sensory perception and, 7: 963
Fliess and, 9: 1195
ghosts and, 7: 1008
hypnosis and, 7: 963
hysteria and, 7: 963, 15: 2068
id, ego, and superego defined by, 7: 963
Jung and, 11: 1456, 1458
libido defined by, 7: 963
'oceanic feeling' named by, 13: 1814
Oedipus complex and, 7: 963, 10: 1329, 16: 2212
on the Satanic pact, 5: 652
on sex, 7: 962, 963
on the unconscious, 7: 962
Freyja (Scandinavian goddess), 7: 965-6
her chariot drawn by cats, 3: 355
Frigg and, 7: 965
meaning of the name, 7: 965
as mother goddess, 13: 1782
necklace of, see Brisingamen
Freyr (Scandinavian god), 7: 965-6, 16: 2289
boar of, see Gollinborsti
horse and, 1: 106, 7: 966
meaning of the name, 7: 965
at Ragnarok, 16: 2292
ship of, see Skipbladnir friars, origin of, 7: 947, 949
begging friars, 12: 1698
friar's lantern, see will-o'-the-wisp Friday, 4: 546, 7: 966
see also Good Friday
Friends, Society of, see Quakers
Friends of Truth (associates of George Fox), 7: 947
Frigg (Scandinavian goddess), 7: 965-6
Frija (Germanic goddess), 7: 965
Fritsch, Theodor, 7: 991
Frød, King (of Denmark), 7: 966
frog, 7: 967-8
in trial by ordeal (in Kenya), 14: 1904
witches and, 6: 838, 7: 969
frost, 20: 2812-3
Frost, Gavin and Yvonne (modern witches), 13: 1758
frumenty (food), 8: 1120
Fufluns (Etruscan god), Bacchus identified with, 6: 781
Fu Hse, I Ching and, 9: 1282, 1282, 1285
Fu-Hsing (Chinese god), 14: 1983
Fulda (Germany), witches burnt at, 6: 785
Fuji, Mount (Japan), 10: 1389
Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International, 17: 2435
fumigation, in medicine, 14: 2010
funeral, see burial; cremation
Furbaide the Horned (Celtic hero), 9: 1249
Furies (Erinyes, Eumenides, the 'kindly ones', Moirai), 6: 842, 7: 968-70
Fuseli, Henry:
Nightmare, 10: 1330-1, 13: 1868
future, see divination; fate; predestination and freewill
fye (double), 5: 615
fylgya (double), 5: 615

G

Gabble Ratchets (Wild Hunt), 20: 2796
Gabley, Mother (witch), 5: 719, 15: 2112
Gabriel (angel), 1: 101
Koran dictated by, 7: 971, 15: 2100, 16: 2198
south and, 5: 588
Gabriel Hounds (Wild Hunt), 20: 2796
Gaia (Greek goddess), see Ge
Galahad (Arthurian knight), 7: 971-3
Grail and, 7: 971, 8: 1065
Lancelot and, 7: 971, 973, 11: 1498
Parsifal and, 7: 971, 973, 14: 1989
sword in the stone and, 7: 971
Galatians (mummers), 7: 920
Galatians, St Paul's epistles to, 14: 1994, 1995
Galen, 2: 251
four humours theory and, 6: 742
on frogs, for toothache, 7: 968
incantations rejected by, 5: 594
Galgani, St Gemma, 13: 1845, 16: 2272, 18: 2484
Gall, Franz Joseph (phrenologist), 15: 2036
galop infernal (French dance), 3: 351
Galton, Sir Francis:
apparitions, visions, and, 20: 2747, 2748,
Sir William Crookes and, 4: 485
games, 7: 974-8
psi ability in games of chance, 15: 2118
Roman, 11: 1461-2, 16: 2230
see also children's games; Olympic Games
Ganapati (Hindu god), see Ganesha
Gandhi, Mahatma, 9: 1220, 1266, 12: 1599, 1600
Mme Blavatsky and, 12: 1600
fasting and, 6: 841
relics of, 16: 2177
Gan Eden (rabbinic paradise), 14: 1983
Ganesha (Ganapati; Hindu god), 6: 745, 9: 1212, 12: 1599
Ganga (Indian deity), 7: 979
Ganges (river), 7: 979-80
pilgrimage to, 7: 980, 13: 1864, 15: 2043
Ganymede (Greek mythology), 20: 2865, 2866
ganzfeld, in ESP research, 6: 809, 15: 2110
garden, 9: 1264, 11: 1500, 1501
Biblical, olive and, 14: 1920
Japanese, 20: 2856, 2857
as paradise,14: 1977
Venus and, 19: 2723
see also Eden, garden of Gardner, Gerald, 13: 1758
modern witchcraft and, 4: 467
Gareth (Arthurian knight), 1: 122
garlic, 7: 980, 15: 2049
Hecate and, 7: 980
as protection against vampires, 19: 2704, 2705
Garm (hound of death; Scandinavian mythology), at Ragnarok, 6: 755, 16: 2292
garnet (jewel), 10: 1414, 18: 2551
Garnier, Gilles (werewolf), 20: 2781, 2782
Garrett, Eileen, 7: 981
garter, 7: 981
in modern witchcraft, 13: 1756
Order of, see Order of the Garter
Garuda, 2: 228, 229, 9: 1212, 19: 2618
Garvey, Marcus (Negro leader), 19: 2614
gate, gateway:
Janus and, 10: 1387

Mycenae, Lion Gate at, 19: 2616
see also threshold
Gathas (Zoroastrian sacred texts), 7: 981, 14: 1912, 20: 2872-3, 2874, 2875, 2880
Gattefossé, René-Maurice, and aromatherapy, 1: 119
Gaudí y Cornet, Antoní, his Church of the Holy Family, Barcelona, 16: 2187
Gaufridi, Father Louis, 1: 69-70, 15: 2082
Gaule, Rev. John, Matthew Hopkins attacked by, 5: 692
Gauquelin, Michel (statistics in astrology), 1: 144
Gautama Buddha, see Buddha
Gawain (Arthurian knight), 1: 122-3, 125, 7: 982-5
Grail and, 7: 971, 982-4, 8: 1062, 20: 2799
Green Knight and, 7: 982-5, 8: 1149, 14: 1903
sword not drawn from stone by, 7: 971
Gayomart (first man; Zoroastrianism), 1: 68, 7: 903, 905, 14: 1912
Ge (Gaia; Greek goddess), 5: 687, 688, 19: 2699
Gearheart, Livingstone, on spontaneous combustion, 17: 2448
Geb (Egyptian god), 4: 472, 472-3, 6: 732, 9: 1257
Geber (Jabir ibn Hayyan), 8: 1041
Gedda, Professor Luigi, research on twins, 19: 2686
Gee, Donald (Pentecostalist), 14: 2006
geesers, see mummers
Gefion (giantess; Scandinavian mythology), 7: 965
Gehenna, 9: 1170
Geirrod (giant; Scandinavian mythology), 11: 1543, 19: 2608
Geller, Uri, 7: 985, 12: 1626, 15: 2122
gematria, 3: 327, 7: 985-6, 8: 1066
Gemini (the Twins; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 142-4, 5: 587, 7: 986
Castor and Pollux and, 7: 986, 19: 2685
Mercury (planet) and, 7: 986
Genesis, book of:
creation of man described in, 7: 903
creation of the world described in, 4: 471, 475
Flood story in, 7: 912
twelve tribes of Israel in, 11: 1544
Geneva gown (Calvinist garb), 4: 466 genius, 8: 1093-4, 16: 2334
genius loci*, 8: 1092-4
Lares and, 11: 1510, 16: 2234
Genshin (Japanese priest), 1: 95-6
Geoffrey of Monmouth (historian):
on King Arthur, 1: 122-3, 3: 336
Gawain, 7: 982
Merlin, 12: 1706
Morgan le Fay, 13: 1768
on Gog and Magog, 8: 1017
geomancy (divination), 7: 986-7
Bulwer Lytton and, 11: 1670
George, St:
dragon and:
in Ethiopian MS, 9: 1203
in Ethiopian mural, 16: 2278-9
in mumming plays, 7: 920, 921, 922
Gerald of Wales, see Giraldus Cambrensis
Gereint, son of Erbin (Mabinogion), 11: 1570, 1572
Germanen Order, 8: 991-2, 11: 1537
antisemitism of, 8: 991-2
Nazism and, 8: 991-2, 13: 1829
runes and, 16: 2251
Germanic Belief Fellowship, 13: 1838
Germanic (or Teutonic) mythology, 7: 993-6
Anglo-Saxon mythology related to, 7: 993
dwarfs in, 5: 672
first woman myth of, see Embla
giants in, 8: 1017
gods of, 7: 993
see also Heimdall; Holda
Grimm brothers and, 8: 1084
heroes of, see Siegfried; Wolfdietrich Scandinavian mythology related to, 7: 993
spear in, 7: 995
German Order (O.S. Reuter), 13: 1839
German Religious Fellowship (O.S. Reuter) 13: 1838
German witchcraft, 6: 783,787, 7: 988-90
see also Bamberg witches; Brocken
Germany, see Germanen Order; Germanic mythology; German witchcraft; List, Guido von; Nazism; neopagan German cults; New Templars
Gerovit (Herovit, Slav god), 17: 2399
Gertrude, St, mice and, 16: 2279
Geryon, cattle of, Hercules and, 9: 1189
gesture, 7: 996-7
Buddha and, 7: 997
in dance, 4: 533, 7: 883, 997
in Egypt, 7: 997
in magic, 7: 997
in the Mass, 7: 997
mimicry and, 10: 1309-10
as protection against the evil eye, 6: 818
in yoga, 20: 2849
see also kiss
Gethsemane, garden of, 14: 1920
Gèvaudan, werewolf of, 20: 2782
Ghana (Africa), see Ashanti
al-Ghazali (Algazel), 4: 564, 7: 998, 10: 1349, 1373, 11: 1531
Ghost Dance (of North American Indians), 7: 999-1000, 8: 1071, 14: 2015, 2016, 20: 2816
ghosts, 7: 1001-8, 16: 2203
animal, 7: 1005
horses, 9: 1253
astral travel and, 7: 108
burial and, 3: 315, 7: 1004
Bushmen and, 3: 318
divination by (necromancy), 13: 1834
explanations of, 7: 1007-8
in films, 7: 872-4
Inuit beliefs, 10: 1353-4
Japanese, 7: 1002-3
Navaho Indians and, 13: 1826
in New Guinea, 13: 1848
Nuer and, 17: 2420
in the Ozarks, 14: 1951
perfume and, 14: 2011
psychical research and, 7: 1008
Pueblo Indians and, 15: 2132
at Reculver (Kent), 3: 303
Roman, see Lemures
in Scottish and Border ballads, 17: 2313
of ships, 17: 2321
in Southeast Asia, 17: 2429-30
see also ancestor worship; apparition; haunted houses; phantasms of the living; poltergeists ghoul, origin of the word, 10: 1418
ghul (jinn), 10: 1418
giants, 6: 830, 8: 1015-8
Babylonian, see Humbaba
in the Bible, 8: 1017
Watchers and, 4: 572, 8: 1015
British, see Cerne Abbas giant; Gog and Magog; Idris; Tyrnoc
in creation myths 8: 1015, 1017
Scandinavian, 8: 1017, 16: 2290
cyclopean buildings and, 8: 1017
in Germanic mythology, 8: 1017
in Greek mythology, 8: 1017
see also Atlas; Cyclops; Orion; Titans
heroes and, 8: 1015, 1017, 1018
Guy of Warwick, 8: 1098
Hercules, 8: 1098
Jack, 8: 1016, 10: 1380, 1382
in Hittite mythology, see Upelluri
Indian, 8: 1015
Iroquois myth of, 10: 1362
in Lapland (Stallo), 11: 1509
Persian, 18: 2474
of St Michael's Mount, see Cormelian
in Scandinavian mythology, 8: 1017
at Ragnarok, 16: 2292
Thor and, 8: 1017, 1112, 11: 1543, 19: 2608-2610
see also Gefion, Hrimthursar, Jotunheim Vafthrudnir; Ymir
treasure and, 10: 1381, 1382
volcanoes as burial places of, 8: 1017
Gifford, George (writer on witchcraft), 5: 690
Gifford, Elmer (New Thought minister), 13: 1862
Gifford, Robert Swain (automatic painter), see Thompson-Gifford case
Gildas (historian), 1: 121
Gilgamesh, 4: 558, 8: 1018-9
flood legend in Epic of, see Utnapishtim giant Humbaba and, 20: 2803
Hittites, Hurrians, and, 9: 1223
Ishtar and, 8: 1019
serpent and, 6: 792-3, 8: 1019,
Gill, Madge (psychic artist), 2: 172, 174
Gilles de Rais, 2: 246, 4: 1107-8, 8: 1020-1
Gillingham (Kent), Jezreelites at 10: 1416
gimmal (ring), 16: 2208
Giradius, necromantic bell of 13: 1836
Giraldus Cambrensis (Gerald of Wales):
on barnacle geese, 8: 1052
on Morgan le Fay, 13: 1768
poltergeist phenomena described by, 15: 2064
Girling, Mary Anne (founder of Walworth Jumpers), 8: 1021, 20: 2764
Girlingites, see Walworth Jumpers
Giuliani, St Veronica, 18: 2485
Glamis castle, 8: 1128-29
glamour, 15: 2113
Glanvill, Joseph, 17: 2414
on the Drummer of Tidworth, 15: 2065
seances conducted by, 13: 1837
on witchcraft, 9: 1210
Glasgow, arms of, 16: 2222, 2281, 2281
Glass Mountain, 8: 1021
Glastonbury (Somerset) 8: 1022-7
Arthurian legends and, 1: 125, 2: 391, 8: 1022, 1023, 1027
as Avalon, 1: 125, 2: 176, 8: 1022, 1023, 1027
Celts and, 8: 1022, 1023
Chalice Well at, 8: 1022, 1023
Christianity at, 8: 1022, 1023
St Dunstan and, 8: 1023
Grail and, 8: 1022, 1024
Joseph of Arimathea and, 8: 1022, 1024, 1026
St Michael and, 8: 1022, 1023
St Patrick and, 8: 1022, 1024
relics at, 16: 2179
holy thorn of, 8: 1025, 1026, 1026, 1135
William of Malmesbury on, 8: 1024
Zodiac, 8: 1027
Gleipnir (Scandinavian mythology), 5: 674
glossolalia, see speaking in tongues gloves, Easter and, 5: 699 glow-worm (insect), 10: 1347
gnomes (elementals), 6: 743
gnosis, 8: 1028
Gnostic gems (amulets), 8: 1028, 1029
Gnosticism, 8: 1028-1031

Cabala and, 3: 323, 324
Christianity and, 8: 1028-31
creation of man and, 7: 905
demiurge in, 4: 564, 5: 668, 8: 1028, 1029
dualism and, 5: 668, 669, 6: 791, 8: 1028
esoteric Christianity and, 6: 768-9
Hermetica and, 9: 1197
Jesus and, 3: 408, 8: 1029-30, 16: 2283
Judaism and, 8: 1028
light and darkness in, 11: 1527
Manicheans and, 12: 1621-4
St Paul and, 14: 1996-7
Satanism and, 16: 2283
self, selfhood, in, 12: 1613
Simon Magus and, 8: 1029, 17: 2372
soul in, 8: 1030
goat, 8: 1031-3
the Devil as:
Eliphas Levi on, 2: 195, 195
Tarot card, 6: 863
witches and, 2: 195, 196, 235, 4: 573, 6: 785, 788, 7: 961, 8: 1031, 1032
Dionysus and, 8: 1033
Good Shepherd symbol and, 8: 1049
Lupercalia and 8: 1031
in Mesopotamia, 18: 2540
Pan and, 8: 1031, 1033
sacrificed, in Nepal, 16: 2265
sheep and goats (Christian metaphor), 8: 1033
in Valhalla, see Heidrun zodiac sign, see Capricorn
see also chimaera; scapegoat
goblins, 6: 829, 8: 1034
Gödel, Kurt, and time travel, 19: 2633
Godiva, Lady, 8: 1034-5
Godric, St, 6: 793
Goessen, Claire (witch) 7: 918
Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von, 8: 1036-9
Faust and, 6: 846, 847, 8: 1036-7, 1039, 14: 1960
Goetheanum (Dornach, Switzerland), 18: 2480, 2481
Gog and Magog (giants), 8: 1017, 1039
Goibniu (Celtic smith god), 8: 1059, 17: 2408 Gokhale, G. K., Gandhi and, 12: 1600
gold, 8: 1040-1
in alchemy, 1: 71-6, 6: 749, 751-2, 8: 1041
sun and, 4: 459, 8: 1041, facing title 11
yellow and, 4: 459
see also El Dorado; Golden Age
Golden Age, 14: 1980, 19: 2630-3, 2631
Cronus's reign as, 4: 484, 14: 1980, 19: 2630
Golden Ass, The (Apuleius), 10: 1377-8
Golden Bough, The (Frazer), 4: 574, 19: 2722
on animism, 1: 108
on divine king and dying god, 5: 676, 11: 1474
on Hallowe'en, 1: 87
magic classified in, 5: 590, 10: 1309, 18: 2538
on mistletoe, 13: 1750, 19: 2722
on Nemi, sacred grove of Diana at, 4: 574, 13: 1838, 19: 2724
on tree spirits, 19: 2722-3 golden calf, worship of the (Israelites), 3: 308-9
Golden Dawn, Order of the, 8: 1042-6
Blake and, 2: 242
Cabala and, 8: 1043-44
Crowley and, 4: 499-500, 8: 1044-5
Dion Fortune and, 7: 939
Freemasonry and, 8: 1043
holy guardian angel invoked by, 16: 2221
invisibility ritual of, 10: 1356
magic and, 8: 1043
Mathers and, 8: 1043-6, 12: 1670f, 20: 2843
offshoots of, 8: 1045
pentagram and, 14: 2002, 2003
Regardie and, 11: 2170
Rosicrucians and, 8: 1043, 1044, 1046, 16: 2245-46
Theosophical society and, 8: 1043
Vault of the Adepts of, 7: 939
vibration of divine names by, 19: 2731
A. E. Waite and, 8: 1045, 20: 2759
Yeats and, 2: 242, 8: 1044, 1045, 1045, 20: 2843
Golden Fleece, 8: 1046, 17: 2357
Jason's expedition to obtain, see Argonauts Golden Race, 19: 2631
golden temple (Amritsar), see Amritsar Golem, 8: 1047-8
film, 7: 872, 8: 1047
Goliath (Biblical giant), 8: 1017, 9: 1200
Goligher, Kathleen (medium), 12: 1690
Gollinborsti (mythical boar), 2: 250, 5: 674, 7: 965
Goll mac Morna (Irish legend), 7: 888
Gonds (Indian tribe), 17: 2419, 18: 2580
gong, 8: 1046
Good Friday, 5: 700
bread and, 2: 276
Spanish penitents on, 5: 698
Good Shepherd, 8: 1049-50, 17: 2357, 18: 2534
in Christianity, 8: 1049, 17: 2357, 18: 2534
Hermes as, 8: 1049
Hittite version of, 8: 1049
'good wine needs no bush', 9: 1229
goose, 8: 1050-2
see also barnacle goose
Gopal, Ram (Hindu dancer), 7: 883
Gopastami (Indian cow festival), 4: 469
Gordian knot, cut by Alexander the Great, 1: 82, 18: 2492, 2522
Gordon, General, 12: 1602, 1723, 1724
Goretti, St Mary, 16: 2270
Gorgons (Greek mythology), 8: 1053-4
Gosforth Cross (Cumberland), 4: 491, 11: 1543, 16: 2289
gospel, 8:, 1055, 10: 1409, 13: 1746
apocryphal, 13: 1853, 1854
Gospel according to the Hebrews, (apocryphal text), 13: 1854
gospel oak, 14: 1903
Gospel of Truth (Gnostic text), 8: 1028
Gosvami, Rupa, 11: 1492
Gottfried von Strassburg, 19: 2667, 2668
Gottschalk of Orbais, 15: 2080
Gouranga (Krishna Chaitanya; Indian saint), 8: 1115
Gowdie, Isabel (witch), 8: 1055-7
broomstick and, 2: 286, 8: 1056
covens and, 8: 1055
cow's milk magically stolen by, 18: 2494
Devil and, 8: 1056, 16: 2255
elf-bolts and, 8: 1056
fairyland visited by, 8: 1056 flying and, 8: 1056, 16: 2255
image magic and, 8: 1056
grace (Christianity), 8: 1057, 15: 2080
bhakti and, 11: 1468
Graces (Charites, Greek mythology), 8: 1057
in Botticelli's Primavera, 16: 2194, 2195
Graham, Billy (evangelist), 3: 407
Graham, James (quack-doctor):
celestial bed of, 8: 1110
earth-baths of, 5: 689
Grail, Holy, 1: 121, 122, 125, 3: 331, 333, 336, 8: 1058-65
appears to knights of Round Table, 7: 971
Celtic vessels of plenty and, 8: 1059-60
chalice from Last Supper as, 8: 1062-3
Galahad and, 7: 971, 8: 1065
Gawain and, 7: 971, 982, 8: 1062, 20: 2799
Glastonbury and, 8: 1022, 1024,
four Hallows seen by seekers of, 8: 2528
Joseph of Arimathea and, 8: 1022, 1024, 1062, 1065, 10: 1403
Lancelot and, 8: 1065, 11: 1498, 1498
Parsifal and, 7: 973, 8: 1061, 1064, 14: 1988
sword and, 7: 982, 8: 1058, 18: 2528
see also Fisher King
Grand Grimoire (Red Dragon), 8: 1090
on the magic circle, 3: 422
on the magic wand, 16: 2218
on pact with a demon 14: 1961
Grandier, Urbain, 1: 129, 14: 1961
granny-wells, 18: 2473
Gratiadei, Domenica (witch), 10: 1380
grave goods:
ghosts and, 7: 1004
Inuit, 10: 1354
Neolithic, 4: 511
Paleolithic, 3: 314, 4: 510
Parthian, 14: 1991
Grave, Robert, 13: 1791, 20: 2833
gravestone, see tombstone
Great Bear (Charles's Wain, Plough; constellation):
Charlemagne and, 3: 385
in Egypt, 17: 2341
Greek myth of, 2: 210, 4: 574
Mexican myth of, 2: 183
Great Beast (of Revelation), 8: 1066, 1067
Antichrist as, 8: 1066
Crowley as, 4: 499
Daniel and, 8: 1066
666 as number of, 8: 1066
sun and, 12: 1593-4
great chain of being, 8: 1067
Greater World Christian Spiritualist League, 10: 2660
Great Goddess, see Mother Goddess
Great Plains Indians, 8: 1068-72, 14: 1884 buffalo and, 8: 1068, 1069, 1071
dance and, 8: 1070
buffalo dance, 8: 1068, 1071
Sun Dance, 8: 1070, 18: 2503
see also Ghost Dance
gods of, 8: 1069, 1071
magic and, 8: 1072
medicine-men of, 8: 1070
peyote used by, 5: 652
skulls and, 8: 1072
talismans of, 8: 1072
tobacco and, 19: 2640
trickster of, see Coyote
visions sought by, 5: 711, 8: 1070
see also Blackfoot; Cree; Dakota; Pawnee; Sioux Greatrakes, Valentine, 7: 882
Greece, 8: 1073-80
altars in, 1: 92-3
bears in, 2: 210
Bronze Age in, see Mycenaean Greece, below
bull in, 9: 1246
Hercules, 8: 1077, 1188
Zeus, 8: 1075, 9: 1180
see also Minotaur
chronology of, 19: 2673
creation myths of, 1: 111, 4: 476
Prometheus and, 15: 2095, 2095, 2096
see also Deucalion and Pyrrha
Crete and, 4: 483, 8: 1074-5, 1076-80, 20: 2862-4
see also Minotaur
cursing in, 4: 521-2
death and, 4: 559, 12: 1608
dice in, 7: 975
dragon and, 5: 633
drama of, 5: 586, 636-7, 12: 1664, 16: 2288,

18: 2466
dreams and, 5: 645
see also gods, healing gods, below
dualism in, 5: 669, 6: 791, 12: 1610
dwarfs in, 5: 672
Egypt and, 10: 1365, 12: 1591, 17: 2335-36
end of the world and, 6: 755-6
epic poetry of, 19: 2672
see also Homer
fate and, 12: 1609
see also Fates; Nemesis
fertility goddess of, see Demeter first woman, myth of, see Pandora
flood legends of, 7: 915, 15: 2095
fountains and, 7: 945
giants in, 8: 1017
see also Atlas, Cyclops; Orion; Titans
gods of, 8: 1075
Dionysus contrasted with Olympians, 5: 584
earth and, 5: 688
food and drink of, see ambrosia; nectar
healing gods, 8: 1149, 13: 1748
home of, see Olympus, Mount
iconography of, 9: 1289-90
light and darkness associated with, 11: 1527
triple deities, 19: 2614
see also Fates; Furies; Gorgons; Graces
twelve Olympians, 8: 1076
twin gods, see Dioscuri victory of Olympians over Titans, 5: 688 wolves and, 20: 2819
see also Adonis; Aphrodite; Apollo; Ares; Artemis; Ate; Athene; Cronus; Demeter; Dionysus; Eros; Hades; Hecate; Helios; Hephaestus; Hera; Hermes; Hestia; Hypnos; Iris; Muses; Pan; Persephone; Poseidon; Selene; Uranus; Zeus
see also euhemerism hawthorn in, 8: 1134
head-dress in, 8: 1145
heresy in, 9: 1191
hermaphrodite deity in, 9: 1194
heroes of, 1: 49, 50, 9: 1201, 1202
see also Achilles; Argonauts; Bellerophon; Diomedes; Dioscuri; Hercules; Jason; Odysseus- Perseus; Prometheus; Theseus Hittite parallels with Greek mythology, 1: 111, 4: 484, 9: 1223 initiation rites in, 8: 1076
see also Eleusis
judgement of the dead and, 11: 1453
kingship in, 11: 1486
laurel and, 11: 1511, 15: 2048
life after death, beliefs concerning, 6: 791, 9: 1169
see also Charon, Elysium; Hades; judgement of the dead, above; soul, below lotus-eaters, legend of, 11: 1549
man, view of, 12: 1608
see also life after death, above
Mycenaean Greece, 8: 1074
Cretan influence on, 4: 483, 8: 1074
see also Trojan War
Mystery religions of, 13: 1807
see also Eleusis
Nature spirits of, see nymphs; satyrs
olive and, 14: 1920
oracles of, see oracles, Graeco-Roman
paradise and, 14: 1980, 1982
peacock in, 14: 1998
perfume in, 14: 2009
philosophy in, 13: 1641
Hermetica derived from, 9: 197, 1199
see also Anaxagoras; Anaximander; Aristotle; Empedocles; Epicurus; Heraclitus; Plato; Pythagoras; Sceptics; Socrates; Stoicism; Xenophanes
priests in, 14: 1927
relics in, 16: 2177 religious architecture of, 16: 2185-6 seal (animal) in, 17: 2325
soul, beliefs concerning, 10: 1313
Orphic myth of Dionysus and, 6: 791
Plato on, 1: 136-7, 10: 1313
see also pneuma; Psyche; reincarnation
spring festivals of, 18: 2465-6
swallow in, 18: 2513
swastika in, 18: 2517
temples of, 16: 2183, 2185
tree spirits, tree worship, in, 19: 2658, 2660-1
see also dryads
wheel in, 20: 2789
winter festivals of, 20: 2809
wryneck in, 20: 2839
see also Alexander the Great; Amazons; Athens; Corybantes; Oedipus; Olympic Games; Orpheus and Orphism Greek cross (crux quadrata, equal-armed cross), 3: 422, 4: 490
green, 3: 432, 8: 1081
Aphrodite and, 4: 459
copper and, 4: 459
fairies and, 6: 830
spring and, 8: 1081
see also emerald; Green Knight; Green Man
'green geese', 8: 1050
Green George, 8: 1081
Green Knight, Sir Gawain and the, 7: 982-4, 8: 1149, 20: 2799
Green Man (Jack in the Green), 7: 892, 8: 1081, 1081, 10: 1381
hawthorn and, 8: 1134
at Knutsford (Cheshire), 19: 2722-3
oak and, 14: 1903
Greensmith, Mother (witch), 19: 2692
Green Thursday, see Maundy Thursday
Gregory, W., on magnetism, 12: 1596
Gregory VII (pope), 3: 411
Gregory IX (pope), 20: 2762
Inquisition founded by, 3: 358, 9: 1192
Waldenses and, 20: 2760
Gregory XI (pope), 3: 361-2
Gregory of Nyssa, mystical experience and, 5: 710
gremlin, 8: 1082
Grendel (monster), 2: 214
Grenier, Jean (werewolf), 8:1082, 20: 2782
Gresham, Sir Thomas, pearl drunk by, 14: 2001
grey (colour), Mercury and, 4: 459
Grey, Lady Jane, ghost of, 8: 1130
griffin (griffon, gryphon), 20: 2807
Alexander the Great and, 1: 80
Griffith, Anne, head of, preserved at Burton Agnes, 8: 1131-2, 1133
Grimes Graves (Neolithic flint mine), 5: 687
Grimm, Jacob and Wilhelm, 8: 1082-8
folktales and, 8: 1082
Grimoire of Honorius the Great*, 8: 1090
frontispiece of, 16: 2218
incantations from, 5: 588
grimoires (magical texts), 8: 1089-90, 16: 2217
demons described in, 16: 2194
Satanic pact not important in, 14: 1961
see also Grand Grimoire; Grimoire of Honorius the Great; Grimorium Verum; Key of Solomon; Lemegeton; Necronomicon; Picatrix; Sacred Magic of Abra-Melin the Mage Grimorium Verum (grimoire), 8: 1090 invisibility formula in, 10: 1356
on names of power, 13: 1824
'Gringonneur' Tarot pack, 18: 2573
Grinsett, Abre, accused of witchcraft, 5: 693, 6: 839, 840
Griselda, 8: 1090
Groddeck, Georg, psychosomatic medicine and, 6: 835 grove, 8: 1090
see also Nemi
Gruzewski, Marjan (automatic painter), 2: 172
gryphon, see griffin
Guaita, Stanislas de (Rosicrucian), 2: 207
Papus and, 14: 1973
Gualter, Catherine (possessed girl), 9: 1275
Guarayo Indians (Bolivia), path symbolism and, 14: 1993
guardian spirits, 8: 1091-4
in Africa, 8: 1091-3
Buddhist, 3: 296
Chinese, 8: 1094
Christian, 8: 1-94, 12: 1621
Golden Dawn and, 16: 2221
Martinists and, 12: 1646, 1647
in Melanesia, 12: 1694
in New Guinea, 8: 1140, 12: 1695
Parsee, 14: 1985
in Sacred Magic of Abra-Melin, 16: 2260
Valentinus and, 8: 1028
see also ancestor worship; genius Guatemala, 13: 1740-1741
Guattari cave, prehistoric skull from, 3: 370, 4: 510
Guazzo, see Compendium Maleficarum
Gudea (of Lagash), 16: 2197
Guest, Lady Charlotte, 11: 1569, 1572
Guibourg, Abbé, 2: 235
Guinevere (Arthur's queen), 1: 122, 8: 1095, 11: 1498
guisers (guizards), see mummers
Gulval (Cornwall), Holy Well of, 18: 2472
Gundestrup (Jutland), cauldron of, 3: 363, 363, 374, 5: 708, 9: 1248, 20: 2791
Gungnir (spear of Odin), 5: 674, 7: 995, 14: 1911
Gunusu Dagh (mountain), see Dindyma
Gurdjieff, George Ivanovitch, 8: 1095-6
Ouspensky and, 8: 1095, 1096, 14: 1944, 1945
see also Subud
Gurney, Edmund, 8: 1097, 15: 2105-7
cross-correspondences and, 4: 493, 20: 2804
hypnotism/magnetism and, 8: 1097, 12: 1597
phantasms of the living and, 8: 1097, 15: 2106-7
Society for Psychical Research and, 8: 1097, 13: 1801, 15: 2105-7
Gurswitch, A., mitogenetic rays, 2: 163
Guyon, Madame, 15: 2149
Gwydion, 8: 1098, 11: 1540, 1572
Gwyn ap Nudd (Welsh legend), 7: 890, 8: 1023
Gypsies, 8: 1099-1106
tinkers and, 19: 2635, 2636

H

Habakkuk (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2098, 2099
Hadad (god), see Baal
Haddock, Dr J., 12: 1713
Hades (Aidoneus, Plouton), 8: 1107, 15: 2053
as god, 5: 688, 9: 1169, 15: 2054
cap of darkness and, 15: 2054

Hercules and, 15: 2054
horses and 15: 2054
Persephone and, 4: 563, 6: 748, 9: 1168, 14: 2012, 15: 2054, 19: 2721-2
Pluto identified with, 5: 688, 15: 2054
as the subterranean Zeus, 15: 2054
as underworld, 9: 1169, 11: 1453, 12: 1608
entrances to, 15: 2054
Hercules and, 9: 1176, 1189
Orpheus and, 14: 1934
Theseus and, 9: 1176, 14: 2014, 19: 2601
see also Cerberus
Haeckel, Ernst, Lemuria and, 11: 1514
Haggadah (Judaism), 10: 1435
hagiographa, 10: 1434
hagiography, 8: 1107 Hahnemann, Samuel Christian Friedrich (founder of homoeopathy), 9: 1234, 1235
Haigh, John (the 'vampire of London'), 19: 2704
haiku (Japanese verse form), 20: 2855
hair, 8: 1107-1110
18th cent. style, 8: 1147-48
Sikhs and, 17: 2371
witches and, 8: 1110
see also beard
hajj (Islam), 10: 1372, 12: 1675-6
Hakim (founder of Druzes), 5: 665
Halberstadt, 'scapegoat' at, 16: 2294
halcyon (bird), 8: 1111
Hallaton (Leics), hare pie at, 8: 1117, 1117
hallihoo, see caul
Hallowe'en, see All Hallows' Eve
Hallstatt (Celtic culture), 3: 373
hallucination, 18: 2457
apparitions as, 20: 2747, 2748
ghosts, 7: 1008
phantasms of the living, 8: 1097, 15: 2107
Census of Hallucinations, 15: 2107
drugs and, 5: 649-50, 652
see also peyote cults
ESP and, 6: 803, 18: 2457-9
mushroom and, 5: 649, 13: 1789-91
halo, 8: 1111
in Buddhist art, 1: 96, 96
in Christian art, 5: 619
hamadryads (Greek tree spirits), 5: 666, 14: 1899
hammer, 8: 1111
Hephaestus and, 8: 1111
Lapps and, 8: 1111
in Scandinavia, 8: 1111
Thor and, 5: 674, 8: 1111, 11: 1542, 19: 2608, 2608
sickle and, Communist symbol of, 8: 1111
Sucellos and, 8: 1111
Hammurabi (king of Babylon), 16: 2197
Hamza (Druze), 5: 665, 666
Hanafi school (Islam), 10: 1369
Hanbali school (Islam),10: 1369
hand, 2: 251
bronze, Roman, 7: 882
Buddha, ritual hand gestures of, 7: 997
in cave art, 3: 365, 366
in Hindu dance, 7: 997
in the Mass, 7: 997
Nigerian altar of, 1: 93
in salute, 7: 996
yoga, hand gestures in, 20: 2849
see also fingers; hand of glory; hand of God; palmistry; thumb handfasting (Scottish trial marriage), 12: 1637
hand of glory (charm), 3: 339-340, 8: 1112-4, 17: 2401
Handsel money, 7: 900, 17: 2446
Handsome Lake (Iroquois prophet), 10: 1361
Hanged Man (Tarot card), 18: 2571, 2571
Hanifa, Abu, 10: 1369
Hannahanna (Hittite goddess), 9: 1224
Hansel and Gretel, 20: 2798
Hanukkah (Feast of Dedication, Festival of Lights; Judaism), 3: 339, 10: 1438
Hanuman (Hindu monkey god), 8: 1114, 9: 1216
fiery tail of, 9: 1210
in Katha Kali dance, 5: 636
haoma (sacred plant; Zoroastrianism), 20: 2875
hara-kiri*, 8: 1114
Haranath, Sri, 8: 1114-5
Harappa (city, India), 10: 1336
Hardedef (Egyptian sage), 10: 1305
Hardinge-Britten, Emma (medium), 17: 2442
hare, 8: 1116, 1117
corn and, 8: 1116
divination and, 8: 1116, 14: 1921
Easter and, 5: 700, 720, 8: 1116
its foot as a charm, 5: 589, 8: 1116
in Hottentot myth of origin of death, 4: 555
lion and, 11: 1536
March and, 8: 1116
moon and, 8: 1116
North American Indians and, 19: 2663, 2664, 2666
Pan and, 14: 1973
rabbit and, 8: 1116
tortoise and, 8: 1117
as trickster, 19: 2663, 2664
witches and, 8: 1116
Hare Krishna (sect), 8: 1118
hare pie, scrambling for, 8: 1116
Harrer, Karl, 13: 1829
Harris, Joel Chandler, Brer Rabbit stories, 1: 62, 2: 283
see also Afro-American lore; Ananse Harrison, Michael, on spontaneous combustion, 17: 2448
harlequin, 19: 2667
dervish source of, 4: 566
Harmakhis (Re), 5: 644
Harmony Society (Rappites; religious sect), 4: 441
harp:
of Jews, hung on 'willow' trees in exile, 20: 2805 Harpies (monsters; Greek mythology), 8: 1118-9, 20: 2806-7 harpist, song of the (Egypt), 6: 736 Harpocrates, see Horus
Harranian religion, 8: 1119
harrowing of hell, 8: 1119, 9: 1175-6
in Christianity, 4: 558, 8: 1213, 9: 1175, 1175
other myths of, 9: 1175-6
Hartmann, Dr Franz, 11: 1582-3, 16: 2243
haruspicy (divination by entrails):
Etruscans and 5: 597, 11: 1538
Hittites and, 9: 1224
Romans and, 11: 1538, 16: 2235
harvest, 8: 1120-4
bells and, 8: 1124
birth and, 8: 1122-3
the dead and, 8: 1121-2
in Egypt, 8: 1122, 1122
fertility and, 5: 859, 8: 1122
first fruits of, 7: 900
hare and, 8: 1116
harvest festival, 4: 456, 7: 929, 8: 1120, 1124
in Greece, 14: 1920, 19: 2669
Khond sacrifice and, 8: 1123-4
last sheaf of corn, 4: 455, 456, 8: 1120, 19: 2722
ritual marriage and, 8: 1122
in Shetland Isles, 8: 1121, 1124
in Tibet, 8: 1124
in Trobriand Islands, 8: 1121
water and, 4: 456, 8: 1120, 1121, 1123
rain, 4: 455-56
harvest knots, 8: 1123
Harvest May, 19: 2722
harvest queen (corn sheaf), 8: 1123
al-Hasan (imam), 10: 1373
Hasidism (Jewish mysticism), 3: 323, 326, 8: 1125-26, 10: 1434
Buber and, 8: 1126
Cabala and, 3: 323, 326, 8: 1125-6
golem and, 8: 1048
tsaddikism in, 8: 1126
hatha yoga, 2: 279, 20: 2847-51
Hathor (Egyptian goddess), 6: 732
as cow, 1: 104, 2: 261, 4: 468, 468, 6: 732
creation of man and, 4: 473
Edfu, her annual journey to, 6: 735
as the eye of Re, 6: 733
as hippopotamus, 2: 261
moon and, 13: 1765
as mother of Horus, 9: 1257
Hatshepsut, temple of (Deir-el-Bahari), 1: 92
Hatti, land of, 9: 1222
Hattusas (modern Boghaz Koi; Hittite capital), 9: 1222
Hauffe, Frederica (seeress), 12: 1713
Hauhau (Maori religious movement), 12: 1632
haunts, haunted houses, 7: 1005, 8: 1127-1133, 9: 1261
see also Borley Rectory; Charmouth; Versailles adventure
Hawaii (Polynesia), 5: 635, 15: 2070, 2071, 2072
Hawaiki (Polynesian afterworld), 15: 2071
hawk, 8: 1133
Egyptian hawk-headed god, see Seker
see also falcon
hawthorn (shrub), 8: 1134-5, 15: 2049
Christ's crown of thorns and, 8: 1134, 1135
fairies and, 8: 1134, 1135
in Greece, 8: 1134
Green Man and, 8: 1134
holy wells and, 8: 1135
last load of harvest and, 19: 2722
May Day and, 8: 1134, 12: 1673
hawthorn globe, 8: 1135
hazel (tree), 8: 1135-6
divination by, 8: 1136
in dowsing, 5: 623, 8: 1135, 1136, 13: 1743
magic wands and, 8: 1135
Midsummer and, 13: 1743
St Philibert and, 8: 1136
as protection against lightning, 15: 2049
head, 8: 1137-44
beans and, in invisibility formula, 10: 1356
brazen speaking head of Sylvester, 14: 1961
carved, in medieval churches, see foliate heads
Celts and, 2: 271, 3: 375, 5: 660, 8: 1141
of Bran, 2: 271, 8: 1143
Finn and, 8: 1143
of Anne Griffith, preserved at Burton Agnes, 8: 1131-2 head-pot (Voodoo), 20: 2869
of John the Baptist, 8: 1142
Knights Templar and, 2: 195
of Medusa, 8: 1145
Odin and, 8: 1144
of Orpheus, 14: 1935
in Polynesia, 18: 2549
in South America, 5: 1233, 1237, 8: 1139, 1141

three heads of Thracian Rider god, 10: 2828, 19: 2610
yoga, headstand in, 11: 3073, 20: 2849
see also ear; eye; forehead; hair; head-dress; headhunting; headless spirits; nose; phrenology; scalping; skull
head-dress, 8: 1145-8
see also crown; hood; mitre
headhunting, 8: 1137
in Borneo, 2: 264, 264, 8: 1138, 1139
in Melanesia, 12: 1694
Nagas and, 8: 1138-9, 13: 1821, 18: 2579
in Peru, 10: 1325
in the Philippines, 8: 1138, 18: 2579
tattooing and, 18: 2579
headless spirits, 8: 1149
at New Year, 13: 1862
see also Green Knight
healing, medicine:
buttercup in, 3: 320
cat in, 3: 357
in China, 3: 399
see also acupuncture
cramp-rings in, 4: 469
dance in, 4: 529, 537
eagle in, 5: 684
elder tree in, 6: 737
frog in, 7: 968
fumigation in, 14: 2010
garlic in, 7: 980
herbs in, 9: 1180-86, 14: 2010
hypnotism in, 12: 1711-13
jade in, 10: 1382, 18: 2551
knots in, 18: 2493
laurel in, 11: 1511
lizard in, 11: 1540
magical, 5: 590, 20: 2792
'magnetism' in, 12: 1595-7, 1711
mandrake in, 12: 1617
Matthew Manning and, 12: 1633
North American Indians and:
Iroquois, 10: 1362
Navaho, 4: 530, 13: 1826-28
Pacific North-West, 14: 1957-8
Paracelsus and, 14: 1974
peacock in, 14: 1998
poisoning confused with, 15: 2060
rings in, 16: 2206
see also cramp-rings
runes in, 16: 2251
St John's wort in, 16: 2269
serpent in, 17: 2340
shamans and, 17: 2353
shrinking charms in, 1: 48
skull in, 17: 2386
snail in, 17: 2408
spider in, 17: 2435-7
spiritual, see faith healing spittle in 17: 2446
stork in, 18: 2491
swallow in, 18: 2513
talismans in 18: 2551
tobacco in, 19: 2640
urine and, 3: 320, 14: 1976, 19: 2699
vervain in, 19: 2728
wells, healing, 18: 2472-73
willow in, 20: 2806 see also disease; Galen; healing gods; Hippocrates; homoeopathy; medicine-man; panacea; radiesthesia; warts
healing gods, 8: 1149-52
Graeco-Roman, 5: 592, 8: 1149-52, 13: 1748
see also Asclepios
Hermetica and, 9: 1197
Imhotep as, 8: 1152, 10: 1305
Isis as, 8: 1152
heart, 9: 1159-63
weighed in judgement of the dead (Egypt), 6: 851, 9: 1161, 11: 1449, 1450-1, 1569, 16: 2295 see also Heart Number hearth, 9: 1163-5
chimney, 9: 1165
Greeks and, 9: 1164
house warming, origin of, 9: 1163
in India, 10: 1335
Romans and, 9: 1164, 16: 2234, 16: 2257
see also Yule; Yule log heather, 9: 1166
heaven, see paradise
Hebat (Hittite/Hurrian goddess), 9: 1222-3
Hebrew alphabet:
Cabala and, 1: 91, 3: 323, 13: 1823
numerology and, 7: 985
Tarot cards and, 1: 91, 3: 345, 18: 2567
see also Tau; Tetragrammaton Hebrews, see Jews
religion of the Hebrews, see Judaism
Hecate (goddess), 9: 1166-7
Artemis and, 4: 576, 9: 1166, 1167
by Blake, 9: 1166
crossroads and, 4: 495
dog and, 9: 1167
garlic and, 7: 980
Jason and, 9: 1167
moon and, 9: 1167
Persephone and, 14: 2012
threefold aspect of, 9: 1167
Zeus and, 9: 1166
Hector (Trojan hero), Achilles and, 1: 49
Hecuba, 19: 2672-3
Heddle, Bishop William (of the Peculiar People), 14: 2001
hedgehog, as witch's familiar, 17: 2414
Hedley Kow (fairy), 6: 829
Hedrickites (Mormon sect), 13: 177
Hegira (Islam), 9: 1167, 12: 1675, 13: 1760
Heidrun (goat; Scandinavian mythology), 16: 2170
Heilsgeschichte (salvation-history), 16: 2197-8
Heimdall (Scandinavian and Teutonic god), 16: 2289
Bifrost defended by, 15: 2154
horn of, 19: 2679
at Ragnarok, 16: 2292
ram and, 9: 1244
hei-tiki (Polynesian amulet), see tiki
Heket (Egyptian goddess), 7: 967
Hel (Scandinavian mythology), 9: 1176
Balder and, 2: 192
Loki the father of, 8: 1017
Helena, Empress:
churches built at Jerusalem by, 5: 700
true cross discovered by, 4: 490
Helen of Troy, 9: 1167
hatched from egg laid by Leda, 2: 192, 5: 718
by Moreau, 20: 2830
Theseus and, 19: 2601-2
Heliopolis (Egypt):
Atum-Re and, 4: 471, 6: 731, 735
as the centre of the earth, 13: 1824
creation myth of priesthood of, 4: 471, 6: 814
phoenix and, 15: 2033
Pyramid Texts and, 2: 257, 4: 471
Helios (Greek sun god), 18: 2502
Circe the daughter of, 3: 422
hell, 9: 1168-76
in Breton folk belief, see Anaon
Chinese beliefs concerning, 3: 398, 399, 9: 1176
in Christianity, 9: 1169, 1171-5, 1176
Dante on, 4: 542
by Giotto, 9: 1172-3
mouth of (in Christian art), 2: 211, 8: 1066, 9: 1174
by Orcagna, 11: 1447
by Signorelli, 4: 1544
in Torcello Cathedral, 11: 1449
Egyptian beliefs concerning, 9: 1169
Greeks and, 9: 1169
see also Hades
Hinduism and, 9: 1176, 11: 1466-7
Islam and, 9: 1176
see also Sirat
Jews and, 9: 1170-1
Mesopotamian beliefs concerning, 9: 1169
in Scandinavian mythology, see Hel Tibetan beliefs concerning, 9: 1176
in Zoroastrianism, 9: 1171, 20: 2873-4
Parsees, 14: 1988
see also harrowing of hell Hell-Fire clubs, 12: 1690
helmets, 8: 1147
hemlock (plant), 15: 2048
hemp, dervishes and, 13: 1814
henbane (plant), 15: 2048, 2050
Henry II, 8: 1026-7
Henry IV, consecrated oil and, 8: 2050, 14: 1914
Henry VII (Henry Tudor), 3: 336
Henry, John, 1: 62, 19: 2694-5
Hensley, George Went (snake-handler), 17: 2411-2
hepatoscopy, see liver, divination by Hephaestus, 9: 1177-8
Aphrodite and, 1: 113, 9: 1177
Hera and, 9: 1177
Orion and, 9: 1178
Prometheus and, 9: 1177, 1178, 15: 2095
thunderbolts made by, 8: 1111
volcanoes and, 9: 1177, 1178, 17: 2408
Etna, 9: 1178
Vulcano, 9: 1178
Vulcan (god) and, 9: 1178
Zeus and, 8: 1111, 9: 1177
Heptameron (Magical Elements; grimoire), 8: 1090, 16: 2217
Hera, 8: 1075, 1078, 9: 1179-80
Aphrodite and, 1: 112
Argus and, 6: 821
cow and, 9: 1180
Cretan origin of, 4: 480, 9: 1179-80
Dionysus and, 5: 583
fountain of Kanathos and, 7: 946
Hephaestus and, 9: 1177*
Hercules and, 5: 1279, 9: 1179, 1180, 1187-90
Juno identified with, 9: 1180
lily and, 11: 1532
moon and, 9: 1180
as mother goddess, 9: 1179-80
in Mycenaean Greece, 9: 1179
Olympia and, 9: 1179
peacock and, 14: 1998
Samos and, 9: 1179
Semele and, 5: 583
virginity of, annually restored, 7: 946
Zeus and, 2: 1271, 4: 460, 5: 583, 8: 2049, 9: 1179, 1180, 14: 1913
see also Judgement of Paris
Heracleon (Gnostic), 8: 1029, 1030
Heraclitus (Greek philosopher), end of the world and, 6: 755, 756
Herakles (Greek hero), see Hercules
heraldry, rune occultism and, 16: 2251
Héraut, Henri (artist), 5: 619
Herbert, Benson, 8: 113
herb Paris, 15: 2049
herb Robert, 9: 1185
herbs, 9: 1180-6, 15: 2048
in medicine, 9: 1180-6, 14: 2010
as protection against the Evil Eye, 6: 818
in ritual magic, 14: 2011
see also anemone; moly; soma; springwort;

tansy
Hercle (Etruscan god), Hercules identified with, 6: 781
Hercules (Herakles), 9: 1187-90
Amazons and, 1: 95, 9: 1189-90
Augean stables cleansed by, 9: 1188
Baal assimilated to, 2: 189
boar of Mount Erymanthus and, 9: 1187, 1188
cattle of Geryon and, 9: 1189
Cerberus and, 5: 611, 9: 1176, 1189
Cerne Abbas giant and, 6: 854
Ceryneian hind captured by, 9: 1188, 18: 2475
Chiron and, 3: 379
Christ compared with, 9: 1190
Cretan bull captured by, 8: 1077, 9: 1188
Deianeira and, 7: 995
Donar and, 7: 995
dwarfs and, 5: 672
Eurystheus and, 9: 1188
giants slain by, 8: 1017
Hades and, 9: 1176, 15: 2054, 19: 2601
Hera and, 9: 1179-80, 1187-90
Hesione saved from sea-monster by, 9: 1189
Hesperides and, 1: 117, 9: 1189, 1190
Hydra and, 9: 1188
Iolaus and, 9: 1187, 1188
Iphicles his twin brother, 9: 1188
Labours of, 9: 1187, 1188-9
lion of Cythaeron killed by, 9: 1188
lion of Nemea killed by, 9: 1188, 1188
mares of Diomedes and, 9: 1188
Megara and, 9: 1188
Nessus and, 9: 1189, 17: 2342
Prometheus and, 15: 2095, 2096
Romans and, 9: 1190
Stymphalian lake and, 9: 1188
Telephus his son, 18: 2477
Theseus and, 19: 2601
Zeus his father, 9: 1187-8
Herder, J. G., 8: 1038
heresy, 9: 1191-3
Christian, 9: 1191, 1191-3
enthusiasm and, 6: 762
Gnosticism and, 8: 1028
Joan of Arc accused of, 10: 1420
Knights Templar accused of, 11: 1482, 1483
see also Adamites; Arius; Bogomils; Cathars; Inquisition; Jansenists; Judaizers; Lollards; Modalism; Monophysites; Monothelitism; Nestorianism; Paulicianism; Valentinus; Waldenses
in Egypt, 9: 1191
in Greece, 9: 1191
Islamic, 9: 1191
Hereward the Wake, 9: 1194
Herla, King, 6: 831-2
herm, 15: 2025
hermaphrodite (androgyne), 9: 1194-5, 15: 1924
Adam and Eve as, 9: 1195
in alchemy, 14: 1924, 1924
in Dahomey, see Mawu-Lisa Francis I (of France) as, 16: 2190
Freud and, 9: 1195
in Greece, 9: 1194
Plato and, 15: 2051
moon and, 9: 1194
North American Indians and, 9: 1194-5
Shiva as, 9: 1195, 17: 2367
Hermaphroditos (Greek god), 9: 1194, 1194
Hermes, 8: 1078, 9: 1196, 17: 2337
Apollo and, 9: 1196
cap of darkness worn by, 15: 2054
Crete and, 9: 1196
the dead guided to Hades by, 3: 385
Eros and, 6: 765
Hermaphroditos and, 9: 1196
lyre invented by, 9: 1196
Mercury and, 12: 1702, 1703
Odysseus and, 3: 422
oracle of, 5: 600
Pan and, 14: 1972, 1973
Persephone and, 14: 2012
Perseus and, 8: 1053
phallic symbolism and, 6: 765, 15: 2025
serpent and, 17: 2337
see also caduceus
shepherds and, 8: 1049, 9: 1196
stones and, 9: 1196, 18: 2489
Thoth identified with, 9: 1197
trickster compared with, 19: 2665
see also Hermes Trismegistus
Hermes Trismegistus, 1: 75, 9: 1197
Thoth identified with, 6: 733, 9: 1197
Hermetica, 9: 1197-9
Hermetick Romance, The (Rosicrucian text), 16: 2243
Hermetic Society, founded by G. W. Russell, 16: 2252
hermit (eremite), 9: 1199
see also anchorite; Anthony, St; Arsenius
Hermit (Tarot card), 18: 2570, 2571, 18: 2173
Hermopolis (Egypt): creation myth of priesthood of, 4: 472
Thoth and,6: 733
hero, 9: 1200-4
Celtic, 3: 363, 4: 506
see also Arthur;, Cu Chulainn; Finn mac Cumaill; Furbaide the Horned; Gwydion Christian, see Charlemagne; George, St
dragons and, 5: 633
see also serpents, below
English, see Arthur; Beowulf; Drake, Sir Francis; Guy of Warwick; Hereward the Wake; Orfeo, Sir; Robin Hood Finnish, see Lemminkäinen; Vainämoinen
giants and, 8: 1015, 1017, 1018
see also Jack the Giant-Killer
Greek, 1: 49, 50, 9: 1201, 1202
see also Achilles; Argonauts; Bellerophon; Diomedes; Dioscuri; Hercules; Jason; Odysseus; Perseus; Prometheus; Theseus
Grimm brothers and, 8: 1082, 1085
Jungian view of, 18: 2537
in the Old Testament, see Samson Persian, see Rustem
Polynesian, 15: 2072
Russian, 9: 1203, 1204
Scandinavian, see Volsungs
serpents slain by, 17: 2337, 2338-9
see also dragons above
sleeping, 17: 2402-3
Teutonic, see Siegfried; Wolfdietrich
in United States folklore, 19: 2694-6
in the Ozarks, 14: 1951
see also culture hero
Herodiade, Herodias (goddess of witches), 6: 785
Herovit (Slav god), see Gerovit herring, 7: 909, 926
Hesiod (Greek poet), 8: 1075
Hesione (princess of Troy), saved from sea-monster by Hercules, 9: 1189
Hesperides (Greek nymphs), 1: 116, 117, 9: 1189, 1190
Hess, Rudolf (Nazi), 13: 1829-32
Hestia (Greek goddess), 9: 1164
Vesta identified with, 19: 2729
hexagram, 9: 1204
in alchemy, 9: 1204
in ritual magic, 9: 1204, 16: 2220
see also Star of David
Hexateuch (Bible), 13: 1745, 20: 2840
Israel's election described in, 6: 739
Hiawatha (Iroquois hero), 9: 1202, 10: 1359, 1359
Longfellow and, 1: 82-3, 10: 1359
Hickok, 'Wild Bill', 19: 2695, 2695
Hierapolis (Syria), Atargatis worshipped at, 5: 620
hieroglyphs (Egyptian), 1: 90
Hierophant, (Tarot card), see Pope
High Gods, 6: 859, 860, 9: 1205-6
Babylonian, see Marduk
Inuit, see Sila
Andrew Lang and, 9: 1205
Nilotic, 13: 1869
North American Indian, 9: 1206
sky phenomena and, 9: 1206, 17: 2391
Sumerian, see An Yahweh as, 9: 1206
Zeus as 9: 1206, 17: 2391
Zulu, 20: 2878
High Magic's Aid (Gardner), 13: 1757
High Priestess (Female Pope, Tarot card), 18: 2569, 2570
Hilaria (Roman festival), 18: 2466
Hilarion, St, 14: 2008
Hildegard of Bingen, St, 20: 2749
hill-billies, 14: 1950-3
Hill Reddi tribe (India), 15: 2084-5
hills, see mountains
Hilton, Walter (mystic), 3: 425, 9: 1206, 11: 1456
Himeros (Greek mythology), 6: 766
Himmler, Heinrich (Nazi), 13: 1829-30, 1840
and Deutsche Ahnenerbe, 11: 1522, 13: 1840
Hina (Hine; Polynesian goddess), 15: 2070, 2072
Hinayana (Buddhism), 3: 300, 11: 1206
Hind Etin (demon), 8: 1136
Hinduism, 9: 1207-1221
altars and, 1: 93
ancestor worship and, 4: 513
asceticism in, 17: 2331, 2332-3
see also sadhu
breath and, see prana
Buddhism and, 3: 301, 9: 1211
Christianity and, 2: 1218, 16: 2186, 2188
cow and, 4: 468, 9: 1208
creation myths in, 3: 354, 5: 717, 11: 1514, 20: 2746
dance, sacred, in, 7: 997
death personified in, 4: 558
dogs and, 5: 611
dragon and, 5: 631
dualism in, 5: 669, 670
elephant in, 6: 745
Kama and, 11: 1464
Krishna and, 11: 1491
see also Airavata; Ganesha
end of the world and, 6: 755
evil and, 6: 793, 19: 2712
fakirs of, see sadhu
fate and, 6: 843
God, concepts of, 20: 2846
gods of, 9: 1209, 1215
iconography of, 9: 1290
see also Agni; Brahma; Hanuman; Indra; Kali; Rudra; Shiva; Surya; Varuna; Vishnu heaven and, see paradise below
hell and, 9: 1176, 11: 1466-7
incarnation (avatara) in, 10: 1320
see also Vishnu, incarnations of
Islam and, 9: 1218
lotus in, 9: 1207, 11: 1548

love in, see Bhagavad Gita
man, view of, 12: 1611
mandala in, 12: 1614
mysticism in see mysticism, Hindu Nirvana in, 2: 224-5, 13: 1817, 1818, 13: 1872
phallic symbolism in, see lingam
paradise and, 11: 1466-7, 14: 1980, 1982
pilgrimage in, 15: 2043
rainbow in, 15: 2153
reformist sects of, 9: 1218
see also Ramakrishna rivers, sacred, of, 15: 2043
see also Ganges
rosary in, 16: 2236, 19: 2710, 2712
sacred texts of, see Bhagavad Gita; Vedas self, selfhood in, see Atman; Brahman serpent and, see Ananta; Nagas; Shesha; Visvarupa sexual abstinence and, 17: 2332
Sikhs and, 17: 2369
six recognized systems of, 20: 2846
see also Vedanta; yoga
see also karma; reincarnation
in Southeast Asia, 17: 2428
temples of, 16: 2186, 2188, 2264
erotic carvings of, 6: 857, 9: 1219, 18: 2504, 2555
third eye and, 6: 814
time in, 19: 1628, 1629
trinity (Brahma, Vishnu, Shiva) in, 2: 271, 20: 2746
widows, suicide of, in see suttee woman, place of, in, 20: 2822
see also bhakti; caste; kama; Kundalini; Mahatmas; Tantrism also India
Hippocrates (Greek doctor):
aphrodisiac recipe of, 9: 1238
four humours theory of, 6: 742 herbs listed by, 9: 1180
hippogriff, 20: 2807
Hippolyta (Amazon), 1: 95, 9: 1188, 19: 2601
Hippolytus (Greek mythology), 4: 574, 19: 2601, 2602
hippopotamus, in Egypt, see Hathor; Taurt Hissarlik, excavation of, 19: 2673, 2676
history:
Christianity and, 16: 2197-8, 19: 2630
Muse of, see Clio
origins of myths found in, see euhemerism
see also cycles of time; end of the world; eternal return Hitler, Adolf:
astrology and, 13: 1829, 1830, 1831, 1831, 1832
Adolf Lanz and, 13: 1851, 1852
Hito no Michi (Japanese religious sect), 10: 1399
Hittites, 9: 1222-4
Babylonia and, 9: 1223, 12: 1633
creation myth of, 9: 1224
divination and, 9: 1224
dragon myth of, 9: 1224
gods of, 9: 1222
Mithras, 13: 1751
see also Apulunas; Kumarbi; Teshub
Good Shepherd symbol and, 8: 1049
Greek mythology, Hittite parallels with, 1: 111, 4: 484, 9: 1223-4 Hurrians and, 9: 1222-3
stag and, 18: 2475
Hobbes, Thomas, on miracles, 13: 1744
hobby-horse, 7: 920, 921, 9: 1225-6, 13: 1744
at Abbots Bromley, 9: 1250
May Day and, 11: 1673
Morris dances and, 13: 1774, 1776
hobgoblin, 15: 2127
see also Robin Goodfellow Hobthrush, see Robin Goodfellow hockey (game), 7: 977
Hodening Horse, 9: 1253
Hoder (Scandinavian god), Balder and, 2: 192
Hodgson, Dr Richard (psychical researcher), 15: 2107
Society for Psychical Research and, 15: 2105, 2106
Eusapia Palladino, 14: 1962-3
Mrs Piper, 15: 2045, 2107
Hoenir (Scandinavian god), 16: 2289, 2292
Hofmann, Melchior (founder of Melchiorites), 6: 762
hog, see pig
Hogmanay, 9: 1226, 13: 1865
Holda (Germanic goddess), 9: 1226, 20: 2812
Holda-Perchta (goddess of witches), 6: 785
Holiness movement, 4: 445, 9: 1227-8
enthusiasm and, 6: 762, 763
Holy Rollers and, 9: 1228, 1230-1
Methodism and, 9: 1227
Pentecostalist movement and, 9: 1228, 14: 2003
Pietism and, 9: 1227
Salvation Army and, 9: 1227
see also snake-handling cults
Holland, Mrs (Mrs Fleming), crosscorrespondences and, 4: 493
Hollandus, Johannes Isaac (alchemist), 15: 2027
Hollow Earth theory, 9: 1228
holly, 9: 1228-9
holy places, see pilgrimage
Holy Blood, Holy Grail, 3: 360, 6: 769
Holy Celtic Church (of Archbishop Tugdual), 20: 2767
Holy Communion, see Mass
Holy Face of Edessa, 19: 2680
Holy Face of Lucca, 19: 2680
Holy Ghost (Holy Spirit; Christianity):
dove as symbol of, 2: 228, 278, 5: 622
in Cypriot mural, 10: 1407
by El Greco, 2: 280, 6: 761
in English 13th cent., 5: 622
in Ethiopian MS, 3: 409
in French 15th cent. Book of Hours, 17: 2434
by Giotto, 13: 1857
enthusiasm and, 6: 762-4
see also Holiness movement; Holy Rollers; Pentecostalist movement
Holy Innocents, feast of, see Childermass
Holy Innocents, massacre of, see Massacre of the Innocents Holy Office, see Inquisition
holy orders (Christian sacrament), 16: 2258, 2259
Holy Rollers, 9: 1230-1
Holy Spirit (Christianity), see Holy Ghost
Holy Spirit (Zoroastrianism), 20: 2572-3
see also Ahura Mazdah, Ohrmazd
Holy Week (Christianity), 5: 700
Holywell (Wales), medicinal well at, 18: 2473
Home, Daniel Dunglas (medium), 9: 1232-3, 12: 1689, 17: 2438
accordion of, 9: 1233
Robert Browning and, 9: 1233
Sir William Crookes and, 4: 485, 9: 1233, 12: 1687
levitation of, 9: 1233
Bulwer Lytton and, 9: 1233
table-tilting and, 9: 1232
Homer, 8: 1075, 9: 1202, 14: 1937, 19: 2672 homoeopathic magic, Frazer's use of the term, 5: 590
homoeopathy, 9: 1234-5
homosexuality:
of shamans, 1: 83
see also lesbianism
homunculus (artificial human being, alchemy), 8: 1048, 9: 1236 Honen (Japanese priest), 1: 96
honey, 9: 1237-40
as aphrodisiac, 9: 1238
marriage and, 9: 1238
in Samson's riddle, 16: 2204
of Zeus, stolen by Celeus, 20: 2836
see also bee
'Honi soit qui mal y pense', 7: 981
Honorius I (pope), Monothelitism and, 3: 410
Honorton, Charles, ganzfeld experiments in ESP, 15: 2110
hood (head-dress), 9: 1240
hoodoo, 9: 1240
Hoomi, Koot (Mahatma), Mme Blavatsky and, 2: 246, 12: 1600
hoopoe (bird), 2: 231
in Philomela myth, 13: 1868, 18: 2513
springwort and, 20: 2836
Hope, William (spirit photographer), 17: 2444
Hope Diamond, 10: 1415-6, 18: 2551
Hopewell Indians, 14: 1880
Hopi Indians (Pueblo), 15: 2130, 17: 2338
Hopkins, Matthew (Witchfinder General), 5: 691, 693, 6: 784, 786, 15: 2082
hopscotch (children's game), 3: 390
hora (ring dance), 3: 351, 4: 531, 531, 5: 699
Horites (Biblical people), Hurrians identified with, 9: 1222
Horkey Supper (harvest), 8: 1120
hornbill (bird), in New Guinea, 13: 1848
horn dance, see Abbots Bromley
Horniman, Annie, and Golden Dawn, 8: 1044-5 horns, 9: 1241-50
on altars, 1: 92
Celts and, 3: 376, 9: 1246-50
crescent moon as, 4: 480
in Crete, 9: 1246, 19: 2602
cuckoldry and, 7: 997
in Egypt, 9: 1245, 13: 1765
as fertility symbols, 4: 480
in Greece, 9: 1246
Hebrews and, 9: 1245-6
horn dance, see Abbots Bromley
horned gods, 9: 1244
in India, 9: 1244-5
in Mesopotamia, 9: 1256
in Neolithic period, 9: 1243-4 in Paleolithic period, 9: 1241-3
of reindeer, Thermes and, 11: 1507
in Scandinavia, 9: 1244
sexuality and, 9: 1241
of unicorn, 19: 2688, 2689-90
see also cornucopia; mano cornuta; also bull; ram; stag
horoscope, 1: 138-44, 9: 1250
of Elizabeth I, by John Dee, 4: 559
of Hitler, 13: 1831
of Karl Ernst Krafft, 1: 142, 144
horse, 9: 1250-5
of Achilles, 8: 1118
of Alexander the Great (Bucephalus) 1: 82, 19: 2732
Celts and, 1: 104, 106, 2: 284, 9: 1250, 1255
in China:
jade, 10: 1383
stone, at Nanking, 1: 104 controlled by toadmen, 19: 2638
divination by, 9: 1255
Freyr and, 1: 106, 7: 966
Hades and, 15: 2054
Mars and, 12: 1643

of Odin (Sleipnir), 14: 1907, 1908
phantom, 7: 1005, 9: 1253
Poseidon and, 9: 1250, 15: 2074
sacrifice of, 7: 966, 9: 1251, 10: 1310, 1335
sun and, 18: 2502
vampires detected by, 19: 2706
Vishnu incarnate as, 17: 2354-5
winged, 20: 2806
see also Pegasus
witches and, 9: 1252
see also Apocalypse, horsemen of; centaur; hobby-horse; horseshoe; kelpies; Thracian Rider god; white horse of Uffington; Wild Hunt horseshoe, 9: 1256
horse whisperers, 9: 1255
hortus conclusus,* 11: 1503
Horus, 6: 732, 9: 1256-7
eye of, 6: 814, 16: 2294
falcon and, 9: 1257
Geb as father of, 9: 1257
Harpocrates, 5: 678, 14: 1939
Hathor as mother of, 9: 1247
Isis and, 9: 1256, 10: 1364, 1365
Osiris and, 6: 814, 14: 1938, 1939
Re and, 6: 731, 731, 9: 1257, 11: 1530
Seth and, 6: 732, 9: 1257, 14: 1939, 17: 2341
as sky god, 17: 2392
sun and, see Re above
Thoth and, 9: 1257
Hosea (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2098, 16: 2266
Hospitallers (Knights of Rhodes, of Malta), 9: 1257, 11: 1484
host (Christianity), 12: 1668
in trial by ordeal, 14: 1904
Hottentots, their myth of origin of death, 4: 555
Houdini, Harry, 17: 2441
houri, 9: 1257
hours, 4: 547
house, 9: 1258-64
house warming, origin of, 9: 1163
Lares and, 11: 1509-10
see also builders' rites; chimney; haunts, haunted houses; hearth; house warming; threshold House of God (Tarot card), see Tower Struck by Lightning houses of eternity (Parthian tombs), 14: 1991
Howarth, Mgr Arthur, 20: 2767
Howell, Leonard (Rastafarian), 16: 2167
howling dervishes, see Rulai dervishes
Hrimthursar (frost giants; Scandinavian mythology), 20: 2812
Hrungnir (giant), Thor and, 19: 2608
Hrunting (sword of Beowulf) 18: 2524, 2526
Hsi Wang Wu (Chinese deity), 18: 2564
Huang Ti (the Yellow Emperor), 9: 1181, 18: 2564
Hubert, St, mad dogs and, 5: 608
Hudson, Frederick, (spirit photographer), 17: 2444
Huebner, Louise (modern witch), 13: 1757
Hugh of St Victor:
mysticism and, 13: 1815, 1819
Huguenots, 3: 337
Hui-Neng (Eno; Zen master), 20: 2854
Huitzilopochtli (Aztec god), 1: 107, 2: 181, 182
humanism, in the Renaissance, 16: 2190-5
human sacrifice, 4: 516
Abraham and Isaac, 7: 900, 900, 16: 2263, 17: 2357, 19: 2679
ancestor worship and, 4: 516
blood and, 2: 248, 16: 2265
in building rites, 3: 303
Carthaginians and, 7: 900, 15: 2032, 18: 2544
Celtic, 3: 363, 363, 375, 5: 658
Etruscans and, 6: 782
in Greece, 2: 210
at harvest, by Khonds, 8: 1123-4
Kali and, 11: 1464
in Melanesia, 12: 1694
in Mexico, 2: 182, 182, 183, 184, 12: 1672, 16: 2262, 2265
nursery rhymes and, 14: 1896
Odin and, 14: 1909
by Pawnee Indians, 14: 1882, 16: 2265
Phoenicians (Canaanites) and 7: 900
see also Carthaginians above
in Polynesia, 15: 2071
prehistoric, in Denmark, see Tollund, hanged man of
the sea and, 17: 2319
Slavs and, 17: 2399
in Sweden, 14: 1909, 16: 2265
Humbaba (Huwawa; Babylonian giant), 20: 2803
Hume, David, 13: 1744-5
humours, theory of the four, 6: 742
Saturn and, 16: 2286
Hung Hsui-chuan, 12: 1723, 1727
Huns, see Attila
hunting magic, 9: 1265-8
Assyrian, 9: 1265
cave art and, 3: 367, 369, 9: 1267
dance and, 4: 530
of Ndembu of Zambia, 9: 1267
Nigerian, 9: 1266
taboo and, in Brazil, 9: 1267
of Zuni Indians (Shalako), 15: 2134
Hurayrah, Abu, 18: 2497
Hurrians (Mesopotamian people), 9: 1222, 1223
al-Husayn (imam), 10: 1373, 13: 1761
Husk Faces (Iroquois), 10: 1361, 1362
Huss, John (Christian preacher), 3: 411, 9: 1193
Hut, Hans, 9: 1269
Hutter (Huter), Jacob, 9: 1269
Hutterian Brethren, 4: 441, 9: 1269-70, 17: 2328
Huwawa (giant), see Humbaba
Huysmans, Joris-Karl, 2: *206,*207, 16: 2168
Hydra (water-snake), Hercules and, 9: 1188
hydromancy, see water, divination by hyena, 9: 1271
Hymir (giant), Thor and, 19: 2608
hymn, 9: 1272
Peculiar People and, 14: 2001
Hyperboreans, Apollo and, 1: 114
Hypnos (Greek god of sleep), 5: 648
hypnotism, 9: 1272
in medicine, 12: 1711-13, 1712
Freud and, 7: 963
Mesmer and, 12: 1711-13
psychical research and, 8: 1097, 15: 2105, 2107
in research into reincarnation, 16: 2176
see also magnetism
Hypsisterians (4th cent. sect), 8: 1039
Hyslop, Prof. J. H., Mrs Piper and, 15: 2045
hysteria, 13: 1748
dancing mania and, 4: 540
disease and, 13: 1748
Freud on, 7: 963, 15: 2068
inedia and, 18: 2485
poltergeists and, 15: 2067
stigmata and, 18: 2482-5
witchcraft and, 9: 1272-6, 15: 2111

I

Iacchus procession (from Athens to Eleusis), 6: 748
Iamblichus (Neoplatonist), 13: 1842, 15: 2093, 19: 2604, 19: 2605
Iao (variant of Tetragrammaton), 13: 1824
ib (Egypt), 6: 733
Ibadites (Islam), 10: 1374
Iban people (Sarawak), 2: 263-5
ibis (bird), Thoth and, 6: 733 Iblees (Islamic devil), 10: 1418
Ibn Anas, Malik (Sunnite), 10: 1369
Ibn Arabi (Islamic mystic), 9: 1277-8
Ibn Gebirol (Jewish thinker),13: 1842
Ibn Hanbal, Ahmad (Sunnite), 10: 1369
Ibn Idria al-Shafii, Mohammed (Sunnite), 10: 1369
Ibn Tumart (Mahdi), 12: 1601
Ibo (Nigerian tribe), 9: 1278-80
Icarus, fall of, 18: 2506, 20: 2807
ice, 20: 2813
in Scandinavian creation myth, 8: 1017
Iceland, poets of, 15: 2057
Iceland spar, 10: 1413
I Ching (Yee King, Book of Change), 9: 1281-5
atavistic experience with, 2: 151
icon, 9: 1293
Byzantine, 9: 1286
Iconoclastic Controversy, 3: 410, 9: 1293
iconography, 9: 1286-93
see also idol iconostasis,* 14: 1918
id (Freudian term), 7: 963
Idomeneus (Greek myth), 20: 2864
Idun (Norse mythology), 5: 672, 7: 965, 11: 1543
Iemanja (Nigerian/Brazilian goddess), 17: 2421, 2426, 2427
ifreet (jinn), 10: 1418
Ifugao tribe (Philippine Islands), 15: 2087
Ignatius, epistle of, 13: 1853
ignis fatuus, see will-o'-the-wisp
IHS (IHSV, IHV; Christian symbol), 4: 490
Ikhnaten (Akhenaten, Amenhotep IV; pharaoh), 6: 732, 735, 9: 1191, 1294-6
Iliad, 19: 2672
see also Homer
Ilion (Ilios), see Troy
Ilithyia (Greek goddess), Hera and, 9: 1179
Illuminati, 10: 1303-4
ill-wishing, 4: 520
see also evil eye
Ilmarinen (Finnish god), see Ukko Ilmuqah (Ethiopian moon god), see Sin image magic (witch dolls, wax images, etc.), 10: 1307-9
in Brittany, 2: 284
in the Congo, 4: 452
witches and, 4: 522, 10: 1307-10, 15: 2112, 20: 2816
Gowdie, 8: 1056
Lancashire witches, 10: 1307
North Berwick witches, 10: 1309, 14: 1886-7
in the Ozarks, 14: 1951-3
Somerset witches, 17: 2414
imagination, 18: 2583
Coleridge on, 3: 428-9
in magic, 11: 1582-3
imam (Islam), 10: 1370
Imamites (Islam), 10: 1373
see also Imams, the twelve Imams, the twelve (Islam), 10: 1373, 12: 1601
Bahais and, 2: 190
Imbolc (Celtic festival), 2: 284, 3: 375

Imdugud (Mesopotamia), 12: 1716, 1717
Imhotep (Imouthes), 8: 1152, 10: 1304-5
imitative magic, 10: 1306-12
in Australia, 10: 1309
cave art as, 3: 367-9
with dolls and wax images, see image magic origin of drama and, 5: 636
to obtain food, 7: 928, 20: 2793
see also leaping and jumping
Immaculate Conception, 10: 1312, 12: 1652, 19: 2736
St Bernadette of Lourdes and, 11: 1555
Feast of the, 10: 1312
pilgrimage to Lourdes on, 11: 1553
immanent (definition), 10: 1312 immortality, 10: 1313-6
apple 1: 116
Christianity and, 10: 1313
in Egypt, 13: 1785-8
see also Egypt, life after death
in Greece, 10: 1313
in Polynesia, 15: 2071
Walworth Jumpers' belief in, 20: 2764
see also life after death Imouthes (healing god), see Imhotep imp (demon), 10: 1317
witches' imps, see familiars
impotence:
Evil Eye and, 15: 2113
knot-tying and, 18: 2494
witchcraft and, 9: 1273, 10: 1356, 16: 2201
Inanna (Innin; Sumerian goddess), 9: 1176, 10: 1364, 12: 1715
Ea (Enki) and, 12: 1718
Ishtar identified with, 10: 1363, 12: 1715
as Mother Goddess, 13: 1779
Tammuz and, 12: 1716, 1718, 18: 2554
underworld visited by, 12: 1717, 13: 1779, 18: 2554
Venus equated with, 12: 1715
incantation, 10: 1318-20
in Mesopotamia, 12: 1720
poetry and, 15: 2055-9
in ritual magic, 10: 1318, 16: 2220
incarnation, 10: 1320-1
in Buddhism, 10: 1320
in Christianity, 3: 407, 10: 1320, 16: 2260
in Egypt, 10: 1320
in Hinduism, 10: 1320
see also Vishnu, incarnations of Incas, 10: 1322-7
creation myth of, see Viracocha
sun god and, 10: 1311, 1324
woman and, 10: 1325
incendium amoris, 18: 2484
incense, 2: 279, 10: 1328
burnt sacrifice and, 14: 2008
censer, from Ramsey Abbey, 14: 2009
Christianity and, 10: 1328
in Egypt, 10: 1328, 14: 2009
Islam and, 10: 1328
Judaism and, 10: 1328
Romans and, 10:1328
incest, 10: 1328-9
Inuit myth of sun and moon, 10: 1328, 1351
Rumanian myth of sun and moon, 13: 1765
taboo in Brazil, 2: 273
see also Oedipus
incombustibility, 18: 2485
incorruptibility of the body, saints and, 18: 2485-6
incubus and succubus, 6: 796, 10: 1330-4
Index (of prohibited books), 9: 1193
India, 10: 1334-6
animal gods of, 1: 105, 106
bull gods, 3: 307, 9: 1244 animal sacrifice in, 9: 1209, 10: 1335
horse, 10: 1310, 1335
Aryan invaders of, 10: 1334, 20: 2870-3 ashes, ritual use of, in, 1: 129
Mrs Besant and, 2: 218-9, 18: 2590-2
the British in, 9: 1218, 1221
Gandhi, 9: 1220, 1221, 12: 1600
Parsees, 14: 1984
Punjab, 17: 2371
cow in, 4: 468
creation myths of, 3: 353, 4: 476, 5: 717, 11: 1548-9
cremation in 7: 896
dance in, 5: 636, 7: 997
demons of, 6: 792
early inhabitants of, see Dravidians; Indus civilization below erotic temple carvings of, 6: 857, 9: 1219
fakirs of, see sadhu
first man myth of, see Yama, as first man
flood legends of, 7: 915
giants in, 8: 1015
gods of, 10: 1334-6
of the dead, see Yama, as god of the dead
of fire, see Agni
Mother Goddess, 13: 1777, 1779
of the sky, 10: 1334, 17: 2391 of the sun, 9: 1208, 1217, 10: 1335, 18: 2502-4
twin gods, see Asvins
see also Hinduism, gods of headless spirits in, 8: 1149
Hill Reddi tribe of, 15: 2084-5, 10: 1336 Indus civilization of,
see also Harappa; Mohenjo-daro
Islam in, 9: 1218
kingship in, 11: 1480
Mithras and, 13: 1751
path symbolism in, 14: 1992
peacock in, 14: 1998
phallic symbolism in, 15: 2024
see also lingam
pilgrimage in, 15: 2043
possession in, 15: 2078
prostitution in, 15: 2104
saints and holy men of, see Anandamayi Ma; Haranath; Mahatmas; Ramana Maharshi; sadhu; Sai Baba; Sivananda; swami Saora tribe of, 15: 2085
snake-charmer, 17: 2409
spring festival in, 18: 2470, 2471
tattooing in, 18: 2576, 2577, 2579-80
time, beliefs concerning, 19: 2628, 2629, 2630 tree spirits or gods of, 1: 108, 10: 1336, 19: 2657
see also Ajanta caves; Buddhism; Ganges; Gonds; Hinduism; Jains; Mahabharata; mantra; Nagas; Nayars of Malabar; Parsees; Sikhs; soma; Taj Mahal; Vedas
individuation, 11: 1458, 14: 1924
Indra (Indian god), 10: 1334, 17: 2391, 20: 2744
bull and, 3: 307
elephant and, see Airavata
flood legend and, 7: 913
peacock and, 14: 1998
rainbow and, 15: 2153
indulgences (Christianity), 3: 412, 15: 2043
Indus civilization (India), 10: 1336
see also Harappa; Mohenjo-daro
inedia, 18: 2485
Ineffable Name of God, 13: 1824
infancy gospels, 13: 1856
Ingham, Eunice, founder of reflexology, 16: 2169
initiation, 10:1337-44
in Africa, 1: 60, 12: 1699-1700
Bushmen, 3: 320
Congo, 4: 448
Dahomey, vodun cult, 4: 524
Kikuyu, 10: 1340
in Australia, 2: 166, 166
in Brazil, 2: 273-4, 274, 10: 1337
in Crete, 20: 2862
death and, 10: 1337, 1343
in Greece, 8: 1076
see also Eleusis
of Irish heroes, 7: 888
to magic, 11: 1580
in Melanesia, 10: 1340, 12: 1695
to Mysteries of Isis, 10: 1365
Ndembu and, 16: 2214
in New Guinea, 5: 663, 13: 1848
of North American Indians, 10: 1344, 14: 1956
to priesthood, 15: 2087
in Christianity, see holy orders
rebirth and, 10: 1337
in Roman rites of Mithras, 13: 1752
sex and 10: 1343
see also circumcision
of shamans, 17: 2546-8
to Voodoo, 20: 2753, 2754, 2869
see also rites of passage
Innin (Sumerian goddess), see Inanna
Innocent III (pope), 3: 358, 359, 9: 1192, 17: 2415
Innocent IV (pope) 9: 1192
Innocent VIII (pope), 6: 785, 9: 1193
Inquisition (Holy Office), 10: 1344
founding of, 3: 358, 6: 785, 9: 1192, 10: 1344 heresy and, 9: 1191, 10: 1344
Holy Office, adoption of the title, 9: 1193 Reformation and, 9: 1193
witchcraft and, 6: 784, 785, 9: 1193, 10: 1344, 17: 2415
see also auto da fe; Spanish Inquisition
insects, 10: 1345-8
see also bee; beetle; butterfly; cricket; flea; mantis; witchety grub inspiration, 10: 1348, 15: 2059
Institoris, Heinrich, see Kramer, Heinrich Institute of Psychophysical Research, 14: 1945
International Institute of Universal Research and Administration, 12: 1625
International Legion of Vigilantes, 12: 1625
International New Thought Alliance, 13: 1862 interrogation of the dead (Islam), 10: 1349
see also Sirat
introvert, extravert distinguished from, by Jung, 11: 1457
intuition, ESP and, 6: 803, 18: 2457
Inuit, 10: 1350-5, 14: 1882
amulets of, 10: 1355
animism and, 10: 1351
aurora and, 10: 1353
burial among, 5: 596, 10: 1355
creation myths lacking among, 10: 1351
death, beliefs concerning, 4: 557, 10: 1353-5
disease, beliefs concerning, 10: 1353
dog myth of, 10: 1351
drum, of shaman, 10: 1355
ghosts and, 10: 1353-4
gods and spirits of, 10: 1351-2
see also Sedna
ill-wishing among, 4: 520
incest myth of sun and moon, 10: 1328, 1351,
mammoth, legends perhaps referring to, 14: 1880
marriage and, 12: 1637
masks and, 10: 1353, 12: 1660, 1665

moon and, 10: 1328, 1351, 1352
seal and, 17: 2321
sea spirits of, 10: 1350, 1351-2
see also Sedna
shamans of, 10: 1351-5, 11: 1531, 12: 1660, 17: 2352
soul, beliefs concerning, 10: 1353-4
string figures made by, 10: 1355
sun and, 10: 1328, 1351, 1355
taboos of, 10: 1352, 1353, 17: 2321
whale and, 20: 2788
inverted symbols, 10: 1356, 18: 2534
invisibility, 10: 1356
quartz and, 10: 1412
Invisibles, (Voodoo), 20: 2752-6 invocation, 11: 1582
evocation and, 11: 1583
Io (Greek myth), 9: 1180
Iolaus, Hercules and, 9: 1187, 1188
Iphicles (twin brother of Hercules), 9: 1188
Ipiutak (Alaska), Inuit burial at, 5: 596 Irenaeus (Christian writer), on the Ebionites 5: 703 iridology, 9: 1357-8
iris (flower), 11: 1534
Iris (Greek goddess of rainbow), 15: 2153
iron (metal), 10: 1358, 17: 2404
Evil Eye averted by, 10: 1358
Mars and, 4: 459
meteors and, 10: 1358, 17: 2404
as protection against jinn, 10: 1418
red and, 4: 459
smiths and, 17: 2404
Iron Crown of Lombardy, 4: 491, 504
Iroquois (North American Indians), 10: 1359-62, 14: 1880, 1884
dances of 4: 530, 532, 10: 1361
disease and, 10: 1362
giant, myth of, 10: 1362
masks and, 10: 1359, 1361, 1361
tobacco and, 19: 2640
see also Hiawatha
Irving, Edward (Irvingites), 10: 1362-3, 17: 2433
Isaac (son of Abraham), 6: 739
sacrifice of, see Abraham
Isaiah (Old Testament prophet), 12: 1706, 15: 2098, 19: 2616
Ishtar (Mesopotamian goddess), 10: 1363-4
Akkad and, 10: 1363
Assyria and, 10: 1364
Astarte identified with, 1: 132
Gilgamesh and, 8: 1019
Inanna identified with, 10: 1363, 12: 1715, 1716
moon and, 13: 1765
as Mother Goddess, 13: 1779
prostitution and, 10: 1364, 15: 2103
ritual marriage of, 10: 1364
Sin the father of, 8: 1119
star symbol of, 10: 1363
Tammuz and, 12: 1716, 18: 2554
underworld visited by, 12: 1717, 18: 2554
Venus (planet) and, 10: 1364
Isis (Egyptian goddess), 6: 732, 10: 1364-7, 13: 1807
birth of, in Heliopolitan myth, 4: 472
cow and, 10: 1364
Epiphany and, 5: 678
fate and, 10: 1366
Greeks and, 10: 1365
as guardian of the dead, 6: 728-9
healing and, 8: 1152
Horus and, 9: 1257, 10: 1364, 1365
Io and, 10: 1365
moon and, 13: 1765
Mysteries of, 10: 1365, 13: 1810, 14: 1940, 15: 2104
Nile and, 10: 1364
Osiris and, 5: 677, 10: 1364, 1765, 14: 1938, 1940
as Providence, 10: 1365, 1366
Re and, 6: 733, 13: 1823
Romans and, 5: 677, 10: 1365, 13: 1780, 1810, 14: 1940
Sirius (Sothis) and, 10: 1364
Isis Unveiled (Blavatsky), 2: 245
Islam, 10: 1368-76
in Africa, 1: 56, 10: 1369, 1373, 1374, 1376
Egypt, 10: 1374, 12: 1601
Ethiopia, 6: 773
see also Berbers; Touareg almsgiving in 10: 1369-70
angels in, 1: 102, 102, 8: 1094
in China, 3: 399
dietary rules of, 7: 932
divisions of, 10: 1368-9, 1372-4, 1376
see also Shia; Sunnites
dogs and, 5: 607, 609
election in, 6: 741
fakirs in, 6: 836
fasting and, 6: 842, 10: 1370
god of, see Allah
hell and, 9: 1176
see also Sirat
Hinduism and, 9: 1218
holy war in, see jihad
incense and, 10: 1328
Jerusalem and, 10: 1404
judgement of the dead in, see interrogation of the dead; last judgement, below last judgement in, 12: 1610
man, view of, 12: 1610
meaning of 'Islam', 12: 1610
mysticism in, see Sufism
paradise and, 14: 1981, 1983
see also houri
pilgrimage in, 10: 1370, 1372, 12: 1675-6, 15: 2043
predestination and freewill in, 6: 741, 10: 1372, 1373, 1374
prophecy in, 15: 2100
see also Mohammed
resurrection in, 12: 1610
revelation in, 16: 2198
see also Koran; Mohammed
rosary in, 16: 2236
saints in, 10: 1373
Sikhs and, 17: 2369
sin and, 17: 2374
soul in, 12: 1610
in Southeast Asia, 17: 2428, 2430
Touareg and, 19: 2645
worship in, 10: 1368, 1369, 1370-1, 1372, 1373, 1376
see also mosque; muezzin
see also Bahais, Black Muslims; Ismailis; Druzes; jinn; Mahdi; Moharram
Isles of the Blest (Fortunate Isles), 10: 1376, 14: 1980
Pythagoreans and, 15: 2135
Ismailis (Ismailites; Islam), 5: 665, 10: 1374
Israel (biblical country), Judah and, 11: 1544, 20: 2841
Israel (modern country), 10: 1436
Israelites (biblical), see Jews
Issberner-Haldane, Ernst (palmist), 13: 1830
Istanbul, Blue Mosque at, 10: 1370, 1372
Istanu (Hittite sun god), 9: 1222
Italian witchcraft, 10: 1377-80
ithyphallic, see phallic symbolism
Ittoen (Japanese religious sect), 10: 1398
Iuchar (Iucharba; Celtic god), 3: 377
ivy, 9: 1228, 10: 1380, 15: 2048
Christmas and, 9: 1228, 1229
Dionysus and, 9: 1228, 19: 2618
divination and, 9: 1229
holly and, 9: 1228-9
ivy doll (corn sheaf), 8: 1123
Ixion, 3: 379, 20: 2789
Izana-gi (Shinto god), 17: 2361
Izana-mi (Shinto goddess), 17: 2361

J

Jabir ibn Hayyan, see Geber
Jack, 10: 1381-82
in the Ozarks, 14: 1951
jackal, 9: 1271, 10: 1382
Jack and the Beanstalk, 10: 1381
Jack of the Bright Light, see will-o'-the-wisp
Jack Frost (by Arthur Rackham), 20: 2812
Jack the Giant-Killer, 8: 1016, 10: 1381, 1382
Jack in the Green, see Green Man
Jack and Jill, 10: 1381, 13: 1765
jack-o-lantern, see will-o'-the-wisp
Jacob (Old Testament patriarch), 14: 1913
Jacobites (Monophysite sect), 3: 409
jade, 10: 1382-4, 18: 2551
jaguar, 10: 1384
in Brazil, 2: 272-3, 273, 274, 275, 4: 464, 10: 1307, 1384
in Mexico, 1: 107, 13: 1736
shape-shifting and, 10: 1384, 11: 1566
Jahenny, Marie-Julie (stigmatic), 18: 2484, 2485
Jains, 10: 1384-7
dharma and, 10: 1385
Nirvana and, 10: 1387
soul and, 10: 1385
reincarnation and, 9: 1211, 10: 1387
wheel as symbol of time among, 20: 2788
Jamaica, Rastafarian movement in, 12: 1728
James, St (brother of Jesus), 15: 703, 704, 704
James, William (psychologist), 15: 2106
on automatic writing, 2: 171
on ghosts, 7: 1008
on opposites,14: 1924
Mrs Piper and, 15: 2045, 2046
James I (James VI of Scotland):
on tobacco, 14: 2010
witchcraft and, 6: 785-6, 14: 1886-7, 16: 2255
Janet, Pierre, and multiple personality 13: 1784
Jansenists (Christian heretics), 4: 454
January, Janus and, 1: 118, 10: 1387
Janus (Roman god), 1: 118, 10: 1387-8
japam (Hinduism), 19: 2710, 2712
Japan, 10: 1389-1400
altars in, 1: 93
Buddhism in, 3: 300, 10: 1391-1400, 14: 2088
Chinese influence on, 10: 1391
judgement of the dead in, 4: 556, 558, 11: 1452
see also Amida; Jizo; Kwannon; Zen
carp in, 7: 909
dragons in, 5: 635
emperor of, 11: 1478-9, 17: 1262
flower arrangement in, 20: 2860
fox in, 10: 1395, 14: 1941
ghosts in, 7: 1002-3
I Ching in, 11: 1548
modern religious sects of, 10: 1397-1400
Divine Principles, 5: 606
pine tree in, 7: 892, 892
snow personified in, see Yuki-onne
spider in, 17: 2436, 2437
tea ceremony of, 10: 1394, 1396, 1400
theatre of, 10: 1390, 12: 1664

see also Ainu; hara-kiri; kamikaze; Samurai; Shinto; Silver Pavilion Jason (Greek hero), 9: 1167, 15: 2112
folktale parallels with, 7: 925
see also Argonauts, Golden Fleece jaundice, yellow in cure of, 5: 590
Java, mask from, 8: 1048
Jeanne des Anges (Loudun nun), 11: 1551
Jeffreys, George and Stephen (Pentecostalists), 14: 2006
Jehovah, see Yahweh
Jehovah's Witnesses, 10: 1401-2
baptism and, 2: 198, 10: 1401
not enthusiasts, 6: 761-2, 763
Second Coming and, 10: 1401, 17: 2329-30
Jekyll, Dr, and Mr Hyde, 7: 872, 20: 2780
Jenkyn, William, on names, 13: 1823
Jenny Green Teeth, 12: 1710
Jerah (Canaanite moon goddess), 13: 1765
Jeremiah (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2099
Jericho:
fall of (biblical), 19: 2678, 2679
origin of the name, 13: 1765
sanctuaries of, 16: 2180
Jeroboam (Israelite leader), 11: 1544
Jerome, St, 3: 410
lion and, 11: 1534, 16: 2279
on reincarnation, 16: 2172
on the soul, 10: 1315
on virginity, 12: 1649-50
Jerusalem, 10: 1403-4
Babylonian capture of, 11: 1545
Christianity and, 5: 703, 10: 1404, 1410, 14: 1995, 1996 entry of Jesus into, 10: 1410, 1411, 14: 1964, 1964, 1965
Knights of the Hospital of St John of, see Hospitallers
pilgrimage to, 15: 2042, 2042, 2043
Islam and, 10: 1404
temple of Yahweh at, 16: 2184-5 built by Solomon, 17: 2414, 20: 2841
cherubim in, 3: 385 destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, 20: 2842 destroyed by Romans, 20: 2842, 2853
see also Zion, hill of Jesse, tree of, see tree of Jesse jester, medieval, 7: 933, 935
dervishes perhaps associated with, 4: 566
see also Harlequin
Jesus, 10: 1405-12
anointing of, 14: 1913, 1914
baptism of, 2: 197, 3: 409, 10: 1407, 20: 2774
blood of, 2: 248, 8: 1062, 1062
Bogomil view of, 2: 256
cross and, see Crucifixion; Judgement of the Cross; stations of the cross; True Cross; Veneration of the Cross 888 the number of, 8: 1066
his entry into Jerusalem, 10: 1410, 1411, 14: 1964, 1964, 1965
Gnostic view of, 3: 408, 8: 1030, 16: 2283
Good Shepherd symbol and, 8: 1049, 17: 2351, 18: 2534
healing by, 6: 834
see also Lazarus
Hercules compared with, 9: 1190
iconography of, 9: 1289, 1290
see also Lamb of God below
as the Lamb of God, 5: 696, 6: 814, 815, 11: 1498, 16: 2266, 17: 2357, 2359
life of, 3: 404, 10: 1406
apocryphal gospel accounts of, 13: 1854
see also Last Supper
as Light of the World (Holman Hunt), 11: 1526, 1527
magi and, 11: 1576, 19: 2615
as the Messiah, 3: 405, 10: 1409, 14: 1996
miracles of, 13: 1746, 1748
see also Lazarus; marriage at Cana his mother, see Mary name of, see Pentagrammaton
Nativity of, 10: 1406, 19: 2736
nature of, 3: 408, 409, 9: 1191, 12: 1649
Osiris compared with 14: 1940
St Paul and, 3: 407, 5:704, 10: 1409, 1412, 14: 1996-8
pelican as symbol of, 2: 227, 14: 2002
as prophet, 15: 2100
relics of, see Shroud, Holy, of Turin; True Cross; Veronica, St, veil of resurrection of, 3: 407, 10: 1409, 12: 1610
Jonah as symbol of, 10: 1430
by Mantegna, 11: 1528-9
see also Ascension; Easter
in Revelation, 16: 2198
as the son of God, see incarnation
St Thomas as twin of, 19: 2684
water turned to wine by, see marriage at Cana
Zealots and, 3: 405, 10: 1410, 20: 2852, 2853
see also apostles; Ecce Homo; harrowing of hell; Mass; Pontius Pilate; Second Coming; soteriology; stigmata jet (mineral), 18: 2551
jewels, precious stones, 10: 1412-6
see also emerald; garnet; pearl; quartz; sardonyx
Jewish Gnosticism, 8: 1028
Jews (Hebrews, Israel, Israelites): as the chosen people, see Judaism, election and exclusiveness of, Jonah and, 10: 1429
harps of, hung on 'willow' trees in exile, 20: 2805
history of, 20: 2840
see also Old Testament; Rome below; twelve tribes below
kingship among, 11: 1478
lost tribes of, 11: 1544-6
origins of, in Judah, 11: 1544
palm tree and, 14: 1963-4
religion of (biblical and modern), see Judaism
Rome and, 3: 404, 16: 2266, 20: 2842, 2852
in Spain, converted to Christianity, see Marranos Star of David and, 9: 1204, 1204, 10: 1440
twelve tribes of,
see also Lost Tribes of Israel
see also antisemitism; Israel (modern country); Moses; oriental Jewish communities, Wandering Jew Jezreel, James Jershom, 10: 1416-7, 17: 2428
jihad (Islam), 10: 1374, 1418
Jinarajadasa, C. (Theosophist), 18: 2590, 2591, 2592
jinn (genie; spirit), 10: 1418-9
Berber belief in, 2: 216
Jivaro Indians, shrunken heads of, 8: 1139, 1141
jnana yoga, 19: 2713, 20: 2847
Joachim of Fiore, 17: 2326-8
Joan of Arc, 10: 1420-4
Job, 3: 627, 10: 1424-5, 20: 2842
Jodo (Pure Land) sect (Japan), 1: 95, 10: 1394, 13: 1872, 14: 1982
Joel (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2099
John, Abbot, of Rila, 17: 2332
John, St (evangelist):
apocryphal acts of, 13: 1857
eagle the symbol of, 9: 1292
Revelation and, 16: 2201
John XXII (pope), witchcraft and, 9: 1193
John XXIII (anti-pope), Huss excommunicated by, 9: 1193
John the Baptist, St, 2: 196, 3: 409
bonfires and, 16: 2269, 19: 2728, 20: 2813
dancing mania and, 4: 539
by El Greco, 2: 196
head of, 8: 1142
midsummer festival and, 4: 539, 13: 1743, 16: 2269, 20: 2789
as last Old Testament prophet, 15: 2099
John of the Cross, St, 5: 710, 10: 1426-8, 15: 2148, 17: 2344
John of Damascus, St, 15: 2080
John of Leyden (Anabaptist), see Beukels, John
John of Nottingham, image magic used by, 10: 1308
John of Salisbury, 6: 800, 16: 2191
'Johnny Appleseed' (John Chapman), 19: 2694, 2695
Johnson, Alice, Society for Psychical Research and, 15: 2107
Johnson, Douglas (medium), 12: 1289
Jonah, 10: 1428-30
book of, 15: 2099
in catacomb art, 9: 1292, 10: 1430
as Christian symbol of Jesus' resurrection, 10: 1430
Jewish exclusiveness typified by, 10: 1429
'whale' and, 7: 907, 10: 1428, 1428, 1429, 1429, 1430, 1430, 20: 2787, 2787
Jordan (river), symbolism of, 11: 1504
Joseph (father of Jesus), 19: 2732, 2734, 2736
apocryphal accounts of, 13: 1856
wedding of (Giotto), 13: 1857
Joseph (Old Testament), dream of Pharaoh and, 5: 642, 645
Joseph, R. Jacob (Hasidism), 8: 1126
Joseph of Arimathea, 10: 1430
Fisher King and, 8: 1065
Glastonbury and, 8: 1022, 1024
Grail and, 8: 1022, 1062, 1065, 10: 1430
holy thorn and, 8: 1024
Joseph Mary Desu, St (Joseph of Copertino), 18: 2487
Josephus (Jewish historian):
on Jesus, 10: 1409
on John the Baptist, 2: 197
on Pontius Pilate, 15: 2073
Zealots and, 20: 2852
joss-stick, 10: 1430
Jotunheim (Scandinavian mythology), 16: 2290
journey, as symbol, see path symbolism
Jove (Roman god), see Jupiter
Joyeuse (sword of Charlemagne), 18: 2526
Judah (biblical country), 11: 1544, 20: 2841
Judaism (Jewish religion), 10: 1424, 1425, 1431-40
altars and, 1: 92
angels and, 1: 100-1
Atonement, Day of (Yom Kippur), 2: 160, 10: 1438, 16: 2266, 2293
Baal and 2: 188, 189
baptism in, 2: 196
see also John the Baptist Bible and, see Old Testament
bull and, 9: 1245
candles, use of, see Hanukkah; menorah
circumcision and, 10: 1432
creation myths of, 4: 475
Dead Sea Scrolls and, 4: 549
death and, 4: 558, 12: 1608
see also life after death below, Sheol
the Devil in, 4: 567, 5: 671
dietary rules of, 7: 931
see also kosher
dogs and, 5: 607
dreams and, 5: 644

dualism in, 6: 791
dying god myth rejected by, 5: 679
election and, 6: 738, 10: 1437, 20: 2840
end of the world in, 6: 756
eternal return myth contrasted with, 6: 770, 771
in Ethiopia, 6: 773
evil and, 6: 791
exorcism and 6: 799-800
fasting and, 6: 841
festivals of, 10: 1437
see also Feast of Tabernacles; Hanukkah; Passover
Gnosticism and, 8: 1028-9
hell and, 9: 1170
iconography forbidden in, 9: 1290
incense and, 10: 1328
judgement of the dead and, 10: 1425, 11: 1453
Last Judgement, 11: 1453, 14: 1983
life after death in, 10: 1424
see also judgement of the dead, above mysticism in, see mysticism, Jewish
New Year in, 10: 1438
origin of the word Judaism, 11: 1544
original sin and, 7: 904
origins of Christianity and, 3: 404, 5: 703, 8: 1128, 14: 1995
paradise and, 14: 1981, 1983
pig not eaten by Jews, 7: 932, 15: 2039
priesthood in, 10: 1433
prophecy and, 15: 2099, 2100, 16: 2197
prophetic books, 10: 1434
ram and, 9: 1246, 17: 2357
resurrection of the body and, 10: 1437, 11: 1453, 12: 1610
sacrifice and, 16: 2266
see also atonement, Jewish day of
soul in, 10: 1437, 14: 1983
Trinity rejected by, 10: 1433
trumpet and, 19: 2679
see also mezuzah; Moses; Pharisees; rabbi; sabbath; Sadducees; Torah; Yahweh
Judaizers (Russian heretical sect), 5: 620
Judas of Galilee, 20: 2852
Judas Iscariot, 10: 1440
St Brendan and, 10: 1440
suicide of, 10: 1440
elder tree and, 6: 737, 737
fig tree and, 6: 864
Judas Maccabaeus, 4: 549, 15: 2136
Jüdel (double; Germany), 5: 615
Judge, W. Q. (Theosophist), 2: 246
Judgement (Day of Judgement; Tarot card), 18: 2571, 2572
Judgement of the Cross (judicial procedure), 14: 1904 judgement of the dead, 11: 1447-55
in Christianity, 11: 1454
see also Last Judgement
in Egypt, 6: 733, 9: 1169, 11: 1447
Anubis and, 1: 110
heart weighed in, 6: 851, 9: 1161, 11: 1449, 1450, 1569
Maat and, 6: 851, 11: 1569
Osiris and, 6: 851, 11: 1449, 14: 1940
Thoth and, 6: 733, 11: 1449
Greece and, 11: 1453
in Islam, see interrogation of the dead; Last Judgement, in Islam
in Japanese Buddhism, 4: 558, 11: 1452
in Judaism, 10: 1425, 11: 1453
Last Judgement, 11: 1453, 14: 1983
paradise as reward after, 14: 1981
in Zoroastrianism, 11: 1453-4, 20: 2873-4, 2876
Parsees, 14: 1985, 1988
see also hell
Judgement of Paris (Greek mythology), 1: 117, 117, 16: 2191, 2194
juggernaut, 15: 2043
Juggler (Tarot card), see Magician
Julia Domna (Roman empress), 1: 115, 116
Julian the Apostate (Roman emperor), 1: 116, 19: 2603, 2604
Julian of Norwich (mystic), 3: 425, 11: 1456
Julianus the Chaldean, 19: 2603
Julius Caesar, 7: 945
on the Druids, 3: 373, 5: 657, 658, 659
Venus and, 19: 2724
Jumala (Finnish god), see Ukko
Jumna (river), 7: 979, 980
Junayd of Baghdad (Sheikh of the Sheikhs), 18: 2495
Jung, Carl Gustav, 11: 1456-60
alchemy and, 1: 77, 11: 1458
analytical psychology, his adoption of the term, 11: 1456-7
archetypes, his concept of, 11: 1457
astrology and, 1: 140, 11: 1460
city seen as maternal symbol by, 11: 1504 collective unconscious, his concept of, 3: 429-30, 11: 1457 complex defined by, 11: 1456
dragon and, 5: 635
on dreams, 5: 645
extravert and introvert distinguished by, 11: 1457
Ezekiel and, 20: 2791
Freud and, 11: 1456, 11: 1458
on ghosts, 7: 1008
on God, 12: 1680
on the I Ching, 9: 1283
individuation, his concept of, 11: 1458, 14: 1925
libido and, 11: 1456
on opposites, in creation myths, 14: 1925
paranormal powers of, 11: 1458
on symbolism, 18: 2537
synchronicity, his principle of, 11: 1460, 1548, 19: 2730
on trickster, 19: 2667
on the unconscious, 20: 2776
see also collective unconscious, above
vision experienced by, 20: 2748
Jung-Stilling, Dr J. H., 12: 1595
Junius, Johannes (witch), 2: 194
Juno (Roman goddess), 11: 1460, 16: 2230
Hera identified with, 9: 1180, 11: 1460
Jupiter (planet):
in astrology, 1: 139, 11: 1462
blue and, 2: 249, 4: 459
jewels associated with, 10: 1413-14
Pisces and, 11: 1462, 15: 2046
Sagittarius and, 11: 1462
tin and, 4: 459
Jupiter (Jove; Roman god), 11: 1460-2, 16: 2230, 20: 2862
Etruscans and, 11: 1461
as High God, 9: 1205
priest of, see flamen; Flamen Dialis
sky and, 11: 1460, 17: 2391
thunderbolt and, 17: 2392
Zeus and, 11: 1460
Jurieu, Pierre, 3: 337
Jurupari (Brazilian spirit), 2: 274
Justice (Tarot card), 18: 2570-1, 2571

K

ka (double; Egypt), 6: 733
Kaaba (Islam), 12: 1675, 1676, 1676, 13: 1759, 18: 2490
Mohammed and, 13: 1760
pilgrimage to, 10: 1372
prayer directed to, 10: 1369
kabbalah (Jewish mystical system), see Cabala kachina (dancers, dolls), see Pueblo Indians, kachina dancers/dolls of Kadmis (Parsee sect), 14: 1984
Kailasa, Mount (Indian mythology), 14: 1980
Kalanga (of Botswana), guardian spirits of, 8: 1091-3, 1092
Kalbhairab (Indian demon), 6: 792
Kalevala (Finnish poem), 7: 884-5, 885
Kali (Indian goddess), 1: 99, 4: 556, 558, 6: 861, 11: 1462-4, 18: 2556, 2557
Anandamayi Ma and, 1: 97-8
blackness of, 11: 1462
Durga and, 11: 1464
as Great Mother,11: 1462
iconography of, 9: 1290, 19: 2628
lotus held by, 11: 1548
sacrifice and, 11: 1464
time personified by, 19: 2628
see also Thugs
Kaliya (serpent; Hinduism), 17: 2336
Kalkin (incarnation of Vishnu), 20: 2746
Kallisto (Greek mythology), see Callisto kama (Hinduism), 9: 1217, 11: 1464
kamikaze, 11: 1465
Kammerer, Paul, and synchronicity, 18: 2539
Kamwana, Elliot (African religious leader), 17: 2330
Kandinsky, Vasily, on colour, 3: 430
Kanphala ('ear-torn' yogis), 2: 252
Kaourintin, St, 2: 286
Karbala, battle of, 10: 1373, 13: 1761
Kardec, Alain (Kardecists), 17: 2424
Karens (Burmese people), rainbow and, 15: 2152
karma*, 11: 1466-8, 12: 1611, 19: 2714
caste dependent on, 9: 1217
sin and, 17: 2376
in Sinhalese Buddhism, 17: 2381
karma yoga, 19: 2714, 20: 2847
Karttikeya (Hindu god), 91212*
Katha Kali (Indian danced drama), 5: 636
kaustubha (Indian gem), 10: 1416
kava (Polynesian drink), 11: 1468
Kay (Arthurian knight), 1: 122, 124-5
Kayan people (Borneo), 2: 265
Keely, John Worrell, 19: 2729-30
Kelabit people (Borneo), 2: 265
Kelley, Edward, John Dee and, 4: 560, 5: 696
kelpies (Scottish water spirits), 6: 830, 11: 1468, 12: 1709
Kempe, Margery, on Julian of Norwich, 11: 1456
Kempe, Ursula (witch), 6: 796
Kenealey, Edward Vaughan Hyde, modern Druid, 5: 661
Kentigern, St, 16: 2222, 2281
Kenya, Mount, 11: 1469
keres (Greek spirits), 11: 1469
Keres Indians (Pueblo), 15: 2130
Ker-Is (Breton lost land legend), 7: 916
kern baby, kern doll (corn sheaf), 4: 456, 8: 1123
Kerry, Great White Horse of (hobby-horse), 9: 1226
Kevin, St, blackbird and, 16: 2276
key, 9: 1260, 11: 1469, 18: 2534
Key of Solomon (grimoire), 8: 1089, 1089, 1090, 11: 1583, 13: 1823
magic circle in, 16: 2219
planets in, 4: 547
purification of magician prescribed in, 16: 2218
sacrifice in, 16: 2220

Sunday, rituals appropriate to, in, 4: 459
white recommended in, 16: 2219
Khan, Durdana, and near-death experience, 13: 1833
Khan, Sir Sayyid Ahmad, 10: 1376
Kharijites (Islam), 10: 1374
Khlysty (Men of God), 15: 2158, 17: 2331, 17: 2384
Khnum (Khnemu; Egyptian god), 9: 1242, 17: 2357
creation of man and, 4: 473, 7: 967
Khomeini, Ayatollah Ruhollah, 10: 1376
Khonds (Bengali tribe), harvest sacrifice of, 8: 1123-4
Khunrath, Heinrich (alchemist), 15: 2027
Ki (Sumerian goddess), 5: 687 kidneys, jade used for disorders of, 10: 1382 Kikuyu (African tribe), 10: 1340, 11: 1469-73
see also Mau Mau
ki-lin (Chinese unicorn), see unicorn
Kilner, W. R., aura and, 2: 163
Kimbangu, Simon (Congolese religious leader), 17: 2330
Kinabalu, Mount (Borneo), 2: 265
Kinderhook plates (Mormonism), 13: 1772
'kindly ones', the (Eumenides; Greek mythology), see Furies
king, 11: 1474-80
anointing of, 11: 1480, 14: 1913-4
in China, 11: 1480
costume, royal, 4: 465
dying god and divine king, 5: 676
Egyptian, see pharaoh; Ptolemy
fertility and, 11: 1474, 19: 2721
in Greece, 11: 1480
in India, 11: 1480
in Ireland, 3: 373, 18: 2565, 2566
in Israel, 11: 1478-9
in Japan (emperor), 11: 1478-9, 1480
killing of, 11: 1474, 19: 2721
in Mesopotamia, 11: 1478
Nilotes and, 13: 1869
in Persia, 11: 1479-80, 13: 1752
see also Achaemenids; Sassanians
in Phoenicia, 18: 2541
in Rome, 11: 1485
emperor, 11: 1480, 13: 1810-11, 16: 2234
mystery religions and, 13: 1810-11
Swazi and, 16: 2213
as vegetation god, 11: 1474
see also coronation; divine right; Fisher King King's Bench, Court of, medieval, 14: 1905
Kingsford, Anna, 6: 768
Kirlian photography, 11: 1481
kiss:
mistletoe and, 3: 419, 13: 1750
obscene (osculum infame):
Knights Templar and, 11: 1483
Luciferans and, 11: 1563
witches and, 6: 785, 788, 16: 2255
Kissos (nymph), 9: 1228
Kitamura Sayo (Japanese religious leader), 10: 1398
kite (bird), 8: 1133
see also brahminy kite
Kloppenburg, Bonaventura (Franciscan priest), 17: 2427
Kluski, Franek (medium), 15: 2108
knackers (knockers, mine fairies), 4: 457
Knigge, Adolph, 10: 1303, 1303
knights, knighthood,
of the Round Table, see Arthur
sword and, 18: 2527
see also Hospitallers; Knights Templar; Order of the Garter; vigil Knights of Malta, see Hospitallers knight's milfoil (plant), see yarrow Knights of Rhodes, see Hospitallers
Knights Templar, 11: 1482-4
Baphomet and, 2: 195, 11: 1484
knockers (mine fairies), see knackers
Knorr, Nathan (leader of Jehovah's Witnesses), 10: 1402
Knossos (Crete), see Cnossus
knot, 11: 1484, 18: 2494-4
in childbirth, 18: 2492
in love magic, 18: 2492
in medicine, 18: 2493
as Odin's symbol, 14: 1909, 1911
Shinto, symbolic, 17: 2361
in white magic, 20: 2793
wind controlled by, 18: 2494
in witchcraft, 18: 2494
in zombification rite, 20: 2869
Knott, Elizabeth, image magic used by, 10: 1308
koan (Zen riddle), 20: 2859
Kobo Daishi (Kukai; Japanese priest), 10: 1391
Koerner, Bernhard, runes and, 16: 2251
Koestler, Arthur, Chair of Parapsychology at Edinburgh University, ESP research, 6: 806-12, 15: 2110
on synchronicity, 18: 2539
kolo (Yugoslav ring dance), 3: 351
Konarak, Indian temple at (the Black Pagoda), 9: facing title, 18: 2504, 2555
Kono (tribe of Guinea), masks and, 12: 1656-7
Koran (Islamic sacred text), 10: 1369, 1372, 11: 1484, 13: 1759 belief and submission distinguished in, 10: 1368 eternity of, 10: 1372
dictated by Gabriel, 15: 2100, 16: 2198
jinn in, 11: 1468
judgement of the dead in, 10: 1349
light and darkness in, 11: 1527
Medina suras of, 13: 1760-1
Mohammed as God's messenger in, 16: 2198
Queen of Sheba in, 15: 2146
Sufism and, 18: 2496
Koresh (Cyrus Reed Teed), 9: 1228
Korsch, Dr Hubert (astrologer), 13: 1829, 1831
Koryak tribe, and magic mushrooms, 13: 1790
Kostka, St Stanislaus, 18: 2486
Kothmann (witch-hunter of Lemgo), 7: 990
Kowalski, Michael, 20: 2768
Kozlowska, Maria, 20: 2768
Kozma (Bulgarian priest), on the Bogomils, 2: 255, 256
Krafft, Karl Ernst (astrologer), 13: 1831
horoscope of, 1: 142, 144
Nazism and, 13: 1831
Krager, Professor Heinrich, 7: 991
Krak des Chevaliers. 11: 1483
kraken (sea-monster), 7: 908, 11: 1485
Kremlin, Cathedral of the Assumption in, 16: 2185
Kretschmer, Ernst (psychologist), 15: 2038
Krishna (Hindu god), 2: 220, 229, 9: 1213, 1215, 11: 1486-92, 13: 1812, 1818, 15: 2043, 20: 2744, 2746
cow and, 4: 469
demons and, 6: 1581, 11: 1488, 1489
flood legend and, 7: 913
hell and, 9: 1176
Kaliya and, 17: 2336
Radha and, 9: 1216, 11: 1492
sexuality and, 9: 1216
see also Gouranga
Krishna Chaitanya (Indian saint), see Gouranga Krishnamurti, Jeddu, 2: 218, 219, 9: 1221
kriya yoga, 20: 2847
Kshatriyas (caste; Hinduism), 3: 253
Ku (Hawaiian god), see Tu
Kukai (Japanese priest), see Kobo Daishi
Ku Klux Klan, 1: 63, 8: 1148
Kukulcan (Maya god), 17: 2337
Kulibangan (city; India), 10: 1336
Kuloskap (Algonquin culture-hero), 5: 596
Kumarbi (Kumarbis; Hittite/Hurrian god), 4: 484
Kummer, Siegried Adolf (rune occultist), 16: 2251
Kundalini (Hinduism), 2: 279, 11: 1493-5, 1531
European counterpart of, see Vril Society
Kung Fu-tze, see Confucius
kuphi, in worship of Re, 10: 1328
Kuz'ma-Dem'yan, 17: 2047
Kwakiutl Indians, 14: 1955
flood legend of, 4: 496
initiation rites of, 10: 1344
masks of, 14: 1879
raven and creation myth of, 14: 1954
salmon and, 16: 2281
totemic carving of, 19: 2644
winter and, 20: 2812
Kwannon, 7: 909, 20: 2855
Kypris (Cypriot goddess), Aphrodite and, 1: 111
Kyteler, Alice (witch):
broomstick and, 2: 286
familiar of, 6: 839

L

Labrys, see double axe
labyrinth, see maze
Lachesis (Greek mythology), 6: 842
ladder, see steps and ladders
Lady of the Beasts (Mediterranean goddess), 3: 422, 6: 844
ladybird, (insect), 10: 1345
Lady of the Fountain (Mabinogion), 9: 1248-9, 11: 1570-2, 20: 2801
Lady of Shalott, The (Tennyson), 13: 1749
Lafitau, Joseph, 16: 2183
Lagarde, Paul de, 13: 1839
laibon (Masai medicine-man), 12: 1654
Lailoken (Scottish legend), 20: 2802
lakes:
Lady of the Lake, Excalibur and, 1: 124-5, 125
Lancelot and, 11: 1498
symbolism of, 11: 1504
Lakshmi (wife of Vishnu; Hinduism), 6: 843
riding Garuda, 2: 229, 9: 1212
lotus and, 11: 1548
Lamarck, Jean Baptiste, on evolution, 13: 1774
lamas, 11: 1496-7
Nepalese, 15: 2185
Tibetan, 11: 1496-7, 15: 2089, 18: 2560, 19: 2622-5
see also Dalai Lama Lamashtu (Mesopotamian spirit), 12: 1720
lamb, 11: 1498
Easter and, 5: 696
Jesus as the Lamb of God, 5: 696, 6: 814, 815, 11: 1498, 16: 2266, 17: 2357, 2359
Pythagoras and, 17: 2357
as witches' familiar, 6: 796
Lamb, Dr, 15: 2063
La Mercuria (witch), 10: 1380
Lamets (Laotian tribe), 17: 2428
Lammas (1 August), meaning of the name,

7: 929
Lancashire witches:
image magic used by, 10: 1307
see also Device, Elizabeth; Whittle, Anne
Lance, Holy, Grail quest and, 7: 973, 982, 984
Lancelot (Arthurian knight), 1: 122-5, 11: 1498-9, 1498, 1499
Brittany and, 2: 284, 11: 1498
Elaine and, 7: 973
in the enchanted forest, 20: 2800-1
Galahad and, 7: 971, 973, 11: 1498-9
Grail and, 8: 1065, 11: 1498-9, 1498
Guinevere and, 8: 1065, 11: 1498, 1498-9
Morgan le Fay and, 13: 1770
Venus and, 11: 1499
Lancre, Pierre de (witch-hunter, 2: 203, 211, 7: 958-9, 961, 16: 2255
landscape symbolism, 11: 1500-5
bolism: see also castle; caves; earth; Feng Shui; fountain; garden; lakes; mountains; rivers; sea; springs; wells
Lang, Andrew, (folklorist), 7: 923, 1205
Lango (Nilotic people), 13: 1869
language, see words
Lanz, Adolf (Dr Jorg Lanz von Liebenfels), 11: 1537, 13: 1829, 1851, 1852
Lao-Tze (Chinese philosopher), 11: 1506, 13: 1872, 18: 2562, 2562, 2563
Laparelli, Sister Veronica, 18: 2485
lapis lazuli, 10: 1413
lapiths, centaurs and, 3: 379, 9: 1252-3, 19: 2601
Lapland, 11: 1506-9
hammer sacrifice in, 8: 1111
mountains and, 13: 1784
shamanism in 5: 663, 11: 1507-8, 1508, 17: 2352
Lares (Roman deities), 11: 1509-10, 16: 2234
Las Casas, Sebastian de, 12: 1647
Lascaux (cave), 2: 227, 3: 305, 364, 368
Last Judgement:
in Christianity, 11: 1453, 1454, 14: 1983
by Fra Angelico, 5: 668-9
in Autun cathedral (12th cent. relief), 15: 2137
Blake's view of, 2: 243
in Ethiopian MS, 6: 774-5
in 14th cent. Italian painting, 6: 738
by Giotto, 9: 1172-3
in Mappa Mundi, 12: 1650
Virgin Mary and, 12: 1650
serpents and the damned at (Cypriot wall painting), 17: 2340
by Signorelli, 2: 249, 4: 544
souls weighed by angel at, 1: 100-1
trumpet and, 19: 2677
see also Dooms
in Islam, 12: 1610
in Judaism, 11: 1453, 14: 1983
in Zoroastrianism,11: 1454, 20: 2874
Last Supper, 17: 2374
by Damaskinos, 19: 2607
Grail as chalice used at, 8: 1062
see also Mass
Lateau, Louise (stigmatic), 13: 1845, 18: 2482
La Tène (Celtic culture), 3: 373
Druids and, 5: 657
Latin cross (crux immissa), 4: 490
Latter Day Saints, Church of Jesus Christ of the, see Mormons
laurel (tree), 11:1511, 15: 2048
Christmas and, 11: 1511
Daphne and Apollo and, 11: 1511, 1511
Egyptian mummy and, 13: 1787
frenzy induced by, 15: 2048
in Greece, 11: 1511, 15: 2048
oracles and, 11: 1511, 19: 2649
in Rome, 11: 1511
wreaths of, 11: 1511
see also camphor
Laurence, St, 16: 2272
Lavater, Johann Kaspar, 11: 1512, 15: 2036, 2038
La Vey, Anton Szandor, 6: 760, 16: 2283
Law, William, 11: 1531
laya yoga, 20: 2847
Lazarus, raising of, 20: 2794
Lea, H. C., on witchcraft, 7: 960
lead (metal), 4: 459, 11: 1513
Leadbeater, C. W., 20: 2770
on the aura, 2: 163, 15: 2150
Mrs Besant and, 18: 2592
on elementals in psychic attack, 15: 2113
Krishnamurti and, 18: 2591
on the subterranean race, 18: 2494-5
Leaf, Walter, Society for Psychical Research and, 15: 2105
leaping and jumping, 11: 1514
Curetes and, 4: 459, 11: 1514
Midsummer bonfires and, 13: 1743, 1743
Lechler, Dr Adolph, stigmata and, 18: 2483-4
le Clerc, Gentien (witch), 7: 961
leconomancy (method of scrying), 17: 2315
Leda (Greek mythology), 2: 230, 5: 718, 18: 2515-6
Leek, Sybil (modern witch), 13: 1757
Lee Penny (Scottish talisman), 18: 2552
Lefebure, Dr Francis, astral body and, 1: 135-6
left, 11: 1514
evil and, 5: 588, 11: 1514
left-hand path (black magic), 5: 588, 11: 1514
Leftwich, Robert (dowser), 5: 625
Legba (Dahomean spirit), 4: 526, 19: 2664-5
Leibnitz, Gottfried, 13: 1744
Lekganyane, Edward (messianic leader), 12: 1726-7
Leland, Charles (writer on witchcraft), 10: 1378, 1380
Lemegeton (Lesser Key of Solomon; grimoire), 8: 1089-90
incantations in, 16: 2220, 12: 1720
on the kings of the four quarters, 5: 588
names of power in, 13: 1824, 16: 2220,
on the pentagram, 14: 2002
spirits and demons described in, 16: 2194, 2220
Asmodeus, 1: 131
on triangle and magic circle, 16: 2219
Lemminkäinen (Finnish hero), 7: 884, 885
lemon, Evil Eye averted by, 10: 1358
Lemures (ghosts; ancient Rome), 18: 2466
Lemuria, 11: 1514-5
Lenaea (Greek festival), 20: 2809
Lent (Christianity), 5: 697
Battle between Carnival and Lent (Breughel), 7: 926-7
Leo (the Lion; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 107, 143, 11: 1516, 1516
cat's eye (jewel) and, 10: 1413
Leo, Alan (astrologer), 1: 140
Leo I (pope), Attila and, 2: 161
Leon, Moses de (Spanish cabalist), 3: 323
Leonard, Mrs Gladys Osborne (medium), 11: 1516-7, 1517, 12: 1685, 1686, 15: 2107, 2109
Leonardo da Vinci, on human proportion, 2: 251
leopard, shape-shifting and, 11: 1566
Leopard Societies, West African, 1: 60, 103
leprechaun (Ireland), 6: 829, 11: 1518 Lesa, Mwana (African religious leader), 17: 2330
lesbianism:
Artemis and, 4: 576
rarity of, in church history, 2: 175
Leshy (Slav spirit), 17: 2400
lesser celandine (plant), 15: 2049
Lesser Key of Solomon, see Lemegeton
Les Trois Frères (cave), 9: 1243, 1288, 1288
Lethbridge, T.C., 11: 1518, 12: 1693, 15: 2152
Leto (Titaness), 1: 114
Crete and, 8: 1079, 20: 2864
frogs and, 7: 967
Letter of Lentulus, 9: 1290, 13: 1860
letters to the dead (Egypt), 11: 1519
Leucippus (Greek mythology), 20: 2864
levants, see corn-springs
Levi, Eliphas (Abbe Louis Constant), 10: 1318, 11: 1519-20, 1579
Apollonius of Tyana invoked by, 11: 1519, 13: 1837, 14: 2003
on the astral light, 15: 2114
on Baphomet, 2: 195, 195
on breath, in sexual conquest, 2: 279
Cabala and, 3: 327
Adolphe Desbarolles and, 11: 1520
Bulwer Lytton and, 11: 1519-20
'mystery of universal equilibrium', 16: 2218
necromancy and, 13: 1836, 1837
Papus and, 14: 1973, 1974
on the pentagram, 14: 2002, 2003
Tarot and, 11: 1520
on the Trinity, 19: 2612
Wronski and, 11: 1519, 20: 2839
Lévi-Strauss, Claude, on incest, 10: 1329
levitation, 11: 1521, 17: 2445, 18: 2485-7
ecstasy and, 18: 2487
Kathleen Goligher and, 12: 1611-2
by D. D. Home, 9: 1233
by St Joseph of Copertino, 18: 2487
W. Stainton Moses and,12: 1687
see also bilocation
Lewis, H. Spencer (Rosicrucian), 16: 2247
Lew Trenchard (Devon), ghost at, 8: 1131-2
ley lines, 11: 1522-3, 1522, 1523
Liberal Catholic Church, 20: 2770
Liberata, Santa, see Uncumber, St
libido (psychology):
Freud's concept of, 7: 963
Jung and, 11: 1456
Libra (the Scales; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 143, 144, 11: 1524
lice, 10: 1347
Lidwine of Schiedam, St, 20: 2749
Liebenfels, Dr Jorg Lanz von, see Lanz, Adolf
life after death:
African beliefs concerning, 1: 55, 4: 450
Aztec beliefs, 2: 183
Breton beliefs, 2: 285
Celtic beliefs, 3: 374
Christian beliefs, see Christianity,
coolness as feature of, see refrigerium
Egyptian beliefs, see Egypt,
Etruscan beliefs, 6: 780, 781, 782
Finnish beliefs, 7: 885
ghosts and, 7: 1001-8
in Judaism, 10: 1424
Melanesian beliefs, 12: 1697-8
Mesopotamian beliefs, 9: 1169, 12: 1608
Phoenician beliefs, 18: 2544-5
psi as evidence of, 18: 2463-4 see also cult of the dead; hell; immortality; judgement of the dead; paradise; reincarnation; spiritualism light, 11: 1525-31
ghosts and, 7: 1006
see also astral light; aura; aurora; candle; halo; sun; will-o'-the-wisp lightning, see thunder and lightning
Liguori, St Alphonsus, 18: 2487

Lilith (demoness), 10: 1334, 11: 1532
lily, 11: 1532-4
Limbo (Christianity), 11: 1534, 15: 2086
Limpias (Spain), prodigies recorded of statue of Christ at, 20: 2748 Lindow Man, 5: 661
lingam (phallic symbol; Hinduism), 6: 858, 860, 9: 1195, 11: 1534, 14: 1914, 2025
lion, 11: 1535-1536
in Africa, 11: 1535
St Anthony and, 16: 2276
Astarte and, 1: 134
in Christian symbolism, 1: 106, 9: 1292, 11: 1536, 16: 2279
of Cythaeron, killed by Hercules, 9: 1188
eagle, lion-headed, in Mesopotamia (Imdugud), 12: 1716
in Egypt, see Sekhmet
in folktales, 11: 1535
hare and, 11: 1535
Hercules and, 9: 1188
St Jerome and, 11: 1535, 16: 2279
of Judah, Christ as, 6:776,* 11: 1536
Emperor of Ethiopia, 6: 776, 15: 2147
St Mamas and, 11: 1536
man-lion, Vishnu as, 20: 2745, 2746
Mohammed and, 10: 1374
Mycenae, Lion Gate at, 19: 2616
Nemean, killed by Hercules, 9: 1188, 1188
in Parsifal's vision, 14: 1988
on Phoenician ivory plaque, 15: 2030
in Samson's riddle, 16: 2204
topaz and, 10: 1413
unicorn and, 19: 2689, 2690
zodiac sign, see Leo
see also chimaera; griffin
Lisa (Dahomean spririt), see Mawu-Lisa
Lisgar, Lady, ghost of, 8: 1127
List, Guido von, 11: 1537
Armanen sect founded by, 11: 1537
Germanen Order and, 7: 992, 11: 1537
Nazism and, 11: 1537
runes and, 11: 1537, 16: 2251
swastika and, 11: 1537, 18: 2517
Little People, see fairies liturgy (definition), 11: 1537 lituus (augur's emblem), 2: 162
liver, 11: 1538
divination by (hepatoscopy), 11: 1538
in Babylonia, 5: 602, 11: 1538, 14: 1921
Etruscans and, 6: 780, 11: 1538, 11: 1538
Phoenicians and, 18: 2542
lizard, 11: 1539-40
Maori and, 5: 633
llama (animal), 10: 1325
Lleu (Welsh god), 8: 1098, 11: 1540-1, 1572
Lludd and Llefelys (Mabinogion), 11: 1570
Loathly Damsel (Arthurian legend), Parsifal and, 14: 1988, 1990
Loch Ness Monster, 5: 631
Locke, John,
locust, 10: 1347
Lodge, Sir Oliver, 15: 2106
Society for Psychical Research and, 15: 2105
cross-correspondences and, 20: 2804
Eusapia Palladino and, 14: 1962
Spiritualism and, 17: 2441
Loew, Rabbi Judah, Golem and, 8: 1048
logans, see rocking stones
Logroño, trial of witches at, 2: 202
Loki (Scandinavian god), 11: 1542-4
Balder and, 2: 192, 11: 1542, 1543
father of Fenris wolf, World Serpent and Hel, 8: 1017
giants and, 8: 1017, 11: 1543
Idun and, 11: 1543
at Ragnarok, 16: 2292
Thor and, 11: 1542, 1543, 19: 2608, 2610
as trickster, 11: 1543, 19: 2665
Lollards, 3: 411, 9: 1193
Lombards (Langobards, Longbeards), origin of the name, in Wodan legend, 7: 965
Lomna (Finn's fool), 8: 1143
London Spiritualist Alliance (formerly the British National Association of Spiritualists), 17: 2440
Longbeards, see Lombards
Longleat (Wilts), haunting of, 8: 1130-31
longue dance (Belgian dance), 3: 351
Lono (Hawaiian god), see Rongo Loog, C., interpreter of Nostradamus, 14: 1889
loon (bird), see diver
Lord of Misrule, 3: 418
Duke of Wellington as, 7: 934
Lord's Prayer:
warts cured by, 10: 1318
witches unable to repeat, 17: 2414
Lord's Supper, see Mass
lost lands, submerged towns and villages, 17: 2323
bells of, 17: 2323
Breton legends, 2: 285, 7: 916
Cornish legends, 7: 916
Welsh legends, 7: 915
see also Atlantis; Lemuria; Mu lost tribes of Israel, 11: 1544-6
Mormons and, 13: 1771
Persia, myth of their living in, 15: 2136
see also British Israelites
lots, 11: 1547-8
divination by (sortilege), 11: 1547-8, 17: 2418
at Dodona, 14: 1930-1
at Rome (sortes), 11: 1547
runes as lots, in ancient Germany, 16: 2251
scapegoat chosen by, 16: 2293
lotus, 11: 1548-9, 15: 2048
Buddhism and, 11: 1450, 11: 1549
in Egypt, 11: 1548, 1549
female principle symbolized by, 11: 1548, 15: 2024-5
Greek myth of lotus-eaters, 11: 1549
Hinduism and, 9: 1207, 11: 1548, 18: 2502, 20: 2746
lotus position (yoga), 19: 2713, 20: 2847, 2849
Lou (Louwrens van Voorthuizen), 12: 1724
Loudun nuns, 11: 1550-2
Louis XIV (of France):
Fénélon and, 15: 2150
witches reprieved by, 7: 961 see also Montespan, Madame de loup-garou, see werewolf
in Haiti, 20: 2752
Lourdes, 6: 834-5, 11: 1553-5, 1553, 1554, 13: 1748
love-apple (mandrake; tomato), 12: 1618
Lovecraft, H.P., 13: 1837
'love feast', Christian, see agape
love magic, 11: 1556-61
knots in, 18: 2492
see also aphrodisiac
love potion, see aphrodisiac
Lovers (Tarot card), 18: 2570, 2570
Lowes, John (witch), 5: 692
Lowland Hundred (Welsh lost land legend), 7: 915
Loxwood (Sussex), Cokelers at, 3: 427
Loyola, St Ignatius, 16: 2270, 20: 2748-9
LSD (drug), 20: 2851
Lua (Roman goddess), 16: 2285
Lübeck, Infant of (child prodigy), 16: 2174
Lucian of Antioch, St, 5: 614
Lucidus (5th cent. priest), 15: 2080
Lucifer, 4: 569, 569-72, 6: 794-5, 11: 1562
Luciferans (German Satanists), 11: 1562
luck:
thirteen and, 19: 2606-7
three and, 19: 2612
see also fate; lots; predestination and free will Lucretius (Roman poet), 11: 1558
Lucy, St, 5: 595, 6: 813, 16: 2272
Lugh (Irish god), 11: 1541
Leu identified with, 8: 1098
Lugnasad (Lughnasa; Celtic festival), 3: 375, 11: 1541
Lugus (Celtic god), 3: 377
festival of, see Lugnasad
Leu identified with, 8: 1098, 11: 1540
Lu-Hsing (Chinese god), 14: 1983
Luke, St, 10: 1409
symbol of, 9: 1292
Lull (Lully), Raymond, 4: 564, 9: 1198, 11: 1564-5
and geomancy, 7: 986
Lumière brothers, 7: 872
Luminous Lodge, see Vril Society
lunacy, see madness
Luo (Nilotic people), 13: 1869, 1871
Lupercalia (Roman festival), 7: 943, 945, 18: 2466
Luperci (Roman priests), 16: 2235
Luria, Isaac (Cabalist), 3: 323, 326, 8: 1125, 11: 1566
Luther, Martin, 3: 411
Christmas tree and, 3: 419
music and, 13: 1793
pilgrimage to Rome by, 15: 2043-4
predestination and, 15: 2080
Lyangombe (Congolese god), 4: 450
Lycaeon (Greek mythology), 20: 2779
lycanthropy, see shape-shifting, werewolf
Lycurgus (King of Thrace), Dionysus and, 5: 584
Lyonesse (Cornish lost land legend), 7: 916, 17: 2323
Lyons (France):
origin of the name, 11: 1541
Poor Men of, see Waldenses lyre:
invented by Hermes, 9: 1196
Orpheus and, 14: 1934, 1934-5, 1936
Lytton, Sir Edward Bulwer, 11: 1567-8
D. D. Home and, 9: 1233
Eliphas Levi and, 11: 1519-20
Wagner influenced by, 20: 2757

M

Ma (Bellona; Anatolian mother goddess), 5: 678, 13: 1782
Maat, (Mat, Mut; Egyptian deity), 2: 277, 279, 6: 736, 851, 851, 11: 1569
Mabinogion (medieval Welsh tales), 11: 1569-72
Arthur in, 11: 1570, 1573
see also Culhwch and Olwen
Bran the Blessed in, see Branwen, daughter of Llyr Gwydion in, see Math and Mathonwy Lleu in, see Math and Mathonwy
see also Lady of the Fountain
Macarius, St, 17: 2332
McDougall, William (psychologist), ESP and, 6: 806, 15: 2109
McGee, John and William (revivalists), 6: 764
McGready, James (revivalist), 6: 764
McGuire, Bishop George Alexander, 20: 2769
Macha (Celtic goddess of war), 8: 1143
Machen, Arthur, Golden Dawn and, 8: 1044

Machu Pichu (Inca city), 10: 1322
Maciel, Antonio, see Conselheiro
Mackenzie, Kenneth (Masonic Rosicrucian), Eliphas Levi and, 11: 1520
Maclean, Euphemia (witch), 14: 1886-7
McPherson, Aimee Semple (revivalist), 14: 2004 ,2005
macrocosm and microcosm, 11: 1572-3, 1580, 1582, 12: 1612, 16: 2191-2
in alchemy, 11: 1573
in astrology, 11: 1573
Boehme's doctrine of, 2: 253, 254
correspondences and, 11: 1573
Fludd on, 2: 251, 7: 917, 918, 11: 1573, 12: 1612
great chain of being and, 8: 1067
magic and, 11: 1572, 1580
pentagram and, 14: 2002
macumba (Brazil), see umbanda
Madanotsava (Hindu festival), 11: 1464
Madhyamika school (Buddhism), 18: 2507
madness, 11: 1573-6
asceticism and, 11: 1574-5
dancing and, 11: 1575
see also dancing mania
dreaming as, 11: 1575
French asylum inmates unchained, 9: 1274
moon and, 13: 1767
shamanism and, 11: 1573-4, 15: 2086
Shiva and, 11: 1574, 17: 2367
Madyan, Abu, 9: 1277
maenads (worshippers of Dionysus), 5: 584, 587, 11: 1576
Magharians (Jewish sect), 8: 1029
magi, 11: 1576
Jesus and the three, 11: 1576, 19: 2615
Parthians and, 14: 1991
magic, 11: 1577-84
in Africa, 1: 60
Ethiopia, 11: 776-8
Zulus, 20: 2878
Agrippa and, 1: 64, 3: 327, 8: 1090, 11: 1581
analogies in, 15: 2058
see also correspondences
animals in, 1: 107
balance in, 14: 1924
books of, see grimoires
Bruno on, 2: 288
Cabala and, 3: 326, 327
Cagliostro and, 3: 328
disease caused and cured by, 5: 589
in Egypt, 6: 734
in Finland, 7: 888
Frazer's classification of, 5: 590, 10: 1309, 18: 2538
gesture used in, 7: 997
Golden Dawn and, 8: 1043-4
good and evil transcended by, 11: 1584
Great Plains Indians and, 8: 1072 imagination in, 11: 1582
initiation to, 11: 1580
inspiration and, 15: 2059
Bulwer Lytton and, 11: 1568
macrocosm and microcosm as basis of, 11: 1572, 1580
mandala in, 12: 1614-6
in Melanesia, 12: 1695-7
in Mesopotamia, 12: 1720-1
names and, 13: 1822
numbers in, 5: 591
see also magic squares
origin of the word, 11: 1576
Paracelsus on, 11: 1580
poetry and, 15: 2055, 2058-9, 2060
power as goal of, 11: 1579, 1584
priest and magician compared, 15: 2083-8
psychic attack in, 15: 2111-4
religion distinguished from, 5: 589, 6: 859, 12: 1593 in the Renaissance, 16: 2194
science and, 11: 1578-9
secrecy in, 11: 1579-80 self, magic as search for, 11: 1583-4
serpent in, 17: 2338-40
sex and, see sex, in magic smiths and, 17: 2407-8
sound as foundation of, 12: 1627
in Tantrism, 18: 2557
trance in, 19: 2650
Voodoo and, 20: 2751-6
see also incantation; mantra; names, above; poetry, above see also black magic; hunting magic; imitative magic; love magic; ritual magic; treasure magic; weather magic; white magic also charm; correspondences; Crowley, Aleister; Faust; forces; hexagram; hoodoo; Levi, Eliphas; magical papyri; magic circle; magic wand; pentagram; Simon Magus; theurgy Magical Elements (grimoire), see Heptameron
magical papyri, 12: 1591-3
Seth in, 17: 2341
magic circle, 3: 422, 422, 16: 2219
of Agrippa, 11: 1583
arthame used to draw, 13: 1756
lead as material of, 11: 1513
names of power inscribed in, 13: 1823, 14: 2002, 16: 2219
in necromancy, 13: 1836
pentagram and, 14: 2002, 16: 2220
triangle used with, 16: 2219
witches' use of, 6: 840
modern witches, 13: 1756
Magician (Juggler; Tarot card), 18: 2568, 2570
magic squares, 12: 1593-5
of Abra-Melin, 12: 1595, 16: 2260
in Dürer's Melancolia, 5: 592, 12: 1594
as protection against jinn, 10: 1418
magic wand, 20: 2766
of Aleister Crowley, 4: 500
Grand Grimoire specifications for, 16: 2218 hazel and, 8: 1135, 1135, 16: 2218
see also caduceus
magloire see main-de-gloire
magnetism, animal magnetism, 12: 1595-7
Christian science and, 3: 414, 416
disease treated by, 12: 1595, 1711
electromagnetism distinguished from, 12: 1595
Mesmer and, 12: 1595, 1711
see also hypnotism
magpie, 12: 1598
in augury, 4: 497
in legends of Christ, 12: 1598, 18: 2514
Magritte, René:
Hardy Sleeper, 5: 640
La réproduction interdite, facing title, 5
magus, see magi
Magus, The, see Barrett, Francis
Mahabharata (Indian epic), 2: 220, 220, 222-3, 224, 225, 3: 353, 9: 1202, 1214, 11: 1488
anger condemned in, 20: 2849
bhakti in, 11: 1491
on woman, 20: 2825
Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, 9: 1221, 12: 1679, 19: 2652
Mahatmas, 12: 1599-1600
Madame Blavatsky and, 2: 245, 12: 1600
see also Gandhi
Mahayana (Buddhism), 3: 300, 12: 1600
Nirvana and, 13: 1817, 1819
sin and, 17: 2376
in Tibet, 11: 1496
see also Sunyavada; Zen Buddhism
Mahdi, 12: 1601-2, 1724, 1726
Ismailis and, 10: 1376
al-Mahdi, Mohammed, 12: 1602, 1724, 1726
Mahinda (Buddhism), 3: 300
Mahomet (the prophet of Islam), see Mohammed maiden (corn sheaf), 4: 456
Maid Marian, 16: 2225
in Abbots Bromley horn dance, 9: 1250
Maimed King (Grail legend), see Fisher King
Maimonides, Moses, 10: 1433-4
main-de-gloire (magloire) 12: 1618
Maira (culture hero; Brazil), 2: 273, 274, 275
Maitland, Edward, 6: 768
Maitreya (Bodhisattva), 20: 2855
maize, 12: 1602
Iroquois mask of, 10: 1361, 1360
in Mexican myth, 2: 185, 19: 2721
Ma-Kuh (Chinese fairy), 6: 831
Malachi (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2099
Malaval, François (Quietist), 15: 2149
Malaya, 17: 2430
Maliki school (Islam), 10: 1369
Malleus Maleficarum (Hammer of Witches) 6: 783, 12: 1602
on disorders caused by the Devil, 15: 2112
on the evil eye, 6: 817
on the penis, 10: 1356
on witches and the Devil, 14: 1961, 15: 2112
Malmesbury witches (17th cent.), 6: 817
Malo, St, wren and, 16: 2276, 20: 2837
Malory, Sir Thomas, Morte d'Arthur, 1: 124-5
Camelot, 3: 330
Excalibur, 18: 2526
Lancelot, 11: 1499
Merlin, 12: 1708
Malta, 12: 1602-5
Knights of, see Hospitallers
temples of, 12: 1602, 14: 1926
Venus figure from, 6: 824
woman-shaped sanctuaries of, 5: 687, 687
Mamas, St, 11: 1537
Mamertini (Italian people), 12: 1644
mammoth, Inuit legends that may refer to, 14: 1880
man, 2: 252, 12: 1606-13
as copy of the universe, see macrocosm and microcosm
see also body; double; first man; self; soul Man, Andrew (witch), 1: 47
mana, 12: 1613
in Melanesia, 12: 1613, 1694
in Micronesia, 15: 2072
in Polynesia, 12: 1613, 15: 2070, 18: 2547
Manasa (Bengali snake goddess), 17: 2337
Manawydan, son of Llyr (Mabinogion), 11: 1571-2
mandala, 12: 1614-7, 20: 2848
in magic, 12: 1614-6
in meditation, 12: 1678
of Shiva as Bhairava, 18: 2561
in Tantrism, 12: 1616
Tibetan, 11: 1459, 12: 1616
Mandan Indians, 8: 1068, 1072
Mandeans, 12: 1621
dualism of, 5: 668, 12: 1621
Sabians and, 8: 1119
mandrake (mandragora; Circe's Plant), 12: 1617-20, 15: 2048
as aphrodisiac, 11: 1557, 12: 1618
Joan of Arc and, 10: 1424
white bryony and, 9: 1183, 12: 1620
manes (spirits of the dead; Rome), 12: 1620

Mani, 9: 1191, 12: 1621
martyrdom of, 5: 667
twin self of, 8: 1028, 19: 2684
Maniai (Greek mytholoyy), see Furies
Manicheans, 12: 1621-4
Adam, Manichean view of, 7: 905, 11: 1527, 12: 1612-3, 1621
dualism of, 5: 668, 6: 791, 12: 1621
Gnosticism and, 12: 1621
light and darkness and, 11: 1527 medieval Manichees and, 12: 1624
see also Mani
maniple (Christian vestment), 4: 465
manitou, 12: 1625
Manjusri (Bodhisattva), 12: 1611, 20: 2855
Mankind United, 12: 1625-6
Mannanan mac Lire (Celtic sea god), 2: 271
Manning, Matthew (British psychic), 12: 1626, 15: 2122
Mannington Hall (Norfolk), haunting of, 8: 1129-30
Manoa (El Dorado), 6: 737
mano cornuta, 6: 818, 7: 997
mano fica, 6: 818
mano pantea, 7: 997
Mansel, Henry, 2: 200
Mansur al-Hallaj (Sufi), 9: 1191
Mantegna, Andrea, Tarot pack attributed to, 18: 2573, 2574
mantis (insect), Bushmen and, 3: 320
mantra, 12: 1627-8
Kundalini and, 11: 1494-5
in Tantrism, 17: 2345, 18: 2558
mantra yoga, 20: 2847
Manu, code of (Hinduism), 3: 354
ancestor worship in, 4: 513
cow in, 4: 468
Maori (New Zealand), 12: 1628-33
amulets of, see liki
cannibalism and, 12: 1631-2
Christianity and, 12: 1632-3
gods of, 12: 1630-1
lizard and, 5: 633
mana and, 12: 1613
priests of, 12: 1630, 1631
tapu (taboo) and, 12: 1630, 1631
tattooing and, 18: 2577
Mappa Mundi (Hereford cathedral), Virgin Mary in, 12: 1650
Marby, Friedrich Bernhard, 16: 2251
Marcel, Gabriel, on immortality, 10: 1316
March (month), 12: 1642-3
Mars and, 12: 1642, 1644
New Year and, 12: 1642, 13: 1862
see also March hare
March hare, 8: 1116
Mardi Gras, 18: 2468, 18: 2470-1, 19: 2693
Marduk (Babylonian god), 4: 474, 5: 630, 12: 1633-4, 1716, 1717, 1718
in Assyria, 12: 1634
four eyes of, 6: 814, 9: 1289
horns and, 9: 1245
mare (corn sheaf), 4: 456
crying the mare, 8: 1120
mares of Diomedes, Hercules and, 9: 1188
marga (India), 14: 1992
Maria of Agreda, Blessed, 20: 2749
Maria of Ituren (witch), 2: 201
Mariavite Church, 20: 2768
marigold, 11: 1557
Marigrane, Marie de (witch), 16: 2556
Marilaha (Mesopotamian deity), 8: 1119
Mari Lwyd (Welsh hobby-horse), 9: 1226
Mark (King of Cornwall), 19: 2667
Brittany and, 2: 284
Castle Dore and, 3: 331
Mark, St, 10: 1409, 1410, 1412, 13: 1746
lion the symbol of', 9: 1292
Marley, Bob (Rastafarian musician), 12: 1728
Marlowe, Christopher, Faust and, 6: 846, 847
Maronites (Christian sect), 3: 410
Marquesas Islands (Polynesia), 15: 2070-2, 18: 2577
Marranos (Jewish converts; Spain), 9: 1193
marriage and betrothal, matrimony, wedding, 12: 1635-42
allegorical, in alchemy, 12: 1705, 14: 1924-5 banns, calling the, 12: 1637
bundling, 12: 1637
child brides, 12: 1635
in children's games, 3: 390
Christianity and, 3: 408
as a sacrament, 16: 2258, 2259-60
confetti and, 12: 1639
food and drink and, 12: 1637-9 gifts and, 12: 1637
Gypsies and, 8: 1102
honey and, 9: 1238
Inuit and,12: 1637
Kikuyu and, 11: 1472
May unlucky month for, 4: 546
oak and, 14: 1902, 1903
Parsees and, 14:1985,* 1987
St Paul on, 20: 2829
of priests, 15: 2088
sacred, as fertility rite, 6: 859, 9: 1179
at Eleusis, 6: 748
Ishtar and, 10: 1364
Slavs and, 17: 2407
spiritual, of Saora shamans, 15: 2085 termination of, St Uncumber as means to, 19: 2687 trial marriage, 12: 1637
Voodoo and, 20: 2754
see also Dunmow Flitch marriage at Cana, 20: 2773
Mars (planet):
in astrology, 1: 139, 143, 12: 1644
iron and, 4: 459
jewels associated with, 10: 1413
red and, 4: 459, 12: 1644
Mars (Roman god), 12: 1642-4
Ares identified with, 12: 1644
Augustus and, 12: 1644
fertility and, 12: 1643, 16: 2230
founding of Rome and, 7: 943, 944, 12: 1644
horse and, 12: 1643
Janus and, 10: 1387, 1388
March and, 12: 1642, 1644
Venus and, 19: 2726
war and, 12: 1643
woodpecker oracle of, 12: 1644, 20: 2836
Marsyas (satyr), 1: 115, 16: 2177
Martello, Dr Leo Louis (modern witch), 13: 1757
Martin of Arles, on witchcraft, 2: 201, 7: 960
Martinists, 12: 1646-7
Papus and, 12: 1647, 14: 1974
martyrs, 12: 1647
St Andrew, 15: 1854
St Peter, 13: 1855
St Stephen, 12: 1647
see also Thecla, St
Mary Magdalene, as Black Madonna, 2: 232
in the Nag Hammadi texts, 6: 769
Mary, the Virgin, 12: 1647-52, 13: 1858-9, 1860
Annunciation of, Festival of, 12: 1650
by El Greco, 2: 280
by Martini, 11: 1533
assumption of, 13: 1795
Festival of, 12: 1650, 1652
St Bernadette and, 11: 1553
see also Lourdes
birth of, 13: 1856
Bogomils and, 2: 256
breath and, legends concerning, 2: 277-8
St Brigit and, 2: 284
dead body of Christ and, in art, see pieta death of, by Duccio, 13: 1858-9
in dome of St Saviour (Constantinople), 16: 2184
garden as symbol of, 11: 1503
Great Mother's attributes transferred to, 13: 1782
lily and, 11: 1532, 1533, 1534
her mother not a virgin, 19: 2736 Nativity of, Festival of,12: 1650
original sin, her freedom from, see Immaculate Conception Purification of, Festival of, 12: 1650
rose and, 16: 2238
taken to the Temple (Giotto), 13: 1857
Theophilus of Adana saved from the Devil by, 14: 1959
Trinity, represented with, 12: 1650 her virginity, 19: 2732
seen in vision, 20: 2763, 2750
see also St Bernadette above
Mary of Agreda, 2: 226
Mary Frances of the Five Wounds, St, 18: 2484, 2485
'Mary of the Gaels' (St Brigit of Kildare), 2: 284-5
Mary of Jesus Crucified, Sister, 18: 2485
Mary Magdalen of Pazzi, 18: 2486
Masada, 20: 2852, 2853
Masaharu Taniguchi (Japanese religious leader), 10: 1398
Masai (African people), 12: 1653-5
smiths and, 17: 2406
Maskelyne, J. N., 17: 2443
masks, 12: 1656-67
in Africa, 12: 1656-7
Benin, 12: 1657
Nigeria, 12: 1658
in Brazil, 12: 1700, 18: 2469
Celtic, horned, 3: 376
in dance, 4: 536, 12: 1656
death masks, 12: 1660-3
in Dionysian mysteries, 5: 586, 12: 1664
in drama, 12: 1663
Greek, 5: 637, 12: 1664
Japanese, 10: 1390, 12: 1664
Inuit, 10: 1353, 12: 1660, 1665
Iroquois, 8: 1123, 10: 1359, 1361, 1361
Javanese, 8: 1140
Melanesian, 12: 1656, 1657, 1694-5
New Guinea, 12: 1657-8, 13: 1846
Mongolian, 8: 1137
Pacific Northwest Indians and, 12: 1685-59, 14: *1883
Kwakiutl, 14: 1879
Peruvian, 8: 1140, 10: 1236-7
pumpkin, at Hallowe'en, 1: 89
in Tibet, 12: 1662, 1663
Mass (Eucharist, Holy Communion, Lord's Supper), 2: 276, 3: 408, 6: 782, 7: 929, 932-3, 12: 1668, 6: 2257, 16: 2258-9, 2260
altar and, 1: 93
gesture in, 7: 997
in magic 12: 1668, 15: 2111
see also black mass
as sacrifice, 16: 2259, 2266
symbolism in, 18: 2534
see also host; Last Supper; transubstantiation Massacre of the Innocents, in Ethiopian MS, 4: 520
mass of the dead, 2: 235

mass of St Secaire, 2: 235
Mastema (evil spirit), 4: 570
Masters, 12: 1669
Francis Bacon, 12: 1669
St-Germain, 16: 2269
Mat (Egyptian goddess), see Maat
materialization (Spiritualism), 12: 1686
Palladino and,
see also ectoplasm 14: 1962
maté tea, as drug, in Brazil, 5: 650
Math and Mathonwy (Mabinogion), 8: 1098, 11: 1540, 1572
Mather, Cotton, Salem witches and, 16: 2281
Mathers, Samuel Liddell (Macgregor Mathers), 2: 211, 4: 499, 8: 1043-6, 1045, 12: 1670
Crowley and, 2: 211, 4: 499, 8: 1045-6
Enochian and, 6: 760
Golden Dawn and, 8: 1043-6, 12: 1670, 16: 2243, 20: 2843
Key of Solomon and, 8: 1089
magic circle and, 5: 588
Rosicrucians and, 16: 2245
Sacred Magic of Abra-Melin and, 12: 1595, 16: 2260
Yeats and, 20: 2843
Mathew, Archbishop, 20: 2767-8, 2770
Mathijs, John (Anabaptist), 6: 762
Matthew, St, 10: 1409
man the symbol of, 9: 1292
Matholwch (King of Ireland), in the Mabinogion, see Branwen, daughter of Llyr matriarchy, 20: 2825
matrimony, see marriage
Matunus (Celtic bear god), 2: 210
Maui (Polynesian hero), 15: 2072
Mau Mau, 11: 1469, 1470, 12: 1670, 17: 2417
Maundy Thursday (Green Thursday), 5: 702, 717
Maurice, St, 16: 2277
Maury, Alfred, on dreams, 5: 646
Maury, Marguerite, and aromatherapy, 1: 119
Mawu-Lisa (Dahomean spirits), 4: 526
May (month), 2: 287, 4: 546 see also May Day
may (tree), see hawthorn
Maya (Mexican people), 12: 1670-3, 15: 2085, 17: 2337
Mu and, 11: 1514-5
Maya (Vedanta), 19: 2712
Maya, Queen (mother of Buddha), 19: 2733, 2733
May Day, 5: 638, 12: 1673-4
Green May (Jack in the Green) and, 8: 1081, 1134, 10: 1381, 14: 1903, 19: 2722-3
May King, May Queen, and, 6: 859, 8: 1081, 12: 1673
at Minehead, 12: 1658
Morris Dances and, 12: 1673-4, 13: 1776
Robin Hood and, 8: 1081, 12: 1673-4, 16: 2225
trees and, 19: 2659-60
hawthorn, 8: 1134, 12: 1673
oak, 14: 1903
rowan, 8: 1134, 16: 2247
see also maypole; Padstow Old Hoss
maypole, 5: 638, 6: 861, 12: 1673, 18: 2467, 19: 2659-60, 2722
Morris dances and, 12: 1673, 13: 1775,
maze (labyrinth), 12: 1674-5
in children's games, see Hop Scotch at Cnossus (Crete), 2: 176, 9: 1179-80, 12: 1674-5
mead of inspiration, Odin and, 14: 1909, 1910
Mecca (Arabian city), 12: 1675-6
Islamic worship performed facing, 10: 1369
Mohammed and, 10: 1368, 12: 1675-6, 13: 1759
pilgrimage to, 10: 1370-2, 12: 1675-6
Mede, Joseph (theologian), 17: 2328
Medea (Greek witch):
Circe and, 3: 422
Jason and, 9: 1167, 15: 2113
medicine, see healing
medicine-man, 15: 2086
African, 1: 58-60
Masai, 12: 1654
Australian, 2: 168-70
Corybantes as, 4: 459
costume and, 4: 464
of Great Plains Indians, 8: 1070
see also obeah; shaman
Medina (Yathrib; Arabian city), 12: 1676
Mohammed and, 9: 1167, 10: 1368-76, 12: 1670, 13: 1760
meditation, 12: 1677-80
in Buddhism, 3: 297, 301, 12: 1679
in Ceylon, 17: 2381
Cabala and 12: 1678
in China, 12: 1678
Christianity and, 12: 1679-80
concentration distinguished from, 12: 1677 mandala used in, 12: 1678
rosary and, 16: 2236
Sufism and, 12: 1678
in yoga, 12: 1677, 20: 2850
mediums, 12: 1681-8, 15: 2109, 17: 2444, 2445
cold breezes at sittings of, 12: 1688
'controls' of, 12: 1683
ESP testing and, 6: 806
'sensitive' as alternative name for, 12: 1682
sex and, 12: 1688
Society for Psychical Research and, 15: 2106*
Eva C., 12: 1688
Stella C., 12: 1688
Eusapia Palladino, 14: 1962
Mrs Piper, 15: 2107
Schneider brothers, 16: 2295
telepathy and, 12: 1686
in theurgy, 19: 2605
trance and, 12: 1683-4, 19: 2651
see also Cook, Florence; Davenports; Hardinge-Britten, Emma; Home, Daniel Dunglas; Leonard, Mrs; Willett, Mrs; Williams, Charles Edward also materialization; seance Medmenham monks, 12: 1690-1
Medusa (Gorgon), 8: 1053-4, 1108
Megaera (Greek mythology), 7: 968 megalithic mysteries, 12: 1692-3
megaliths, megalithic buildings:
burial and, 4: 512
giants and, 8: 1017
Maltese temples, 12: 1602, 1603
sun worship and, 18: 2505
see also megalithic mysteries; Stonehenge
Megara (wife of Hercules), 9: 1188
Megiddo, stone altar found at, 1: 92
Melanesia, 12: 1694-8
Australia compared with, 12: 1697
body-painting in, 18: 2581
cannibalism in, 12: 1694
cargo cults in, 3: 348-50, 1698
death, myths of origin of, 12: 1697
first man myths of, 12: 1697
headhunting in, 12: 1694
human sacrifice in, 12: 1694
initiation in, 10: 1340, 12: 1695
life after death, beliefs concerning, 12: 1697
magic in, 12: 1695
mana and, 12: 1613, 1694
masks in, 12: 1656, 1657, 1694-5
new religious movements in, 12: 1698
see also cargo cults, above Polynesia compared with, 12: 1697, 15: 2069
spirits and, 12: 1694-5, 1694, 1695
totemism in, 19: 2645
see also Fiji; New Guinea
Meleagant (Arthurian legend), 11: 1498
Melwas identified with, 8: 1024
Melchior, Nicholas (alchemist), 1: 77
Melchiorites (religious sect), 6: 762
Melissa (nymph), Zeus and, 14: 1900
Melkart (Phoenician god), 15: 2031, 2032
mell doll (corn sheaf), 8: 1123
Melor, St, severed head of, 8: 1144
Melpomene (Muse), 13: 1789
Melwas (King of Somerset), 8: 1024
see also Meleagant
memory, psychometry and, 15: 2123-4 Memphis (Egypt), 6: 732
sacred bull of, see Apis
creation myth of priesthood of, 4: 472
Imhotep and, 10: 1305
Mendès, Catulle, 14: 1974
mendicants, 12: 1698
Menerva (Etruscan goddess), see Menrva
'Men in Black', 12: 1698-9
see also alien visitors; UFOs
Men of God (Russian sect), see Khlysty Meng P'o (Chinese goddess of the underworld), 16: 2174
menhir, in Britanny, 4: 512, 5: 656, 12: 1693
Mennonites (Protestant sect), 4: 441, 12: 1698
menorah (candlestick; Judaism), 10: 1438
Menrva (Menerva; Etruscan goddess), 6: 781
Athene identified with, 2: 155
Minerva identified with, 6: 781
menstruation, 2: 248-9, 12: 1699-1702
in Africa, 12: 1699-1700
Bushmen, 3: 320
moon and, 13: 1765
Mental Radio (Upton Sinclair), 6: 809
Mentawei (Indonesian island), tattooing and, 18: 2577
Mephistopheles (demon), 6: 846, 12: 1702
Mephisto's Ring, 18: 2551
mephitic zone, 12: 1702
mercury (quicksilver; metal), 12: 1704-5, 15: 2148
in alchemy, 1: 72, 12: 1704, 14: 1925
Azoth as the name of, 1: 91
in Splendor Solis, 6: 744
sulphur and, 8: 1041, 12: 1705
unicorn as symbol of, 19: 2690
grey and, 4: 459
planet Mercury and, 4: 459
Mercury (planet) in astrology, 1: 141, 12: 1703-4
Gemini ruled by, 7: 986
grey and, 4: 459
jewels associated with, 10: 1413
in Mexican myth, 2: 184
quicksilver and, 4: 459
Mercury (Roman god), 12: 1702-3, 1704
Mercury's blood (plant), see vervain merkabah (throne mysticism), 12: 1706
Merlin (magician), 12: 1706-8, 1707
Arthurian legends and, 1: 122, 124, 12: 1706-8
Stonehenge moved by, 12: 1706, 1708, 18: 2488
Vivien and, 2: 284, 12: 1707
mermaids and mermen, 12: 1709-10
Japanese, 17: 2319
in Scottish and Border ballads, 17: 2314

seals and, 17: 2324
Sirens and, 17: 2383
whale changed into, 20: 2788
see also Triton
Meru (Hindu world mountain), 16: 2186, 18: 2536
Merzbacher, Friedrich (writer on witchcraft), 7: 988
mescal, peyote distinguished from, 14: 2014
Mesmer, F. A., and mesmerism, 9: 1272, 12: 1595, 1711-13, 15: 2076
Spiritualism partly derived from mesmerism, 15: 2105 Mesopotamia, 12: 1714-22
altars in, 1: 92
astrology in, 12: 1722
beards in, 3: 307
creation myths in, 4: 473, 5: 687, 12: 1717
see also Enuma elish
death and, 4: 558, 9: 1169, 12: 1608
divination in, 12: 1722
dogs in, 5: 607
dreams in, 5: 644, 12: 1722
eagle in, 5: 682
election in, 6: 738
evil and, 6: 791
eye idols of, 6: 816
flood legends of, 6: 755, 7: 912, 8: 1019
goat in, 18: 2540
gods of, 12: 1714-9
iconography of, 9: 1288-9
monotheism in, 12: 1717
see also Ashur; Ea; Enlil; Ereshkigal; eye idols, above; Inanna; Ishtar; Marduk; Nergal; Ningursu; Ninurta; Oannes; Shamash; Sin; Tammuz hero in, see Gilgamesh
kingship in, 11: 1478
magic in, 12: 1720
man, view of, 12: 1608
Mother Goddess in, 13: 1779-80
prostitution in, 15: 2102
Ishtar and, 10: 1364, 15: 2103
spirits in, 12: 1719
temples of, 16: 2180
Tower of Babel and, 19: 2649
water in, see Apsu, Tiamat
see also Akkad; Assyria; Babylonia; Chaldeans; Harranian religion; Hurrians; Sumer Messenia (Greece), Zeus born in, 8: 1076
Messiah:
Jesus as, 3: 405, 10: 1409, 14: 1996
in Jewish belief, 3: 404, 10: 1434-7
origin of the word, 11: 1478
see also Mahdi; messianic movements messianic movements, 6: 762, 12: 1723-8
in Africa, 12: 1726, 17: 2330
in China, 12: 1723
millenarian movements compared with, 12: 1723
of North American Indians, see Ghost Dance see also Tanchelm; Sabbatai; Zevi metals:
colours associated with, 4: 459
four races of man symbolized by, 19: 2630-1
planets associated with, 4: 459
see also gold; iron; lead; mercury; silver metamorphosis, see shape-shifting metempsychosis, see reincarnation
meteors:
iron of, 10: 1358, 17: 2404
Methodism:
Holiness movement and, 9: 1227
see also Wesley, John
metoposcopy (divination by the lines on the forehead), 5: 599
Mevlevi dervishes (dancing dervishes), 4: 530, 564, 16: 2249, 2250, 2250, 18: 2498
Mexico, pre-Columbian:
pyramids of, 2: 180, 183, 12: 1670, 18: 2503
see also Aztecs; Maya; Mixtecs; Olmecs; Toltecs; Zapotecs Mexico and Central America (modern), 13: 1735-42
carnival in, 7: 934
Easter fiesta in, 7: 934
hallucinogenic mushroom in, 13: 1790
New Year in, 13: 1863
shamanism in, 13: 1738
Spanish invasion of, effects of, 13: 1737
skulls from, 1: 87, 7: 930, 13: 1742
Mexico City (pre-Columbian), see Tenochtitlan Meyer, Silvio, and PPOs, 14: 2012
mezuzah (Judaism), 10: 1438, 13: 1742
Mgijima, Enoch (African religious leader), 17: 2330
Micah (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2098
Michael, St (archangel), 1: 101, 13: 1742
the Devil fought by, 4: 572, 5: 631
Glastonbury and, 8: 1022, 1023
pilgrim badge of, 15: 2044
south and, 5: 588
see also Michaelmas Michaelmas (feast of St Michael), 13: 1742 blackberry and, 9: 1183
goose and, 8: 1050
Michel, John, and ley lines, 11: 1523
microcosm see macrocosm and microcosm
Micronesia, 15: 2069-72
Midas (Phrygian king), 1: 115
Attis and, 4: 423
Middle Kingdom (Egyptian history), 6: 730
Midewiwin (society of shamans), 12: 1625
Midgard (world serpent; Scandinavian mythology), 17: 2337
Thor and, 19: 2608, 2609
at Ragnarok, 16: 2292
Midsummer, Midsummer Eve, 6: 859, 13: 1743
Balder and, 13: 1751
bonfires and, 13: 1743
dancing mania and, 4: 539, 540
dragons and, 13: 1743
Druids and, 5: 660, 13: 1743
hobbyhorse and, 9: 1226
St John the Baptist and, 4: 539, 13: 1743, 16: 2269, 20: 2789
plants and, 13: 1743, 15: 2050
mistletoe, 13: 1750
St John's wort, 13: 1743, 16: 2269
wheel and, 20: 2789
witches and, 13: 1743
midwinter, 6: 859
Christmas and, 3: 418
halcyon breeding at, 8: 1111
wren hunt at, 20: 2837
Mihr (Parsee deity), 18: 1985
mihrab (mosque), 16: 2188
mikado (Japan), 11: 1480
Milky Way, 14: 1992-3
millenarian religious movements:
Jehovah's Witnesses as, 10: 1401
messianic movements compared with, 12: 1723
in the Middle Ages, 17: 2326
see also cargo cults; Conselheiro; Divine Principles; Melchiorites; Montanists millennium (Christianity), 17: 2326, 2328
see also millenarian religious movements
Miller, William (prophet of the Second Coming), 10: 1401, 17: 2329
milpreve (Cornish charm), 4: 458
Milton, John, 16: 2298-2300
Mimamsa (Hinduism), 20: 2846
mimicry, magical, see imitative magic Mimingus (sword of Hoder), Balder slain by, 2: 192
Mimir (Scandinavian god), 16: 2289, 17: 2408
fountain of, 7: 946
head of, 8: 1144
Min (Egyptian god), 8: 1122
minaret (mosque), 13: 1776, 16: 2188
'mind over matter', see psychokinesis mind-reading, see telepathy
Minehead (Somerset), May Day at, 9: 1226, 12: 1658, 1674
Minerva (Roman goddess), 2: 155, 13: 1744
Athene identified with, 7: 155
Brigantia and, 2: 283
by Mantegna, facing title, 6
Menrva identified with, 6: 781
mines:
in Cornwall, 4: 457
dwarfs and, 5: 674
Neolithic, see Grimes Graves
Mineteda (Spain), headless figures at, 8: 1149
Minguet, Barthelemy (witch), 7: 961
Mink (trickster), 19: 2663
Minoan civilization of Crete, see Crete
Minos (Cretan king), 3: 307
labyrinth of, 9: 1180, 12: 1674
Theseus and, 19: 2602
Zeus and, 8: 1076
see also Minotaur
Minotaur, 1: 106, 3: 307-8, 9: 1180, 13: 1744
labyrinth and, 9: 1180, 12: 1674
Theseus and, 19: 2600, 2600
by G. F. Watts, 14: 1967
Zeus and, 20: 2864
miracle plays, 13: 1803-6
miracles, 13: 1744-8
faith healing and, 13: 1748
of Jesus, 13: 1746, 1748
in childhood, apocryphal, 13: 1856
see also Lazarus
laws of nature and, 13: 1744
causality and, 13: 1746
of the Old Testament, 13: 1745
of saints, 16: 2270
miracles of abundance, 18: 2097
Miriam (biblical), 15: 2097
mirror, 13: 1749
divination by (catoptromancy), 17: 2315
double and, 5: 615, 619
Evil Eye averted by, 13: 1749
in Japanese imperial symbolism, 17: 2362
reflection in, as the soul, 13: 1749
water used as, 13: 1749
witchcraft and, 7: 958
Miru (Polynesian deity), 15: 2072
Misenus (Greek myth), 19: 2679
miser:
from Dance of Death (Holbein), 8: 1040
Death of a miser (Bosch), 16: 2211
Mishna (Judaism), 3: 323
missionaries:
Christian:
in the Congo, 4: 446
apostolic, 3: 407
of Divine Principles sect, 5: 605
mistletoe, 13: 1750
Balder and, 2: 192, 13: 1750
Christmas and, 3: 419, 13: 1750
Druids and, 5: 657
Golden Bough on, 13: 1750, 19: 2722
kissing under, 3: 419
Midsummer bonfires and, 13: 1750
oak and, 13: 1750, 14: 1901
Mithras (Mithra) 13: 1751-4
birth of, from an egg, 5: 719, 13: 1754

bull sacrifice and, 13: 1751, 1752, 1753
cave sanctuaries of, 16: 2185
Christianity and, 13: 1754
Hittites and, 13: 1751
India and, 13: 1751
Mihr (Parsee deity) identified with, 15: 2148
mystery cult of, 13: 1752, 1810
Persia and, 11: 1479, 13: 1751, 1753, 20: 2876
Rome and, 13: 1751
sun and, 13: 1752-3
time and, 19: 2620
Mitra (Indian sun god), 18: 2504
Mithras and, 13: 1751-2, 18: 2504
mitre (Christian headgear), 4: 466, 8: 1146, 1148
Mixtecs, 2: 182, 4: 476, 13: 1740
Mjölnir (hammer of Thor), 5: 674, 8: 1111, 11: 1542-3, 19: 2608, 2609
Mnevis (Egyptian god), 3: 307, 9: 1245
Mobius, Paul, on woman's inferiority, 20: 2825
Moby Dick, 20: 2788
Mochica culture (Peru), 10: 1323-4
Moctecuzoma (Montezuma; Aztec king), 2: 182
modalism (Christian heresy), 3: 409
modern witchcraft, 13: 1755-8, 16: 2254, 20: 2766, 2806, 2833-4
All Hallows' Eve and, 1: 89, 89
arthame in, 13: 1756
broomstick and, 2: 286, 286, 287
coven and, 13: 1755
as fertility cult, 13: 1755
festivals of, 13: 1755
flagellation in, 7: 910
garters and, 13: 1755
magic circle and, 13: 1756
moon and, 13: 1755[], 1756
ring dance in, 3: 352, 13: 1758
sex and, 13: 1757
Mohammed (Muhammad, Mahomet; the prophet of Islam), 10: 1368, 1374, 13: 1759-61, 17: 2393
his ascension to heaven, 14: 1979, 20: 2806
Jerusalem, his miraculous journey to, 10: 1404
Jews and, 13: 1760
Kaaba and, 13: 1760, 18: 2490
Mecca and, 10: 1368, 13: 1759
Medina and, 9: 1185*, 10: 1368, 12: 1675, 13: 1760
Moharram and, 13: 1761
obscene idols destroyed by, 15: 2024
Ramadan instituted by, 13: 1761
Shiite view of, 13: 1761
Sunnite view of, 13: 1761 tomb of, 10: 1372
winged horse of, 20: 2806
Mohammed, Mirza Ali (founder of Bahai sect), 2: 190
Mohammedanism, see Islam
Moharram, 13: 1761-2
Mohenjo-daro (city; India), 10: 1334-5, 1336, 1336, 11: 1548
Mohra (Sweden), witches of, see Blocula
Moirae (Greek mythology), see Fates Molech (Canaanite term), 7: 900, 15: 2032
moles on the body, divination by (moleosophy), 5: 598
Molinos, Miguel (Quietist), 15: 2148, 2149
moly (magic herb), 13: 1762
monasticism, Christian:
early history of 3: 410
see also Carmelite Order
Monday, 4: 546
Mongan, King (of Ireland), 7: 889
monism, in Islam, 9: 1278
monkey, 13: 1763
head of, dried, in Nigeria, 15: 2086
Hindu monkey god, see Hanuman
see also baboon
monks, Buddhist, 3: 298, 299
in Ceylon, 17: 2380-1
in Southeast Asia, 17: 2430
see also lamas
monks, Christian, see monasticism Monophysites (Christian sect), 3: 409
in Ethiopia, 6: 7731
monotheism, 13: 1763
in Babylonia, 12: 1717
in Zoroastrianism, 20: 2872
Monothelitism (Christian heresy), 3: 410
Mons, Angels of, 20: 2749
monsters and mythical beasts, see abominable snowman; basilisk; Big Foot; Cailleach; centaurs; chimaera; dragon; Frankenstein; Golem; Gorgons; Great Beast; Grendel; griffin; Harpies; Jenny Green Teeth; Loch Ness monster; Minotaur; Questing Beast; Scylla and Charybdis; sea monsters; Typhon; Ullikummi; unicorn; vampire; wyvern Montanists (Christian heresy), 6: 762, 13: 1763
Montespan, Madame de, 1: 134, 2: 235, 3: 340, 15: 2062
Monte Ulmi, Antonius de, 10: 1309
Montezuma (Aztec king), see Moctecuzoma
Montgeron, Louis-Baptiste Carre de, Convulsionaries and, 4: 454
Montgomery, William (attacker of witches), 3: 356, 17: 2356
Montségur (Cathar stronghold), 3: 358
Moody, Dwight L., 9: 1227, 1230, 14: 2005
moon, 13: 1764-8
amber and, 10: 1413
animals and, 13: 1766
Apis and, 3: 307
Artemis and, 4: 576
Astarte and, 1: 134, 134
in astrology, 1: 143
in Babylonia, 13: 1764, 1767
bisexuality and, 9: 1194
Madame Blavatsky and, 13: 1764
in Brazil, 2: 274
crescent shape of, 4: 480
in Crete, 3: 317, 4: 555, 9: 1180
death, origin of, moon and, 3: 317, 4: 555
eclipses and, 5: 707
frog and, 7: 968
goddesses of, 13: 1765
Carthaginian, see Tanit Pene Baal
Greek, see Artemis, above; Hecate, moon and; Hera, moon and; Selene Roman, see Diana, moon and
gods of:
Egyptian, see Chons
Ethiopian, see Sin
Japanese, 17: 2361
Mesopotamian, see Sin
Peruvian, see Sin
hare and, 8: 1116
Inuit and, 10: 1328, 1351, 1352
Jack and Jill and, 10: 1381, 13: 1765 madness (lunacy) and, 13: 1767
in Mexican mythology, 2: 183
modern witchcraft and, 13: 1755, 1755, 1756
month, lunar, 13: 1764 Islamic, see Moharram
moon-calf, 13: 1765
North American Indians and, 14: 1880
at Palmyra, 18: 2545
pearl and, 10: 1413
plants and, 13: 1766
quartz and, 10: 1412
rock crystal and, 10: 1412
sea and, 17: 2318
silver and, 4: 459, 8: 1116, 17: 2371 soma identified with, 9: 1182
sun and, 18: 2501, 2502
in Australia, 18: 2501, 2502
in Crete, 9: 1179-80
in Inuit incest myth 10: 1328, 1351,
in Rumanian incest myth, 13: 1765
symbolism of, 18: 2536
tides caused by, 13: 1766
water and, 20: 2776
white and, 4: 459
woman and, 13: 1765
Moon (Tarot card), 13 1766, 18: 2571, 2572
crab in, 4: 469
Moonies, see Divine Principles
moonstone, 10: 1413, 1414
Moors, Christian converts from among, see Moriscos
Mora (Sweden), witches of, see Blocula
Moravian Brethren (religious sect), 6: 763-4, 9: 1227
Easter and, 5: 696
Morbidus and the sea-monster, 17: 1238-9
Mordred (Arthurian cycle), 1: 121-3, 125
More, Henry, 3: 326
Moreau, Gustave, 8: 1142
Morgan, Nanny (witch), 6: 817
Morgan le Fay (Arthurian legend), 1: 123, 6: 832, 12: 1768-9
Morganwg, Iolo, see Williams, Edward
Moriscos (Moorish converts; Spain), 9: 1193
Mormons (Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints), 6: 763, 13: 1770-3
speaking in tongues and, 17: 2433
Morning Star:
in Ethiopia, see Athtar Lucifer as, 11: 1562
in Mexico, see Quetzalcoatl
North American Indians and, 14: 1882-3
Pawnee Indians, 8: 1069, 14: 1882-3
morphic resonance, 13: 1774
Morra, Don Sebastian (Spanish dwarf), 5: 673
Morrigans (Irish goddesses), 8: 1143
Morris dances, 4: 532, 13: 1774-6
hobby-horse and, 13: 1774, 13: 1776
May Day and, 12: 1673, 1674, 13: 1776
origin of the name, 13: 1774
sword dances compared with, 18: 2529
Moses, 13: 1776
Maimonides on, 10: 1434
rod of, 20: 2766
striking water from a rock, 20: 2765
Yahweh and, 6: 739, 16: 2197, 20: 2839
see also burning bush
Moses, Rev. W. Stainton, 2: 172-3, 12: 1687-8, 17: 2442
Moslem (definition), 10: 1368
mosque (Islam), 10: 1369, 1370, 1372, 1373, 13: 1776, 16: 2188
see also Blue Mosque; Dome of the Rock; St Saviour (Constantinople) mosquito (insect), 10: 1348
Mot (Phoenician deity), Baal/Anat and, 2: 189, 15: 2030, 18: 2541, 19: 2720-1
mother:
city as symbol of, 11: 1504
earth as, see earth,
garden as symbol of, 11: 1503
see also birth; Mother Goddess; pregnancy Mother Goddess (Great Mother), 13: 1777-82
in Anatolia, 5: 678
at Catal Hüyük, 1: 92, 9: 1288
Cybele, 4: 523, 5: 678, 13: 1780
Ma (Bellona), 5: 678, 13: 1782
Crete, 4: 480, 8: 1075, 1076, 1079, 1079

as earliest form of deity, 1: 108 earth as, 5: 685, 687, 6: 860, 13: 1778, 19: 2719
in Finland, 7: 884
faceless goddesses as prototypes of, 6: 824, 13: 1779
in Greece:
Aphrodite as, 1: 111, 13: 1780
Artemis as, 4: 574
Cretan, 8: 1075, 1079
Demeter as, 13: 1780
Hera as, 9: 1179-81
in India, 13: 1777, 1779
Kali as, 11: 1462
Virgin Mary and, 13: 1782
in Mesopotamia, 13: 1779-80
eye idols and, 6: 816
Inanna as, 13: 1779-80
Ishtar as, 13: 1780
in Phoenicia/Canaan, 1: 132, 13: 1779, 1780
at Rome, 13: 1780,
in Scandinavia, Freyja as, 13: 1782
women's mysteries, 20: 2832-5, 2832, 2833, 2834
mountain, hill 13: 1783-4
Aetherius Society and, 6: 759
in Christian tradition, 13: 1784 of Cronus, 4: 485
of Cybele, 4: 523
Hebrews and, 13: 1783-4
Lapps and, 13: 1784
nymphs of, see Oreads
omphalos compared with 13: 1828
of paradise (Indian myth), 14: 1980
of the philosophers (alchemy), 16: 2444
primeval, in Egyptian creation myth, 4: 471, 13: 1828
of Purgatory, Dante and, 4: 542
seven and, 13: 1783
symbolism of, 11: 1504
see also Adam's Pea; Arunachala; Atlas; Brocken; Cader Idris; Carmel; Eryx; Fuji; Glass Mountain; Glastonbury; Kenya; Kinabalu; Montségur; Olympus; Parliament Hill; Parnassus; Primrose Hill; Kaggedstone; Sinai; volcanoes; world mountain; Zion mountain ash (tree), see rowan Mountain Meadows massacre, 13: 1772
Mount Badon, battle of, 1: 121
mouse:
banished by poets, 15: 2057
St Colman and, 16: 2278
as cure for whooping cough, 5: 591 St Gertrude and, 16: 2279
precognition in, 15: 2122
as witches' familiar, 3: 356, 10: 1317
Mousterian man, see Neanderthal man
Moyes, Winifred (Spiritualist), 17: 2441
Mu, 11: 1514, 1515
mudras (gestures; yoga), 20: 2849, 2850
muezzin (Islam), 10: 1368
mugwort (St John's herb), 9: 1185-6
Muhammad (the prophet of Islam), see Mohammed Muhammad, Elijah (Black Muslim), 2: 236, 237, 238
Muhammad, Farrad (Black Muslim), see Fard, Wallace D.
Muhammad, Warith Deen (Black Muslim), 2: 238
mujtahids (Islam), 10: 1374
Mukhtar (Islamic rebel), 12: 1601
mukti (Hinduism), 2: 279
Muldoon, Sylvan, astral body and, 1: 136, 137, 137, 14: 1947
Müller, George (of Plymouth Brethren), 6: 797 Müller, (Friedrich) Max:
on folktales as solar myths, 7: 925
on theosophy, 18: 2590 multiple personality, 13: 1784-5
mumia*, 5: 591
Mumler, William (spirit photographer), 17: 2444
mummers (guises, guizards, geesers), 5: 638, 7: 920, 921, 922, 8: 1095, 20: 2811
Father Christmas and, 3: 418, 7: 921
St George and, 7: 920, 921
Puck and, 15: 2127
mummification (Egypt), 6: 733, 13: 1785-8, 1786, 1787, 1788
of baboons, 1: 105 origin of the word 'mummy', 5: 591, 13: 1788
of Rameses 5: 677
see also Opening of the Mouth; ushabti
for preservation of bodies in other cultures, see dried bodies Münster (Germany), Anabaptists at, 1: 97, 4: 441, 6: 762-3, 17: 2328, 2329
al-Muntazar, Mohammed (imam), 10: 1373
Murcia (Roman goddess), 19: 2726
Murphy, Bridey, 16: 2176
Murray, Margaret, witchcraft theories of, 4: 576, 13: 1757, 16: 2256, 19: 2607, 20: 2815, 2833?
Murshilish I (Hittite king), Babylon sacked by, 12: 1633
Muses (Greek mythology), 13: 1789
museum, origin of the word, 13: 1789
mushroom, 5: 649, 13: 1789-91, 1790, 1791
music, 13: 1792-5
Christianity and, 13: 1792-4
dance and, 13: 1792, 1792, 1793
in Egypt, 13: 1793
Indian goddess of, see Sarasvati
Muses and, 13: 1789
Orpheus and, 14; 1934
Pythagoras and, 14: 1895, 15: 2145-6
ritual and, 13: 1792
of the spheres, 14: 1895
words, holy, and, 13: 1793
see also drum; flute; gong; harp; lyre; shofar; song; trumpet
Musrussu dragon (symbol of Marduk), 12: 1634, 1634
Mut (Egyptian goddess), see Maat
'mutable' signs in astrology, 20: 2743
Mutazilitism (Islam), 10: 1372-3
mutilation (of the body), 2: 252, 13: 1796-1800
of fingers, 7: 883-4
see also castration; cicatrization; circumcision; tattooing Mycenae:
excavation at, by Schliemann, 8: 1075
Lion Gate at, 19: 2616
Mycenaean civilization, 8: 1074
Crete and, 4: 483, 8: 1074, 20: 2862, 2864
see also Trojan War
Myers, F. W. H., 13: 1800-2, 15: 2105, 2106, 2107
cross-correspondences and, 4: 493, 15: 2107, 20: 2804
on ghosts, 7: 1008
magnetism and, 12: 1957
phantasms of the living and, 8: 1097, 13: 1801
scrying and, 17: 2316
Society for Psychical Research and, 13: 1801, 15: 2107
Mrs Piper and, 15: 2046
Eusapia Palladino and, 14: 1962-3
subliminal, his doctrine of the, 13: 1802
Myerscough, Thomas (Pentecostalist), 14: 2006
Myrddin (bard), 12: 1706
myrrh (gum resin; tree), 13: 1802
phoenix and, 15: 2033
sun and, 4: 459
in worship of Re, 10: 1328
see also Myrrha
Myrrha (Greek mythology), 1: 113
myrtle (flower, shrub), 13: 1802
Aphrodite/Venus and, 19: 2726
Graces and, 8: 1057
lover tested with, 15: 2050
mystery plays, 5: 638, 13: 1803-6
miracle plays distinguished from, 13: 1803
mystery religions, 6: 770, 13: 1807-11
Christianity and, 13: 1811
St Paul, 14: 1997
of Demeter, 4: 563
see also Eleusis
of Dionysus, 13: 1807, 14: 1938
see also Villa of the Mysteries of Isis, 10: 1365, 13: 1810, 14: 1940, 15: 2104 of Mithras, 13: 1752, 1810
mysticism, 13: 1812-20
Buddhist, 13: 1814, 1815, 1816, 1819
see also Nirvana
Christian, 5: 709-13, 13: 1812-3, 1818
see also Cloud of Unknowing; Hilton, Walter; Julian of Norwich; Ruysbroeck see also Boehme, Jacob; Bourignon, Antoinette; Catherine of Siena; Denck, Hans; Francis de Sales; John of the Cross; Law, William; Teresa of Avila
ecstasy and, 5: 709-13, 18: 2482
Hindu, 5: 710, 13: 1815
see also Anandamayi Ma Islamic, see Sufism
Jewish, 5: 712
see also Buber, Martin; Cabala; Hasidism; Shekhinah; merkabah
love and, 5: 710*, 13: 1816, 1818
paranormal phenomena and the occult distinguished from, 13: 1812 physical phenomena of, see stigmata
sex and, 5: 710, 13: 1816, 1818, 17: 2343-7
Mystic Krewe of Comus, 18: 2470
mystic ring, 18: 2482, 2484
Goethe and, 8: 1038
see also creation myths; end of the world; eternal return; euhemerism

N

nabhi (Old Testament), 15: 2097, 16: 2197
Nabonidus (last king of Babylon), 8: 1119
Nabus (Mesopotamian god), 12: 1716
Nagarjuna (Buddhist teacher), 10: 2726, 18: 2507
Nagas (people), 13: 1821-2
headhunting by, 8: 1139-40, 13: 1821, 18: 2579
tattooing and, 18: 2579
Nagas (serpent deities), 17: 2336, 2337, 2337
Nag Hammadi texts, 6: 768-9, 8: 1028-9
Nahum (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2099
naiads (nymphs of running water), 14: 1899
see also Salmacis
Nakano Yonosuke (Japanese religious leader), 10: 1398
Nakayama Miki (Japanese religious leader), 10: 1397
nakedness, see nudity namapathy, 17: 2383
names, 13: 1822-4
of God 13: 1823
see also Adonai; Elohim;

Pentagrammaton; Tetragrammaton
in magic, 13: 1822, 16: 2220
in Ethiopia, 6: 777
Golden Dawn and, 19: 2731
numerology and, 14: 1892-5
of ships, 17: 2364
Nammu (Sumerian goddess), 4: 473
Nanak (founder of Sikhism), 17: 2369-70
Nandin (bull of Shiva), 17: 2367
Nannar (Mesopotamian moon god), see Sin
Nao Deguchi (Japanese religious leader), 10: 1398
Napi (Blackfoot trickster), 8: 1069
Napier, Barbara (witch), 14: 1886, 1887
napistu (Mesopotamia),12: 1608
Naram Sin (king of Akkad), stele of, 12: 1715
Nara (Japan), temple at, 10: 1391
Narayana (Hinduism), 10: 1320, 20: 2744
Narmer (pharaoh), palette of, 9: 1288
Nasca (Peru), 10: 1323, 1324
Natalis, St, people of Ossory cursed by, 17: 2356
Natchez Indians, 14: 1881, 1884
National Socialism, see Nazism
Native American Church, 14: 2016
Nativity (birth of Jesus), 10: 1406, 19: 2736
nats (Burmese spirits), 17: 2429
nature mysticism, 13: 1814-5
Navaho Indians, 13: 1825-8
bisexuality and, 9: 1195
creation myth of, 13: 1783, 1825
disease and, 4: 530, 13: 1826, 1827-8
divination and, 13: 1828
ghosts, belief in, 13: 1826
'hand trembler', 5: 597
peyote and, 14: 2016
sand-paintings of, 13: 1825, 1826, 1827, 1828
swastika and, 18: 2517
taboos of, 13: 1828
navel, 13: 1828
see also omphalos; umbilical cord
Navsari (India) Parsees and, 14: 1984
navy (Slav spirits), 17: 2400
Nayars of Malabar, 12: 1700
Nayler, James (Quaker), 6: 763
Nazarenes (early Christian sect), see Ebionites
Nazareth Baptist Church (African messianic sect), 12: 1726-8
Nazism, 13: 1829-32
antisemitism and, 13: 1829
astrology and, 13: 1829-32
Freemasonry and, 13: 1829
Germanen Order and, 7: 991, 992, 13: 1829
Guido von List and, 11: 1537
neo-pagan German cults and, 13: 1838, 1840
New Templars and, 13: 1852
Nostradamus and, 13: 1830-1, 14: 1889
sleeping hero myths and, 17: 2403
swastika and, 4: 490, 491, 18: 2517, 2517
see also 'Aktion Hess'; Hess; Himmler; Hitler; Lanz; Pohl; Sebottendorff Ndembu (of Zambia):
guardian spirits of, 8: 1091, 1093
hunting magic of, 9: 1267
initiation ceremony of, 16: 2214-5
Ndengei (Fijian snake god), 1: 105
Neanderthal (Mousterian) man:
bear sacrifice of, 1: 92, 2: 210
burial and, 4: 510, 9: 1241-3
skull of, in Guattari cave, 3: 370, 4: 510 near death experience, 13: 1832-3
Nebuchadrezzar I (king of Babylon), 12: 1633
Nebuchadrezzar II (king of Babylon) 12: 1634
neck (corn sheaf), 4: 456 crying the neck, 8: 1120-1
necklace:
diamond necklace (of Marie Antoinette), 10: 1416
of Freyja, see Brisingamen
in Japanese imperial symbolism, 17: 2362
necromancy, 13: 1834-7
Rome and, 9: 2606
Necronomicon,* 13: 1837
Nectanebus (pharaoh), 1: 81
need fire, 9: 1164, 14: 1903
Nefertiti (Egyptian queen), 20: 2830
Anubis and, 9: 1271
Ikhnaten and, 6: 732, 9: 1294-5, 1295
Nehalennia (Germanic goddess), 7: 995
Nei Jing (Book of the Yellow Emperor), 1: 52
Nekhebet (Egyptian goddess), vulture and, 2: 231
Nemesis (Adrasteia; Greek goddess), 6: 842, 20: 2807
Nemi (sacred grove of Diana), 4: 574, 13: 1838, 19: 2722
Nennius, on King Arthur, 1: 121
Neolithic (New Stone Age) period:
cult of the dead in, 4: 511
horns in, 9: 1243-4
see also Catal Hüyük; Grimes Graves
neo-pagan German cults, 13: 1838-40
Nazism and, 13: 1840
swastika and, 18: 2517
Neoplatonism, 13: 1840-2
Cabala influenced by, 3: 324, 13: 1842
Christianity influenced by, 13: 1842
elements and, 6: 743
exorcism and, 6: 800
great chain of being and, 8: 1067
soul, Neoplatonist view of, 13: 1841
theurgy and, 13: 1842, 15: 2093, 19: 2603
see also Plotinus; Porphyry; Proclus; Taylor, Thomas Nepal:
goat sacrifice in, 16: 2265
lama of, 15: 2085
prayer wheel in, 10: 1319
stupa in, 19: 2621
trumpet in, 19: 2621
Nephilim (Biblical giants), 8: 1016
Nephthys (Egyptian goddess), 4: 472, 14: 1938, 17: 2341
Neptune (planet), in astrology, 1: 145, 13: 1844
Neptune (Roman god), 13: 1843-4
Amphitrite and, 16: 2235
nereids (sea nymphs), 14: 1899
seals and, 17: 2324-5
with sea-monster (Roman mosaic), 16: 2232-3
Amphitrite; Thetis
Nergal (Mesopotamian god), 12: 1608, 1634, 1716
Neri, St Philip, 16: 2270, 18: 2484-5
Nero (Roman emperor), 8: 1066
Nerrivik (Inuit spirit), see Sedna
Nerthus (Scandinavian deity), 7: 965, 18: 2466
Nessus (centaur), Hercules and, 9: 1189, 17: 2342
Nestorianism, 3: 410, 9: 1191, 12: 1649
net, 18: 2534
Neuburg, Victor, Aleister Crowley and, 6: 760, 10: 2540-1, 2869, 17: 2345-6, 19: 2651
Neumann, Teresa, 13: 1844-5, 18: 2483
Neuri (Scythian tribe), shape-shifting by, 17: 2356
neurosis, poltergeists and, 15: 2068
Nevillon, Silvain (witch), 7: 961
New Age (beliefs; therapies), 13: 1845, 20: 2835
see also acupuncture; aromatherapy; ayurveda; colour therapy; crystal therapy; faith healing; herbs; homeopathy; iridology; meditation; reflexology; Subud; transcendental meditation Newcomb, Prof. Simon, 15: 2106
New Guinea, 13: 1846-50
ancestor worship in, 12: 1657, 13: 1848
animal double in, 9: 1267
ashes used to prevent snake-bite in, 1: 129
balance, concept of, 18: 1847
boar in, 13: 1849
cannibalism in, 3: 315, 13: 1848
earth as symbol of victory in, 5: 686
ghosts in 13: 1848
hornbill in 13: 1848
initiation rites of, 5: 663, 13: 1848-9
marriage in, 12: 1640, 1642
masks in, 12: 1657-8, 13: 1846
pig in, 15: 2040
skull in, 13: 1849, 17: 2385
spirits and, 5: 1974, 1976, 8: 1140, 12: 1695, 13: 1848, 1850
tattooing in, 18: 2576
New Harmony (Harmony Society settlement), 4: 442
New Kingdom (Egyptian history), 6: 730
New and Latter House of Israel (Jezreelites), 10: 1416, 17: 2428
News [Newes] from Scotland (witchcraft pamphlet), 14: 1886-7
New Templars, 13: 1851-2
New Testament:
angels in, 1: 101-2, 8: 1094
Dead Sea Scrolls and, 4: 550-3
the Devil in, 16: 2283
dreams in, 5: 645
hell in, 9: 1175
lots in, 11: 1546
speaking in tongues in, 17: 2431
three in, 19: 2614
see also apostles, acts of the; gospel; Revelation
New Testament Apocrypha, 13: 1853-60
New Thought, 13: 1861-2
Newton, Benjamin Wills (leader of Plymouth Brethren), 6: 797
Newton, Sir Isaac, 13: 1744
New Year, 7: 901, 13: 1862-5
Babylonian festival of (Sacaea), 4: 475, 5: 630, 6: 859, 12: 1635, 20: 2809 coal and, 3: 425
in Egypt, 10: 1365
headlessness and, 13: 1862
Iroquois and, 10: 1362
in Judaism, 10: 1438
March and, 12: 1642, 13: 1862
in Mexico, 13: 1863
pilgrimage and, 15: 2042
vegetation god in festivals at, 19: 2721
water and, 13: 1863-5
see also Burning the Clavie; First Foot; hawthorn globe; Hogmanay
New Zealand, see Maori
Ngai (Kikuyu sky god), 11: 1469
Nibelungenlied,* 9: 1202, 13: 1865-7
Attila in, 2: 161, 13: 1867
Wagner and, 13: 1867, 20: 2758
Nicaea:
First Council of (AD 325):
Arianism rejected by, 3: 409, 9: 1191
castration forbidden by, 13: 1797
Second Council of (AD787), on relics 16: 2179
Nicene Creed, 4: 477
Nichiren (Japanese Buddhist sect), 10: 1394, 1397, 1400, 13: 1867
Nicholas, St, 6: 821

as Santa Claus, 3: 421
Nicholas of Cusa, Eckhart and, 5: 705
Nider, John (author of Formicarius), on witches, 14: 1961
Nigeria:
altar of the hand in, 1: 93
Christian churches in:
see also Church of the Cherubim and Seraphim; Church of the Lord, Aladura criminals not buried in, 3: 313
dried monkeys' heads in, 15: 2086
drum in, 5: 662
hunting magic in, 9: 1266
masks in, 12: 1657, 1658
owl in, 14: 1949
sacrifice in 16: 2294
twins in, 19: 2683, 2686
Yoruba of, 17: 2421-2
see also Ibo
night, 13: 1867-8
see also darkness; nightmare
nightingale, 13: 1868-9
Philomela and, 13: 1868, 18: 2513
nightmare, 10: 1332, 13: 1868
by Fuseli, 10: 1330-1, 13: 1868
nightshade (plant), see bitter-sweet nightshade; deadly nightshade
nigredo (alchemical process), 15: 2027
Nihongi (Japanese text), 11: 1548
Nile (river), 5: 677, 20: 2771
Isis and, 10: 1364
Nilotes (African people), 13: 1869-71
see also Nuer; Shilluk
Nimrod, Tower of Babel built by, 19: 2649
nimbus (halo), 5: 619
nine, 14: 1894-5
names adding to, 14: 1895
nine heads of Hydra, 9: 1188
ninety-nine, Amen (prayer) and, 13: 1824
Ningursu of Lagash (Mesopotamian god), 5: 682
Ninhursag (Sumerian goddess), 6: 816
Ninmah (Sumerian goddess) 4: 474
Ninurta (Sumerian god), 12: 1716
Saturn (planet) and, 16: 2286
Zu (Anzu) slain by, 5: 630, 12: 1717
Niobe, Apollo and, 1: 115
Nirvana, 13: 1872
in Buddhism, 2: 221, 3: 298, 9: 1211, 12: 1612, 13: 1814, 1817, 1819, 1872
in Ceylon, 17: 2381
in Hinduism, 2: 224-5, 13: 1817, 1818, 1872
in Jainism, 10: 1387
Nisaba (Sumerian goddess), 12: 1716
Nishkuntu (John Wilson), peyote cults and, 14: 2015, 2016
nixies (German water spirits), 12: 1709
niyama (yoga), 19: 2715, 20: 2848-9
Njörd (Scandinavian god), 7: 965, 16: 2289
Noah (Old Testament):
his Ark, 7: 912, 20: 2775-6
dove sent out from, 5: 620, 622
in Ethiopian MS, 7: 915
in Mogul miniature, 7: 914
rainbow and, 14: 1921, 15: 2153
sacrifice and, 16: 2264
his sons, 20: 2840
Noah of Washington Mud Flats, 6: 759
Noble, Michel de, 9: 1160
Nordic mythology, see Scandinavian mythology
Nordic Religious Working Community, 13: 1840
Nordungen Fraternity, 13: 1839
Nore, mutiny at the (1797), 14: 1905-6
Norns (Scandinavian mythology), 6: 830, 843
Norse mythology, see Scandinavian mythology
north, 5: 588
North American Indians, 14: 1879-85
first alphabet of, 14: 1885
animals and, 6: 859
bears, 2: 209, 210, 4: 530, 6: 859
bisexuality and, 9: 1194-5
creation myths of, 14: 1883
flood legends of, 7: 968, 14: 1883-4
fool and, 7: 934-5
hallucinatory drugs and, 14: 1883
see also peyote cults
harvest mask of, 8: 1123
High Gods of, 9: 1205-6
initiation and, 10: 1344
moon and, 14: 1880
owl and, 14: 1949, 1949
paradise and, 14: 1981
priests of, 14: 1884
salmon and, 16: 2281
scalp dance of, 11: 1575
serpent and, 17: 2338
stars and, 14: 1882-3
sun and, see Sun Dance thunderbird and, 19: 2617-8
tobacco and, 14: 1883, 19: 2640
totemism and, 14: 1885, 19: 2641, 2643, 2643, 2644
trickster and, see trickster
whale and, 20: 2788
see also Algonquin Indians; Great Plains Indians; Iroquois; Navaho Indians; Pacific North-West Indians; Pueblo Indians
North Berwick witches, 3: 340, 10: 1309, 14: 1886-7
Norton, Thomas (alchemist), 1: 71, 77
nose:
fingers to, 7: 997
phallic symbolism of, 7: 997
see also sneezing
Nostradamus, 14: 1888-9, 15: 2100-1
Nazi interpretations of, 13: 1830-1, 14: 1889
notarikon, 7: 985
No theatre (Japan), 10: 1390, 12: 1664
Nouvelet, Father, Auxonne nuns and, 2: 175
Noyes, John Humphrey (founder of Oneida Community), 4: 445, 6: 764, 9: 1227
nudity, 4: 464
modern witchcraft and, 13: 1755, 1756-8
see also Adamites; Godiva, Lady Nuer (Nilotic people), 13: 1869, 14: 1890-1
ghosts and, 17: 2420
twins and, 19: 2683 Nuliajuk (Inuit spirit), see Sedna numbers, see numerology
numerology, 14: 1892-5
forces and numbers, 7: 936-7
gematria and, 7: 985
magic and, 5: 591
see also magic squares
male and female numbers, 14: 1895
names and, 14: 1892-5
Pythagoras and, 14: 1892-5, 15: 2145-6
Nun (Egyptian creation myth), 2: 195
nuns, possessed, see possession
nursery rhymes, 14: 1896-8
Jack, 10: 1381, 13: 1765
Ring a Ring o' Roses, 7: 2417
Nusayrites (Islam), 10: 1374
Nut (Egyptian sky goddess), 4: 468, 472, 472-3
nut (fruit), fertility and, 15: 2050
Nyame (Ashanti god), 1: 126, 128
Nyaya (Hinduism), 20: 2846
Nyikango (Shilluk culture hero), 13: 1870
nymphs (Greek mythology), 14: 1899-1900, 1972
see also Amalthea; Amphitrite; Coronis; Daphne; Egeria; Hesperides; Kissos; Salmacis; Thetis

O

O (letter), eye and, 6: 814
oak, 14: 1901-3
Argonauts and, 14: 1901,
ash tree and, 14: 1903
in the Bible, 14: 1901
Celts and, 11: 1540
Druids, 3: 375, 5: 657-9
modern Druids, 14: 1902
Charles II and, 14: 1903
at Dodona, 5: 606, 14: 1901, 1930-1
Dryads and, 5: 666
fire and, 7: 895
need fire, 14: 1903
Yule log, 14: 1903
in Germany; Prussia, 14: 1902, 1930
gospel oak, 14: 1903
Green Man and, 14: 1903
in Ireland, 14: 1902
marriage and, 14: 1902, 1903
May and, 14: 1903
mistletoe and, 14: 1901, 13: 1750
as protection against lightning, 14: 1902-3, 17: 2394
Romans and, 14: 1902
Praeneste (oracle) and, 11: 1547
shrieking of, 14: 1902
Thor and, 19: 2608
True Cross made of 18: 2551
see also acorn
Oak-Apple Day (Royal Oak Day, Shickshack Day), 14: 1903, 1903
oath, 4: 519, 14: 1904-6
blood and, 14: 1905
coronation, 14: 1906
Kikuyu and, 11: 1470-1, 14: 1905
Quakers and, 14: 1906
obeah, 20: 2751
Oberammergau, passion play at, 7: 639, 13: 1804
object reading, see psychometry
ocean, see sea
Oceania:
myths of origin of death in, 4: 555, 557
witchcraft and sorcery distinguished by writers on, 20: 2816
see also Melanesia; Micronesia; Polynesia
Oceanides (nymphs of the ocean), 14: 1899
ocelot (wild cat), Aztecs and, 19: 2643
Od, Odic force (occultism), see Odyle
Odin, 14: 1907-11, 16: 2289
Balder and, 2: 192, 7: 993
eagle and, 7: 995
eye of, sacrificed, 7: 946 fountain of Mimir and, 7: 946 head of Mimir and, 8: 1144
horse of, see Sleipnir killed by Fenris wolf, 6: 755, 16: 2291, 2292
knot symbol of, 14: 1909, 1911
mead of inspiration won by, 19: 1908, 1910
meaning of the name, 7: 995
ravens and, 4: 496, 7: 995, 14: 1907
riddles and, 16: 2206
ring of, see Draupnir
runes and, 1: 90
sacrifice and, 14: 1909
shape-shifting by, 17: 2354
son of, see Vidar
spear of, see Gungnir
Vanir and, 7: 966
King Vikar and, 14: 1909

wife of, see Frigg,
Wild Hunt led by, 7: 995, 20: 2796
Wodan and, 7: 994, 996
wolf and, 7: 995, 14: 1907
see also Valkyries
Odomankoma (Ashanti god), 1: 126
odour of sanctity, 18: 2485-6
Odyle (Od, Odic force; aura), 2: 163, 12: 1596, 15: 2150
Odysseus (Ulysses; Greek hero), 14: 1911
bear and, 2: 209
Circe and, 3: 422, 13: 1762
Sirens and, 17: 1282, 2382
see also Odyssey
Odyssey*, 19: 2672
see also Homer; Odysseus
Oedipus (Greek mythology), 10: 1329, 14: 1911
Sphinx and, 16: 2055
see also Oedipus complex
Oedipus complex (psychology), 7: 963, 10: 1329, 16: 2212
Og (Biblical giant), 8: 1015
Ogg, Isobel (witch), 1: 47
Ogg, Margaret (witch), 1: 47
Ohrmazd (Ormuzd; Zoroastrianism), 14: 1912
Ahriman and, 1: 66, 5: 667, 11: 1527, 14: 1912, 20: 2876, 2880
Ahura Mazdah and, 1: 66, 14: 1912
cypress symbol of, 19: 2657
Parsees and, 14: 1985
oil, 14: 1913-4
see also unction
ointment, see flying ointment; oil
Oisin (Irish legend), see Ossian
Ojibway Indians, see Chippewa
Olcott, Colonel Henry Steel, 2: 2144, 246, 16: 2174
old age and witchcraft, 14: 1915-7
Old Believers, 14: 1918-9
Old Chattox (witch), see Whittle, Anne Old Demdike (witch), see Sowthern, Elizabeth
Old Kingdom (Egyptian history), 6: 730
Old Man (trickster), 19: 2663
Old Man of the Sea, Sinbad and, 17: 2322, 2378
Old Stone Age, see Paleolithic
Old Straight Track, The (Watkins), 11: 1522
Old Testament:
altars in, 1: 92
angels in, 1: 100-1
Baal in, 2: 188
books of, see Daniel; Hexateuch; Job; Pentateuch; Psalms; also prophecy, below Dead Sea Scrolls and, 4: 549-51
dreams in, 5: 645
fountains in, 7: 945, 946
leprosy in, 121: 1518
lots in, 1: 1547
miracles in, 13: 1744, 1745
oil, ointment, in, 14: 1913-5
promised land in, 6: 739
prophecy in, 15: 2097-9
see also Elijah; Ezekiel; Hosea; Isaiah
prostitution in, 15: 2103
Queen of Sheba in, 15: 2146
sacrifice in, 16: 2265-7
Abraham and Isaac, 7: 900, 900, 16: 2263, 17: 2357, 19: 2679
symbolism of, adopted by Christians, 18: 2538
threshold in, 19: 2615 trees in, 19: 2656, 2660
twins in, 19: 2683-4
water in, 20: 2772
wisdom literature of, 20: 2814
see also Samson, Yahweh Old Uppsala (Sweden), sacrifice at, 14: 1909, 16: 2265
olive (tree and fruit), 14: 1920
in the Bible, 14: 1920
cross of Jesus and, 14: 1920, 1964
in Greece, 14: 1920
oracle of Praeneste and, 11: 1547
Yule-log and, 14: 1920
Olmecs, 2: 185
Olmsted, Frederick Law, 1: 62
Olympia (Greece), Hera and, 9: 1179
Zeus born at, 8: 1076
see also Olympic Games
Olympic Games, 7: 978, 14: 1920
Endymion and, 17: 2330
Hercules and, 9: 1179
modern, 7: 978
Zeus and, 14: 1920, 20: 2866
Olympus, Mount (Greece), 8: 1076, 13: 1783, 14: 1920
om (mantra), 12: 1628
see also om mani padme hum
omens, 14: 1921-3
animals as, 14: 1921
Aztecs and, 2: 186
body, aspects of, as, 14: 1921
in the Ozarks, 14: 1952
sneezing as, 17: 2413
sky phenomena as, 14: 1921
see also augury
for divination by various omens, see divination or under specific headings Ometecuhtli (Mexican god), 2: 182-3
om mani padme hum (Tibetan prayer), 10: 1415
omniscience of God, in Christianity, 15: 2080
Omoto (Japanese religious sect), 10: 1398-9
omphalos (Greek 'navel' stone), 1: 114, 13: 1828
one, 1: 91, 14: 1892-3, 1895, 19: 2612
names adding to, 14: 1892
the One, as divine principle, 132: 1815, 14: 1924
in Hinduism, see Brahman
in Islam (monism), 9: 1278
in Neoplatonism, 13: 1841, 15: 2053, 15: 2093
in pantheism, 14: 1973
in Pythagoreanism, 15: 2145
two and, 14: 1892-3
Oneida Community (Perfectionists), 4: 440, 445, 6: 764
oneiromancy (divination by dreams), 5: 644-5
onion, origin of, in Mohammedan legend, 7: 980
Onisaburo Deguchi (Japanese religious leader), 10: 1398
Ono (Polynesian god), see Rongo
onychomancy (divination by finger-nails), 7: 883
onyx (jewel), 10: 1414
opal (jewel), 10: 1413, 1415
Open Brethren, see Plymouth Brethren Opening of the Mouth (mummification), 16: 2257, 2257
ophitism (Gnosticism), 5: 669
opium, 5: 650, 651, 651
opossum, in Brazil, 2: 274-5
opposites, 14: 1924-5
in alchemy, 13: 1705, 14: 1925
black mass and, 14: 1932
Boehme on, 2: 254
in Chinese philosophy, see Yin and Yang
William James on, 14: 1924
Jung on, 14: 1924
in numerology (male and female numbers), 14: 1895
Renaissance interest in, 16: 2193
sex as reconciliation of, 14: 1925, 17: 2343, 2344
three and, 16: 2193
unicorn as symbol of, 19: 2690
see also dualism
Ops (Roman goddess), 16: 2231-2
opus anglicanum*, 14: 1925
oracles, 14: 1926-33
Graeco-Roman, 14: 1926-32
of Apollo, 14: 1927, 1931
see also Delphi
laurel and, 11: 1511
of Mars (woodpecker), 12: 1644, 20: 2836
of Zeus, see Dodona
see also Praeneste primitive, 14: 1932-3
of Azande, 2: 178-9
Tibetan, 19: 2648
trees as, 19: 2660
Oracula Sibyllina*, 17: 2369
orange (fruit and flower), 15: 2050
orchid, as herb, 9: 1186
Orc Treith (Irish legend), 7: 890
Orcus (Roman god), see Pluto
ordeal, 14: 1933
see also trial by ordeal
Order of the Garter, 7: 981, 18: 2527, 19: 2607
Order of the Gold and Rosy Cross (Richter), 16: 2245
Order of the Holy City, 12: 1647
Order of Illuminati, see Illuminati Order of the Templars of the East (OTO), 4: 501, 16: 2217, 17: 2346
oreads (orestiads; mountain nymphs), 14: 1899
oreibasia (Dionysian dance rite), 5: 586
Oreithyia (Amazon), 1: 95
orenda*, 1: 84, 19: 2643
Orestes (Greek mythology), 6: 842, 7: 969
orestiads (mountain nymphs), see oreads
Orexa, Maria Miguel de (witch), 2: 202
Orfeo, Sir, 20: 2799
orgone energy, 16: 2172
orgy, 14: 1933
Orias (spirit), 16: 2220
Origen:
castrates himself, 13: 1797, 17: 2384
Gnosticism and, 8: 1030-1
on hell, 9: 1175
on Jesus and the Roman empire, 13: 1811
meaning of his name, 13: 1823
on sin, 4: 567
on the Song of Solomon, 13: 1818
on the soul, 10: 1315
original sin, 6: 793, 818, 12: 1610
Adam and, 7: 904
St Augustine and, 7: 905
not a dualist concept, 5: 671
infant baptism and, 2: 198
Judaism and, 7: 904
Virgin Mary, her freedom from, see Immaculate Conception
St Paul and, 6: 793, 7: 904
virgin birth of Christ and, 12: 1649
Orion, Hephaestus and, 9: 1177
Ormuzd, see Ohrmazd
Oro (Polynesian god), 15: 2070
Orobas (demon), 6: 794
Orolum (Nigerian god), 17: 2421
Orpheus and Orphism, 14: 1934-8
Orpheus, 14: 1934
Argonauts saved from Sirens by, 14: 1934, 17: 2382
Bacchantes and, 14: 1935
death of, 14: 1934-5

Eurydice and, 14: 1934
head of, 14: 1935
as a Lar, 11: 1510
lyre of, 14: 1934, 1934-5, 1936
relics of, preserved, 16: 2177
Orphism, 13: 1807, 14: 1934
Athene and, 2: 155
Dionysus and, 6: 791, 14: 1937
Eleusinian Mysteries and, 14: 1935, 1937
Orphic poems, 14: 1934, 1935
Plato and, 14: 1935, 1936
Pythagoreans and, 14: 1936
reincarnation and, 12: 1609-10, 19: 2630
not an established religion, 14: 1934
orpine (plant), 13: 1743
Orthodox Church, Great Schism in, 14: 1918
Orungan (Nigerian god), 17: 2421-2
oscilloclast, see Abrams Box
Osiris, 5: 677, 6: 732, 14: 1938-40
Abydos, Osiris play enacted at, 5: 636, 14: 1940
Apis and, see Serapis
birth of, in Heliopolitan myth, 4: 472
Christ compared with, 14: 1940
cult of the dead and, 5: 681, 6: 732, 11: 1475, 13: 1785, 14: 1939-40
see also judge of the dead, below
Dionysus identified with, 14: 1938
as dying god, 5: 677, 14: 1940
in Graeco-Roman world, 14: 1938 see also Isis; Serapis
head of, 8: 1149
Horus and, 6: 814, 89: 1257, 14: 1938-9
iconography of, 14: 1939
Isis and, 5: 677, 10: 1364-5, 14: 1938, 1940
as judge of the dead, 6: 851, 11: 1449, 14: 1940
in the Pyramid Texts, 2: 257, 11: 1448, 14: 1938, 1940
Seker identified with, 2: 260
Seth and, 6: 732, 14: 1938, 1939, 17: 2341
Tammuz and, 18: 2554
as vegetation deity, 7: 891, 14: 1940, 19: 2719
Osmont, Anne (occultist), 1: 135
osprey, in augury, 2: 162
Ossian (Oisin), 7: 890, 18: 2477
ostrich, 14: 1940
feathers of, 6: 851
Otomi Indians (Mexico), 13: 1714
Otshirvani (central Asian creator), 7: 967
ouija boards, 12: 1681, 14: 1941-4
see also planchette
ourobouros (snake swallowing its tail), 1: 72, 3: 422, 17: 2340
Crowley and, 14: 1895
Golden Dawn and, 8: 1042
Ouspensky, Peter Demianovich, 8: 1095, 1096, 14: 1944-5, 18: 2568-9
out-of-the-body experiences, 14: 1945-8
methods of inducing, 14: 1947
in primitive belief, 5: 594, 17: 2348
shamans and, 17: 2353
two types of, 14: 1945
see also astral body outlaws, 19: 2695, 20: 2803
'Railroad Bill" (Morris Slater), 1: 64 see also Robin Hood overlooking, 15: 2113
see also Evil Eye
Owen, Robert, Harmony Society and, 4: 440, 442
Owen, Robert Dale, Spiritualism and, 2: 244 owl (bird), 14: 1948-9
in African witchcraft, 20: 2817
Ainu and, 14: 1949
Athene and, 2: 153, 155, 14: 1949
in augury, 2: 162
birds' hostility to, 11: 1541, 14: 1949
in China, 14: 1949
crow and, 4: 497
eggs of, 14: 1949
in Egypt, 14: 1948
evil and, 14: 1948
Evil Eye and, 14: 1949
lightning and storms averted by, 14: 1949
in Nigeria, 14: 1949
North American Indians and, 14: 1883, 1949, 1949
in Rome, 14: 1948
in Sumer, 14: 1948
as witch's familiar, 3: 356
wren and, 14: 1949
owl corners, 14: 1949
ox:
Athenian sacrifice of, see bouphonia
Enlil as, 1: 105, 3: 307
as symbol of St Luke, 9: 1292
see also bull
oyster:
as aphrodisiac, 7: 909, 11: 1558
see also pearl
Ozarks, 14: 1950-3
rain-making in, 4: 456
superstitions in, 19: 2693
witchcraft in, 14: 1951

P

pace eggs, pace eggers (Easter), 5: 720, 7: 920, 922
Pacific North-West Indians, 14: 1884-5, 1954-8
dance societies of, 14: 1956
initiation and, 14: 1956
masks and, 12: 1658, 14: 1883, 1958
myth of origin of death of, 4: 557
potlatch ceremony of, 14: 1956-7, 17: 2334
raven and, 13: 1658-9, 14: 1954, 1958, 19: 2663
shamans of, 14: 1957-8
totemism and, 14: 1885
see also Kwakiutl Indians
pact, Satanic, 14: 1959-61
St Augustine on, 14: 1959
Roger Bacon and, 14: 1959-61
Freud on, 5: 652
Louis Gaufridi and, 1: 70
Urbain Grandier and, 11: 1551, 1552, 14: 1961
grimoires not greatly concerned with, 14: 1961
Proterius and, 14: 1959
signed in blood, 14: 1959
Pope Sylvester II and 14: 1961
Theophilus of Adana and, 14: 1959
witches and, 14: 1959, 1961, 15: 2082, 17: 2414, 2415
see also Faust
Padma (Lakshmi), 11: 1548
Padstow Old Hoss (hobby-horse), 9: 1225, 1225, 13: 1776
Pahlavi (language), Parsees and, 14: 1984
pain, origin of, 6: 790
Palatine Hill (Rome), 7: 944
temple of Cybele on, 13: 1780 Paleolithic (Old Stone Age) period:
bull in, 3: 305
burial in, 3: 314, 9: 1241-3
cave art of, see cave art
cult of the dead in, 4: 510
headless figures at Mineteda from, 8: 1149
see also faceless goddesses; Neanderthal man Palermo (Sicily), dried bodies in, 2: 259, 13: 1787
Palilia (Roman festival), 13: 1753
Palladino, Eusapia (medium), 6: 807, 12: 1686, 1689, 14: 1962-3, 15: 2106
palm (tree), 14: 1920, 14: 1963-4, 15: 2028
see also Palm Sunday
Palmer (pilgrim), 14: 1964, 15: 2041
Palmer, John, image magic used by, 10: 1308
palmistry (chiromancy), 5: 600, 14: 1966-71
Adolphe Desbarolles and, 11: 1520
Gypsies and, 8: 1107
Palm Sunday, 5: 700, 14: 1964
see also Jesus, entry into Jerusalem
'Palm Sunday' case (Society for Psychical Research), 20: 2804
Palmyra (Syria), 18: 2543, 2545
Pan (Greek god), 14: 1972-3
Aphrodite with, 1: 113
Arcadia and, 14: 1972
Athens and, 14: 1973
Dionysus and, 14: 1972
Faunus identified with, 8: 1031
hare and, 14: 1973
Hermes and, 14: 1972, 1973
nymphs and, 14: 1899, 1972
panacea, 6: 749
Panacea Society of Bedford, 17: 2427, 2428
J. J. Jezreel and, 10: 1417
Panama, 13: 1737, 1742
Panchen Lama, 11: 1497
Pandora (first woman; Greek mythology), 14: 1973, 20: 2828-9, 2830
created by Hephaestus, 9: 1177
Prometheus and, 14: 1973, 15: 2095
P'an Ku (Chinese myth), 5: 717
pantheism, 14: 1973
in Stoicism, 15: 2079
Teilhard de Chardin and, 18: 2588
Vedanta not pantheistic, 19: 2711
panther, in the bestiary, 2: 218 Papa (Maori earth goddess), 12: 1631
papacy, 3: 410-2
see also Alexander III; Alexander VI; Benedict XIV; Benedict XVI; Gregory VII; Gregory IX; Gregory XI; Honorius I; Innocent III; Innocent IV; Innocent VIII; John XXII; Leo I; Paul III; Pius IX; Pius XII; Sylvester II; Urban II; Urban VI; Urban VIII; Zachary also Great Schism; John XXIII; Pope Joan Papias (Christian writer), 13: 1763, 1853
Papini, Giovanni, on the Devil, 4: 567
Papua, cult of the dead in, 4: 509
Papus (Dr Gerard Encausse), 14: 1973-4
Martinists and, 12: 1647, 14: 1974
Theodor Reuss and, 14: 1974, 20: 2768
Tarot and, 14: 1973, 1973, 18: 2569
papyrus, 12: 1591
Paracelsus (Theophrastus Bombastus von Hohenheim), 14:1974-6
alchemy and, 1: 72, 6: 749, 750, 12: 1704, 14: 1975-6, 15: 2028
astrology and, 14: 1975
at Basle, 14: 1974-5
on beryl and familiar spirits, 10: 1413
demon kept by, 10: 1317
elementals and, 6: 743
gnomes, 8: 1027
homunculus and 9: 1236,
Jung on, 11: 1458
on magic, 11: 1580 medicine and, 6: 749, 750, 14: 1974
Rosicrucians and, 16: 2242
Paradise, heaven, 9: 1176, 13: 1791, 14: 1977-83

Buddhism and, 14: 1977, 1982
Celts and, 14: 1980
St Brendan and, 2: 281, 14: 1980
see also Avalon
Christianity and:
earthly paradise, 14: 19080
see also Eden,
garden of heaven, 9: 1166, 14: 1981, 1982
Dante on, 4: 542
see also Last Judgement
drugs as route to, 5: 649, 13: 1791 garden as, 14: 1977
see also Eden, garden of
Golden Age myth and, 14: 1980
Greeks and, 14: 1980, 1982
see also Elysium
Hinduism and 11: 1466-7, 14: 1980, 1982
Islam and, 9: 1166, 14: 1981, 1983
see also houri
Judaism and, 14: 1981, 1982, 1983
ladder to, 11: 1455
North American Indians and, 14: 1981
Parsees and, 14: 1988
in Scandinavian mythology, see Valhalla see also Isles of the Blest paranoia, witchcraft and, 9: 1272
paranormal powers:
in Buddhism, 3: 298
Curé of Ars and, 4: 519
Jung and, 11: 1458
see also psi
Parapsychological Foundation of New York, 15: 2110
parapsychology, 6: 804
see also extra-sensory perception; psi; psychical research; psychokinesis; spontaneous psi expriences Parapsychology Association, 7: 981, 15: 2110
Parashurama (incarnation of Vishnu), 20: 2746
Parcae, see Fates
Parham, Charles F. (Pentecostalist), 14: 2003, 14: 2005
Parilia (Roman sheep festival), 17: 2357, 18: 2466
Paris, François de, 4: 454, 13: 1748
Paris, Judgement of, see Judgement of Paris
Parjanya (Indian god), bull and, 3: 307
Parliament Hill (London), Druids and, 5: 661
Parnassus, Mount (Greece), Dionysian dance rite on 5: 586
Parr, J. Nelson (Pentecostalist), 14: 2006
Parsees, 14: 1984-8
calendars of, 14: 1984
dead, disposal of, 3: 314, 14: 1986, 1986, 1987-8, 20: 1873
dogs and, 14: 1987
dualism repudiated by, 14: 1985
festivals of, 14: 1986-8
fire and, 1: 93, 7: 894, 14: 1985
guardian spirits of, 14: 1985
haoma and, 20: 2875
heaven and, 14: 1988
hell and, 14: 1988
judgement of the dead and, 14: 1985, 1988
marriage and, 14: 1985, 1987
Persian origin of, 14: 1984
priests of, 14: 1984, 1987
soul and, 14: 1988
Zoroastrianism of, 14: 1984
Parsifal (Perceval, Parzival; Arthurian knight), 8: 1061, 14: 1988-90
enchanted island visited by, 14: 1989
Fisher King and, 8: 1061, 14: 1988
forest and, 20: 2799
Galahad and, 7: 971, 973, 14: 1989
Grail and, 7: 973, 8: 1061, 1064, 14: 1988
Loathly Damsel and, 14: 1988, 1990
marriage of, 14: 1990
Wagner and, 20: 2758
parsley, 9: 1186
Parsva (Jain prophet), 10: 1384, 1386
Parthenon (Athens), 2: 155, 16: 2183 frieze from (detail), 18: 2584-5 Parthians, 14: 1990-1
partridge, as aphrodisiac, 11: 1557
Parvati (wife of Shiva; Hinduism), 6: 858, 9: 1212, 1216, 17: 2367, 18: 2558
Ganga identified with, 7: 979
yoni symbol of, 9: 1195
Parzival (Arthurian knight), see Parsifal
Pascal, Blaise, 2: 1616, 17: 2332
Paschal Candle, 5: 702
Paschal Lamb, Jesus as, 5: 696
Pashley sarcophagus, 14: 1972
Pasiphae (mother of the Minotaur), 3: 307, 9: 1180
Pasqually, Martinez de (founder of Martinists), 12: 1646, 1647
Passion plays, 5: 639
Passover (Jewish feast), 5: 672, 7:931,* 10: 1435, 1438, 16: 2266
Pasupali (Lord of the Beasts; India), 10: 1336
Patanjali (writer on yoga), 20: 2846 path symbolism (the road, the way, journey symbolism), 10: 1430, 14: 1992-3
see also pilgrimage; sefiroth
Patrick, St, 16: 2270
Breastplate of (prayer), 17: 2406
Fenians and, 7: 890
Glastonbury and, 8: 1022, 1024
witches, his disbelief in, 6: 800
Patroclus (Greek hero), 1: 49
Patterson, Charles Brodie, on New Thought, 13: 1862
Paul, St, 3: 407, 14: 1994-6
on Adam, 7: 904
apocryphal acts of, 13: 1857, 1860
at Athens, 10: 1315
on baptism, 2: 197-8, 20: 2775
on the Crucifixion, 10: 1410, 14: 1997
epistles of, 10: 1409, 14: 1994 see also Corinthians; Galatians on the Eucharist, 12: 1668
Gnosticism and, 14: 1996
healing and, 6: 834
heaven and purgatory, his allegory of, 15: 2136
on immortality, 10: 1315
Jerusalem Christians and, 5: 704, 10: 1410, 14: 1995, 1996
Jesus, his view of, 3: 407, 5: 704, 10: 1409, 1412, 14: 1996
see also Last Supper, below
Jews and, 6: 740, 14: 1996
on the Last Supper, 12: 1668
on marriage, 20: 2829
Mystery religions and, 14: 1997
original sin and, 6: 793, 7: 904
origins of Christianity and, 3: 407, 6: 740, 10: 1409, 14: 1994
St Peter and, 14: 1995, 1996
predestination and, 15: 2080
on the resurrection of the body, 19: 2729
on sacrifice, 16: 2266
on salvation, 15: 2080
Paul, St Francis de, 16: 2272
Paul, St Vincent de, 16: 2270
Paul III (pope), Holy Office founded by, 9: 1193
Paul the Hermit, St, 11: 1503, 16: 2276
Paulicianism (Christian heresy), 2: 256
Pawnee Indians, 8: 1069
first man myth of, 7: 903
High God of, 9: 1206
human sacrifice and, 14: 1882-3, 16: 2265
Morning Star and, 8: 1069, 14: 1882-3
sex confusion myth of, 9: 1196
storm eagle of, 8: 1072
tobacco and, 19: 2640
trickster of, see Coyote
peach, as Chinese symbol of immortality, 3: 400
peacock, 14: 1998-2000
actors' superstitions concerning, 6: 822
eyes in tail of, 6: 820, 821, 822, 14: 1998 pearl, 10: 1414, 14: 2001
moon and, 10: 1413
pearlwort (plant), 15: 2050
peatbog, bodies found in, see Lindow man; Tollund man Peculiar People (Plumstead Peculiars), 14: 2001
John Sirgood and, 3: 427
Peczley, Ignatz, founder of iridology, 10: 1357
Peeping Tom, Lady Godiva and, 8: 1034
Pegasus (horse of Bellerophon), 3: 391, 8: 1053, 20: 2806
Peking, as the centre of the earth, 13: 1828
Peladan, Josephin, 7: 207, 14: 1974, 16: 2246, 20: 2757
Pelagius, Pelagian controversy, 15: 2080
Peleus (father of Achilles), 1: 50, 14: 1899
on Portland Vase,6: 766
pelican, 2: 227, 14: 2002
Pelletier, Blessed Marie, 18: 2486
Pelops, shoulder-blade of, preserved at Elis, 16: 2177
penance, 14: 2002, 16: 2258, 2259
on Good Friday, 5: 698
in Hinduism, 17: 2376
Penates (Roman deities), 14: 2002, 16: 2234
Pendulum Institute,13: 1832
penis:
bewitchment of, 9: 1273, 10: 1356, 15: 2112
see also penis envy; phallic symbolism
penis envy (psychological theory), 20: 2823
Penn, William (founder of Pennsylvania), 7: 966 pentacle, 14: 2003
pentagram, 14: 2002-3, 16: 2220
Pentagrammaton (name of Jesus), 8: 2159, 13: 1824, 14: 2003?
Pentateuch, 10: 1433-4
Pentecost (Christian festival):
by El Greco, 6: 761
in French 15th cent. Book of Hours, 17: 2434
by Pinturicchio, 17: 2431
see also Whitsun
Pentecost (Jewish festival), 10: 1438
Pentecostalist movement, 14: 2003-6
ecstasy and, 5: 713
enthusiasm and, 6: 764
Holiness movement and, 9: 1227, 1231, 14: 2003
Holy Rollers and, 9: 1231
in South America, 14: 2006
Brazil, 14: 2006
speaking in tongues and, 14: 2003, 2006, 17: 2431, 2433
Spirit baptism and, 14: 2003, 2006
Penthesilea (Amazon), 1: 49-50, 95
Pentheus (king of Thebes), Dionysus and, 5: 584
P'en ts'ao (Chinese text), 9: 1181
peony, 9: 1184, 1186, 12: 1618
Pepys, Samuel, hare's foot charm and, 5: 589, 10: 1116
Perceval (Arthurian knight), see Parsifal
Peredur (Mabinogion), 11: 1570, 1572
perfectionism (Christianity), 6: 764, 9: 1227

see also Oneida Community
perfume, 14: 2007-11
in ritual magic, 14: 2011, 16: 2220
see also incense; joss-stick; odour of sanctity Pergamum, Asclepios and, 8: 1150
peridot (jewel), 10: 1415
Periphetes (Greek mythology), 19: 2600
Perkins, William (writer on witchcraft), 13: 1836
permanent paranormal objects (PPOs; apports), 14: 2012
Perpignan (France), procession of penitents, 3: 406
Persephone (Greek goddess), 14: 2012-4
Adonis and, 1: 113
Carthaginian cult of, 15: 2032
Cretan origin of, 4: 480
Demeter and, 4: 563, 6: 745, 14: 2012, 2014, 19: 2721-2
as faceless goddess, 6: 824
Hades and, 4: 563, 6: 748, 9: 1168, 14: 2012, 15: 2054, 15: 2721-2
Hecate and, 14: 2012
pomegranate seed eaten by, 14: 2012
Proserpina identified with, 4: 564, 14: 2012
by Rubens, 5: 679
Sirens and, 17: 2382
Zeus and, 14: 2011, 2014
persephonion (plant), see vervain
Persepolis:
Ahura Mazdah, relief from temple at, 14: 1912
Median nobles relief at, 20: 2873
sack of, 14: 1912
Perseus (Greek hero):
Andromeda and, 5: 633
by Cosimo, 5: 634
by Leighton, 9: 1201
Athene and, 8: 1053
Atlas and, 2: 160
Gorgons and, 8: 1053, 15: 2054
Hermes and, 8: 1053
Personality Number, 14: 1892-5
Personal Year Number, 14: 1892-5
Peru:
calendar on gold plate, 6: 771
masks from, 8: 1140, 10: 1326-7
see also Incas
Perun (Slav god), 17: 2396
Peten Itza (Mayan city), 12: 1672-3
Peter, St, 3: 404
apocryphal acts of, 13: 1857
crucifixion of, 13: 1855
healing by, 6: 834
Jerusalem community of Christians and, 5: 703, 14: 1997
keys of heaven and, 6: 741
St Paul and, 14: 1996
Peter of Abano, on the basilisk, 6: 800
Peter of Palermo (Italian sorcerer), 10: 1380
Peter Pan, 20: 2807-8
Petetin, J. H., 15: 2106*
Petrus Cantor, on magical use of the Mass, 15: 2111
peyote cults, 5: 652-4, 14: 2014-6
Christianity and, 14: 2016
Pfenninger, Baron (alchemist), 1: 72
Phaedra (Greek mythology), 19: 2601, 2602
phallic symbolism, 6: 860, 10: 1380, 15: 2023-6
in Africa, 6: 855
animals in, 15: 2025
in architecture, 15: 2025-6
in Australia, 17: 2346
in the Bible, 15: 2025
in Egypt, 15: 2024
in the Eleusinian Mysteries, 15: 2025
Eros and, 6: 765
Etruscan,15: 2023, 2034
fertility and, 6: 860, 15: 2024, 2026
Greek amulet, 17: 2344
Hermes and, 6: 765, 15: 2025
in India, 15: 2024
see also lingam
maypole as, 5: 638, 6: 861
of nose, 7: 997
plants in, 15: 2024-5
of thumb, 7: 997
in Viking Age, 7: 965, 965
see also Cerne Abbas giant
phantasms of the living (wraiths), 8: 1097, 15: 2026, 20: 2836
Edmund Gurney and, 8: 1097, 15: 2106-7
F. W. H. Myers and, 8: 1097, 13: 1810
Mrs Sidgwick and, 15: 2108
telepathy and, 8: 1097
Phantom's Frenzy, The (Irish story), 8: 1062, 1065
pharaoh, 6: 730-1, 11: 1477-8
meaning of the title, 6: 730
resurrection of, Osiris and, 14: 1939-40
see also Egypt, cult of the dead
sun and, 6: 730-1, 18: 2504-5
Re incarnate as, 10: 1320 symbols of, 18: 2534
see also Amenhotep/Amenophis; Ikhnaten; Narmer; Nectanebus; Rameses II; Rameses VI; Thothmes III; Thothmes IV; Tutankhamen; Unas
Pharisees, 3: 404-5, 15: 2026
Pharmaceutical Society, Exclusive Brethren and, 6: 798
Pheidias (Greek sculptor), 9: 1290
Pheidippides (Greek runner), Pan and, 14: 1973
Philemon, St Paul's note to 14: 1994
Philibert, St, hazel and, 8: 1136
Philip, St (apostle), apocryphal acts of, 13: 1875
Philip IV (of France), Knights Templar and, 11: 1482-4
Philippe, Nizier, 14: 1994
Philippians, St Paul's epistles to, 14: 1994
Philippine Islands:
headhunting in, 8: 1139, 18: 2579
Ifugao priests of, 15: 2087
tattooing in, 18: 2579
Philo the Jew, of Alexandria, 13: 1841
Philomela (Greek mythology), 13: 1869, 18: 2513
Philosophers' Egg (alchemy), 5: 719
Philosophers' Stone (alchemy), 1: 71, 12: 1704, 1705, 15: 2027-8, 16: 2167
descriptions of, 12: 1705, 15: 2028
Elixir of Life and, 6: 749, 15: 2027
as reconciliation of contradictions,14: 1924
see also Philosophers' Egg
Philosophers' Tincture, 6: 750
Philostratus (Greek writer), 1: 115
philtre (love potion), see aphrodisiac
Phinehas (Book of Numbers), 20: 2852
Phineus, King (Greek mythology), 8: 1118
phlegm (theory of the humours), 6: 742
Phoenicians and Canaanites, 18: 2028-32, 2540-5
amulets of, 18: 2545
Canaanites identified with Phoenicians, 15: 2028
cult of the dead and, 18: 2544
divination and, 18: 2542
dreams and, 5: 644
gods of, 15: 2028, 18: 2542
Graeco-Roman gods assimilated to, 18: 2545
see also Anat; Astarte; Baal; Dagon; El; Jerah kingship and, 18: 2541
life after death and, 18: 2544, 2545
meaning of the name, 15: 2028
prostitution and, 15: 2103
sacrifice and, 18: 2542-4
of children, 7: 900
temples of, 18: 1542, 2543
see also Carthage
phoenix, 7: 896, 15: 2033-6
in China, 5: 633, 6: 851, 15: 2034-5, 2036
Phoroneus (Greek hero), 15: 2094
Phouka (Irish spirit), Puck identified with, 15: 2127
phrenology, 5: 598, 15: 2036-8
phrenomagnetism, 15: 2038
physiognomy, 11:: 1512-3, 15: 2036, 2038
Physiologus 14: 2002, 15: 2034
see also bestiary
pi (mathematics), in pyramidology, 15: 2143, 2144
Picatrix (grimoire), 15: 2038
love magic in, 10: 1308
pickaxe, Thugs and, 19: 2616-7
Pico della Mirandola, Giovanni, 16: 2190, 2193
Picquart, Mme Eugene (medium), 12: 1687
Picts, carved stones of, 4: 491
Piddington, J. G., Society for Psychical Research and 15: 2107
pieta, 15: 2039
pietas, 16: 2230
Pietism (Christianity), 6: 763, 9: 1127
pig (hog, swine), 15: 2039-40
St Anthony and, 15: 2040
in Egypt, 15: 2039, 2039
in Eleusinian Mysteries, 2: 195-6, 6: 748
Evil Eye and, 6: 818
as food, 15: 2039
Jews and, 7: 932, 15: 2034
Gwydion and, 8: 1098
in New Guinea,15: 2040
Odysseus's men turned into, 3: 422
Orestes purified with, 6: 842
weather lore of, 15: 2040
see also boar; Dunmow Flitch pigeon, see dove
pilgrimage, 15: 2041-4
Buddhist, 15: 2043, 2044, 17: 2381
Christian, 15: 2043-4
to Ars (tomb of Curé of), 4: 518
to Becket's tomb at Canterbury, 15: 2043
to Compostela, shrine of St James at, 3: 427 cockle-shell emblem in, 3: 427
cures sought by, 5: 594, 15: 2042, 2043, 2044
see also Lourdes
Gypsy, 8: 1099, 1100, 1102
to Jerusalem, 15: 2042, 2043
to Rome, 15: 2042, 2043
palm tree and, see palmer to Walsingham, 15: 2044, 20: 2763, 2763, 2764 see also Pilgrim's Progress
Hindu, 15: 2043
Islamic, 10: 1370-2, 12: 1675-6, 15: 2042-3
New Year festivals and, 15: 2042
Pilgrimage of Etheria, 5: 700
pilgrim festivals (Judaism), 10: 1438
Pilgrim's Progress (Bunyan), 14: 1992, 1993
pillars, saints on, see stylites
pine (tree), 7: 891
true cross and, 18: 2251
see also pine cone
pine cone, 7: 882
Dionysus and, 7: 892, 19: 2618
as virginity symbol, 7: 892
Pinel, Dr (psychiatrist), his treatment of

lunatics, 9: 1274
Pio, Padre, see Forgione, Father Pio
pipe (tobacco), 8: 1072, 19: 2640
Piper, Mrs Leonora E. (medium), 2: 173-4, 12: 1689, 15: 2045-6
cross-correspondences and, 4: 493
Pirithous (the Lapith), 14: 2014, 19: 2601
Pisces (the Fishes; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 143, 7: 908, 15: 2046, 2046
Jupiter and, 11: 1462, 15: 2046
pitchfork, witches and, 2: 286
Pius IX (pope), Immaculate Conception dogma promulgated by, 12: 1652
Pius XII (pope), Assumption of the Virgin Mary dogma promulgated by, 12: 1652
pixies, 6: 830
Puck identified with, 15: 2127
PK, see psychokinesis Plains Indians, see Great Plains Indians
planchette, 14: 1941, 1942, 15: 2046
planets, 7: 937, 15: 2046
in astrology, see astrology
Boehme on, 2: 254
colours associated with, 4: 459
days associated with, 4: 459, 546
Harranian worship of, 8: 1119
hours associated with, 4: 547
jewels associated with, 10: 1412
magic squares of (Agrippa), 10: 1412
metals associated with, 1: 75-6, 4: 459
in Mexican myth, 7: 184
see also Jupiter; Mars; Mercury; Moon; Neptune; Pluto; Saturn; Sun; Uranus; Venus also Ficino, Marsilio; spheres; zodiac
plaintain (herb) 9: 1186
plants and flowers, 15: 2047-50 fertility of, 6: 855
see also agriculture
in fertility rites, etc., 15: 2050
hallucinogenic, 5: 649, 652
language of flowers, Victorian, 15: 2051
Midsummer and, 13: 1743, 15: 2051
moon and, 13: 1766-7
in phallic symbolism, 15: 2024-5
as protection against the Evil Eye, 6: 818
as protection against lightning, 17: 2394
as protection against witchcraft and sorcery, 15: 2048
psychokinesis as aid to growth of, 15: 2121
of eternal youth, in Gilgamesh legend, 8: 1019
see also aloes; anemone; bean; blackberry; broom; buttercup; clove; clover; corn; durian fruit; ferns; foxglove; garlic; haoma; heather; houseleek; iris; ivy; lily; lotus; maize; mandrake; marigold; mistletoe; mushroom; onion; orchid; peach; peony; poinsettia; poppy; potato; radish; rhubarb; rose; St John's wort; satyricon; soma; tea; tobacco; tomato; vervain; water-lily; yarrow also flower arrangement, in Japan; garden; herbs; trees; wreath
Plato, 15: 2051-2, 2051, 2052
Atlantis and, 2: 156, 15: 2052
cycles in world history, theory of, 6: 755
on dreams, 5: 645
dualism and, 5: 669
Hermetica and, 9: 1197, 1199
his myths, 15: 2051-2, 19: 2631
of Er, 9: 1170, 16: 2174
of the birth of Eros, 15: 2051
of the origin of the sexes, 15: 2051
Orphism and, 14: 1935-6
Pythagoreanism and, 14: 1936, 15: 2145
on the soul, 1: 136, 10: 1313, 12: 1610, 15: 2051
see also Coleridge, as Platonist; Neoplatonism; Renaissance; Taylor, Thomas play, see games
playing cards, see cards
Pleiades (Seven Sisters; stars):
Australian myth of, 20: 2813
Iban of Sarawak and, 2: 265
plexus (body), 3: 252
P L Kyodan (Japanese religious sect), 10: 1399
ploiaphesia (festival of Isis), 10: 1366
Plotinus (founder of Neoplatonism), 13: 1840-2, 15: 2053-4, 2093
Gnosticism and, 8: 1031, 13: 1841
not a theurgist, 19: 2604
plough, ploughing, 4: 455
woodpecker and, 20: 2836
see also Plough Monday
Plough (constellation), see Great Bear
Plough Monday, plough plays, 5: 638, 7: 920, 933
Plouhinec (Brittany), standing stones at, 2: 285
Plouton (Greek god), see Hades
Plumed Serpent, see Feathered Serpent
Plumpton Park, Robin Hood and, 16: 2224
Plumstead Peculiars, see Peculiar People
Plutarch of Athens (Neoplatonist), 15: 2092
Pluto (planet), in astrology, 1: 139, 143
Pluto (Dis, Orcus; Roman god), 9: 1168, 15: 2054, 16: 2230
Hades identified with, 5: 688, 15: 2054
Plutus (Greek god, son of Demeter), 4: 563, 6: 748
Plymouth Brethren (Open Brethren), 6: 797, 15: 2055
pneuma, 1: 136-7, 15: 2055
in ophitism, 5: 669
Po (Polynesian underworld), 15: 2070, 2072
Pocahontas (Indian princess), 1: 82
pocomania, 20: 2751
Podmore, Frank, 8: 1097, 15: 2105-6
Poet Laureate, 11: 1511
poets, poetry, verse, 15: 2055-9
animals banished by, 15: 2057-8 Icelandic, 15: 2057
see also Edda, Poetic Edda
inspiration and, 15: 2059
Irish, ancient, 15: 2055
modern, see Russell, G.W.; Yeats, W.B. magic and, 15: 2055, 2058-9
Muses and, 13: 1789
Sufis and, 18: 2497
see also bards; Coleridge; Dante; Eliot; Goethe; Hesiod; Homer; Milton; Poet Laureate; Skelton; Virgil
see also haiku
Pohl, Hermann, 7: 991, 992, 11: 1537, 13: 1829, 16: 2251
Poimandres (Hermetic literature), 9: 1197-8, 18: 2480
poinsettia (flower), Christmas and, 3: 421
pointing, 7: 883
at rainbow and heavenly bodies, 15: 2155
see also bone-pointing poisoning, 15: 2060-3
witchcraft and, 10: 1379, 15: 2060
polecat, as witch's familiar, 5: 691
Pole Star, 5: 588
Mexican god of, see Ueueteotl
sacred mountain and, 13: 1783
pollution, see purification Pollux, Castor and, see Dioscuri
poltergeists, 7: 1007, 15: 2064-7
Sir William Barrett and, 15: 2107
at Borley Rectory, 15: 2064
Curé of Ars and, 4: 519, 15: 2064, 2066
hysteria and, 15: 2067-8
psychokinesis and, 15: 2067
see also Drummer of Tidworth Polycarp, St, 16: 2273
epistle of, 13: 1853
martyrdom of, 13: 1763, 16: 2179, 2273
Polydectes (king of Seriphos; Greek mythology), 8: 1053 Polydeuces, Castor and, see Dioscuri
polygamy:
Kihuyu and, 11: 1473
Mormons and, 13: 1772
Polyhymnia (Polymnia; Muse), 13: 1789
Polynesia, 15: 2069-73
amulets of, see tiki chiefs of, 15: 2070
creation myths of, 15: 2070
dreams in, 15: 2071
gods of, 15: 2070
head in, 18: 2547
heroes in, 15: 2072
life after death, beliefs concerning, 15: 2071
lizard in, 11: 1539
mana in, 12: 1613, 15: 2070, 18: 2547
Melanesia compared with, 12: 1697, 15: 2069
priests of, 15: 2071
rainbow in, 15: 2073
religion and magic in, 15: 2070
sacrifice in, 15: 2071
soul, beliefs concerning, 15: 2071
taboo in, 15: 2070, 18: 2547
tattooing in, 18: 2577
temples of, 15: 2071, 2072
totemism not found in, 19: 2643-5
see also Hawaii; kava
Polyphemus (Cyclops), 4: 524, 6: 814
polytheism (definition), 15: 2073
pomegranate, 15: 2073
Persephone and, 14: 2012
Pompeii:
mosaic portrait of Alexander the Great from, 1: 78
mysteries of Dionysus at, see Villa of the Mysteries phallic symbolism at, 15: 2026
pontiffs (Roman priests), 15: 2089, 16: 2234-5
Pontius Pilate, 10: 1406, 1410, 1412, 15: 2073-4
Poor Men of Lyons, see Waldenses pope (Christianity), see papacy
Pope (Hierophant; Tarot card), 18: 2569, 2570
Porenutius (Slav god), 17: 2399
Porevit (Slav god), 17: 2399
Porphyry (Neoplatonist), 13: 1841, 15: 2053
Portland Vase, Peleus and Thetis on, 6: 766
Poseidon (Greek god), 8: 1078, 15: 2074, 2074
Amphitrite and, 5: 614
Athene and, 14: 1920
Atlantis and, 2: 156
dolphin and, 5: 614
earthquakes and, 5: 688, 15: 2074
horse and, 9: 1250
meaning of name not known, 15: 2074
Neptune and, 13: 1844
the sea and, 15: 2074
Posidonius (Stoic philosopher), 19: 2633?
posies (mottoes), 16: 2208
possession, 6: 799-801, 11: 1574, 15: 2075-8
in Dahomey, 4: 524
ecstasy and, 5: 713
in Ethiopia, 6: 777, 15: 2078
exorcism and, 6: 799, 799, 800-1, 801
hysteria and, 9: 1273
in India, 15: 2078
mesmerism and, 15: 2076
of nuns, 9: 1274, 1275

at Aix-en-Provence, 1: 69-70
at Auxonne, 2: 175
at Cambrai, 9: 1274
at Loudun, 11: 1550-2
Sister Renata and, 16: 2195
revivalism and, 6: 764
sex and, 17: 2344
trance and, 19: 2649
among the Veddas, 19: 2716
in Voodoo, 5: 651, 15: 2078, 19: 2649-50, 2652, 20: 2751, 2753-5
Wesley and, 15: 2075-6, 2078
witchcraft and, 6: 799, 800, 9: 1272-7
see also exorcism
potato, 11: 1560
Pothos (Greek mythology), 6: 766
potlatch (American Indian ceremony), 14: 1956-7, 17: 2334
power, as goal of magic, 11: 1579, 1584
Praeneste, oracle at, 11: 1547
Prajapati (Hinduism), 20: 2744
prana (breath; Hinduism), 2: 279, 20: 2850
see also pranayama
pranayama (breath control; yoga), 2: 279, 11: 1494, 19: 2715, 20: 2849-50
pratyahara (yoga), 19: 2715, 20: 2850
Praxiteles (Greek sculptor), Cnidian Aphrodite of, 1: 113
prayer, 15: 2079
magical incantation distinguished from, 10: 1319-20
rosary and, 16: 2236
prayer wheel, 20: 2789
in Nepal, 10: 1319
in Tibet, 19: 2624, 20: 2789
precession of the equinoxes, 1: 118
precognition, 6: 803-4, 15: 2079, 18: 2455-64
in mice, 15: 2122
psychokinesis and, 15: 2118
predestination and free will, 6: 842, 844, 15: 2079-80
in the ancient world, 15: 2079
in Christianity, 6: 842, 15: 2079-80
Aquinas and, 15: 2080
St Augustine on, 6: 741, 15: 2080
Boehme on, 2: 253-4
Calvin and, 6: 741, 16: 2080
St Paul and, 15: 2080
Pelagius and, 15: 2080
in Islam, 6: 741, 10: 1373
in Zoroastrianism, 1: 66, 20: 2873
Preece, Ruth, 15: 2092, 2092
pregnancy:
Bushmen, 3: 320
forty and, 7: 941
prehistoric religion, 16: 2180
see also cult of the dead; faceless goddesses premonitions, 15: 2081
Prentice, Joan (witch), 5: 693
Presbyterianism, Irvingites and, 10: 1362 pressing to death, 16: 2280
Prevotte, Catherine (witch), 16: 2254
Price, Harry, 15: 2108, 2108, 2109
Stella C. and, 12: 1688
Schneider brothers and, 16: 2295-6
Price, Prof. H. H., on mediums, 12: 1684
Price, James (alchemist), 1: 72
Price, Dr William (advocate of cremation) 4: 478, 479
pricking of witches, 15: 2082
see also Devil's mark
pride, fall of Lucifer due to, 4: 572
priests, 15: 2083-9
Ashanti, 1: 128
Aztec, 2: 186
Celtic, see Druids
Christian, 15: 2087
ecstasy and, 15: 2086-7
Egyptian, 6: 735
Greek, 14: 1927, 15: 2089
of Eleusinian Mysteries, see hierophant initiation to priesthood, 15: 2087, 2089
in Christianity, see holy orders Islam, no priests in, 15: 2089
in Judaism, 10: 1433
magician and priest compared, 15: 2084-5
Maori, 12: 1631
marriage of, 15: 2088
Maya, 12: 1671, 1672, 15: 2088
in Micronesia, 15: 2072
Mormon, 13: 1774
North American Indian, 14: 1884
Parsee, 14: 1984, 1987
in Philippine Islands, 15: 2087
in Polynesia, 15: 2071
Roman, 15: 2089, 16: 2231, 2234
see also Arval Brothers; flamen; Salii; Vestal Virgins Tibetan, see lamas of the Veddas, 19: 2716-8
Voodoo, 20: 2754
see also medicine-man; shaman
Prima materia (alchemy), 15: 2027
Primavera (Botticelli), 16: 2194, 2194
Primitive Methodists, 6: 764
Primrose Hill (London), Druids and, 5: 660
Prince, Henry James (founder of Agapemonites), 12: 1724-5, 15: 2091-2
Prince of Wales, ostrich feather crest of, 6: 851
Prince, W.F., 2: 171
Priscillianism (Christian heresy), 9: 1191
Proclus (Neoplatonist), 13: 1942, 15: 2092-3, 19: 2603-4
Procne, Philomela and (Greek mythology), 13: 1869, 18: 2513
Procrustes (Greek mythology), 19: 2600
prognometer, 20: 2839
Prometheus (Greek mythology), 15: 2094-6
Athene and, 15: 2095
creation of man by, 15: 2095, 2095, 2096
as culture hero, 15: 2095
fire stolen from heaven by, 7: 894, 15: 2094
Hephaestus and, 9: 1177, 1178, 15: 2095
Hercules and, 15: 2095-6
Oceanides and (in Aeschylus), 14: 1899
Pandora and, 14: 1973, 15: 2095
Zeus and, 15: 2094
promised land, Israelites and, 6: 739
prophecy, 15: 2097-2101
Christianity and, 15: 2099
divination and prediction distinguished from, 15: 2097, 2098, 2100
in Islam, 15: 2100
see also Mohammed
Judaism and, 15: 2097-100, 16: 2197
in the Old Testament, 15: 2097-9
see also Elijah; Ezekiel; Hosea; Isaiah
see also Blake; Nostradamus
also cargo cults; Handsome Lake
Proserpina (Roman goddess), Persephone identified with, 4: 564, 15: 2097
prostitution, 15: 2102-4
Aphrodite and, 1: 113, 15: 2104
Astarte and, 1: 134, 15: 2103
in Canaan, 15: 2103
Cybele and, 15: 2104
as fertility rite, 15: 2102
in India, 15: 2104
Isis and, 15: 2104
in Mesopotamia, 15: 2102
Ishtar and, 10: 1364, 15: 2103
Old Testament objections to, 15: 2103
Shinto and, 17: 2361-2
Proterius, Satanic pact and, 14: 1959
Protestantism, 3: 412
pilgrimage and, 15: 2044
see also Holiness movement; Huguenots; Methodism; Plymouth Brethren; Quakers; Reformation Proteus, shape-shifting by, 17: 2354-5 Protoevangelium (Book of James), 12: 1649, 13: 1856
providence:
Fate distinguished from, 6: 842
Isis as, 10: 1365, 1366
Psamathe (nereid), 17: 2325
psi, 6: 803-12, 15: 2105, 2117
in games of chance, 15: 2118
see also spontaneous psi experiences psilocybe mushroom, 13: 1790
psionic generator, 15: 2126
Psyche, 6: 766, 15: 2105, 16: 2231
psychedelic substances, see drugs; mushrooms; peyote psychical research, 15: 2105-10
apparitions and, 15: 2106
ghosts, 7: 1007-8
phantasms of the living, 8: 1097, 15: 2106-7
extra-sensory perception and, 6: 805-12, 15: 2109-10
hypnotism and, 8: 1097, 15: 2107
Spiritualism and, 15: 2105-8
see also cross-correspondences; Curé of Ars; displacement; Gurney, Edmund; mediums; Myers, F. W. H.; poltergeists; second sight; Society for Psychical Research
'psychic art', 2: 171, 171, 173
see also Gill, Madge
psychic attack, 15: 2111-4
Dion Fortune and, 7: 939, 15: 2114
see also bewitchment; black fast; curse; Evil Eye; ill-wishing psychic surgery, 6: 835, 15: 2115-6
psychoanalysis, 7: 962
psychokinesis (PK, telekinesis, 'mind over matter'), 6: 803, 15: 2109-10, 2117-22, 18: 2455, 2457, 2459-60, 2462
alchemy and, 1: 75
'crisis' cases of, 18: 2460
dice and, 15: 2109, 2118-20, 2121, 2122
extra-sensory perception and, 6: 803, 15: 2118-22, 18: 2455, 2459
Jung and, 11: 1458
as evidence of life after death, 18: 2456
Bulwer Lytton and, 11: 1568
mediums and, 12: 1686-8
plant growth influenced by, 15: 2121
poltergeists and, 15: 2067
psi, PK as the only exclusive form of, 18: 2460
saints and, 18: 2482
psychology:
of dreams, 5: 646-9
of witchcraft, see European witchcraft, psychology of witches and witchcraft accusations see also Freud; Jung; madness; parapsychology psychometry, (object reading, psychoscopy), 15: 2123-6
psychons (ghost theory of), 7: 1008
psychoscopy, see psychometry
psychosomatic medicine, 6: 835
psychotronics, 15: 2126
Ptah (Egyptian god), 6: 732
Apis bull and, 1: 105
as creator, 4: 472
as father of Imhotep, 10: 1305
Ptolemaeus (Gnostic), 8: 1029-30
Ptolemy I (king of Egypt), 14: 1940
Puck, 15: 2126-7, 2126, 2127, 16: 2223
as Cosmic Joker, 4: 461
Pueblo Indians, 14: 1880, 15: 2128-34

eagle dance of, 15: 2128-9
fool and, 7: 934, 15: 2132, 2134
ghosts and, 15: 2132
gods and spirits of, 15: 2132
kachina dancers of, 15: 2130-2, 2133, 2134, 19: 2643
kachina dolls of, 14: 1485, 15: 2133
rituals of, 14: 1884, 15: 2130-4
tobacco and, 19: 2640
witches and, 15: 2132-3
woman, place of, among, 15: 2130
see also Hopi Indians
Pug (small devil), Puck identified with, 15: 2127
Pulotu (Polynesian afterworld), 15: 2071
Puluga (sky god of Andaman Islands), 17: 2391
Punch and Judy, 15: 2135, 19: 2666
Punjab (India), Sikhs in, 17: 2369
puppets:
in Japan, 11: 1580
see also Punch and Judy Puranas (Hindu texts), 11: 1488
see also Bhagavata Purana
Pure Land sect (Japan), see Jodo
purgatory, 11: 1454, 15: 2135-7
Dante and, 4: 542, 544
indulgences and, 15: 2043
Luther and, 15: 2043-4
purification:
alchemy and, 6: 751, facing title, 15 15: 2027, 2027
Ganges and, 7: 980
Kikuyu ritual of, 1: 1471
of Orestes, 6: 842
in Polynesia, 15: 2070
see also Purgatory
Purim (Jewish festival), 10: 1438
Puritanism (Christianity: in England), 3: 412
names, uplifting, of Puritans, 13: 1823
see also Cokelers; Fifth Monarchy Men
Purusha, Vedic creation myth of, 3: 354
Pusan (Indian god), 10: 1335
Puységur, Marquis de, 12: 1595, 1711
pwca (Welsh spirit), Puck identified with, 15: 2127
Pwyll, prince of Dyfed (Mabinogion), 11: 1570-1
pygmies, 15: 2138-42
'pyramid power', 15: 2144
pyramidology, 15: 2143-4
pyramids, 15: 2143-4
Egyptian, 15: 2143, 2143, 2144, 16: 2182, 2184
at Sakkara, 10: 1304, 1304, 1305
see also Pyramid Texts
Mexican, 2: 180, 183, 12: 1670, 18: 2503
Pyramid Texts, 2: 257, 16: 2184
creation myth in, 4: 471
human nature, physical and psychic components of, in, 1: 108
judgement of the dead in, 11: 1447
land of the dead described in, 6: 734
mummification and, 13: 1785
Osiris in, 2: 257, 11: 1448, 14: 1938, 1939
Re in, 16: 2295
river to be crossed by the dead, 3: 385
Unas (pharaoh) in, 16: 2295
water, ritual use of, in, 2: 195
Pyrenees, healing springs of, 11: 1553
Pyrrhus (king of the Molossians), healing method of, 6: 834
Pythagoras, 14: 1935, 15: 2145-6
Croton and Sybaris and, 17: 2334
four elements theory and, 5: 594
lamb and, 17: 2357
music and, 14: 1895, 15: 2145
reincarnation and, 14: 1935, 15: 2145
see also Pythagoreanism
Pythagoreanism, 14: 1935, 15: 2145
Apollonius of Tyana and, 1: 115
creation explained by, 15: 2146
dualism in, 5: 669
numbers and, 14: 1892-5, 15: 2145-6
forty, 7: 941
four, 15: 2146
Orphism and, 14: 1935
Plato and, 14: 1936, 15: 2145
soul and, 15: 2135-6
Pythia (priestess of Delphi), 1: 114, 5: 597, 17: 2337

Q

Qabbalah (Jewish mystical system), see Cabala
al-Qadir al-Jilani, Abd (Sufi), 18: 2498
Qadmon, Adam, see Adam Kadmon
Qat (Melanesian spirit), 12: 1697
qibla (mosque), 16: 2188
qiyas (Islam), 10: 1369
Qonya (Anatolia), Rumi at, 16: 2249, 2250
Quakers (Society of Friends), 7: 946-7, 966
enthusiasm and, 6: 763 oaths and, 14: 1906
see also Fox, George quarantine, 7: 941
quartz, 10: 1412, 15: 2146, 17: 2315
Quedlinburg (Saxony), witches burnt at, 6: 785
Queen of Sheba, 6: 775, 15: 2146-7
Questing Beast (Arthurian legend), 20: 2799
Quetzalcoatl (Feathered Serpent, Plumed Serpent, the Morning Star; Mexican deity), 2: 181, 184, 186, 15: 2148, 17: 2337
quick beam, quicken (tree), see rowan quicksilver (metal), see mercury
Quietism, 15: 2148-9
meditation in, 12: 1680
Quimby, Phineas P., 5: 713, 13: 1861, 1861
Quin, Dr Frederick Foster Harvey, 9: 1235
Quinzani, Blessed Stefana, 18: 2485
Quirinus (Roman god), 12: 1643
Qumran community, 4: 549-53
quoits (standing stones; Cornwall), 4: 458

R

Ra (Egyptian god), see Re
Ra I and II (boats), 18: 2505 rabbi, 10: 1433
rabbit:
Easter and, 5: 700
hare and, 8: 1116
as North American Indian trickster, 19: 2663
see also Brer Rabbit
as witch's familiar, 5: 691
Rabiah (Islamic saint), 18: 2496
race myths, 20: 2792
New Templars and, 13: 1852
see also antisemitism
Radha, Krishna and, 9: 1216, 11: 1492
Radhakrishnan, Sir Sarvepalli, 9: 1219, 1221
radiesthesia (radionics), 5: 626, 15: 2150-3
radish, Easter and, 5: 699
Raggedstone (Malvern Hills), 17: 2348
Ragnarok (Doom of the Gods, Twilight of the Gods, end of the world; Scandinavian mythology), 6: 755, 15: 2153, 16: 2290
ragwort (St James's herb), 15: 2050
Rahner, Karl, on death, 10: 1316
rain, 15: 2153
Aztecs and, 2: 186
ferns and, 17: 2394
frog and, 7: 968
at funerals, 17: 2394
Jupiter and, 11: 1460
Maya god of, see Chac
peacock and, 14: 1998
woodpecker and, 19: 2618, 20: 2836
see also rainbow; rain-making; St Swithin's day rainbow, 15: 2153-5
in Australia, 2: 169
in Brazilian myth, 2: 274
as bridge, 16: 2290
Christ and, 15: 2154
in Dahomey, 4: 526
goddess of, see Iris Karens (Burma) and, 15: 2153
by Millais, 14: *1923
Noah and, 14: 1921
in Scandinavian mythology, 15: 2154, 16: 2290
serpent and, 17: 2337
Zulus, 9: 2333
unlucky to point at, 15: 2115
weather lore of, 15: 2115
Zulus and, 20: 2878
rain-making, 4: 455-6, 15: 2155
in Africa, 1: 59
Congo, 4: 452
birds and, 19: 2618
woodpecker, 20: 2836
see also weather magic raja yoga, 19: 2740, 20: 2847
ram (animal):
Amun and, 6: 730, 17: 2357
Celts and, 3: 377, 9: 1248
ram-headed serpent, 1: 105, 3: 377, 9: 1248
Heimdall and, 9: 1244
Jews and, 9: 1246, 1249, 17: 2357
Khnum and, 9: 1242, 17: 2357
Re and, 9: 1242, 17: 2357
sacrifice of, 17: 2357
see also Abraham, sacrifice of Isaac
Zeus and, 17: 2357
zodiac sign of, see Aries
Ram, N. Sri (Theosophist), 18: 2591, 2592
Rama (Indian god, incarnation of Vishnu), 9: 1209, 1215, 19: 2711, 20: 2744, 2746
see also Ramayana
Ramadan (Islamic fast), 6: 841, 10: 1370
instituted by Mohammed, 13: 1761
Ramakrishna Paramahamsa, 9: 1218, 15: 2155-6
on sainthood, 11: 1574
Ramakrishna Mission, 9: 1219, 19: 2709
Ramana Maharshi, 15: 2156
Ramayana (Indian epic), 20: 2746
giant demoness in, 8: 1015
Hanuman, fiery tail of, in, 9: 1210
Indra as peacock in, 14: 1998
Rameses II (pharaoh), 5: 677
Rangi (Maori sky god), 12: 1631
Ranken, Ruth, 15: 2092
Raphael (angel), east and, 5: 588
Rapp, Frederick (Harmony Society leader), 4: 442
Rapp, George (founder of Harmony Society), 4: 441-2, 17: 2329
Rappites, see Harmony Society
Rashu (Parsee deity), 14: 1985
Rasmussen, Anna (medium), 12: 1688, 1689
Rasputin, Grigori, 15: 2157-60

Ras Shamra, see Ugarit Rastafarians (Ras Tafari, messianic movement), 12: 1728, 16: 2167
cannabis used by, 5: 652
rat, banished by poets, 15: 2057
Rata (Polynesian hero), 15: 2072
Ratana (Maori church), 12: 1633
Raudive voices, 16: 2167
raven, 4: 496, 15: 2160
in alchemical symbolism, 15: 2027
in augury, 2: 162, 162, 4: 497
in Babylonian flood legend, 7: 913
Bran and, 2: 271
in creation myth, 14: 1954
crow and, 4: 496
Elijah fed by, 4: 497, 497
Mithras and, 13: 1753
Noah and, 4: 496, 7: 912
North American Indians and, 4: 496, 12: 1658-60, 14: 1954, 19: 2663
Odin and, 4: 496, 7: 995, 14: 1907
St Paul the Hermit and, 11: 1503
storms and, 4: 496
sun and, 13: 1753
at Tower of London, 4: 496
as trickster, 14: 1955
St Vincent and, 4: 496
Raven, F. E., 6: 798
Rawlings, Dr Maurice, and near death experiences, 13: 1833
Re (Ra; Egyptian sun god), 2: 257, 6: 731, 9: 1296, 15: 2160, 18: 2504
as Amun-Re, 6: 731, 9: 1296, 17: 2357 Atum and (Re-Atum, Atum-Re), 2: 257, 4: 471, 6: 731
eye of, 2: 258-9, 6: 733
as Harmakhis, 5: 644
Horus and (Re-Horakhti), 6: 731, 731
incense in worship of, 10: 1328
Isis and, 6: 733, 13: 1823
maat and, 11: 1448
pharaoh the incarnation of, 10: 1320
ram and, 9: 1242, 17: 2357
scarab (dung-beetle) and, 6: 731, 731, 16: 2294 secret name of, 13: 1823 Tefnut and, 6: 733 temple of, at Abu Gurob, 16: 2182
reason:
Coleridge on, 3: 429
gnosis not a product of, 8: 1028
magic and, 11: 1580
mysticism and, 3: 425
Nature seen as irrational, 11: 1576
Reculver (Kent), ghost at, 3: 303
red, 3: 431
birds and, 2: 231
robin, 16: 2222
the dead painted red, 3: 310, 314, 4: 510, 10: 1314
Easter eggs and, 5: 720
in healing, 4: 439
Holy Ghost, as symbol of, 7: 973
iron and, 4: 459
Mars and, 4: 459, 12: 1644
Philosophers' Stone and, 12: 1705
witches, as protection against, 6: 818
see also Border Redcaps
Red Book of Hergest (Welsh tales), 11: 1570
Red Dragon (grimoire), see Grand Grimoire
Red Indians, see North American Indians
Redon, Odilon, 16: 2168
Re'em, 19: 2689
Reeser, Mrs Mary, victim of spontaneous combustion, 17: 2447, 2448
reflexology, 16: 2169
Reformation (Christianity), 3: 411-2
see also Calvin, John; Luther, Martin; Protestantism
refrigerium, 16: 2169-70
Regardie, Israel, 16: 2170
on Enochian, 6: 760
on the Fool of the tarot, 18: 2569
Golden Dawn and, 8: 1045, 14: 2003
on triangle and magic circle, 16: 2219
regression, 16: 2171
see also reincarnation
Rehoboam (Israelite leader), 11: 1544
Reich, Wilhelm, 16: 2172
Reichenbach, Baron Karl von, 12: 1596, 15: 2150
Reilly, Margaret (stigmatic), 18: 2485
Reinburg, Wenceslaus von (alchemist), 1: 72
reincarnation (metempsychosis, transmigration of souls), 15: 2110, 16: 2171-6
Algonquin Indians and, 2: 277
Mrs Besant and, 16: 2174
in Buddhism (samsara), 2: 221, 3: 297-8, 9: 1211, 12: 1611, 16: 2172
Bodhisattvas and, 3: 301, 16: 2174
in China, 16: 2174
in Tibet, 11: 1496, 16: 2174, 2287
Christianity and, 16: 2172, 2173
in Greece, 12: 1609-10, 16: 2172
Empedocles, 16: 2174, 19: 2631
Orphism, 12: 1609, 19: 2850
Plato,10: 1313, 12: 1608, 16: 2174, 19: 2630
Pythagoras, 14: 1935, 15: 2145, 19: 2630
in Hinduism (samsara), 2: 221, 9: 1211, 11: 1467, 12: 1611, 16: 2173
as basis of caste system, 3: 353
hypnosis in recent research into, 16: 2176
in Jainism, 9: 1211, 10: 1387
Jews and, 16: 2172
recent research into, 15: 2110
reindeer:
horns of, at Abbots Bromley, 9: 1250
in Lapland, 11: 1506, 1507
Reisch, Gregor, on macrocosm and microcosm, 11: 1573
Reiyuka (Japanese religious sect), 10: 1399
relics, 16: 2177-9
of the Buddha, 15: 2043, 2044, 16: 2177
see also stupas
Christian, 5: 595, 15: 2043-4, 16: 2177-9
in Greece, 16: 2177
religion:
extra-sensory perception and, 6: 804
inspiration and, 15: 2059
life after death the basic concern of, 19: 2627 magic distinguished from, 5: 589, 6: 859, 15: 1593 man's place in the universe the basic concern of, 12: 1606 ritual in, 16: 2216
see also atonement; Buddhism; Christianity; communistic religious movements; comparative religion; conversion; cosmic order; cosmogony; deism; ecstasy; eschatology; faith; High Gods; Hinduism; immanent; immortality; incarnation; Islam; Jains; Judaism; messianic movements; millennarian religious movements; monotheism; mystery religions; mysticism; new religious movements; pantheism; pilgrimage; polytheism; prayer; prehistoric religion; priests; religious architecture; revelation; sacrifice; Shinto; sin; soul; symbolism; syncretism; Taoism; theism; theurgy; visions; Zoroastrianism religious architecture, 16: 2183-8 see also architecture, religious religious liberty/pluralism, in Christian history, 3: 412
Religious Science (philosophical group) 13: 1862
Remy, Nicolas, 7: 960, 961, 16: 2256
Renaissance, 16: 2189-95, Platonism in, 16: 2190
three and, 16: 2192-3, 19: 2614
Renata, Sister Maria, 16: 2195
Renatus, Sincerus, see Richter, Sigmund
repentance, atonement and, 2: 160
Rephaim (Biblical giants), 8: 1015
repression (psychology):
psychometry and, 15: 2123-4
ouija board and, 14: 1943
sexual repression and witchcraft, 9: 1273-5 Reshef (Canaanite god), 18: 2542
resin, 7: 892
in worship of Re, 10: 1328
resurrection (of the body):
in Christianity, 12: 1610
of Jesus, see Jesus, resurrection of St Paul on, 19: 2720
peacock as symbol of, 14: 2000
by Signorelli (detail), 17: 2387
in Egypt, 2: 195
see also Egypt, cult of the dead
Islam, 12: 1610
in Judaism, 10: 1437, 1453, 12: 1608
in Zoroastrianism, 12: 1612
Reuchlin, Johann (Christian Cabalist), 16: 2190
Reuss, Theodor:
Crowley and, 4: 500, 20: 2768
Illuminati and, 10: 1304
Papus and, 14: 1974, 20: 2768
Wagner and, 20: 2758
Reuter, O.S., 13: 1838, 1838
revelation, 16: 2196-2203
see also Revelation, book of Revelation, book of (Apocalypse of St John) 16: 2198-2203
angels with trumpets in, 19: 2679 authorship of, 16: 2201-3 date of, 16: 2203
hell in, 9: 1175
interpretations of, 16: 2199-201
Jesus in, 16: 2198
palm in, 14: 1964
river of the water of life in, 16: 2170
seven in, 6: 814, 815, 16: 2199, 2202
summary of, 16: 2198-9
twelve in, 19: 2681
war in heaven described in, 4: 572-3, 5: 631 woman as harlot in, 20: 2825-9 see also Great Beast
revenant, 16: 2203
as werewolf, 20: 2782
see also ghosts; vampire
revivalism, 9: 1227, 11: 1575
enthusiasm and, 6: 764
spirit possession and, 6: 764
see also Holy Rollers; McPherson, Aimee Semple; Moody, Dwight L.; Welsh Revival rhabdomancy (divination), 11: 1547
Rhea (Greek mythology), 4: 459, 484
rheumatism, willow and, 20: 2806
Rhiannon (Celtic goddess), 11: 1570
Rhine, J.B., 15: 2109
Rhine, Louisa E., 15: 2109
for the Rhines' work, see extra-sensory perception; psychical research, psychokinesis rhinoceros, at Mohenjo-daro, 10: 1335
rhubarb, in Zoroastrian creation myth, 1: 68 Ricci, Paul (Cabalist), 3: 324
rice, 16: 2203

Richard of St Victor (Christian mystic), 13: 1819, 1820
Richards, Dr Guyon, 15: 2151
Richelieu, Cardinal, Grandier and, 11: 1551 Richet, Prof. Charles:
clairvoyance and, 15: 2118
Palladino and, 14: 1962
table-tilting and, 14: 1944
Richter, Sigmund (Sincerus Renatus: Rosicrucian), 16: 2245
riddles, 16: 2204-6
in Zen Buddhism, see koan
Rider god, of Thrace, see Thracian Rider god
Ridvan Festival (Bahais), 2: 190
Riedemann, Peter, 9: 1269
Rigdon, Sidney, Mormonism and, 13: 1771
right (right-hand side), good associated with, 5: 588
Rijrasva (Indian legend), 20: 2819
Rila (Bulgaria), monastery of, 17: 2332
Second Coming depicted at, 3: 413
Rinck, Melchior (Anabaptist), 6: 762
ring, 16: 2206-9
healing and, 16: 2206
see also cramp-rings
of Odin, see Draupnir
salmon and, 16: 2281
stigmatization and, see mystic ring
see also fairy rings; Mephisto's Ring; ring dances; wedding ring Ringatu Christian Church (New Zealand), 12: 1632
ring dances (circle dances, wheel dances), 3: 351, 4: 531, 534
of modern witches, 13: 1758
see also Ghost Dance
Rip van Winkle, 17: 2401
Rissho Koseikai (Japanese religious sect), 10: 1399-400
Rita of Cascia, St, 18: 2482
Ritchie, Isobel (witch), 1: 47
rites of passage, 16: 2209-11
ritual, 16: 2212-6
of Freemasonry, 7: 951
masks and, 12: 1656
music and, 13: 1792
in religion, 16: 2216
see also initiation; rites of passage; ritual creation myths; ritual magic; sacraments ritual creation myths, distinguished from aetiological myths, 4: 460, 471 ritual magic, 16: 2217-2221
correspondences and, 4: 459
herbs in, 14: 2011
incantation in, 10: 1318, 18: 2220
pentagram in, 14: 2002, 16: 2220
perfume in, 16: 2220
robes in, 16: 2219
sacrifice in, 16: 2220
see also evocation; grimoires; magic circle; magic wand rivers, 16: 2221
Nilotes and, 13: 1870
nymphs of, see Naiads
sacred, in Hinduism, 15: 2043
see also Ganges
symbolism of, 11: 1504
as water of life (in Revelation), 16: 2170
see also Acheron; Nile; Sambatyon; Styx road, as symbol, see path symbolism Robert the Bruce (king of Scotland), 9: 1163, 17: 2403
robes, see costume
Robespierre, Maximilien, 7: 957
Robigus (Roman deity), 16: 2232
robin (bird), 16: 2222-3
blood and, 16: 2222
Crown of Thorns and, 18: 2514
fire and, 20: 2837
St Kentigern and, 16: 2222
red and, 16: 2222
weather lore of, 16: 2223
wren and, 16: 2222, 20: 2837
Robin Artisson (familiar of Dame Alice Kyteler), 6: 839
Robin Goodfellow (Robin Roundcap, Hobthrush), 16: 2223
herb Robert and, 9: 1185
Robin Hood, 9: 1202, 16: 2223-5, 20: 2803
May Day and, 8: 1082, 16: 2225
Robin Hood's Bay (Yorks), 16: 2225
Robin Roundcap, see Robin Goodfellow
roc (mythical bird), 2: 228, 20: 2807
rock crystal, 10: 1412-3, 15: 2146, 18: 2551
rocking stones (logans), of Cornwall, 4: 457-8
rock paintings, in Africa, 16: 2226-9
of the Bushmen, 3: 320, 9: 1268, 16: 2226
Rod of Brahma, 11: 1494
Rogers, John (preacher), 17: 2329
Rogie, Helen (witch), 1: 47
Roland (knight of Charlemagne), 9: 1203
sword of (Durandal), 18: 2526
Rolle, Richard (mystic), 3: 425
Pseudo-Dionysius and, 5: 583
Rollright Stones (Oxfordshire), 11: 1523
Roman Catholic Church, 3: 411
ecstasy in, 5: 710
Freemasonry and, 7: 951
French Revolution and, 7: 957
pilgrimage and, 15: 2043-4
see also Lourdes
predestination and, 15: 2080
relics and, 16: 2179
rosary and, 16: 2236
sacraments of, 16: 2257
vestments in, 4: 465-6
see also breviary; canonization
Romans, St Paul's epistle to, 14: 1994
Romany (Gypsy language), 8: 1102
Rome (ancient), 16: 2230-5
agriculture in religion of, 16: 2232-2234
altars in, 1: 92, 16: 2234
as Antichrist, 8: 1066
aphrodisiacs used in, 11: 1558
astrology not found in religion of, 16: 2235
calendar, civil, of, 16: 2233-4 Carthage and, 15: 2028, 2032
cosmetics in, 14: 2009
Cybele/Attis cult in, 4: 523, 5: 678, 13: 1780, 18: 2466
divination in:
augury, 2: 162, 5: 599, 601, 11: 1538, 14: 1922, 16: 2235
Cicero on, 5: 599, 11: 1538
haruspicy, 16: 2235
sortes (lots), 11: 1547, 16: 2235
dreams in, 5: 645
dualism in, 12: 1610
eclipses and, 5: 707
emperor of, see under kingship, below Etruscan influence on Roman religion, 16: 2232
fig tree and 6: 864
flute in, 16: 2230
food, spirits of, see Penates games and, 11: 1461-2, 14: 1989, 16: 2232
gods of, 16: 2230
domestic, 16: 2234
see also genius; Lares; Penates Etruscan gods identified with, 6: 781
see also Aesculapius; Ceres,; Cupid; Cybele above; Diana; Faunus; Fortuna; Isis below; Janus; Juno; Jupiter; Mars; Mercury; Minerva; Mithras; mystery religions below; Neptune; Pluto; Saturn; Venus; Vesta; Vulcan Greek influence on Roman religion, 16: 2232
Hercules and, 9: 1190
hills of, see Aventine Hill; Capitoline Hill; Palatine Hill incense used in, 10: 1328
Isis cult in, 5: 677-8, 10: 1365, 13: 1780-1, 1810, 14: 1940
Jews and, 3: 404, 16: 2266, 20: 2842, 2852-3
kingship in, 11: 1480
emperor, 11: 1480, 13: 1810-1, 16: 2234
laurel and, 11: 1511
magic not found in Roman religion, 16: 2235
magical papyri and, 12: 1591, 1593 mystery religions in, 13: 1807
see also Isis above; Mithras necromancy in, see theurgy
oak and, 14: 1902
oracles of, see oracles, Graeco-Roman
owl and, 14: 1948
Parthians and, 14: 1990
priests of, 15: 2089, 16: 2231, 2234
see also Arval Brothers; flamen; Salii; Vestal Virgins
rose and, 16: 2236
sacrifice and, 16: 2231, 2235
human, 16: 2235
sheep festival of (Parilia), 17: 2357
spring festivals of, 18: 2466
see also Lupercalia
sun cult in, 18: 2503
Mithras, 13: 1752, 1753
temples of, 16: 2183, 2185
threshold, doorway, in, 10: 1387, 19: 2615
time and, 16: 2285, 19: 2631-2
tree spirits, tree worship, in, 19: 2658, 2660-1
witchcraft in, 10: 1377
see also evocatio; founding of Rome; Lemures; manes; sibyls
Rome (medieval and modern):
Christian pilgrimage to, 15: 2042, 2043
Luther, 15: 2043-4
15th-cent. plan of, 7: 943
see also papacy; St Peter's Romulus and Remus, 6: 864, 7: 943, 19: 2684
by Rubens, 7: 942
Ronan, St, 3: 303
Rongo (Lono, Ono; Polynesian god), 15: 2070
Ronwe (demon), 6: 794
rook, 12: 1598
Roquepertuse, Celtic temple at, 8: 1141
rosary, 16: 2236
in Hinduism, 16: 2236, 19: 2710, 2712
rose, 16: 2237-9
cross and, see Rose Cross
as female symbol, 15: 2024-5
Graces and, 8: 1057
Rose, Antoine (witch), 7: 958, 14: 1961
Rose Cross, 16: 2238
Fludd and, 16: 2241
Rosicrucians and, 16: 2238
Rose of Lima, St, 16: 2270
rosemary (herb), 9: 1184, 1186, 15: 2050, 16: 2238
Rosenkreutz, Christian, 12: 1669, 16: 2241-2
Rosicrucians, 12: 1669, 16: 2240-7
alchemy and, 16: 2243-5
Freemasonry and, 16: 2245-6
Golden Dawn and, 8: 1043, 1044, 16: 2246
Stanislas de Guaita and, 2: 207, 14: 1974, 16: 2246
Bulwer Lytton and, 11: 1568
Paracelsus and, 16: 2242

Péladan and, 2: 207, 16: 2246
Rudolf Steiner and, 16: 2247
in the United States, 16: 2247
Rossetti, Dante Gabriel:
Damozel of the Sanct Grael, 14: 2011
How They Met Themselves, 5: 618
Rothman, Bernard (Anabaptist), 6: 762
Round Table, King Arthur's, 1: 121, 124, 125, 3: 331, 8: 1060
earliest surviving reference to, 1: 123
Galahad and, 7: 971-3
Tudors and, 1: 124
Roux, Georges, 12: 1724
rowan (mountain ash, quick beam, quicken, wicken, witch-wood), 8: 1134, 16: 2247
Roy, Ram Mohan, 9: 1218, 1221
Royal Oak Day, see Oak-Apple Day
ruby, 10: 1413, 1415
Rudra (Indian god), 10: 1335
Brahman and, 9: 1215
bull and, 3: 307, 17: 2366
crossroad offerings to, 4: 495
end of the world and, 6: 755
Shiva and, 9: 1215, 10: 1335, 17: 2366
Rufai dervishes (howling dervishes), 4: 530, 564
Rugievit (Slav god), 17: 2399
Rumi, Jalalu'd-Din, 16: 2248-50
Rumpelstiltskin, 16: 2204
rune occultism, 16: 2251
runes, 1: 90, 7: 993, 16: 2251
on Ruthwell cross, 4: 491
see also rune occultism
Rupprecht, Knight (Christmas gift-bringer), 3: 421
Rusalki (Slav water spirits), 17: 2400
Russell, Charles Taze, Jehovah's Witnesses and,10: 1401
Russell, G.W. ('A.E.'), 16: 2252-3
Rustem (Persian hero), 6: 789
Rutherford, Judge Joseph (leader of Jehovah's Witnesses), 10: 1401
Ruthwell cross, 4: 491

S

sabbath (Christian), 4: 547
see also Seventh Day Adventists; Sunday
sabbath (Jewish), 4: 547, 10: 1437
sabbath (witchcraft), 2: 233, 16: 2254-6
of Basque witches, 2: 201-3
French witches and, 7: 957-8, 958-9, 960, 960, 961
Italian witches and, 10: 1378, 1380
Sabians, 8: 1119
Sabom, Dr Michael, and near death experience, 13: 1833
Sacaea, see New Year, Babylonian festival
sacramentism, 6: 762
sacraments, 16: 2257-60
Christian, 16: 2257-60
incarnation of God in, 16: 2260 see also baptism, Christian; Extreme Unction; marriage; Mass; penance
in Egypt, 16: 2257
in the Eleusinian Mysteries, 16: 2257
Sacred Magic of Abra-Melin the Mage, (The Book of the), 16: 2260
magic squares in, 12: 1595, 16: 2260
sacrifice, 16: 2261-6
altars used for, 1: 92
ancestor worship and, 4: 515
as atonement, 2: 160
of bears, 1: 92, 2: 210, 19: 2638
blood and, 2: 248-9, 16: 2265
of bulls, 2: 196, 5: 678, 13: 1751, 1752, 1753
burning as method of, 1: 92, 3: 318, 7: 894
divination by smoke from, see capnomancy
incense and, 14: 2008
at Carthage, 15: 2029
of cats, 6: 839
Christianity and, 16: 2266
to chthonian powers, in Greece, 5: 688
divination by smoke from, see capnomancy
Etruscans and, 6: 781-2
in Greece, 5: 688, 15: 2094
of horses, 7: 966, 9: 1251, 10: 1310, 1335
Jewish, 16: 2266
see also atonement, Jewish day of
in Malta, 12: 1602
in Micronesia, 15: 2072
in Nigeria, 16: 2294
by the Nuer, 14: 1891
in the Old Testament, 16: 2265-6
see also Abraham, sacrifice of Isaac
in Polynesia, 15: 2071
of rams, 17: 2357, 2358
see also Abraham, sacrifice of Isaac
in ritual magic, 16: 2220
Rome and, 16: 2234-5
in Scandinavia, 16: 2266, 2290
in Sweden, 14: 1909, 16: 2265
in the Veda, 9: 1209,. 10: 1335, 16: 2264
see also human sacrifice
Sadducees, 3: 404, 405, 16: 2266
sadhu (Indian fakir), 6: 836, 836, 837, 11: 1574, 12: 1680, 16: 2266, 17: 2331
sado-masochism, 2: 910
Saehrimnir (boar; Scandinavian mythology), 2: 250
saga (Roman witch), 10: 1378
Sagbata (Dahomean spirit), 4: 526
sage (herb), 9: 1186
Sagittarius (the Archer; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 143, 16: 2267, 2267
Jupiter and, 11: 1462
placed in the sky by Zeus, 3: 379
Sahajiya sect (India), 11: 1492
Sahara desert, Touareg of, 19: 2645-7
Sai Baba (Indian saint), 16: 2267
Saicho (Japanese priest), see Dengyo Daishi sailors, seamen, superstitions and traditions of, 17: 2318-23, 2364-5, 18: 2509
St Andrew's cross, see X-shaped cross
St Anthony's cross, see T-shaped cross
St Augustine's Well (Cerne, Dorset), 18: 2473
St Brendan, 2: 281-2
St Brendan's Isle, 2: 282
St Cuthbert vestments (Durham), 14: 1925
Saint-Denis, Hervey de, on dreams, 5: 646
St Edward's crown, 4: 504
Sl Elmo's Fire (corposant), 17: 2323, 20: 2805
Castor and Pollux and, 19: 2685
Saintes-Maries-de-la-Mer (France), Black Madonna at, 2: 232
Gypsy pilgrimage to, 8: 1100, 1101, 1102
St-Germain, Comte de, 16: 2268-9
St Helen's Well (Rushton Spencer, Staffs), 18: 2472
St James's herb, see ragwort
St John in Jerusalem, Order of the Hospital of, 9: 1257
St John's Eve/Day, bonfires and, 16: 2269, 19: 2729, 20: 2813-4
see also Midsummer
St John's herb, see mugwort
St John's wort (Devil's Bane), 9: 1186, 11: 1557, 13: 1743, 16: 2269
St Mark's Eve, divinatory rite on, 1: 129
Saint-Martin, Louis-Claude de, Martinists and, 12: 1646, 1647
St Médard (Parisian cemetery), miraculous cures at, 4: 454
St Michael's Mount (Cornwall), giant of, 10: 1382
St Nun's spring (Pelynt, Cornwall), 18: 2473
St Osyth (Essex), witches and, 5: 690, 691, 691, 694, 6: 796
St Peter's (Rome), 16: 2190
saints, 16: 2270-9
Buddhist, 3: 298
Christian, 16: 2270-9
animals and, 16: 2273-9
Breton, 2: 285
healing powers of, 5: 594, 6: 834
miracles and, 16: 2270
Quietist tendencies of many, 15: 2148
relics of, 16: 2117
springs and wells and, 7: 946, 18: 2473
see also canonization; hagiography
also the names of individual saints
Indian, see India, saints and holy men
Islamic, 10: 1373
Ramakrishna on the madness of, 11: 1574
St Saviour (Constantinople), dome of, 16: 2184
St Stephen's Day, see Boxing Day
St Swithin's Day, 17: 2395
Sakkara (Egypt), 10: 1304, 1304 mummified baboons at, 1: 104-5
see also Pyramid Texts
Saklon (Saklas; demiurge), 12: 1621
Sakti (Hinduism), see Shakti Sakyamuni, see Buddha
salamander (mythical creature), 6: 743, 7: 897
Salazar y Frias, Alonzo de, on Basque witchcraft, 2: 203
Salem witches, 6: 838, 9: 1277, 1308, 16: 2280-1
Salii (Salians; Roman priests), 16: 2234
Mars and, 12: 1642
Saturn and, 16: 2285
Salisbury cathedral, triple head in, 8: 1140
Sallust, 16: 2190
Salmacis (naiad), Hermaphroditos and, 9: 1194
Salmon, 16: 2281
Finn (Irish hero) and, 7: 890, 16: 2281
Inuit spirit of, 10: 1353
Salome, head of John the Baptist and (Moreau), 8: 1142
salt, 16: 2282
in alchemy and magic, 12: 1704-5, 16: 2282
death and, 16: 2282
First Foot and, 16: 2282
as protection, 10: 1418, 16: 2282
Salter, Mrs W.H., see Verrall, Helen
Salt Lake City (Utah), Mormon headquarters at, 13: 1770, 1772
Salus (Roman deity), 16: 2230, 2231
salvation (Christianity), 15: 2080
see also soteriology
Salvation Army, 9: 1227
salvation-history, see Heilsgeschichte
samadhi (yoga), 2: 279, 12: 1677, 19: 2715, 2652, 20: 2850
Samain (Samhain; Celtic festival), 1: 87, 3: 374, 375
Samaria, Samaritans, 11: 1544-5
Samhain (Celtic festival), see Samain
Samhitas (Hindu sacred texts), 2: 177, 9: 1209
Samkyha (Hinduism), 20: 2846
Sammonicus, Quintus Serenus (Roman doctor), 1: 48
Samoa (Polynesia), 15: 2070
Samos (Greece), Hera and, 9: 1179
Sampson, Agnes (witch), 6: 839, 14: 1886-7
samsara, see reincarnation (in Buddhism and in Hinduism)

Samskaras (Hinduism), 19: 2714
Samson (Old Testament), riddle asked by, 13: 1791, 16: 2204
Samsun, St, 2: 285
Samurai (Japan), 9: 1282, 10: 1394
sanbenito (heretics' garment), 9: 1192
Sandan (Cappadocian god), 7: 894
Sanders, Alex, modern witchcraft and, 13: 1757, 1758
sand garden, Japanese, 20: 2855
sand-paintings, Navaho, 13: 1825, 1826, 1827, 1828
Sangha (community; Buddhism), 3: 298
Sango (Nigerian god), his piper and dog, 9: 1266
Sankara (Indian philosopher), 9: 1212
Sankey, Ira David, 14: 2005
Sannyasin (Hinduism), 9: 1218, 19: 2715
Santa Claus (St Nicholas), 3: 421
Santorini, Atlantis and, 2: 158-9, 159
al-Sanusi, Mohammed Ali (Mahdi), 12: 1601-2 Saora tribe (India), 15: 2085-6
sapphire 10: 1413, 1414, 1415
Sara la Kali, 2: 226, 8: 1100, 1101, 1102
Sarapis (Graeco-Egyptian god), see Serapis
Sarasvati (Indian goddess), 14: 2000
Sarasvati (river), 7: 979
Sarasvati, Swami Dayananda, 12: 1600
sarcophagi, early Christian, 9: 1292
sardana (Spanish dance), 3: 351, 4: 531
sardonyx, 18: 2551
Sargon, King (of Akkad), 10: 1363, 11: 1478, 15: 2102
Sargon II (king of Assyria), 11: 1544-5
Sarn Cynfelin (supposed site of submerged town), 7: 915
Saros cycle (of eclipses), 5: 708
Sassanians (Persian dynasty), 14: 1912
Parthians overthrown by, 14: 1990
Zoroastrianism and, 20: 2872, 2876, 2880
Satan, 4: 568, 569-70
Job and, 10: 1424
see also Devil; Satanism
Satanism, 16: 2283-5
black mass and, 2: 235
Gnosticism and, 16: 2884
witches and, 16: 2256, 2285
see also Luciferans; pact, Satanic sati, see suttee
satori (Zen Buddhism), 13: 1814, 20: 2854
Saturday, 4: 546
Saturday Oilmen, see Bene Israel
Saturn (planet), 16: 2286
in astrology, 1: 143, 16: 2286
black and, 4: 459
jewels associated with, 10: 1414-5
lead and, 11: 1513
melancholy and, 16: 2194, 2286
Saturn (Roman god), 16: 2285-6
devouring his son (Goya), 7: 928
Ops and, 16: 2231-2
Saturnalia (Roman festival), 5: 657, 16: 2285, 20: 2809
Christmas and, 3: 418, 5: 636
evergreens and, 9: 1229
satyricon (plant), as aphrodisiac, 11: 1557
satyrs (Greek mythology), 5: 637, 14: 1900, 16: 2287-8
see also Marsyas; Silenus
Saul, King, 14: 1913, 1914
Savitri (Indian sun god), 18: 2504
Savonarola, Girolamo, 17: 2334
Sawyer, Elizabeth (witch), 15: 2082
Saxo Grammaticus, 2: 192, 16: 2289
al-Sayyid, Mohammed Ahmad (Mahdi), 12: 1602 Scales, the (zodiac sign, in astrology), see Libra scallop-shell, see cockle-shell
scalping, 16: 2288
Scandinavia, Scandinavian (Norse, Nordic) mythology, 16: 2289-93
ash tree in, see Yggdrasill
boar in, 2: 2250, 5: 674, 7: 965
Christian influence on, 6: 755
cow in, see Audumulla
creation myths of, 8: 1017, 11: 1526, 16: 2290
dwarfs in, 5: 672
elder tree in, 6: 737
end of the world in, see Ragnarok Germanic mythology related to, 7: 993 giants in, see giants
gods of, 16: 2289
fertility gods, see Vanir see also Balder; Heimdall; Hel; Hoenir; Loki; Mimir; Norns; Odin; Thor; Tyr hammer in, 8: 1111
of Thor, see Mjolnir heroes of, see Volsungs
horns and, 9: 1244
paradise of, see Valhalla rainbow bridge in, see Bifrost rowan in, 16: 2247
sacrifice in, 16: 2266, 2290
Sweden, 14: 1909, 16: 2265
sun and, 18: 2502-3
Wagner and, 20: 2758
wolf in:
Odin and 7: 995, 14: 1907
sun and, 18: 2503
see also Fenris wolf
World Tree in, see Yggdrasill
see also Edda
scapegoat, 2: 160, 16: 2266, 16: 2293-4
Azazel and, 8: 1033, 16: 2293
figs and, 6: 864, 16: 2294
by Holman Hunt, 2: 160
in Peru, 10: 1325
witches, etc., described as, 9: 1272
see also sin eater
scarab (dung-beetle), 5: 671, 10: 1346, 16: 2294-5
Christ and, 10: 1346
Re and, 6: 731, 731, 16: 2294
weighing of the heart and, 16: 2295 scars on the body, deliberately induced, see cicatrization Sceptics (Greek philosophers), 15: 2079
schimmel (Alpine hobby-horse), 9: 1226
schizophrenia, witchcraft and, 14: 1917
Schliemann, Heinrich, 8: 1084, 19: 2676
Schmidt, Dr Helmut (ESP researcher), 15: 2110, 2119, 2120
Schneider brothers (Willi and Rudi), 5: 714, 15: 2108, 16: 2295-6
Rudi, 12: 1689
Schulte-Strathaus, Ernst (astrologer), Nazism and, 13: 1831
science:
Christianity and, 3: 412
Teilhard de Chardin on, 18: 2587-8
Goethe and, 8: 1036
magic and, 11: 1578-9
science fiction and fantasy, 16: 2297-2304
in films, 8: 872, 875, 877
Sciron (Greek mythology), 19: 2600
Sclater, P.L., Lemuria named by, 11: 1514
Scone, Stone of, 18: 2490
Scorpio (the Scorpion; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 143, 17: 2311 scorpion, 9: 1182, 17: 2311
zodiac sign, see Scorpio
Scot, Reginald (writer on witchcraft), 5: 690, 719, 6: 787
on flying ointment, 7: 918
on poisoning, 15: 2062
on shape-shifting, 20: 2781
Scottish and Border ballads, 17: 2312-4
Scrutten, Mary (witch), 10: 1317
scrying (mirror and crystal-gazing), 13: 1749, 17: 2315-7
John Dee and, 4: 560, 13: 1750, 17: 2315
see also Dixon, Jeane Scylla and Charybdis, 17: 2317
scythe, 17: 2317
Ankou and, 2: 284, 285
Father Time and, 4: 559
in New Year symbolism, 13: 1862
as protection against witches, 2: 287
Scythians:
burial among, 4: 512, 10: 313
shape-shifting by, 17: 2356
sea, ocean, 17: 2318-23
chaos and, 2: 189, 8: 1066
end of the world and, 16: 2292
Greek god of, see Poseidon
human sacrifice and, 17: 2319
Inuit spirits of, 10: 1350, 1351-2
see also Sedna
in Mesopotamian mythology, see Nammu; Tiamat
moon and, 17: 2318
Neptune and, 13: 1843
nymphs of, see Nereids; Oceanides Venice, Doge of, married to, 17: 2323
see also Atlantic Ocean; Davy Jones; dolphin; fish; lost lands; mermaids and mermen; seal; sea-monsters; shells; ships; whale Seabrook, William, 2: 151
seal (animal), 17: 2324-5
seamen, see sailors sea monk, 7: 908 sea-monsters, 2: 181, 17: 2319, 20: 2776
Baal and, 18: 2540
Morbidus and, 17: 2338-9
Nereids with, 16: 2232-3
see also Andromeda; Hesione; kraken; sea monk seance, 12: 1682
see also Mediums
seasons:
astrology and, 20: 2743
cyclical character of, 6: 856
seasonal festivals as rites of passage, 16: 2211
vegetation spirits and, 19: 2719
see also harvest; Midsummer; New Year; spring; winter Sebastian (king of Portugal), Antonio Conselheiro and, 4: 453
Sebastian, St, 16: 2272
Sebek (Egyptian crocodile god), 1: 104, 6: 732
Sebottendorff, Baron Rudolph von, 7: 992, 13: 1829
Second Coming, 6: 759, 17: 2326-30, 20: 2770
Christadelphians and, 17: 2329
Jehovah's Witnesses and, 10: 1401, 17: 2329-30
Plymouth Brethren and, 6: 797 depicted at Rila monastery (Bulgaria), 3: 413
Seventh Day Adventists and, 17: 2329
Shakers and, 17: 2350
second sight, 17: 2330
Secretain, Françoise (witch), 7: 961 Secret Chiefs, 16: 2241-2
see also Mahatmas; Masters
Secret Doctrine, The (Blavatsky), 2: 247 Secret of Secrets, The (grimoire), see True Black Magic secret societies:
African, 4: 452

see also Leopard Societies; Mau Mau
Chinese, 3: 397, 399, 18: 2565, 19: 2640
Indian, see Thugs
Secular Games (Rome), 16: 2231
Sedna (Arnquagssaq, Nerrivik, Nuliajuk; Inuit sea spirit), 10: 1351, 1355, 17: 2324
seer, in the Old Testament, prophet distinguished from, 16: 2197
Sefardim (Jews), 10: 1432
Sefer Yetsirah (Book of Creation; Jewish mystical text), 1: 91, 3: 323, 8: 1047-8
sefiroth (emanations, Cabala) 3: 323
in magic, correspondences and, 4: 459
forces and, 7: 936-40
meditation on, 12: 1678
Tarot and, 14: 1992-3
see also merkabah; throne mysticism Seicho no le (Japanese religious sect), 10: 1398
seidr (Scandinavian divination rite), 7: 966 Seker (Socharis; Egyptian god), 2: 260
Sekhmet (Egyptian goddess), 11: 1536, 1549
Selene (Greek moon goddess), 13: 1764, 1770, 17: 2330
Seleucid dynasty (Persia), overthrown by Parthians, 14: 1990
self, selfhood, 13: 1872
Buddhism and, 12: 1611
see also Nirvana
in Gnosticism, 12: 1613
Hinduism and, see Atman; Brahman magic as search for, 11: 1583-4 mystical experience and, 13: 1814, 1872
self-denial, 17: 2331-4
see also asceticism
self-sacrifice, pelican as symbol of, 14: 2002
Selivanov, Kondrati, 13: 1797, 17: 2384, 2384
Semele (mother of Dionysus), 5: 583, 13: 1791
Senchan (Irish poet), 15: 2057
Serafino of Dio, 18: 2484
seraph, 17: 2335
in the Old Testament, 1: 101
Serapis (Graeco-Egyptian god), 8: 1152, 1152, 10: 1365, 1366, 14: 1940, 17: 2335-6, 19: 2629, serpent, snake, 1: 105, 17: 2336-40, 2408
Adam and Eve and, 6: 791-93
by Goes, 4: 474
tarragon and, 4: 1186
in Africa,1: 55
Congolese myth, 4: 451
in Ethiopia, 6: 776
Apollo and, 1: 114, 17: 2337
Asclepios and, 8: 1079-80, 1150, 17: 2337
ash tree and, 1: 126
bite of, cures for:
herbal, 9: 1182, 1184
peacock, 14: 1998
Brazilian sexual myth of, 2: 273
caduceus and, 2: 279-80, 3: 328
chthonian deities, spirits, and, 5: 688, 17: 2336, 2340
in Crete, 4: 482, 483, 8: 1079
dragon and, 5: 630
eagle and, 5: 682
earth and sky in myths of, 17: 2337
feathered or plumed, 17: 2337
see also Quetzalcoatl
fennel and, 9: 1185
Gilgamesh and, 6: 792, 8: 1019
in healing, 17: 2340
Hermes and, 17: 2337
see also caduceus
heroes and, 17: 2337, 2338-9
Hesperides and, 9: 1189
in Hindu myth, see Ananta; Nagas; Shesha; Visvarupa imaginary, seen by alcoholics, etc., 13: 1801
at Last Judgement, the damned tormented by, 17: 2340
lizard and, 11: 1540
in magic, 17: 2338-40
in Malta, 12: 1604
North American Indians and, 17: 2338
in Parsifal's vision, 14: 1988
peacock and, 14: 1998
rainbow and, 17: 2337
Dahomey, 4: 526
Zulus, 15: 2153
ram-headed Celtic, 1: 105, 3: 377, 7: 1248
swallowing its tail, see ourobouros Tree of Life and, 9: 1198
Vishnu asleep on, 17: 2402
world serpent, cosmic snake, 17: 2337
in Scandinavian mythology, see Midgard Serpent
in Hinduism, see Shesha
see also chimaera; Hydra; Kundalini; mil-preve; ophitism; snake-handling cults; Typhon Sertorius (Roman general), fawn and, 18: 2476
Servetus, Michael (Christian heretic), 9: 1193
Sesha (cosmic serpent), see Shesha
Seth (Set: Egyptian god), 4: 557, 6: 732, 17: 2341
birth of, in Heliopolitan myth, 4: 472
dragon and, 5: 630
Great Bear and, 17: 2341
Horus and, 6: 732, 9: 1256, 14: 1939, 17: 2341
in the magical papyri, 17: 2341
Nephthys and, 14: 1938, 17: 2341
Osiris and, 6: 732, 14: 1938, 1939, 17: 2341
Typhon identified with, 6: 732, 17: 2337, 2341
Upper Egypt and, 17: 2341
Sethlans (Etruscan god), Vulcan identified with, 6: 781
seven, 1: 91, 14: 1894, 16: 2201
in angelology, 1: 102
in Revelation, 6: 814, 815, 16: 2199, 2202
calendar and, 13: 1764-5
Ismailis and, 5: 666
mountains and, 13: 1783
names adding to, 14: 1894
in Pythagoreanism, 15: 2146
in Scottish and Border ballads, 17: 2312
seven halcyon days, 8: 1111
seven planes of existence (Spiritualism), 17: 2441
Seven Saints of Brittany, 2: 285
Tower of Babel and, 19: 2649
twelve and, 19: 2681
see also Seven Deadly Sins; Seven Sleepers of Ephesus; Seven Wonders of the World Seven Deadly Sins:
by Bosch, 2: 268-9, 267, 269
devils associated with, 6: 794
13th cent. illustrations of, 17: 2376-7
Seven Sleepers of Ephesus, 17: 2403
Seventh Day Adventists, 17: 2329
Seven Wonders of the World:
Zeus, statue of, 9: 1290, 20: 2866
see also pyramids, Egyptian
sex, sexuality, 2: 252, 17: 2342-8
Adam and Eve and, 7: 903, 904, 17: 2344-5
demons, sexual, see incubus and succubus
fertility and, 6: 860, 17: 2343
phallic symbolism and, 6: 860, 15: 2024, 2026
fifteen and, 6: 863
fish and, 7: 909
flagellation and, 7: 910
Freud on, 7: 962, 963
horns and, 9: 1241
Indian erotic temple carvings, 6: 857, 9: 1219
initiation and, 10: 1343
Krishna and, 9: 1216
in magic, 2: 252, 11: 1581, 14: 1925, 17: 2345
Crowley, 4: 500, 8: 1045, 15: 2078, 17: 2345-6
mediumship and, 12: 1688
mystical experience and, 5: 710, 13: 1816, 1818, 17: 2344
opposites, reconciliation of, in, 14: 1924, 17: 2343
religious belief implanted or confirmed by, 17: 2343
in Revelation, 20: 2825-9
self-denial and, 17: 2332
serpent and, 17: 2409
in Brazil, 2: 273
snake-handling cults, 17: 2412
Shiva/Shakti and, 9: 1216, 18: 2556, 2559
sinlessness and, religious beliefs concerning, 4: 445, 6: 763
spring and, 18: 2466
in Tantrism, 9: 1216, 18: 2556, 2558, 2560
vampirism and, 19: 2610
Voodoo and, 20: 2754
witchcraft and, 9: 1274
impotence caused by witches, 9: 1273, 15: 2112
modern, 13: 1755-8
see also sabbath
yoga and, 20: 2850
see also aphrodisiac; celibacy; hermaphrodite; homosexuality; incest; love magic; marriage; orgy; phallic symbolism; prostitution
Seymour, Alice (founder of the Panacea Society), 17: 2428
Shadhili, Abu 'l-Hasan ash- (Sufi), 18: 2498
shadow, 17: 2348
builders' rites and, 3: 303, 17: 2348
in China, at funerals, 17: 2348
divination by, 17: 2348
Finn and, 17: 2348
in Haiti, 20: 2752
soul and, 5: 615, 17: 2418
Shafii school (Islam), 10: 1369
Shaka (Chaka; Zulu chief), 20: 2876, 2887-8
Shakers (religious sect), 4: 441, 443, 17: 2349-50
Spiritualism and, 6: 764, 17: 2349-50
Shakespeare, William, epitaph of, 4: 521, 521
Shakti (Sakti; Hinduism), 9: 1216, 11: 1464, 17: 2367
Kundalini and, 11: 1495
in Tantrism, 9: 1216, 18: 2556, 2559
Shaktism, see Tantrism
Shakyamuni, see Sakyamuni
Shalako (Zulu festival), 15: 2134
shaman, 15: 2086, 17: 2350-3
birch tree and, 17: 2352
in Borneo, 2: 265
in Brazil, 2: 275
in central America, 13: 1738
costume of, 4: 464, 7: 886
death and resurrection of, 17: 2352
dismemberment of, 5: 652, 17: 2351
drugs and, 5: 650, 652
drum and, 5: 663, 7: 886, 887, 10: 1354, 11: 1507, 1508, 17: 2352, 2352
ecstasy and, 15: 2086, 17: 2352-8
in Finland, 7: 886, 887
fir tree and, 7: 892
healing and, 17: 2353
in India, 17: 2354

initiation of, 17: 2350
Inuit, 10: 1354, 1354, 1355, 1355, 13: 1660, 17: 2352
in Lapland, 5: 663, 11: 1507, 1508, 17: 2352
light, illumination, and, 11: 1531
madness and, 11: 1573, 17: 1351
North American Indian, 5: 596
Algonquin, 1: 82-4, 12: 1625-6
Pacific North-West, 14: 1957-8
Siberian, 5: 596, 663, 17: 2350
soul and, 17: 2353
world tree and, 17: 2351, 2352
see also medicine-man; priest
Shamash (Utu; Mesopotamian sun god), 12: 1715, 12: 1721
Hammurabi and, 16: 2197
Sin the father of, 8: 1119
sun disc symbol of, 9: 1292, 12: 1721
Shameer (alchemical symbol), 10: 1416
Shams (Ethiopian sun god), see Dhat Himyam shape-shifting, lycanthropy, metamorphosis, 11: 1566, 17: 2354-6
by the Antaei of Arcadia, 17: 2355-6
bear and, 14: 1909-10, 17: 2357-8
berserkers and, 14: 1909-10, 20: 2780
Canon Episcopi condemns belief in, 17: 2356 cats and, 3: 356, 17: 2356
Celts and, 3: 377
Circe and, 3: 422, 17: 2355
hyena and, 9: 1271
in New Guinea, 17: 2356
by Odin, 17: 2354, 2356
by Proteus, 17: 2354
stag and, 18: 2475-7
stork and, 18: 2491
swan and, 18: 2514-6
by vampires, 19: 2704
in Volsunga Saga, 17: 2356
by witches, 3: 356, 20: 2781, 2821
wolf and, 17: 2356, 2821
see also werewolf
by Zeus, 17: 2354
see also Vishnu, incarnations of Sharruna (Hurrian god), 9: 1222
Shaw, George Bernard, Mrs Besant and, 2: 218 Sheba, Queen of, see Queen of Sheba
sheep, 17: 2357-8
goats and (Christian metaphor), 8: 1033
see also Golden Fleece; Good Shepherd; lamb; ram
Shehenshais (Parsee sect), 14: 1984
Sheikh of the Sheikhs, see Junayd of Baghdad Sheila-na-gig, 15: 2026
in the Cabala, 3: 325
Sheldon, William, 15: 2038
Sheldrake, Rupert, and morphic resonance, 13: 1774 Shelley, Mary, Frankenstein written by, 9: 1236 shells, 17: 2323
see also cockle-shell; cowrie shell; wampum
Shellycoat (Scottish fairy), 6: 829
Shema (Judaism), 10: 1433
Shembe, John Galilee, 12: 1727
Shem Hameforash (Ineffable Name of God), 13: 1824
Sheol (Old Testament land of the dead), 9: 1170, 10: 1313, 11: 1453
shepherd, in religious symbolism, see Good Shepherd Shepherd of Hermas (Christian text), 13: 1853
Sherwood Forest, Robin Hood and, 16: 2224-5
Shesha (cosmic serpent; Hinduism), 17: 2337, 20: 2746
Shetland Isles:
diver in weather lore of, 5: 596-7
fire festival of, see Up-helly-aa
harvest and, 8: 1121, 1124,
Shia, Shiites (Islam), 10: 1373-4, 17: 2358
al-Husayn and, 13: 1761
Mahdi and, 12: 1601
Mohammed, Shiite view of, 13: 1761
Moharram and, 13: 1761
see also Ismailis
shiatsu, 17: 2358
Shickshack Day, see Oak-Apple Day
Shiites (Islam), see Shia
Shilluk (Nilotic people), 11: 1474, 13: 1869
Shimegi (Hurrian sun god),9: 1222
Shingon (Japanese Buddhist sect), 10: 1391
Shinshu (Japanese Buddhist sect), 10: 1394
Shinto, 17: 2358-62
Buddhism and, 10: 1390, 1391, 1394, 1397, 17: 2362
ship, 17: 2363-5
of Freyr (Skipbladnir), 7: 965
ghost ships, 17: 2321, 2323
see also St Elmo's Fire; ship-burial; Ship of Fools ship-burial, 17: 2365
at Sutton Hoo, 2: 214
of Viking Age, 7: 965, 17: 2364
Ship of Fools, 17: 2362
by Oscar Laske, 17: 2363
Shirdi (India), Sai Baba at, 16: 2267
Shiva (Siva; Hindu god), 9: 1212, 1215, 1216, 1217, 10: 1335, 1336, 17: 2366-7, 20: 2746
as Bhairava, 19: 2561, 2628
bisexuality of, 9: 1195, 17: 2367
bull and, 17: 2366, 2367
consort of, various names of, 9: 1216, 17: 2367
see also Kali; Parvati; Shakti
as creator of the universe, 17: 2367
dance and, 17: 2367
as destroyer, 2: 271, 4: 558, 17: 2367, 19: 2628, 20: 2746
Ganges and, 7: 979
heaven of, 14: 1980
Kundalini and, 2: 279, 11: 1494, 1495
madness and, 11: 1574, 17: 2367
mountain embodiment of, see Arunachala Pasupati and, 10: 1335, 1336
phallic symbolism and, 6: 858, 860, 11: 1534, 17: 2366-7
Rudra and, 9: 1215, 10: 1335, 17: 2366
shofar (ram's horn), 9: 1246, 1249
shooting stars, see meteors
Shotoku (Japanese ruler), 10: 1391
Shou-Lao (Chinese god), 14: 1983
Shovel, Sir Cloudesley, 4: 458
shrew, folklore concerning, 1: 126
Shroud, Holy, of Turin, 19: 2680
Shrove Tuesday, 7: 976, 18: 2467
shrunken heads (of Jivaro Indians), 8: 1139, 1141
Shu (Egyptian sun god), 4: 472
Si (Peruvian moon god), 10: 1324
Siberia, shamanism in, 5: 663, 17: 2350
Sibylline books, 17: 2369
sibyls, 5: 597, 17: 2368-9
Sicily:
catacombs of, 3: 312
cave art in, 3: 369
Aleister Crowley in, see Cefalu
Easter procession in, 12: 1648
sickle:
hammer and, Communist symbol of, 8: 1111
Uranus castrated with, 19: 2699
sickness, see disease
siddhis (yoga), 20: 2851
Sidgwick, Eleanor, 15: 2107, 2108
Sidgwick, Prof. Henry, 15: 2107
cross-correspondences and, 4: 493
Society for Psychical Research and, 13: 1801, 14: 1962, 15: 2106
Sidon (Phoenician city), 14: 1963, 15: 2028, 2031
Siegfried (Teutonic hero), 13: 1865
Fafnir killed by, 5: 633
sword of (Balmung), 18: 2522
Sif (wife of Thor), 5: 674, 19: 2608
Sigmund (Scandinavian hero), 9: 1202
Signatures, Doctrine of (magical principle), see Law of Correspondences
sign of the cross (magical protection), 4: 492
Sigurd (Scandinavian hero), 9: 1202
Sikhs, 17: 2369-71
Sila (Silap Inua; Inuit god), 10: 1351
Silenus, 13: 1811, 16: 2287, 17: 2371
Dionysus and, 13: 1808-9, 17: 2371
silver (metal), 17: 2371
alchemy and, 17: 2371
moon and, 4: 459, 8: 1116, 17: 2371
white and, 4: 459, 17: 2371
see also silver bullet
silver bullet, 17: 2371
vampire and, 19: 2706
werewolf and, 20: 2783
witches and, 8: 1116, 11: 1513, 14: 1951
Silver Pavilion (Kyoto), 16: 2188
Simeon Stylites, St, 11: 1575, 17: 2372
dragon cured by, 16: 2279
Simmons, Ruth (Bridie Murphy case), 16: 2176
Simon, Father, 20: 2747
Simon, St (Simon the Zealot), 20: 2852, 2853
Simon Magus, 17: 2372-4
Faust and, 17: 2374
Gnosticism and, 8: 1029, 17: 2372
homunculus and, 9: 1236
simony, 17: 2372
simurgh (Persian mythical bird), 2: 228
sin, 17: 2374-7
Buddhism and, 17: 2376
Christianity and, 6: 790, 791, 17: 2374
capital (mortal) and venial sins distinguished, 15: 2136, 17: 2375 confession of sin, 17: 2375
see also Fall of Man; original sin; Seven Deadly Sins; sin eater confession of, 17: 2375-6
evil and, 6: 790, 17: 2374
freedom from, excesses resulting from belief in the attainment of, 6: 763, 9: 1227
Islam and, 17: 2374
karma and, 17: 2376
see also judgement of the dead; penance
Sin (Ilmuqah; Ethiopian moon god), 6: 774
Sin (Nannar; Mesopotamian mood god), 8: 1119, 12: 1715, 17: 2363
Sinai, Mount, 17: 2378
St Catherine of Alexandria and, 16: 2272
by El Greco, 11: 1502
Israelites and, 6: 739, 11: 1526, 13: 1783, 16: 2197, 20: 2840
Sinbad, 17: 2378
Old Man of the Sea and, 17: 2322, 2378
Sindri (dwarf), 5: 674
sin eater, 17: 2378
Singh, Gobind (Sikh leader), 17: 2371
singing in the Spirit (Pentecostalism), 17: 2434
Sinhalese Buddhism, 3: 300, 379, 15: 2043, 2044, 2044, 17: 2379-81
Sinis (Greek mythology), 19: 2600

Sion, see Zion
Sioux Indians, 8: 1069, 1070
Ghost Dance and, 7: 1000, 14: 2016
High God of, 9: 1206
al-Sirat (bridge over hell; Islam), 10: 1349, 1349
Sirens (Greek mythology), 17: 2382-3
Argonauts saved from, by Orpheus, 14: 1934, 17: 2382
bird form of, 17: 2382, 2382, 2383 mermaid form of, 17: 2383
Sirgood, John (Cokeler), 3: 427
Sirius (the dog star), in Egypt (Sothis), 5: 607, 10: 1364
Sitting Bull (North American Indian leader), 7: 1000
Siva (Hindu god), see Shiva
Sivananda, 17: 2383-4
six, 14: 1894
balance and, 14: 1894
Great Beast, 8: 1066, 12: 1593-4
marriage and, 14: 1894
names adding to, 14: 1894
in Pythagoreanism, 15: 2146
see also hexagram
skeleton:
death personified as, 4: 554
in dance of death, 4: 538, 538-9
as fourth horseman of the Apocalypse, 6: 756-7
in Tarot cards, see Death (Tarot card) of St Osyth witch, 5: 691, 694 in Signorelli's Resurrection of the Body (detail), 17: 2387
see also skull
Skelton, John (poet), on the pelican, 14: 2002
Skipbladnir (ship of Freyr), 7: 965
Skofnung (sword), 18: 2526
Skoptsy (religious sect), 13: 1797, 17: 2331, 2384
Skrymir (giant; Scandinavian mythology), 8: 1017, 19: 2610
skull, 17: 2385-7
Aztec, 2: 183
burial and:
Inuit, at Ipiutak, 5: 596
prehistoric, 3: 370, 4: 511, 17: 2385
separate from body, 8: 1131
crossbones and, 17: 2385-6
Crucifixion, skull depicted in, 7: 904
as drinking cup, 17: 2385
Great Plains Indians and, 8: 1072
healing and, 17: 2385, 2386
Mexican, modern, 1: 87, 7: 930, 13: 1742
of monks, on Mt Athos, 16: 2177
in New Guinea, 13: 1849, 17: 2385
in Renaissance symbolism, 16: 2189
shape of, character told from, see phrenology
Shiva and, 9: 1212
Tibetan drum made of, 5: 664
see also head; head-hunting; skeleton
sky, 17: 2388-95
earth and, 5: 687, 19: 2699
in creation myths, 4: 472, 5: 687, 15: 2070, 17: 2391
Dahomean spirits of, 4: 526
in serpent myths, 17: 2337
gods of 17: 2388
Andaman Islands, 17: 2391
Ashanti, 17: 2391
Babylonian, see An Egyptian, see Horus; Nut
Finnish, 7: 884
in Germanic mythology, see Donar Tiwaz Greek, see Uranus, Zeus
Indian, 10: 1334, 17: 2391-2
Kikuyu, 1: 1469
Maori, see Rangi
Naga, 13: 1822
Nilotic, 13: 1871
Polynesian, 15: 2070
Roman, see Jupiter
Zulu, 20: 2878
see also High Gods
natural phenomena of, 17: 2388, 2390
High gods and, 9: 1205, 17: 2398
as omens, 14: 1921
see also aurora; comets; eclipse; meteors; moon; planets; rain; rainbow; star; storm; sun; thunder and lightning; weather supported by columns or mountains, in Eurasian mythology, 2: 160, 15: 2095
see also firmament; spheres
Slade, Henry (medium), 12: 1688, 1689
Slavs, 17: 2397-2400
vampire legend and, 19: 2703
see also Baba Yaga; Kuz'ma-Dem'yan sleep, see dreams; sleepers; 'sleeping preachers'
sleepers, 17: 2401-3
Seven, of Ephesus, 17: 2403
'sleeping preachers' (Finland), 6: 764
Sleipnir (horse of Odin), 14: 1907, 1908
smith, 17: 2404-8
Greek god, see Hephaestus
see also Goibniu; tinkers; Wayland the Smith
Smith, Emma (Mormonism), 13: 1772
Smith, G.A. (hypnotist), 8: 1097
Smith, Joseph (founder of Mormons), 11: 1525, 13: 1770-3
Freemasonry and, 13: 1773
Smithers, Alan, (statistics in astrology), 1: 144 smoke:
disease and, 14: 2010
divination by, see capnomancy; empyromancy of tobacco, 19: 2640
Smyth, Charles Piazzi (pyramidologist), 15: 2143, 2144
Smyth-Pigott, John Hugh (leader of Agapemonites), 12: 1724, 1725-6, 15: 2091, 2092
snail, 17: 2408
warts cured by, 17: 2408
snake, see serpent
snake-charmer, Indian, 17: 2409
snake-handling cults, 17: 2409-12
snake-stone (jewel), 10: 1413
snakeweed (plant), see bistort
sneezing, 17: 2413
in augury, 2: 162
'bless you', reason for saying, 5: 594, 17: 2413
demons enter the body during, 17: 2413
as omen, 17: 2413
soul leaves the body in, 5: 594
snow, 20: 2813-4
snowshoe dance, of Chippewa Indians, 14: 1884
Soal, S.G., 6: 804
Socharis (Egyptian god), see Seker
Societas Rosicruciana in Anglia (Soc. Ros.), 8: 1043, 16: 2240, 2246
Society of Dependants, see Cokelers Society Islands (Polynesia), 15: 2070
Society for Psychical Research, 15: 2105-9
apparitions and, 15: 2106-8, 20: 2748
phantasms of the living, 8: 1097, 15: 2106-8
Mme Blavatsky and, 2: 247
cross-correspondences and, 4: 493, 15: 2107, 20: 2804
Edmund Gurney and, 8: 1097, 13: 1801, 15: 2105-7
mediums and, see mediums,
F.W.H. Myers and, 13: 1801, 15: 2105-7
'Palm Sunday' case, 20: 2804
poltergeists and, 15: 2106
telepathy and, 15: 2106
Socrates, 9: 1191
Soc. Ros., see Societas Rosicruciana in Anglia
Sodom and Gomorrah, 17: 2413
Sogbo (Dahomean spirit), 4: 526
Soka Gakkai (Japanese religious sect), 10: 1400
soldier's woundwort (plant), see yarrow Sol Invictus (Roman sun cult), 18: 2504
solistry, see foot reading
Solomon, King, 17: 2414
Ethiopia and, 6: 775
hoopoe and, 2: 231
jinn commanded by, 10: 1418
as magician, 1: 131, 8: 1089, 17: 2414
peacock and, 14: 1998
Queen of Sheba and, 6: 775, 15: 2146-7
Temple built by, 17: 2414, 20: 2841
Solomon's seal (herb), 9: 1185, 1186
soma (sacred plant), 5: 649, 9: 1182, 10: 1334, 13: 1790, 16: 2266, 17: 2414
haoma the Iranian equivalent of, 20: 2876
Somerset, meaning of the name, 8: 1023
Somerset witches, 17: 2414
see also Cox, Julian
song:
of dying swan, 18: 2516
in magic, 10: 1319
see also carol; hymn; psalms; Scottish and Border ballads; Sirens sorcery, 17: 2415-7
see also witchcraft
sortes (lots; Rome), 11: 1547-8, 16: 2235
sortilege, see lots, divination by soteriology (definition), 17: 2418
see also salvation
Sothis (star), see Sirius, in Egypt
soul, 17: 2418-20
animism and, 1: 108, 17: 2418
astral body distinguished from 1: 135, 136, 137
Australian aborigines' beliefs concerning, 4: 516, 14: 1992, 19: 2642
blood and, 2: 248
Brazilian beliefs concerning, 2: 275
breath and, 2: 277, 17: 2418
in Tibet, 2: 280
butterfly and, 3: 320, 10: 1346
Chinese beliefs concerning, 3: 395
in Christianity, see Christianity, soul
double and, 5: 615, 17: 2418
dualism and, 6: 791
Egyptian beliefs concerning, 6: 733, 10: 1313, 12: 1606, 16: 2170, 17: 2419
see also Egypt, life after death
Finnish beliefs concerning, 7: 885
Gnostic view of, 8: 1030
Gonds and, 17: 2419
Greek views of, 10: 1313, 14: 1982-3
Orphic myth of Dionysus and, 6: 791
Plato on, 1: 136, 10: 1313
see also pneuma; Psyche; reincarnation in Greece in Hinduism, see reincarnation in Hinduism
in Islam, 12: 1610
Inuit beliefs, 10: 1353
Jains and, 10: 1385
in Judaism, 10: 1437
more than one 'soul', or spiritual component of the personality, 17: 2418

in Egypt, 6: 733
Naga beliefs concerning, 13: 1821
Neoplatonist view of, 1: 136-7, 13: 1841, 15: 2053
Parsee beliefs concerning, 14: 1988
Polynesian beliefs concerning, 15: 2071
rebirth of, see reincarnation reflection in mirror as, 13: 1749
sale of, to the Devil, see pact, Satanic shadow and, 5: 615, 17: 2348, 2418
shamans and, 17: 2353
in Voodoo (gros bon ange), 20: 2752, 2753, 2754
wandering of, in primitive belief, 5: 594, 17: 2348, 2418, 2420
will-o'-the-wisp as, 20: 2805
see also self soul cakers (Hallowe'en mumming plays), 7: 920 soul-catcher, of Pacific North-West Indian shamans, 14: 1958
south, 5: 588
South America, modern: 17: 2421-7
ashes in, 1: 129, 130
body-painting in, 18: 2581
Christianity in, 17: 2427
Pentecostalist movement, 14: 2006
coca in, 5: 652
death, myths of origin of, 4: 554
head trophies in, 8: 1139, 1141
jaguar and, 10: 1384
tattooing in, 18: 2580
weather magic in, 1: 129
see also Brazil; Desana; El Dorado; Guarayo Indians
South America, pre-Columbian, see Incas
Southcott, Joanna, 17: 2427-8
J.J.Jezreel and, 10: 1416, 17: 2428
supposed pregnancy of, 17: 2329, 2428
Southeast Asia, 17: 2428-30
space, visitors from, see alien visitors; Men in Black; UFOs
Spain, witchcraft in, 2: 201-3
Spanish fly (cantharides), 11: 1560
Spanish Inquisition, 9: 1192, 10: 1344
Basque witchcraft and, 2: 201-3
Spare, Austin (artist), 2: 151, 151-2, 153
sparrow, sacred to Aphrodite, 4: 459
Spartas, Reuben, 20: 2769-70
speaking in tongues (glossolalia), 17: 2431-5
New Testament references to, 17: 2431
Pentecostalist movement and, 14: 2003, 2006, 17: 2431, 2433
spear:
of Cu Chulainn, 4: 506
in Germanic mythology, 7: 995
Lugh, 11: 1541
of Odin (Gungnir), 5: 674, 7: 995, 14: 1911
spectacle idols (eye idols), 6: 816
spectral evidence (witch trials), 5: 615, 20: 2817
spectre (definition), 17: 2435
see also apparition; Brocken Spee, Friedrich von, 2: 194, 7: 990
spell, spells, 17: 2435
poetry and, 15: 2055
Spence, Lewis, modern Druid, 5: 661, 20: 2784
Spencer, Philipp Jakob (pietist), 15: 2039
spheres, heavenly, 7: 936-7, 11: 1581, 17: 2435
in the Cabala, see sefiroth
Copernican theory and, 2: 288
Lull and, 9: 1198, 11: 1564
music of, 14: 1895, 17: 2435 17th cent. diagram of, 19: 2729
see also firmament
Sphinx, 17: 2435
Egyptian, 17: 2435
of Giza, 5: 644
Greek, 17: 2435
Oedipus and, 16: 2205
spider, 17: 2435-7
in Japan, 17: 2436, 2437
see also Ananse; tarantella; Yiyi Spina, Alphonsus de, 7: 958
spine, (body), 2: 251
Kundalini and, 11: 1494
spinning, 17: 2437
Spinoza, Benedict, 13: 1744
spiral, as maze, 12: 1674
spirit, spirits, 6: 855, 856, 859-61, 17: 2437
in Africa, 1: 55
Ashanti, 1: 126-8
Dahomey, see vodun
Ethiopia, 6: 777
fetishes and, 6: 862
guardian spirits, 8: 1091-4
Kikuyu, 11: 1469
Nuer, 14: 1890-91
in Melanesia, 12: 1694, 1694, 1695
in New Guinea, 8: 1140, 12: 1695, 13: 1848, 1850
in Mesopotamia, 12: 1719
Nagas and, 13: 1737
Roman, of food, see Penates
Slav, 17: 2396, 2400
in Southeast Asia, 17: 2428
summoning of, see ritual magic Veddas and, 19: 2716-8
see also angels; animism; demons; double; elementals; ghosts; guardian spirits; jinn; keres; poltergeists; soul; Spiritualism
spiritism (or spiritualism) in Brazil, 17: 2421-7
spirit photography, 17: 2444
Spiritualism, 17: 2438-45
American origins of, 17: 2438
automatic art/writing and, 2: 171-2
Mme Blavatsky and, 2: 244
in Brazil, see spiritism
Britain, Spiritualism, introduced to, 17: 2440
Christianity and, 17: 2441
Sir William Crookes and, 4: 485
Davenport brothers and, 4: 546
Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and, 5: 626, 17: 2441
ESP and, 6: 805
healing and, 6: 834
Sir Oliver Lodge and, 17: 2441
mesmerism, 15: 2105
psychical research and, 15: 2105
seven planes of existence, 17: 2442
Shakers and, 17: 2349
smells in seances, 18: 2485
table-tilting and, 14: 1942, 1944
theurgy compared with, 19: 2605-6
vibration and, 19: 2729
see also mediums
Spiritualists' National Union Ltd (formerly the Spiritualists' National Federation), 17: 2440 and psychic surgery, 15: 2115 spiritual wives, Oneida community and, 4: 445
spittle, 17: 2446
in Mesopotamian magic, 12: 1720
as protection against the Evil Eye, 6: 818, 17: 2446
Splendor Solis, 1: 74, 6: 744, 18: 2499
spontaneous combustion, 17: 2447-8
spontaneous psi experiences, 18: 2455-64
see also extra-sensory perception; psychokinesis
spriggans (Cornish fairies), 4: 457
spring (season), 18: 2465-71
cuckoo and, 4: 507
sword dances and, 18: 2528
see also carnival; May Day springs, 18: 2472-5
in Brittany, 18: 2473
curative, 18: 2472
of Lourdes, 11: 1553
of the Pyrenees, 11: 1553 future foretold by, 18: 2472
nymphs of, see Naiads
springwort (herb), 20: 2836
Spurzheim, J.K. (phrenologist), 15: 2036
sputnik, on Chinese textile, 16: 2298-9
Sraosha (Zoroastrian god), 20: 2875
Sri Lanka, see Ceylon
Srosh (Parsee deity), 14: 1985
stag, 18: 2475-9
Artemis and Actaeon and, 4: 574, 18: 2475, 2477, 2478-9
Celts and, 1: 105, 3: 377, 9: 1248, 18: 2475-7
in Christian symbolism, 18: 2475
Hittites and, 18: 2475
shape-shifting and, 18: 2475-7
stag-beetle, 10: 1346, 1346
stairs, see steps and ladders Stallo (Lapp giant), 11: 150
standing stones:
in Brittany, 2: 285, 4: 512, 5: 656, 12: 1693
in Cornwall, 4: 457-8, 458
see also dolmen; megaliths; stone circles Stanton, Mary Olmsted (physiognomist), 15: 2038
star:
divination by, see astrology
in Egypt, see Egypt,
eyes and, 6: 814
five-pointed, see pentagram Ishtar, symbol of, 10: 1363
in Mexican mythology, 2: 183, 184
North American Indians and, 14: 1882
shooting stars, see meteors
six-pointed, see hexagram
Slavs and, 17: 2398
see also Algol; circumpolar stars; constellations; Copernican theory; Evening Star; Milky Way; Morning Star; planets, Pole Star; Sirius
Star(s) (Tarot card), 18: 2570, 2572
Star of David, 10: 1440
Starkey, George (alchemist), 12: 1705, 15: 2028
star-sapphire (jewel), 10: 1414, 18: 2551
Stauff, Philipp, 7: 991, 11: 1537
Steiner, Rudolf, 18: 2480-1
Anthroposophy and, 18: 2480
and Atlantis, 20: 2784
Rosicrucianism and, 16: 2247
Theosophy and, 18: 2480
Stella Matutina (esoteric order), 8: 1045-6, 16: 2246
Rudolf Steiner and, 18: 2480
Stephen, St, 5: 703, 12: 1647
steps and ladders, stairs, 9: 1260, 11: 1455, 1496
Stevenson, Prof. Ian, on reincarnation, 15: 2110, 16: 2176
Sthaviras (Buddhist sect), see Elders Stheno (Gorgon), 8: 1053
stigmata, and other physical phenomena of mysticism, 13: 1844-5, 18: 2482-7
blood and, 18: 2482-4
St Catherine of Siena and, 3: 361-2, 362, 18: 2485
ecstasy and, 18: 2485-6
St Francis of Assisi and, 7: 947, 948, 18: 2486
hysteria and, 18: 2483

incendium amoris, 18: 2482, 2484
incombustibility, 18: 2485
incorruptibility of the body, 18: 2485
inedia, 18: 2485
miracles of abundance, 18: 2486-7
mystic ring, 18: 2482, 2484
odour of sanctity, 18: 2485
psychokinesis and, 18: 2486
see also bilocation; Forgione, Father Pio; levitation
stilt dance, Nigerian, 4: 528
Stoicism, 12: 1609, 17: 2331
Athene and, 2: 115
death and, 6: 790, 12: 1609
Prometheus, 15: 2096
pantheism in, 15: 2079
see also Posidonius
stone 18: 2489-90
Celts and, 18: 2489, 2566
see also elf-bolts
see also megaliths; omphalos; standing stones Stone Age, see Neolithic (New Stone Age); Paleolithic (Old Stone Age)
see also Bushmen; Veddas
stone circles, 3: 422, 11: 1522-3, 12: 1692-3
at Callanish (Hebrides), 12: 1692
at Castlerigg (Cumberland), 5: 656
in Co. Meath (Ireland), 3: 423
see also Stonehenge
Stonehenge, 11: 1522, 12: 1692, 18: 2487-8
aerial view of, 5: 656
Apollo and, 5: 659
astronomical aspects of, 5: 659, 18: 2488
and Atlantis, 20: 2786
Druids and, 5: 659, 18: 2488
modern, 5: 655, 659-61, 13: 1743, 14: 1902, 18: 2488
Merlin and, 12: 1706, 1708
stones, 18: 2489-90
Stoney, J.B. (leader of Exclusive Brethren), 6: 798 stork, 18: 2490-1
storm:
Baal as god of, 2: 188, 17: 2394
crow and, 4: 496
death of king heralded by, 17: 2394
eagle and, 17: 2394
Harpies and, 8: 1118
Indra as god of, 17: 2392
Japanese god of (Susa-no-o), 5: 635, 17: 2361
protection against:
acorn, 9: 1264
bells, 2: 213
owl, 14: 1949
see also thunder and lightning
Strachan, Isobel (witch), 1: 47
Strang, James J. (Mormon leader), 13: 177
strega (Italian witch), 10: 1378
Strength (Tarot card), 18: 2570, 2571
Strindberg, August, New Templars and, 13: 1852
string, 18: 2491-4
Inuit string figures, 10: 1355
see also cat's cradle; knot
strix (Roman witch), 10: 1378
Struwwelpeter (children's book) 1: 65
Stubb, Peter (werewolf), 20: 2781
Stukeley, William, on the Druids, 5: 659-60
Stump, Peter (werewolf), see Stubb, Peter stupa (Buddhism), 3: 299, 16: 2188, 17: 2381, 19: 2621
Dhamek stupa at Sarnath, 16: 2188
Sturgess, E.M., 15: 2117
Sturluson, Snorri, 2: 192, 8: 1017, 16: 2289, 2290
Style, Elizabeth (witch), 17: 2414
stylites (pillar saints), 11: 1574-5, 17: 2372
see also Simeon Stylites
Stymphalian lake, Hercules and birds of, 6: 1188
Styx (river), 3: 385, 9: 1170
Suarez, Francis, 18: 2487
subconscious, see unconscious submerged towns and villages, legends of, see lost lands subterranean races, 18: 2494-5
Bulwer Lytton and, 11: 1568
Subud, 18: 2495
Succoth (Judaism), see Feast of Tabernacles
succubus, see incubus and succubus
Sucellos (Celtic god), 3: 377, 8: 1111
Sudan, see Dogon; Nilotes
Sudras (caste; Hinduism), 3: 353
Sufis (Islam), 5: 713, 10: 1373, 13: 1873, 18: 2495-8
meditation and, 12: 1687
see also dervish; Ghazali; Ibn Arabi; Mansur al-Hallaj; Rumi, Jalal u'd-Din suggestion, in healing, 13: 1748
see also faith-healing; hypnotism; psychic surgeons Suibne Gelt (Irish legend), 20: 2802
suicide:
buried at crossroads, 3: 315, 4: 495
ghosts of suicides, 8: 1131
see also hara-kiri; kamikaze; suttee
sulphur:
mercury and, in alchemy, 8: 1041, 12: 1704-5
Sumatar Harabesi (Mesopotamia), 8: 1119
Sumer, Sumerians (Mesopotamia), 2: 189, 5: 630, 12: 1714
bull and, 3: 307, 9: 1245
creation myths of, 4: 473, 5: 687
demoness of, 11: 1532
flood legend of, 7: 913, 8: 1019
gods of, 12: 1714
iconography of, 9: 1285
see also An; Enlil; Inanna; Ninhursag; Nisaba
hell and, 9: 1176
hero myth of, see Gilgamesh
kingship in 11: 1478
owl and, 14: 1948
see also Eannatum (of Lagash); Eridu; Gudea (of Lagash) Summers, Montague, 18: 2498
on Baphomet, 2: 195
sun, 18: 2499-2506
in alchemy, see Splendor Solis
in astrology, 1: 139-40, 142-4, 18: 2505-6
churches, etc., built facing, 3: 303, 5: 588
cock and, 3: 426
correspondences with, 4: 459
crane and, 4: 470
in Crete, moon and, 9: 1179-80
cross as symbol of, 4: 490
eclipse of, 5: 707, 18: 2505
in Egypt, see Egypt
Ethiopian god of, see Dhat Himyam
first man and, 7: 903
folktales as solar myths, 4: 459, 8: 1041
gold and, 4: 459
goose and, 8: 1050-1
Great Beast 666 and, 12: 1593-4
Greek gods of, see Apollo; Helios
hawk and, 8: 1133
Hittite gods of, 9: 1222, 1223, 1224
hoopoe and, 2: 231
horse and, 18: 2502
Ibo cult of, 9: 1279
Incas and, 10: 1311, 1324
Indian gods of, 18: 2504
see also Surya
Inuit and, 10: 1328, 1351
jewels associated with, 10: 1413
lizards and, 11: 1539
magical papyri contain invocation to, 12: 1591
megaliths and, 18: 2505
Mesopotamian gods of, see Ninurta; Shamash
Mexican god of, see Tonatiuh
Mithras and, 13: 1752, 1753
moon and, 18: 2501, 2502
in Australia, 18: 2501-2
in Crete, 9: 1179-80
in Inuit incest myth, 10: 1328, 1351
in Rumanian incest myth, 13: 1765
North American Indians and, see Sun Dance
phoenix and, 15: 2033
Rome and, 18: 2504
Mithras, 13: 1752, 1753
in Scandinavia, 18: 2502-3
Shinto goddess of, 17: 2434
Slavs and 17: 2398
wheels as symbols of, 20: 2788
see also disk; Sunday
Sun (Tarot card), 18: 2571, 2572
Sun dance (of Great Plains Indians), 8: 1070, 18: 2503
Sunday, 4: 546
magical operations suited to, 4: 459 Whit Sunday, 20: 2796
see also Palm Sunday
Sunnites (Islam), 10: 1369, 1374
Mahdi and, 12: 1601
Mohammed, Sunnite view of, 13: 1761
Sunyavada (Buddhism), 18: 2507
Suovetaurilia (Roman festival), 13: 1753
superego (Freudian term), 7: 963
superstitions, 18: 2507-10
Surt (giant; Scandinavian mythology), 16: 2292
Surya (Indian sun god), 9:1208*, 1217, 10: 1335, 18: 2502, 2504
Susa-no-o (Japanese god), 5: 635, 17: 2361
Suso, Heinrich (mystic), 5: 705
suttee, 18: 2511-2
Sutton Hoo ship burial, 2: 214, 214, 250, 7: 995
svami, see swami
Svantovit (Slav god), see Svetovit
Svarozhich (Slav god), 17: 2399
Svetambaras (Jain sect), 10: 1385
Svetovit (Svantovit; Slav god), 17: 2398, 9: 2399
Swaffer, Hannen, Spiritualism and, 17: 2441
swallow (bird), 18: 2513-4
in Babylonian flood legend, 7: 913
in legends of Christ, 12: 1598, 18: 2514
in Greece, 18: 2513
Philomela myth, 13: 1868, 2513
in medicine, 18: 2513
swami (svami), 18: 2514
swan (bird), 18: 2514-6
Celts and, 3: 378
Zeus as, see Leda
swastika, 4: 490, 18: 2517
Ludwig Fahrenkrog and, 13: 1839, 18: 2517
in Greece, 18: 2517
Guido von List and, 13: 1839, 18: 2517
Nazism and, 4: 490, 491, 18: 2517, 2517
Navaho Indians and, 18: 2517
New Templars and, 13: 2852
Pictish, 4: 491
völkisch movement and, 18: 2517
Swazi, first fruits ceremonies of, 16: 2213
swearing, 4: 519
in oath-taking, see oath
Swedenborg, Emanuel, 18: 2518-9, 20: 2748

reincarnation rejected by, 16: 2176
Swedish witchcraft, 6: 787, 7: 918, 18: 2520-1
Swifte, Edmund Lenthal, ghost seen by, 8: 1113
swimming of witches, see floating of witches Swinburne, Algernon Charles, on Christianity, 16: 2283 swine, see pig Swithin, St, 17: 2395
sword, 18: 2522-31
of Arthur, see Excalibur
Beowulf and, 18: 2522, 2524, 2526
of Charlemagne (Joyeuse), 18: 2526
crusaders and, 18: 2526, 2530
of Damocles, 18: 2522
Galahad and, 7: 971
in Grail legend, 7: 982, 8: 1058, 18: 2528
of Hoder (Mimingus), 2: 192
in Japanese imperial symbolism, 17: 2362
knighthood and, 18: 2527
oldest known, 18: 2522
of Roland (Durandal), 18: 2526
of Siegfried (Balmung), 18: 2522 of State, English, 18: 2522
sword dances, 18: 2524, 2525, 2528-31
Theseus and, 18: 2528
of the Vikings, 18: 2526
see also Trfing
Sybaris, Sybarites, 17: 2334
sycomore (Egyptian sacred tree), 19: 265
sylphs (elementals), 2: 278, 6: 743
Sylvester II (pope), Satanic pact and, 14: 1961
symbolism, 15: 2023-4, 18: 2532-38
of the centre, 18: 2536 Christian, see Christianity, symbolism in of dreams, Freud on, 7: 963
of the hero, 18: 2537
Jung on, 18: 2537
of the key, 9: 1260, 11: 1469, 18: 2534
of the moon, 18: 2536
of the net, 18: 2534
Oswald Wirth on, 18: 2568
see also inverted symbols; landscape symbolism; path symbolism; phallic symbolism; Rose Cross Symonds, John Addington, 15: 2078
Symondsbury (Dorset), mumming play at, 7: 920 sympathetic magic, 5: 590, 10: 1309, 18: 2538
in the Ozarks, 14: 1952
see also imitative magic synagogue (Judaism), 10: 1433, 1436
synchronicity, Jung's principle of, 11: 1461, 1548, 18: 2539, 19: 2730
syncretism (definition), 18: 2538
Synod of Whitby, 3: 336
Syria and Palestine, 18: 2540-5
see also Phoenicians and Canaanites
Syrianus (Neoplatonist), 15: 2092, 2093

T

T (letter), as magical protection, 4: 492
Tabernacle, Ark of the Testimony in, see Ark of Yahweh
table-tilting, 14: 1942, 1943, 1944, 18: 2546
D. D. Home and, 9: 1232-3
Eusapia Palladino and, 14: 1962, 1963
Willi Schneider and, 16: 2295
taboo (tabu), 18: 2546-9
beans, 8: 1119
blood and, 2: 248
hunting, in Brazil, 9: 1267
incest, 10: 1328
Brazil, 2: 273-4
Inuit and, 10: 1352-5, 17: 2324
among the Maori (tapu), 12: 1630, 1631-3
in Micronesia, 15: 2072
Navaho Indians and, 13: 1828
in the Ozarks, 14: 1952-3
in Polynesia, 15: 2070, 18: 2547
Tabor, Mount, 13: 1783-4
Taborites (adventist sect), 17: 2328
Tacitus, on divination, 16: 2251
Tagaro (Melanesian spirit), 12: 1697
Tages (Etruscan deity), 11: 1538
Tagore, Rabindranath, 9: 1929, 1221, 1221
Gandhi and, 12: 1600
Tahaki (Polynesian hero), 15: 2072
Tahiti (Polynesia), 15: 2070, 2071
Taigheirin (Highland ceremony), 3: 357
Taigi, Blessed Anna Maria, 18: 2486
Taiping rebellion, 12: 1723, 1727
Taka Shima Kaemon (Japanese seer), 11: 1548
Taliesin, 17: 2355
talismans, 18: 2550-3
Agrippa on, 16: 2194
amulets distinguished from, 18: 2550
of Great Plains Indians, 8: 1072
see also magic squares; mezuzah
Tallmadge, Emily (automatic artist), 2: 173
Talmud (Judaism), 10: 1434
Tammuz (Dumuzi; Mesopotamian god), 5: 676, 18: 2554
Inanna/Ishtar and, 12: 1716, 1718, 18: 2554
Tanchelm, 6: 762, 17: 2326
Tane (Polynesian god), 15: 2070
Tangaroa (Tangaloa, Ta'aroa; Polynesian god), 12: 1697, 15: 2070, 2070
Tanit Pene Baal (Carthaginian goddess), 15: 2032
Tannhaüser, 20: 2758
tansy (herb), Easter associations of, 5: 696
Tantalus, bones of, preserved at Argos, 16: 2177
Tantrism (Shaktism), 9: 1216, 17: 2345, 18: 2556-61
alchemy and, 18: 2558
diamond and, 10: 1415
magic in, 18: 2557
mandala and, 12: 1616
mantras and, 17: 2345, 18: 2558
sex and, 9: 1216, 18: 2556, 2558, 2560
Tantric Buddhism, 3: 302
yoga and, 18: 2556
Tao, Taoism, 3: 393, 18: 2562-65
meditation in, 12: 1678
Tao Te Ching, 11: 1506, 17: 2334, 18: 2562-3
Tapiola (Finland), 7: 885
Tara (Ireland), 7: 889, 890, 18: 2565-6
Taranis (Celtic god), 3: 376
tarantella, tarantism, 4: 540, 17: 2437
Taresque (dragon of Tarascon), 13: 1776
Tarhun (Luwian weather god), 9: 1222
Tarot, 3: 342, 344-5, 346, 5: 599, 18: 2567-74
Cabalist Tree of Life and, 3: 327, 14: 1993, 18: 2567
Crowley and, 4: 502-3
in fortune-telling, 3: 345-6, 18: 2567, 2572
four Hallows of Grail legend and, 18: 2528 Hebrew alphabet and, 1: 91, 3: 345, 18: 2567
individual trumps of, 3: 346, 18: 2569-72 see also Chariot; Death; Devil; Fool; Hanged Man; High Priestess; Lovers; Moon; Pope; Universe; Wheel of Fortune
Eliphas Levi and, 11: 1520
origins of, 3: 346-7, 18: 2573-4
Papus and, 14: 1973, 1973, 18: 2569
path symbolism and, 3: 327
A.E.Waite and, 3: 345, 18: 2568-71, 2569
Waldenses and, 20: 2762
wheel and, 18: 2569
Tarquiup Inua (Inuit moon spirit), 10: 1351
tarragon (herb), 9: 1186
Taru (Hattic weather god), 9: 1222
Tashmishu (Hittite god), 9: 1223 task (double), 5: 615
tattooing, 4: 464, 9: 1163, 13: 1799-1800, 18: 2575-81
Tau (Hebrew letter), 18: 2582
see also T-shaped cross
Tauler, Johann (mystic), 15: 2418
Eckhart and, 5: 705
taurobolium (bull rite of Cybele and Attis), 2:196, 18: 2582
Taurt (Egyptian goddess), 1: 103, 104
Taurus (the Bull; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 139, 143-4, 18: 2582
Taylor, John (pyramidologist), 15: 2143-4
Taylor, Thomas (Platonist), 18: 2582-5
taziya (Islam), 13: 1761-2
Tea Ceremony (in Japan), 10: 1394, 1396,1400, 20: 2855, 2859
Tea (Irish goddess), 18: 2565
tea-leaf reading, 18: 2586
Tears of Juno/Isis (plant), see vervain Teed, Cyrus Reed (Koresh), 9: 1228 teeth see Tooth, temple of the; toothache
tefillin (Judaism), 10: 1438
Tefnut (Egyptian goddess), 4: 472, 6: 733
Teilhard de Chardin, 18: 2587-8
Telchines (Greek mythology), 4: 460
Telegonus (son of Odysseus and Circe), 3: 422
telekinesis, see psychokinesis
Telemachus (son of Odysseus and Penelope), 3: 422
telepathy, 3: 424, 6: 805, 806-12, 18: 2456, 2588
automatic art/writing and, 2: 171
cross-correspondences, 4: 494
clairvoyance and, 6: 803
Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's experiments with, 5: 626
mediums and, 12: 1684-5
Mrs Piper, 15: 2046
Gilbert Murray and, 15: 2108
phantasms of the living and, 8: 1097, 15: 2106-8
Society for Psychical Research and, 15: 2107
in twins, 19: 2685-6
Telephus (son of Hercules), 18: 2477
Telipinu (Hittite god), 9: 1224
teleportation, see apportation
Tellus (Roman deity), 16: 2230
Temperance (Tarot card), 18: 2570, 2571
Templars, see Knights Templar
Templars of the East, see Order of the Templars of the East (OTO) temurah, 7: 985
ten, as the Tetractys, 14: 1895, 15: 2146
Tendai (Japanese Buddhist sect), 10: 1391, 1394
Ten (later Fifteen) Men for Sacrificing (Roman priests), 16: 2231, 2234
Tenochtitlan (Aztec capital, now Mexico City), 2: 182, 3: 303
Tenri-kyo (Japanese religious sect), 10: 1397
Tensho Kotai Jingu-kyo (Japanese religious sect), 10: 1398
Teotihuacan (Mexican city), 2: 180, 18: 2503
Teresa of Avila, St, 18: 2588-90,

20: 2749-50
ecstasy and, 5: 709
John of the Cross and, 10: 1426
levitation of, 18: 2487
on the untrustworthiness of visions, 20: 2749
Teresa of Lisieux, St, 16: 2270, 18: 2485
Tereus, Philomela and (Greek mythology), 13: 1868, 18: 2513
Terpsichore (Muse), 13: 1789, 1789
Tertullian (Christian writer), 13: 1761
on the absurdity of Christianity, 11: 1576
on the Christian cross, 4: 490
on Pontius Pilate, 15: 2073
on the evilness of woman, 7: 904
Teshik-tash, cave of (Uzbekistan), Neanderthal burial in, 9: 1241-3
Teshub (Hittite/Hurrian weather god), 2: 189, 9: 1222-3
Testament of Solomon*, 8: 1089
testicles, see castration
Tetractys, 14: 1895, 15: 2146
Tetragrammaton (YHWH, name of Yahweh), 3: 326, 13: 1824, 18: 2590, 20: 2839
Iao as variant of, 13: 1824
Teudt, Wilhelm, 11: 1522
Teutates (Celtic god), 3: 363, 376-7
Teutonic mythology, see Germanic mythology
Tewa Indians (Pueblo), 15: 2130
Tezcatlipoca (Mexican god), 2: 183, 185
colours of, 5: 588
as jaguar, 1: 107
maize and, see Xipe
skull, supposed to represent, 2: 183
Thales of Miletus, eclipse predicted by, 5: 708
Thalestris (Amazon), 1: 95
Thalia (one of the Graces), 8: 1057
Thalia (Muse), 13: 1789
Thanatos (Greek god of death), 4: 559, 5: 648
Thanksgiving Day, 8: 1120
Thebes (Egypt):
Amun-Re and, 6: 731, 9: 1296
creation myth of priesthood of, 4: 473
Thebes (Greece), Dionysus and, 5: 584
Thecla, St, 13: 1804
martyrdom of, 13: 1854
theism, 13: 1744
Themiscyra (now Terme; Turkey), Amazons and, 1: 93
Theodore (7th cent. archbishop of Canterbury), 1: 106
Theodosius I, Emperor, Olympic Games abolished by, 7: 978
theogony (definition), 18: 2590 theology, mystical and speculative distinguished, 13: 1812
Theophilus of Adana, Satanic pact and, 14: 1959
Theophilus of Antioch (Christian writer), on immortality, 10: 1315
theophoric names, 13: 1822-3
theosophy, Theosophical Society, 2: 218-9, 245, 246, 18: 2590-2
Mrs Besant and, 2: 218-9, 18: 2590-2
Mme Blavatsky and, 2: 217, 245, 18: 2590
Golden Dawn and, 8: 1043
Krishnamurti and, 2: 219, 18: 2591-2
Papus and, 14: 1973
G.W.Russell and, 16: 2252
St-Germain and, 16: 2269
Rudolf Steiner and, 2: 217, 18: 2480
Thomas Taylor and, 18: 2585
A.E.Waite and, 20: 2759
W.B.Yeats and, 20: 2843
Theravada (Buddhism), 3: 300
in Ceylon (Sri Lanka), 3: 300, 17: 2379
in Conjeeveram, 3: 302
in Southeast Asia, 17: 2379, 2430
Thérèse, see Teresa Thermes (Lapp god), 11: *1507
Thersites, killed by Achilles, 1: 95
Theseus (Greek hero), 19: 2599-2603
Amazons and, 1: 95, 19: 2601
Athens and, 16: 2177, 19: 2599, 2603
Dioscuri and, 19: 2602
Helen of Troy and, 19: 2601-2
Minos and, 19: 2602
Minotaur, 19: 2600, 2600
Pirithous and, 14: 2014, 19: 2601
sword and, 18: 2528
underworld visited by, 9: 1176, 14: 2014, 19: 2601
Thesmophoria (festival of Demeter), 4: 563, 7: 892
Thespiae (Greece), cult of Eros at, 6: 765-6
Thespis (Greek drama), 5: 637
Thessalonians, St Paul's epistles to, 14: 1994
Thetis (nereid, mother of Achilles), 1: 49-50, 14: 1899
on Portland Vase, 6: 766
theurgy, 19: 2603-6
Neoplatonism and, 13: 1842, 15: 2092-3, 19: 2603
Thibault, Julie, 2: 206, 206
Thinite Period (Egyptian history), 6: 730
third eye, 19: 2606
thirteen, 19: 2606-7
as baker's dozen, 19: 2607
Friday and, 4: 546
twelve and, 19: 2607
witchcraft and, 4: 467, 19: 2606, 2607
Thjazi (giant; Scandinavian mythology), 11: 1543
Tholen, W., psychometry and, 15: 2124, 2126
Thom, Prof. Alexander, surveyor of megaliths, 12: 1692
Thomas, John (founder of the Christadelphians), 17: 2329
Thomas, St (Didymus, apostle), 13: 1857, 19: 2684
Thomas à Kempis, 15: 2148, 17: 2334
Thomas the Rhymer, 17: 2312
Thompson, Frederic L. (automatic painter), see Thompson-Gifford case
Thompson, Sir Henry, cremation and, 4: 477, 479
Thompson, Stith (student of folktales), 7: 925
Thompson-Gifford case (automatic art), 2: 173
Thor (Scandinavian god), 16: 2289, 19: 2608-2610
Bifrost not crossed by, 15: 2153-4
earth and, 19: 2608
giants and, 8: 1017, 19: 2608-10
Geirrod, 11: 1543, 19: 2608
Hrungnir, 19: 2608
Hymir, 19: 2608
Skrymir, 8: 1017, 19: 2610
Thrym, 8: 1111, 11: 1543
hammer of (Mjölnir), 5: 674, 8: 1111, 11: 1542-3, 19: 2608, 2609
Loki and, 11: 1542-3, 19: 2608-10
Midgard Serpent and, 16: 2292, 19: 2608, 2609
oak and, 19: 2608
sons of, 16: 2292
thunder and lightning and, 19: 2608 wife of (Sif), 5: 674, 19: 2606
thorn, holy of Glastonbury, 8: 1025, 1026, 1027, 1135
Thoth (Egyptian god), 6: 733, 734
baboon and, 1: 105
Book of the Dead and, 16: 2197
Hermes identified with, 9: 1197
Hermes Trismegistus identified with, 6: 733 Horus and, 9: 1257
ibis and, 6: 733
in judgement of the dead, 6: 733, 11: 1449
Thothmes IV (pharaoh), Sphinx of Giza and, 5: 644
thought transference, see telepathy Thracian Rider god, 19: 2610-11
thread, 18: 2491
three, 14: 1893, 19: 2612-15
Celts and, 3: 377, 7: 889-90, 11: 1540
see also triple deities, Celtic, below
completeness of, 14: 1893, 19: 2613
fifteen and, 6: 863
in Greece, see Cerberus; Geryon; triple deities, Greek, below luckiness of, 19: 2612-3
names adding to, 14: 1893, 19: 2612
in the New Testament, 19: 2614
one and, 19: 2612
in Pythagoreanism, 15: 2146
Renaissance humanism and, 16: 2192-3, 19: 2614
in Scottish and Border ballads, 17: 2312
three-headed dog, in Greek mythology, see Cerberus
three heads of Thracian Rider god, 19: 2610
three magi, 11: 1576, 19: 2615
triple deities, 19: 2614
Celtic, 2: 283, 3: 377, 7: 890, 8: 1143
Christian, see Trinity
Greek, 19: 2614
Hecate as, 9: 1167
see also Fates; Furies; Gorgons; Graces
Hindu (Brahman), 19: 2614-5
Scandinavian, see Norns
two and, 19: 2612
see also triangle
threshold, doorway, 9: 1260-1, 16: 2209, 19: 2615-6
Janus and, 10: 1387
see also key throne mysticism (Merkabah), 3: 322, 6: 824, 12: 1706, 19: 2616
Thrym (giant), Thor and, 8: 1111, 11: 1543
Thugs (Indian secret society), 11: 1464, 19: 2616-7
Thule Society, 13: 1829
thumb:
in baptism, 7: 997
of Finn, 7: 890
in palmistry, 8: 1107
as phallic symbol, 7: 997
in Trinity symbol, 7: 996
see also mano cornuta
Thumb, Tom (dwarf), 5: 675
thunder-beard (plant), see houseleek thunderbird, 19: 2617-8, 20: 2878
thunderbolt:
Donar and, 7: 995
Jupiter and, 17: 2392
Thunor and, 7: 995
Zeus and, 8: 1111, 9: 1205, 20: 2862 2862
Zulus and, 20: 2878
'Thunderbolt Vehicle' (Tantric Buddhism), see Buddhism, Tantric
thunder and lightning:
in augury, 2: 162, 6: 780, 20: 2778
Australian spirit of, 20: 2777
Jupiter and, 11: 1460
mushroom and, 13: 1789
protection against:
acorn, 9: 1264, 14: 1903
hazel, 15: 2049

laurel, 11: 1511
oak, 14: 1902-3, 17: 2394
olive, 14: 1920
owl, 14: 1949
palm, 14: 1964
plants, various, 17: 2394
prehistoric stone axes, etc ('thunder weapons'), 7: 995
Thor and, 19: 2608
woodpecker and, 20: 2836
Zeus and, 20: 2866
Zulus and, 20: 2878
see also storm; thunderbird; thunderbolt
'thunder weapons', 7: 995
Thunor (Anglo-Saxon god), 7: 995
Thursday, 4: 546-7, 7: 995
see also Maundy Thursday
thyrsos, 19: 2618
Tiahuanaco (Peru), 10: 1324
Tiamat (Mesopotamian mythology), 4: 474-5, 5: 630, 12: 1634, 1717-9, 19: 2618
Tibet, 19: 2619-25
breath, as the soul, in, 2: 280
Buddhism in, 19: 2620
Buddha, 9: 1291
see also lamas,
China and, 19: 2619, 2624
divination in, 11: 1548
drum, made of skulls, 5: 664
exorcizing dagger of, 20: 2795
harvest festival in, 8: 1124
judgement of the dead and, 9: 1176
mandalas of, 11: 1459, 12: 1616
masks of, 12: 1662, 1663
oracles of, 19: 2649
prayer wheel in, 19: 2624, 20: 2789
pre-Buddhist religion of, 19: 2620
priests of, see lamas,
reincarnation and, 11: 1496, 16: 2174, 19: 2622-3
rosary in, 16: 2236
wheel of life in, 11: 1466, 1467, 20: 2789
see also Book of the Dead (Tibetan) tiger, 19: 2625
white, in China, 20: 2797
Tiglath-Pileser III (king of Assyria), 11: 1544, 1544
Tijani Order (Sufism), 18: 2498
tiki (hei-tiki, Polynesian amulet), 10: 1382, 1384, 19: 2625 Tilea, M. Virgil, Nazism and, 13: 1830-1
time, 19: 2626-34
St Augustine on, 19: 2625
Indian beliefs concerning, 19: 2625, 2630
Mithraism and, 19: 2629
modern theories of, 19: 2633-4
Rome and, 16: 2285, 19: 2629
wheel as symbol of, 20: 2788
in Zoroastrianism, see Zurvan see also calendar; cycles of time; Dunne, J. W.; Father Time; Golden Age; history time travel, 19: 2633-4
tin (metal), 4: 459
Tinia (Tin, Etruscan god), 6: 781
tinkers, 19: 2635-7
Tintagel (Cornwall), 1: 122, 3: 330, 330,
Tipitaka (Buddhism), 17: 2379
Tiruvannamalai (India), see Arunachala
Tiryns (Greece), excavation of, 8: 1075
Tisiphone (Greek mythology), 7: 968
Titans (Greek mythology), 4: 484, 5: 688
Dionysus killed by, 5: 678, 6: 791, 14: 1937
see also Cronus
Tityroi, 16: 2288
Tiw (Anglo-Saxon god) 7: 994
Tiwa Indians (Pueblo), 15: 2130
Tiwat (Luwian sun god), 9: 1222
Tiwaz (Germanic god), 7: 994
Tiyat (Palaic sun god), 9: 1222
Tlaloc (Mexican god), 2: 185-6, 20: 2778
Tloque Nahuaque (Mixtec god), 4: 476
toad, 19: 2637-9
basilisk and 19: 2638
bear sacrifice and, 19: 2638
evil eye and, 6: 817
horses controlled by toadmen, 19: 2638
jewel in head of, 10: 1416, 19: 2638
as witches' familiar 5: 691, 6: 796, 838, 17: 2414, 19: 2637
toadstone, 10: 1416, 19: 2638
toadstool, see mushroom tobacco, 14: 2010-11, 19: 2640
in medicine, 19: 2640
North American Indians and, 14: 1883, 19: 2640
shamanism and, 5: 650
Tobias and Sarah, 1: 131, 6: 799
Todaiji Temple (Japan), 10: 1399
toe:
healing by, King Pyrrhus and, 6: 834
of Vishnu, as source of Ganges, 7: 979
Toland, John (Druidic organizer), 5: 659-60
Toledo, Council of (AD447), Devil defined by, 9: 1246
Tollund, hanged man of, 16: 2261, 2261
Tolpuddle martyrs, 14: 1906
Tolstoyans (communistic religious movement), 4: 440
Toltecs, 2: 180, 182
carved figures of, at Tula, 2: 158-9
fire god of, see Xiuhtecuhtli Maya and, 12: 1672
tomato, 11: 1560, 12: 1618
Tomlinson, A.J., 14: 2005
Tomlinson, Dr H. (physician and radiesthetist), 15: 2150, 19: 2730-1
Tomlinson, Homer, 9: 1231, 14: 2005
Tomlinson, Milton, 9: 1231, 14: 2005
Tomzcyk, Stanislawa (Hon Mrs Everard Feilding; medium), 12: 1688
Tonatiuh (Mexican sun god), 2: 180-1, 182, 183, 184
Tonga (Polynesia), 15: 2070
Tongs (Chinese secret society), 19: 2640
tonton macoute, 20: 2752
Tooth, Temple of the (Ceylon), 15: 2043, 2044, 17: 2379, 2380, 2381
toothache, St Apollonia and, 5: 594, 16: 2272
topaz, 10: 1413, 1415
top hat, 8: 1148
topheth, 15: 2032, 2032
topping out (builders' ceremony), 3: 304
Torah (Judaism), 10: 1433, 1437, 1438, 19: 2640
Torquemada, Tomás de, 9: 1193
tortoise:
in China, 5: 633, 15: 2036
hare and, 8: 1117
invention of lyre and, 9: 1196
Vishnu incarnate as, 10: 1320, 1321, 20: 2746
torture:
of heretics, 9: 1192
of witches, 6: 785-7, 786, 7: 988, 988
at Bamberg, 2: 193, 193, 194
Louis Gaufridi, 1: 70
totem, totemism, 1: 104, 19: 2641-5
in Australia, 1: 104, 2: 166, 7: 928, 19: 2641-5
in Egypt, doubts concerning, 1: 104, 6: 732 Europe, ancient, not discernible in, 19: 2645
exogamy and, 10: 1329
in Melanesia, 19: 2645
Nilotic, 13: 1871
North American Indians and, 14: 1885, 19: 2641, 2643-4, 2643
origin of the word, 19: 2644
Touareg, 19: 2645-7
touch, 6: 834, 7: 882
'touching the bun', 17: 2319
tourmaline, 10: 1413
tower, symbolism of, 11: 1505
see also Tower Struck by Lighning (Tarot card)
Tower of Babel, 6: 740, 19: 2648-9, 2648
French, 15th cent., 17: 2432
Nimrod as builder of, 19: 2649
seven and, 19: 2649
ziggurat as original of, 19: 2649
Tower of London:
haunting of, 7: 1007, 9: 1130, 1133
ravens at, 4: 497
towers of silence (Parsees), 14: 1986, 1986, 1987-8, 20: 2872, 2873
Tower Struck by Lightning (Falling Tower, Fire of Heaven, House of God; Tarot card), 3: 346, 18: 2570, 2571
trance, 19: 2647-52
St Catherine of Siena and, 3: 361
drugs and, 19: 2649
ecstasy and, 5: 713, 18: 2482-7
in magic, 19: 2650
mediums and, 12: 1683, 19: 2651
in theurgy, 19: 2605
oracular, 14: 1927
at Delphi, 19: 2649
in Tibet, 19: 2649
in Voodoo, 19: 2649-50
in yoga, 19: 2651, 2652
see also hypnotism
transcendent (definition), 10: 1312
transcendental meditation (TM), 19: 2652
Trancendentalists (philosophical group), 13: 1861, 18: 2585 transmigration of souls, see reincarnation
transubstantiation, 12: 1668, 16: 2258
trataka (yoga), 20: 2850
treasure:
dwarfs and, 5: 673
giants and, 10: 1381-2
sleeping heroes and, 17: 2402-3
see also El Dorado; treasure magic treasure magic, 13: 1836, 19: 2653-4, 20: 2766
tree, trees, 19: 2655-62
cross of Jesus and, see Crucifixion, tree as the cross
May Day and, see May Day,
in the Old Testament, 19: 2656, 2660
as oracle, 19: 2660
worship of trees, see animism; tree spirits see also almond; apple; arbutus; ash; banyan; bay; beech; birth; bo-tree; cedar; Christmas tree; cypress; elder; elm; fig; fir; hawthorn; hazel; holly; laurel; myrrh; myrtle; oak; olive; palm; pine; rowan; sycamore; thorn, holy, of Glastonbury; vine; willow; yew also evergreens; forest; garden; grove; resin; Tree of Life; world tree tree of Jesse, 19: 2656
Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil, Tree of Life, 4: 476, 6: 791, 7: 903 Crucifixion and, 4: 492, 12: 1609
in Mexico, 19: 2656
in 13th cent., 12: 1608
Tree of Life, 19: 2654, 2661
Cabalist (sefirotic tree), 3: 324-5, 325, 14: 1993
in modern magic, 3: 327
Tarot and, 18: 2567
Christian, see Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil
Lull and, 9: 1198
see also world tree

tree spirits, gods, tree worship, 19: 2656, 2660-1, 2722
Ashanti, 1: 128
in Egypt, 16: 2170, 19: 2656
Osiris as, 7: 891
Greek, 19: 2656, 2660-1
see also dryads
Indian, 1: 108, 10: 1336, 19: 2657
Roman, 19: 2656, 2660-1
see also Green Man
Trent, Council of (1545-63), 3: 412
Trfing (magic sword), 5: 674
Triad Society (Chinese secret society), 3: 397, 399 trial by ordeal, 14: 1905, 1933
bread in, 2: 276
Congolese, 4: 452
host in, 14: 1904
Masai, 12: 1654
triangle, 19: 2612
magic circle and, 16: 2219
see also hexagram
trickster, 19: 2663-7
Loki as, 11: 1543, 19: 2665
North American Indians and, 8: 1069-70, 19: 2663-4, 2666
see also Coyote; raven spider, West African, see Ananse
see also Afro-American lore
Triglav (Slav god), 17: 2399
Trilha, Ivan, psychic surgeon, 15: 2115, 2116
trinity, 19: 2667
in Christianity, see Trinity,
in Hinduism (Brahma, Vishnu, Shiva), 2: 271, 20: 2746
see also three; triple deities Trinity, the (Christianity), 19: 2613-4
in baptism, 2: 197
fingers symbol of, 7: 996, 997
in 14th cent. MS, 9: 1290
rejected by Judaism, 10: 1433
Eliphas Levi on, 19: 2612
Virgin Mary and, 12: 1650
triple head representing the, 8: 1140
see also Holy Ghost; Jesus
Triptolemus (Greek mythology), 4: 563, 6: 745, 746
Trismosin, Salomon, on the panacea, 6: 751
Tristan (Tristram), 19: 2667-71
in Arthurian legend, 1: 125, 20: 2799
Brittany and, 2: 284
dragon killed by, 19: 2668
Wagner and, 19: 2667-8, 2671, 20: 2758
Trita (Hindu god), 5: 631
Trithemius (abbot of Spanheim), 4: 560
Triton (Greek merman) 19: 2679
Troano Manuscript, 11: 1515
Trobriand Islands, yam harvest festival in, 8: 1121
Trogenburg, Trogin (maze), 12: 1675
Trojan War, 19: 2672, 2673, 2674-5
Achilles and, 1: 49-50
Aphrodite and, 1: 112
Athene and, 1: 117, 2: 154s, 19: 2672 catalogue of ships, 20: 2864
origin of, 1: 50, 117
Penthesilea and, 1: 95
see also Agamemnon; Helen of Troy; Troy troll, 19: 2671
trough eyes, 6: 816
trout, 19: 2672
Troy (Ilion), 19: 2672-7
Carl Blegen and, 19: 2673, 2676
founding of, by Dardanus, 7: 915
mazes and, 12: 1675
Schliemann and, 8: 1075, 19: 2676
see also Atlantis; Cassandra; Hesione; Misenus; Trojan War Troy Towns (mazes), 12: 1675
Trude, Frau, 20: 2795
True Black Magic (The Secret of Secrets; grimoire), 4: 547, 8: 1090, 16: 2217, 2218
True Cross (Christianity), 4: 490, 16: 2179
trumpet, 19: 2677-9
in Nepal, 19: 2621
Truth (cosmic order), in Zoroastrianism, 20: 2873
see also Ahura Mazdah; Ohrmazd
tsaddikism (Hasidism), 8: 1126
T-shaped cross (crux commissa, St Anthony's cross, Tau cross), 4: 490, 492, 18: 2582
Tsimshian Indians, moon and, 9: 1194
Tsou Yen (Chinese philosopher), 1: 53
Tu (Ku; Polynesian god), 15: 2070
Tuatha De Danann, Irish mythological people, 20: 2786
Tuesday, 4: 546, 547, 7: 994
see also Shrove Tuesday
Tugdual, Archbishop, 20: 2767, 2768
Tulouff, Martin (witch), 2: 286
tulpa, 19: 2679
Tunstead Farm (Derbyshire), skull at, 8: 1132
Tuonela (Finnish land of the dead), 7: 885
Turan (Etruscan goddess), Venus identified with, 6: 781 turkey, at Christmas, 3: 418
Turms (Etruscan god), Mercury identified with, 6: 781
Turner, Victor W., ritual studied by, 16: 2214-16
Turner, William (herbalist), on mandrake, 12: 1617, 1620
turquoise, 10: 1413, 1415
Turin shroud, 19: 2680
turtle, Vishnu incarnate as, see tortoise Tutankhamen (pharaoh), 6: 732, 9: 1296
amulets of meteoric iron in tomb of, 10: 1358
corn-mummy from tomb of, 19: 2719-20 gold coffin of, 6: 278-9
gold sarcophagus of, 8: 1041
Nefertiti and, 9: 1296
scarab jewel from tomb of, 16: 2294
Twelfth Night, 3: 421, 19: 2681
twelve, 1: 91, 19: 2613, 2681
completeness of, 19: 2681
in Revelation, 19: 2681
seven and, 19: 2681
twelve apostles of Jesus, 19: 2681
twelve days of Christmas, 19: 2681
twelve Imams, see Imams twelve Labours of Hercules, 9: 1188-9 twelve Olympian gods of Greece, 8: 1076
twelve tribes of Israel, 11: 1544, 19: 2681
Hebrew alphabet and, 1: 91, 3: 323
Tarot pack and, 1: 91, 3: 327
Twilight of the Gods (Scandinavian mythology), see Ragnarok twins, 19: 2682-6
birth of, 19: 2683
Brazilian myth of, 2: 274
Kwakiutl Indians and, 16: 2281
Mani, twin self of, 8: 1027, 19: 2684
in Nigeria, 19: 2683, 2686
Nuer and, 19: 2683
Ohrmazd and Ahriman as, 20: 2880
in the Old Testament, 19: 2683-4
salmon and, 16: 2281
telepathy and, 19: 2685
St Thomas as twin of Jesus, 19: 2684
twin gods, 19: 2684
Germanic and Scandinavian, 7: 995-6
Greek, see Dioscuri
Indian, see Asvins
zodiac sign of the Twins, see Gemini
see also Hercules, Iphicles and; Romulus and Remus
two, 14: 1893, 1895
evil and, 14: 1892-3
names adding to, 14: 1893
one and, 14: 1893, 19: 2612
in Pythagoreanism, 15: 2146
three and, 19: 2612
two-faced god, see Janus
Two Brothers, Tale of the, 7: 923
Twrch Trwyth (boar; Arthurian legend), 1: 106, 1: 122, 7: 890, 11: 1572
Tyburn (London), gallows at, 4: 495
Tylor, Sir Edward (anthropologist), 1: 108, 108, 7: 925
Tylwyth Teg (Welsh fairies), 6: 830
Tyno Helig (Welsh lost land legend), 7: 915-6
Typhon, 8: 1017, 17: 2337
Etna and, 9: 1178
Set identified with, 6: 732, 17: 2337, 2341
Tyr (Scandinavian god), 7: 994, 16: 2289
Fenris wolf bound by, 7: 994, 20: 2820
at Ragnarok, 16: 2292
Tyre (Phoenician city), 14: 1963, 15: 2031-2
Tyrnoc (Dyrnawg; giant), cauldron of, 8: 1061
Tyrrell, G.N.M., on ghosts, 7: 1008

U

Ubaydallah (Mahdi), 12: 1601
Ueueteotl (Mexican god), 2: 183
Uffington, white horse of, 2: 104
UFOs, 12: 1698, 19: 2687
and crop circles, 4: 487
and megaliths, 12: 1693
and regression, 16: 2171
see also alien visitors; Men in Black Ugarit (Phoenician city, near modern Ras Shamra), texts from, 1: 132, 2: 188, 5: 644, 15: 2028, 18: 2540
Uggae (Babylonian death god), 4: 558
Uighurs, Mu and, 11: 1514
Ukko (Ilmarinen, Jumala; Finnish god), 7: 884
rainbow and, 15: 2153
salt and, 16: 2282
Ukobach (demon), 6: 795
Ullikummi (Hittite monster), 9: 1223
Ulster Cycle, 4: 506-7
Ulysses (Greek hero), see Odysseus
Uma (wife of Shiva; Hinduism), 9: 1216, 17: 2367
Umall (Irish legend), see Cumall
Umbanda (Macumba; Brazilian spiritism), 17: 2422, 2424, 2426-7, 20: 2574, 2575
umbrella, 17: 2395
in Cruikshank cartoon, 17: 2395
in Ethiopia, 6: 773
of peacock feathers, 14: 1998
umra (Islam), 10: 1370
Unani (medical system), 9: 1181
Unas (pharaoh), 16: 2295
Uncle Remus, 1: 62, 2: 283
unconscious, the (subconscious):
J. W. Dunne's view of, 15: 2101
Freud and, 7: 962
Jung and, 20: 2776
collective unconscious, 11: 1457
psi and, 17: 2455
revealed through automatisms, 14: 1942
see also automatic art; automatic writing; mediums
water as symbol of, 20: 2776
see also collective unconscious

unction, anointing, 14: 1932
anointing of Jesus, 14: 1913, 1914
anointing of kings, 11: 1480, 14: 1913-4 unction of the sick (Catholic sacrament), 14: 1914
see also extreme unction Uncumber, St (Santa Liberata, St Wilgeforte), 19: 2687
undines (elementals), 6: 743
unguents, witches', see flying ointment Uni (Etruscan goddess), 6: 781
unicorn, 19: 2688-90
in alchemy, 19: 2690
bear and, 2: 208
in the Bible, 19: 2689
captured by virgin, 19: 2688, 2689
in China (ki-lin), 5: 633, 14: 2036, 19: 2690
in Christian symbolism, 19: 2689
horn of, 19: 2688, 2689-90
lion and, 19: 2689, 2690
of Mohenjo-daro, 10: 1334, 1335
opposites, combination of, symbolized by, 14: 2690
unidentified flying objects, see UFOs
United States of America: 19: 2691-8
Divine Principles sect in, 5: 606 extra-sensory perception studied in, 15: 2109-2110
see also Duke University
first saint of see Cabrini, St Frances Rosicrucianism in, 16: 2247
witchcraft in, see Salem witches see also Afro-American lore; Black Muslims; Mardi Gras; North American Indians; Ozarks; snakehandling cults, Washington, George Unity School of Christianity, 13: 1862 universe, cosmos, nature of:
Chinese view of, 12: 1612
see also Yin and Yang
god's role in, Graeco-Roman views on, 15: 2079
man as copy of, see macrocosm and microcosm sex act and, 15: 2026
see also cosmic order; cosmogony; great chain of being; one, the One, as divine principle; spheres, heavenly Universe (World, Tarot card), 14: 1946, 18: 2571, 2572
'unknown gods', 6: 824
unleavened bread, at Passover, 10: 1438
untouchables (India), 3: 354, 9: 1221
Upanishads (Hindu sacred texts), 9: 1209, 1211, 20: 2710-1
Brahman in, 2: 270, 9: 1211
dualism in, 5: 669
mysticism and, 13: 1815
Upelluri (Hittite giant), 9: 1223
Up-helly-aa (Shetland fire festival), 7: 893, 13: 1864
Uppsala, see Old Uppsala
Ur (Mesopotamia):
Chaldeans and, 3: 383
goat and, 18: 2540
moon god of, 10: 1363
Urania (Muse), 13: 1789
Uranus (Greek god), 1: 111, 17: 2391, 19: 2699
Uranus (planet), in astrology, 1: 143, 19: 2699
urban legends, 19: 2700-1
Urban VI (pope), 3: 362
Urban VIII (pope), 10: 1378
eclipse feared by, 11: 1582
on exorcism, 6: 800
attempt on life of, 10: 1380
Uriel (angel), north and, 5: 588
Urim and Thummim (divination), 11: 1547
urine, 3: 320, 14: 1976, 19: 2699
see also witch bottle
urn, funerary:
Ashanti, 1: 128
Brazilian, 4: 514
Zapotec, 13: 1736
Urnfield culture, Celts and, 3: 373
Ursula, St, and the 11,000 virgins, 19: 2687
Uruk (Mesopotamian city), see Erech
ushabti (Egypt), 2: 252, 13: 1788
Utnapishtim (Babylonian flood legend), 6: 755, 7: 912, 8: 1019, 16: 2264
Utu (Mesopotamian sun god), see Shamash

V

Vafthrudnir (giant, Scandinavian mythology), 20: 2809
Vaikuntha (paradise of Vishnu), 14: 1980
Väinämoinen (Finnish hero), 7: 884
Vairocana (Buddha), 3: 301
Vaisheshika (Hinduism), 20: 2846
Vaisyas (caste, Hinduism), 3: 353
Vajrapani (Bodhisattva), 19: 2620
Vajrayana (Tantric Buddhism), see Buddhism, Tantric
Valdesi, see Waldenses
Valencia, Pedro de, on Basque witchcraft, 2: 203
Valentine card, 9: 1159, 1163, 15: 2050
Valentinus (Gnostic), 5: 668, 8: 1028
Valhalla (Scandinavian mythology), 14: 1911, 1982, 19: 2702
Valiente, Doreen (modern witch), 4: 467
Valkyries, 7: 995, 14: 1907, 1911
see also Brynhild
valley, symbolism of, 11: 1504
Vallin, Pierre (witch), 7: 957
Valnet, Dr Jean, and aromatherapy, 1: 119
vampire, 19: 2702-8
Montague Summers and, 18: 2498
see also Dracula
Vandy, Edgar, 12: 1684-5
van Helmont, Jan Baptist, 6: 750, 15: 2028
Vanir (Scandinavian deities of fertility), 7: 965, 16: 2289
in Germanic mythology, 7: 995
see also Freyja; Freyr
Varaha (Vishnu), 1: 105, 16: 2175, 20: 2746
Varney the Vampire, 19: 2703, 2703
Varuna (Indian god), 6: 814, 10: 1335, 17: 2392
Vasudeva (Hinduism), 20: 2746
Vasudhara (Buddhist earth goddess), 12: 1615
Vaudois, see Waldenses
Vayu (Iranian god), 20: 2876
Vedanta, 13: 1819, 19: 2709-15, 20: 2846
as a dualist system, 5: 669
Vedas (Hindu sacred texts), 2: 270, 9: 1209, 10: 1334, 19: 2710-1, 2716
creation myth of Purusha in, 3: 353-4
dragon myths of, 5: 631
eagle in, 5: 682
god of the dead in, 4: 558
sacrifice in, 9: 1209, 10: 1335, 16: 2264
social divisions in, 3: 353
yoga study of (jnana yoga), 20: 2847
see also Upanishads, Vedanta
Veddas (forest tribe of Sri Lanka), 19: 2716-8
vegetation spirits, 19: 2718-23
Adonis as, 1: 113, 5: 676
Attis as, 2: 161, 4: 523, 7: 891, 19: 2721
Baal as, 2: 188, 189, 15: 2030-1, 18: 2541, 19: 2720-1
Janus as, 10: 1388
king and, 11: 1474, 19: 2721
Osiris as, 7: 891, 15: 1940, 19: 2719
Tammuz as, 18: 2554
see also Demeter; tree spirits
Veles (Slav god), see Volos
Vena (wicked king; Hindu mythology), 5: 670
Veneration of the Cross ('Creeping to the Cross'; Good Friday ritual), 5: 702
Venice, Doge of, sea married to, 17: 2323
Venner, Thomas (preacher), 17: 2329, 2330
Venus (goddess), 13: 1782, 16: 2230, 19: 2723-7
Aphrodite identified with, 1: 111, 19: 2723
birth of, 1: 111, 112
copper and, 4: 459
Cupid and Psyche and, 6: 767
dove and, 5: 621, 622
Erycina, 19: 2723-4 gardens and, 19: 2723
green and, 4: 459
see also emerald, above
Hadrian and, 19: 2724
Julius Caesar and, 19: 2724
Lancelot and, 11: 1499
Mars and, 19: 2726
meaning of the name, 19: 2723
of Milo, 1: 113
myrtle and, 19: 2726
pearl and, 14: 2001
of Rhodes, 19: 2723
Rokeby Venus (Velazquez), 17: 2343
rose and, 16: 2237
sewers and, 19: 2726
Venus (planet), 19: 2727
in astrology, 1: 143, 11: 1524, 19: 2727
jewels associated with, 10: 1413
in Mesopotamia, 10: 1364
Mother Goddess and, 13: 1799
see also Evening Star; Morning Star
Venuses, prehistoric, see faceless goddesses
Verminus (Roman god of cattle worms), 16: 2232
Veronica, St, veil of, 16: 2178
Verrall, Mrs, cross-correspondences and, 4: 493
Verrall, Helen (later Mrs W. H. Salter), cross-correspondences and, 4: 493 Versailles adventure (Moberly and Jourdain), 19: 2727-8
verse, see poets, poetry
vervain (Cerealis, Demetria, Mercury's Blood, Persephonion, Tears of Juno/Isis), 19: 2728
Vesey, Denmark, 1: 62
vessels of plenty, Celtic, 8: 1059
Vesta (Roman goddess), 9: 1164, 19: 2729
Hestia identified with, 16: 2234, 19: 2729
Vestal Virgins, 9: 1164, 19: 2729
Vianney, Jean-Marie-Baptiste, see Curé of Ars
vibration, 19: 2729-31
see also radiesthesia; spheres, music of Vidar (son of Odin), 16: 2292
Vienna, Council of (AD 1311), 15: 2148
vigil, 19: 2731
Vikar, King, Odin and, 14: 1909
Vikings, 14: 1907, 1909
ship burials of, 7: 965 swords of, 18: 2526
see also berserkers
Villa of the Mysteries (Pompeii), 5: 585, 7: 911, 932, 13: 1808-9, 19: 2731
Villate, Joseph Rene, 20: 2768, 2768, 2769
Vinalia (Roman festivals), 19: 2723
Vincent, St, raven and, 4: 497
vine, 19: 2732
Dionysus and, 5: 583, 584
viper's bugloss (herb), 9: 1185, 1186

Viracocha (Peruvian creator), 10: 1324, 1325
Virgil, 19: 2732
in Dante's Divine Comedy, 4: 542
on the Golden Age, 19: 2632
magical reputation of, 15: 2056
see also Aeneid
Virgin (zodiac sign), see Virgo
virgin births, 19: 2732-6
of Jesus, 10: 1320, 12: 1647, 19: 2732
virginity, 19: 2736
of Hera, annually restored, 7: 946
unicorn captured by a virgin, 19: 2688, 2689
white as symbol of, 20: 2791
see also Mary, the Virgin; Vestal Virgins; virgin births Virgin Mary, see Mary, the Virgin
Virgo (the Virgin; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 143, 20: 2743
Vishnu (Indian god), 9: 1215, 1216, 10: 1335, 11: 1531, 20: 2744-6
asleep, on the serpent Ananta 17: 2402
cosmic serpent Shesha and, 20: 2746
Ganges and, 7: 979
Garuda and, 2: 229, 9: 1212
incarnations of, 10: 1320, 20: 2746
as a boar (Varaha), 1: 106, 16: 2175, 20: 2746
as Buddha, 20: 2746
as a dwarf, 20: 2746
as a fish, 20: 2746
as a man-lion, 17: 2395, 20: 2746
as a tortoise (or turtle), 10: 1321, 20: 2746
as a white horse, 17: 2354
see also Krishna; Rama; Vishvarupa Indra and, 20: 2744
lotus and, 20: 2746
in mandala, 12: 1614
Narayana and, 10: 1320, 20: 2744
paradise of, 14: 1980
as sustainer of the universe, 2: 271, 20: 2746
time and, 19: 2628
in trinity with Brahma and Shiva, 2: 271, 20: 2746
wife of, see Lakshmi
Vishvamitra (yogi), 17: 2332
Vishvarupa (Vishnu), 12: 1607
visions, 20: 2746-50
apparitions, hallucinations, compared with, 20: 2746
of St Bernadette of Lourdes, 11: 1555
of Blake, 2: 241, 20: 2748
Great Plains Indians and, 5: 710, 8: 1070
of St Hildegard of Bingen, 20: 2749
Virgin Mary seen in, 20: 2750, 2763
see also St Bernadette above
Visitation, Order of the, 7: 949
Visvarupa (serpent; Indian myth), 5: 631
Vitus, St, dancing mania and, 4: 540
Vivekananda, Swami (Hindu reformer), 9: 1218-9
Vix (France), cauldron of, 3: 420
vodun (spirits; Dahomey), 4: 524
Vodyanoy (Slav water spirits), 17: 2400
volantica (Roman witch), 10: 1378
volcanoes:
St Brendan and, 2: 282
as giants' burial-places, 8: 1017
Hephaestus associated with, 9: 1178, 17: 2408
origin of the word, 9: 1178
see also Etna; obsidian; Santorin Volcanus (Roman god), see Vulcan
völkisch movement, 13: 1838, 18: 2517
Vollrath, Hugo (occultist), 13: 1829
Volos (Veles; Slav god), 17: 2398
Volsungs (Scandinavian heroes), 9: 1202
Frigg and, 7: 965
shape-shifting and, 17: 2356
volta, la (witches' dance), 10: 1380
Voltumna (Etruscan god), 6: 781
Völuspá, end of the world in, 6: 755, 16: 2290
Voodoo, 20: 2751-6
Dahomey and, 4: 524, 19: 2664
initiation in, 20: 2753-4
magic and, 20: 2751-3
marriage and, 20: 2754
obeah and, 20: 2751
origin of, 4: 524, 20: 2751
possession in, 5: 651, 15: 2078, 19: 2649, 2652, 20: 2754-6
priests of, 20: 2753-6
sex and, 20: 2754-6
soul (gros bon ange), in, 20: 2752
trance in, 19: 2649, 2652
see also Damballa; zombies Voorthuizen, Louwrens van, see Lou Vril Society (the Luminous Lodge), 11: 1568
Vulcan (Volcanus, Roman god), 9: 1178
Vulcano (island), Hephaestus and, 9: 1178
vulture:
in augury, 2: 162
founding of Rome and, 7: 944
in the Bible, 14: 2002
in Egypt, 2: 231

W

Wachler, Dr Ernst, 13: 1838
waft (double), 5: 615
Wagner, Richard, 20: 2757-9
Nibelungenlied and, 13: 1867, 20: 2758
Tristan and, 19: 2667-8, 2671, 20: 2758
Wahhabi sect (Islam), Sufism banned by, 18: 2497
Wailing Wall (Jerusalem), 10: 1403, 15: 2042
Waite, A. E., 20: 2759
Cabala and, 3: 327, 20: 2759
Golden Dawn and, 8: 1045, 20: 2759
Tarot and, 3: 345, 18: 2568-71
theosophy and, 20: 2759
wake (burial), dancing at, 4: 538
Wakefield, mystery play cycle of, 13: 1804-6
Waldenses (Valdesi, Vaudois, Poor Men of Lyons), 3: 411, 20: 2759-62
phoenix in bestiary of, 15: 2034
Waldo, Peter, 20: 2759-60
Waldorf School, 18: 2481
wallaby, 1: 104
Walpurgisnacht, witches and, 6: 785
Walsingham, 20: 2763-4
Walworth Jumpers (Girlingites, Bible Christians, Children of God, English Shakers), 8: 1021, 20: 2764
wampum beads, 10: 1360,1362
wand, 20: 2765-7
in magic, see magic wand
wandering bishops (episcopi vagantes), 20: 2767-70
Wandering Jew (Ahasuerus), 20: 2770
war:
Christian attitudes to, 3: 408, 410
holy, see holy war
Mars as god of, 12: 1643
superstitions revived in time of, 18: 2509
Warboys, witches of, 9: 1272, 1275
Wardley, James (Shaker), 17: 2350
Warminster (Wilts),
crop circles, 4: 488
warts, cure of:
ash tree, 1: 126
cat's tail, 3: 357
knotted string, 18: 2493
Lord's Prayer, 10: 1318
pins, 14: 1952
snails, 17: 2408
spider's web, 17: 2437
tobacco juice, 19: 2640
Washington, George, Freemasonry and, 7: 954, 954-5
Wasson, Gordon, on mushrooms, 13: 1789, 1791
Waste Land (Arthurian legend), 8: 1059, 1064
Watchers, the, 4: 572, 8: 1015, 1033
Watchman movement (Africa), 17: 2330
water, 20: 2771-76
in alchemy, 20: 2776
chaos and, 20: 2775
in creation myths, 2: 195, 4: 471, 473-4
the dead, their need of, see refrigerium divination by (hydromancy), 17: 2315
dragon and, 5: 630
in Easter customs, 5: 699
in Egypt, 2: 195, 197, 16: 2169-70, 2170
see also Nile
as element, 6: 742
end of the world and, 6: 753
evil spirits and, 6: 800
fertility and, 6: 860
green and, 8: 1081
harvest and, 4: 456, 8: 1120-3
in Mesopotamian mythology, see Apsu; Tiamat
as mirror, 13: 1749
moon and, 20: 2776
New Year and, 13: 1863-5
in the Old Testament, 20: 2772
Roman god of, see Neptune
Slavs and, 17: 2400
spirits of, see kelpies; Lorelei; naiads; nereids; nixies; Oceanides; Rusalki; Vodyanoy
symbolism of, 11: 1504
as symbol of the unconscious, 20: 2776
turned to wine by Jesus, see marriage of Cana witches and, see floating of witches
woman and, 20: 2776
see also baptism; flood; fountain; lakes; rain; rivers; sea; springs; wells Water-carrier (zodiac sign), see Aquarius
water divining, 5: 623
Waterhouse, Agnes (witch), 5: 689, 6: 840
water-lily, as the lotus of mythology, 11: 1548
Wathatotaro (American Indian chief), 10: 1360
Watkins, Alfred, and ley lines, 11: 1522
Watson, Lyall, describes psychic surgery, 15: 2116
Watts, Mrs Alaric (automatic painter), 2: 171
wax images, see image magic way, the, as symbol, see path symbolism
Wayland the Smith, 7: 994, 17: 2408, 18: 2522
weather magic, 20: 2777-8
birds and, 19: 2617
at funerals, 17: 2394-5
gods of:
Hittite, see Teshub
Indian, see Indra
Phoenician, see Baal, as weather god see also sky, gods of lore of:
diver, 5: 596
oak and ash, 14: 1903
in the Ozarks, 14: 1952
pig, 15: 2040
rainbow, 15: 2155

robin, 16: 2223
rook, 12: 1598
wolf in descriptive terms for, 20: 2821
see also frost; ice; rain; sky; snow; storm; thunder and lightning; weathercock; weather magic weathercock, 3: 426
weather magic, 20: 2777-8
ashes and, 1: 129
see also rain-making wedding, see marriage; wedding-cake; wedding ring wedding-cake, 12: 1638
wedding ring, 16: 2207-9
Wednesday, 4: 546
week, 4: 547
see also days
Wei Po-Yang (Chinese alchemist), 6: 749
Weir, Thomas, 20: 2779
Weishaupt, Adam (founder of the Illuminati), 10: 1303
Welling, Georg von, 8: 1037
wells, 18: 2472
cursing well of St Aelian, 4: 521, 18: 2473-5
dragons and, 5: 630
dressing of, 6: 860, 18: 2472
holy, 18: 2472-3
Celts and, 8: 1144
hawthorn and, 8: 1135
saints and, 18: 2473
symbolism of, 11: 1504
wishing-well, 18: 2475, 20: 2814
Wells, H. G., 16: 2300, 2301-2
Welsh Revival (1904-5), 14: 2004, 17: 2433
Wen, King, and the I Ching, 9: 1282, 1284-5
Wenham, Jane (witch), 6: 796, 9: 1277
werewolf (loup-garou), 20: 2779-83
of Eschenbach, 20: 2781
Gilles Garnier, 20: 2781-2
of Gevaudan, 20: 2782
Jean Grenier, 8: 1082, 20: 2782
in Haiti, 20: 2752
in Petronius' Satyricon, 17: 2356
revenants as, 20: 2782
silver bullet used to kill, 20: 2783
Peter Stubb, 20: 2781
were-animals other than wolves, 11: 2779
witches as, 20: 2781
Wesley, John (preacher), 6: 763-4, 9: 1227
west, 5: 588
Westcott, Dr Wynn, Golden Dawn and, 8: 1043-5,19: 2731
Western Mystery Tradition, 20: 2784-6
Westmorland, Lady (altar frontal), 19: 2607
Weyer, Johann (demonologist), see Wier, John
whale, 20: 2787-8
in the bestiary, 2: 218-9, 20: 2787
St Brendan and, 2: 281, 282
Inuit and, 20: 2788
Jonah and, 10: 1428, 1428, 1429, 1429, 1430, 1430, 20: 2787, 2787
mermaid and, 20: 2788
North American Indians and, 20: 2788
wheat, see corn
wheel, 20: 2788-91
in Ezekiel's vision, 20: 2790-1
of fortune, 20: 2789
in fortune-telling (cards), 3: 343-4
in medieval symbolism, 20: 2789, 2790
Tarot card, see Wheel of Fortune
in Greece, 20: 2789
as Jain symbol of time, 20: 2788
of life (Buddhism and Hinduism), 11: 1466, 1467, 1467, 20: 2789
midsummer and, 20: 2789
as symbol of the sun, 20: 2788
see also disk
Tarot and, 18: 2569
see also Wheel of Fortune (Tarot card) wheel dances, see ring dances
wryneck and, 20: 2839
see also prayer wheel
Wheel of Fortune (of Life; Tarot card), 18: 2571, 2571, 20: 2789
whipping, see flagellation
Whiro (Maori god), 5: 631
Whitby, Daniel, 17: 2328
Whitby, Synod of, see Synod of Whitby
white, 20: 2791-2
in Christian symbolism, 7: 973, 20: 2791
death and, 20: 2792
moon and, 4: 459
Philosophers' Stone and, 12: 1705 15: 2027
in race myths, 20: 2792
in ritual magic, 16: 2219
silver and, 4: 459
as symbol of purity, 3: 431, 7: 973, 20: 2791
as symbol of virginity, 20: 2791
white animals, 20: 2792
white birds, 2: 231
white flowers, 7: 916
White, John (artist), Algonquin Indians painted by, 1: 81, 83, 84
White, Mrs Eve (multiple personality), 13: 1784-5
White Book of Rhydderch (Welsh tales), 11: 1569
White Boys (Manx mummers), 7: 920
Whitehead, Paul, 9: 1163, 12: 1690 white horse of Uffington, 1: 104
white magic, 20: 2792-5
distinguished from black magic, 4: 559
in Africa, 1: 59
witchcraft and, 20: 2795, 2816
see also cunning men; evil eye, protection against; witch bottle
whitethorn, see hawthorn
Whitsun, 20: 2796
see also Pentecost
Wicca (modern witchcraft), 13: 1755-8
wicken (tree), see rowan
Wickland, Dr Carl, 16: 2176
Wicliffe, John, see Wyclif, John
widdershins (anticlockwise), 3: 423, 20: 2796
widows, Hindu, suicide of, see suttee
Wiedemann, Jacob, 9: 1269
Wier, John (Johann Weyer; demonologist), 2: 211, 9: 1274-5
on Faust, 6: 845
Wihio (Cheyenne trickster), 8: 1069
Wild Edric, 20: 2796
wilderness, see desert
Wild Hunt, 20: 2796
Arthur associated with, 20: 2796
the Devil as leader of, 20: 2796
Holda as leader of, 9: 1226
Odin as leader of, 7: 995, 20: 2796
wildwood, 20: 2797-2803
see also Lailoken; woodwouse
Wilfrid, St, of Ripon, 12: 1650
Wilgeforte, St, see Uncumber, St
Wilkes, John, 12: 1690, 1690
Willermoz, Jean-Baptiste, Order of the Holy City founded by, 12: 1647
Willett, Mrs (Mrs Coombe Tennant), 20: 2804
cross-correspondences and, 4: 493, 20: 2804
William II (William Rufus), death fetch of, 5: 616
'William with the little flame', see will-o'-the-wisp
William of Malmesbury (chronicler):
Gawain, 7: 982
on Glastonbury, 8: 1024
William, Charles Edward (medium), Sir William Crookes and, 4: 486
Williams, Edward (Iolo Morganwg), Druids and, 5: 660 will-o'-the-wisp (corpse candle, corpse light, elf light, fairy fire, fetch candle, fetch light, foolish fire, fox fire, friar's lantern, ignis fatuus, Jack of the Bright Light, jack-o'-lantern, William with the little flame), 6: 829, 9: 1294, 15: 2127, 20: 2805, 2845
see also ghul; St Elmo's Fire
willow, 20: 2805-6
Hasidism and, 8: 1125
Wilson, John (peyote cults), see Nishkuntu
wind, 17: 2391
controlled by knotted string, 18: 2494
Enlil and, 17: 2394
from the four quarters of the compass, 17: 2390
Varuna and, 17: 2392
see also storm window, 9: 1259
wine:
Dionysus and, 5: 583, 583, 584, 585
'good wine needs no bush', 9: 1229
wings, 20: 2806-8
of Daedalus and Icarus, 18: 2506, 20: 2807
disk, winged, as sun symbol, 9: 1289, 1292, 20: 2788, 2808
of dragons, 20: 2807
of fairies, 20: 2807, 2808
horses, winged, 20: 2806
of divine messengers, 2: 228
of angels, 20: 2807
see also bat; birds; Harpies
Winifrid, St, 18: 2473
Winnebago Indians, trickster of, 19: 2663, 2666
Winner, Anna Kennedy, on the Masters, 12: 1669 Winstanley, Gerrard (leader of the Diggers), 17: 2328
winter, 20: 2809-14
bonfires lit at onset of, 14: 2010, 20: 2809
festivals of, 20: 2809
see also Christmas; midwinter; New Year; Saturnalia
Winther, Dr Christian, Anna Rasmussen and, 12: 1688
Wirth, Oswald (occultist), 2: 207, 3: 344, 14: 1974, 18: 2568
wisdom literature, 20: 2814
wish, 20: 2814
see also wish-bone; wishing-well
wish-bone, 8: 1051, 20: 2814
Wish Hounds (Wild Hunt), 20: 2796
wishing-well, 18: 2475, 20: 2814
witch balls, 6: 818
'Witch Bishop', see Dornheim, Prince-Bishop Gottfried von witch bottle, 2: 249, 4: 522, 19: 2699, 20: 2795
in East Anglia, 5: 691, 693
witchcraft, sorcery, 20: 2815-8
in Africa, see Africa, witchcraft
in America:
in New England, see Salem witches
in the Ozarks, 14: 1951
Pueblo Indians,15: 2132
black magic and, 2: 233-4
Black Mass and, 2: 235
in European history, see European witchcraft
finding of witches, 6: 785
see also pricking of witches
hysterical possession and witchcraft, 9: 1272
modern, see modern witchcraft

old age and witchcraft, 14: 1915
in primitive societies and in European history, comparison of, 20: 2816
psychology of witches and witchcraft accusations, 9: 1272
mental disorder, 9: 1272, 17: 2416
sexual repression, 9: 1275
social tension relieved by accusations, 7: 880-1, 14: 1917, 17: 2415, 20: 2817-8
sorcery and witchcraft distinguished, 20: 2878
in Southeast Asia, 17: 2430
women, witches seen as typically, 14: 1915, 17: 2416
Witchcraft Today (Gardner), 13: 1757
'witch-doctor', African, 1: 58-9
Azande, 2: 179
Bushmen, 3: 318
Congo, 4: 446, 452
divination by, 14: 1932
witch dolls, see image magic witchety grub (Australian totem), 7: 928
witches' mark, 6: 840, 15: 2082
Witch's Bible, The (Frost), 13: 1758
witch-wood (tree), see rowan
Witte, Alfred (astrologer), 1: 144
Wodan (Wotan, Germanic god), 7: 994-5
eagle and, 7: 995
meaning of the name, 7: 995
neo-pagan Germanic cults and, 13: 1838
Odin and, 7: 995
Wild Hunt and, 7: 995, 20: 2796
Woden (Anglo-Saxon god), 7: 995
wodewose, see woodwouse
wolf, 20: 2819-21
the Devil and, 20: 2821
Evil Eye averted by skin of, 20: 2821
Greek gods and, 20: 2819
Apollo, 1: 105, 114, 20: 2829
of Gubbio, St Francis and, 20: 2819, 2821
Inuit and, 10: 1352
in the Rig-Veda, 20: 2819
Romulus and Remus suckled by, 7: 942, 943, 19: 2684
in Scandinavian mythology:
Odin and, 7: 995, 14:1907*
sun and, 18: 2503
see also Fenris wolf
shape-shifting and, 20: 2821
see also werewolf
war gods and, 1: 105
weather, wolf in descriptive terms for, 20: 2821
witchcraft and, 20: 2821
werewolf, 20: 2781
Wolfdietrich (Teutonic hero), 7: 946
Wolfram von Eschenbach, 14: 1989
Wagner and, 20: 2758
Wolsey, Cardinal, 16: 2207
woman, 20: 2822-31
Berbers and, 2: 215
Christian attitudes to, 20: 2829 see also Adam, Eve and
in the Congo, 4: 447
in Egyptian tomb painting, 20: 2823
evilness of, 7: 904, 20: 2822
Zulu 20: 2878
see also Pandora
Hindu view of, 20: 2822
Kikuyu and, 11: 1471
in the Mahabharata, 20: 2825
Virgin Mary as ideal woman, 12: 1652
moon and, 13: 1765
in Peru, 10: 1327
Pueblo Indians and, 15: 2130
pygmies and, 15: 2139
in Tantrism, 18: 2557
Three Ages of (Baldung Grien), 4: 555
Touareg and, 19: 2645
uncleanness of, 20: 2825
water and, 20: 2776
witches seen as typically women, 14: 1915, 17: 2416
Zulu view of, 20: 2878
see also birth; first woman; marriage; menstruation; mother; Mother Goddess; pregnancy; prostitution; virginity; women's mysteries
women's mysteries, 20: 2832-5
Wood, Ernest (Theosophist), 18: 2590-1
woodhouse (wild man), see woodwouse Woodman, Dr, Golden Dawn and, 8: 1043
woodpecker, 20: 2836
in augury, 2: 162
fertility and, 20: 2836
as oracle of Mars, 12: 1644, 20: 2836
ploughing and, 20: 2836
rain and, 19: 2618, 20: 2836
springwort and, 20: 2836
thunder and, 20: 2836
woodwouse (wodewose, woodhouse; wildman of the woods), 7: 892, 20: 2799
woody nightshade (plant), see bittersweet nightshade
words, language:
in magic, 15: 2111
see also incantation; Mass; names; spells
music and, in religion, 13: 1793
see also alphabet; mantra; names; poets; posies (mottoes); riddles; song; speaking in tongues; writing World, the (Tarot card), see Universe
world mountain, 18: 2536
Eurasian, 15: 2095
see also Atlas
Hindu, 13: 1783, 16: 2188, 18: 2536
world tree and, 19: 2661
world serpent, cosmic snake, 17: 2337
in Hinduism, see Shesha
in Scandinavian mythology, see Midgard Serpent
world tree, cosmic tree, 18: 2536, 19: 2661
in Scandinavian mythology, see Yggdrasill
shamans and, 17: 2351-2
world mountain and, 19: 2661
see also Crucifixion, tree as the cross; Tree of Life Worth, Patience, 2: 171
Wotan, see Wodan
Wotan Society (Wachler), 13: 1838
Wovoka (North American Indian prophet), 7: 999
wraith, see phantasms of the living
wreath, 20: 2836
as crown, 4: 504, 11: 1511
death and, 4: 504
wren, 20: 2837
fire brought from heaven by, 20: 2837 killing of, on St Stephen's Day, 14: 1896, 20: 2837 St Malo and, 16: 2276, 20: 2837
owl and, 14: 1949
robin and, 16: 2222, 20: 2837
writing, 1: 90
see also alphabet; hieroglyphs; papyrus; parchment; runes
Wroe, John, 17: 2428
Wronski, Joseph Maria Hoëne-, 11: 1519, 20: 2838-9
wryneck (bird), 20: 2839
Wulff, Wilhelm (astrologer), Nazism and, 13: 1832
Wulfstan, St, beards shaved by, 8: 1110
Wundt, Wilhelm (psychologist), on dreaming, 11: 1575
Wurusemu (Hattic goddess), 9: 1222
Würzburg, witch trials of, 7: 998, 990
Wu Ti (Chinese emperor), 20: 2856-7
Wyclif (Wicliffe), John, 3: 411, 9: 1193
wyvern, 2: 250

X

X, Malcolm (Black Muslim), 2: 238
Xanthus (horse of Achilles), 8: 1118
Xaphan (demon), 6: 795
Xavier, St Francis, 16: 2270
Xerxes (Persian king), 20: 2876
Xipe Totec (Tezcatlipoca), 2: 185, 19: 2721
Xiuhtecuhtli (Toltec fire god), 7: 894
Xolotl (Evening Star, Mexican deity), 2: 184
X-shaped cross (crux decussata; St Andrew's cross), 4: 490

Y

Yahweh (YHWH, Jehovah), 20: 2839-42
Gnostic view of, 16: 2283
as High God, 9: 1206
Israelites as chosen people of, 6: 739, 20: 2839
name of, 20: 2839
see also Tetragrammaton
promised land and, 6: 739, 20: 2840
sacrifice of the first-born to, 7: 900
as storm god, 5: 631
temple of, at Jerusalem, see Jerusalem
as war god, 20: 2840
Zealots and, 20: 2852
yakku (spirits, Sri Lanka), 19: 2716
Yama (Indian god):
as first man, 4: 558, 19: 2683
as god of the dead, 14: 1982, 19: 2683
Yama (Tibetan god), 9: 1176
yama (yoga), 19: 2714, 20: 2848
yang and yin (China), see yin and yang
yang chai and ying chai, in Feng-shui, 6: 853
yantra (mandala), 12: 1616
yarrow (bloodwort, knight's milfoil, soldier's woundwort), 9: 1186, 13: 1743, 15: 2049
Yarthkins (Fenland fairies), 6: 830
Yathrib (Medina), 13: 1760
see also Medina
Yeats, W.B., 8: 1045, 1045, 20: 2842-4
Blake and, 2: 241-2, 20: 2843
on Mme Blavatsky, 2: 247
collective unconscious and, 20: 2844
Golden Dawn and, 3: 242, 8: 1044-5, 20: 2843
S. L. Mathers and, 20: 2843
G. W. Russell and, 16: 2252
Theosophical Society and, 20: 2843
Yee King, see I Ching
yellow, 2: 231, 3: 432, 4: 459, 5: 590
see also bile
Yellow Emperor, see Huang Ti
Yellow Hats (dGe-lug-pa; Tibetan religious order), 19: 2623-4
Yeth Hounds (Wild Hunt), 20: 2796
yeti, see abominable snowman
yew, 19: 2661, 20: 2845-6
Yezidi (sect; Iraq), 5: 668
Yggdrasill (ash tree, the World Tree; Scandinavian mythology), 1: 126, 126, 16: 2290, 2292, 20: 2846
YHWH (Yahweh), see Tetragrammaton
yin and yang, 1: 52, 3: 393,12: 1612, 20: 2846
dragons and, 5: 634
I Ching and, 9: 1282
Taoism and 18: 2564
Yiyi (West African spider myth), 4: 557

Ymir (giant; Scandinavian mythology), 4: 468, 475, 8: 1017, 16: 2290
Ynys-witrin (Isle of Glass), 8: 1022-4
yoga, 12: 1677, 17: 2333, 19: 2620, 20: 2846-51
astral body and 1: 136
breath control (pranayama) in, 2: 279, 11: 1494, 12: 1677, 20: 2849
concentration (dharana) in, 12: 1677, 20: 2850
drug experiences compared with, 20: 2851
magical feats and yoga powers distinguished, 20: 2851
meditation (dhyana) in, 12: 1677, 20: 2850
sex and, 20: 2849
see also Vishvamitra
siddhis in, 20: 2851
Tantrism and, 18: 2556
third eye and, 19: 2606
trance and, 19: 2651, 2652
see also samadhi
types of, 19: 2712, 20: 2846
in Vedanta, 19: 2712
see also Kanphata, Kundalini
Yoga-Vedanta Forest Academy, 17: 2383 Yom Kippur, see atonement, Jewish day of yoni (female symbol; India), 9: 1195, 18: 2560
lotus and, 11: 1548
York, mystery play cycle of, 13: 1804-6
Young, Brigham, 13: 1771-2, 1773
Ys, Ville d', 2: 285
Yucatan (Mexico), Maya in, 12: 1672
Yugas (world ages, Hinduism and Buddhism), 6: 755
Yuki-onne (Japanese snow woman), 20: 2813 Yule, 3: 418
boar and, 2: 250
Yule log, 3: 418, 9: 1164, 1164
oak and, 14: 1903
olive and, 14: 1920

Z

Zachary (pope), anathema and, 4: 522
Zagreus (Greek mythology), 6: 791, 14: 2014, 20: 2862
Zamurrad (Persian giant), 18: 2474
Zapata (Mexican hero), 9: 1204
Zapotecs, 2: 180, 17: 1736
zar (Ethiopian spirit), 6: 777, 15: 2078
Zarathushtra, see Zoroaster
Zealots (Jewish history), 3: 404, 20: 2852-3
Jesus and, 3: 405, 10: 1410-12, 20: 2852-3
zebu, see East Indian humped zebu
Zedler, Johann Heinrich, 6: 749-50, 12: 1705
Zen Buddhism, 10: 1394, 20: 2854-61
Bodhisattvas in, 20: 2855
enlightenment (satori) in, 13: 1814, 20: 2854
meditation in, 12: 1678, 20: 2855, 2858-60
origin of the name, 20: 2855
riddle (koan) in, 20: 2859-60
Samurai and, 10: 1394
tea and, 10: 1394, 1396, 1400, 20: 2855
Zend-Avesta, see Avesta
Zener cards, 6: 804, 809, 15: 2109
Zeno (philosopher) 15: 2079
Zenobius, St, 6: 801
Zeno of Verona, on possession, 15: 2077
Zephaniah (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2099
Zeus, 8: 1074, 1075, 20: 2862-7
altar of, at Pergamon, 1: 93
Aphrodite and, 1: 112
Apollo and, 1: 114
Artemis and, 4: 574
Athene and, 2: 153, 15: 2093
Baal and, 2: 189
bear and,2: 210
bees and, 14: 1900
birth of, in Crete, 3: 370, 4: 460, 8: 1075, 14: 1900, 16: 2288, 20: 2867
birth of, elsewhere, 8: 1076
bull and, 8: 1075, 9: 1180, 1246, 20: 2864
see also Europa, below
Callisto and, 2: 210, 4: 574
Capricorn (constellation) and, see Amalthea Celeus and, 20: 2836
centre of the world sought by, 13: 1828 Chiron and, 3: 379
cock and, 2: 261
Crete and, 8: 1075, 20: 2862, 2864
see also birth of, in Crete, above
Cronus and, 4: 484
Cybele, Attis, and, 4: 523
Danae and, 17: 2394, 19: 2734
Dionysus and:
Cretan Zeus compared with Dionysus, 8: 1075-6
Zeus as father of Dionysus, 5: 583-4, 6: 791, 9: 1228, 13: 1791, 14: 2014
dryads and, 5: 666
as dying god, 8: 1075-6
eagle and, 5: 682, 20: 2865, 2866, 2866
Eleusis and, 6: 748
Eros and, 6: 765-6
Europa and, 3: 307, 18: 2582, 20: 2864
Ganymede abducted by, 20: 2865
gold, Zeus as shower of, see Danae, above Hades as the subterranean Zeus, 15: 2054
Hecate and, 9: 1166
Hephaestus and, 8: 1111, 9: 1177
Hera and, 4: 460, 5: 583, 9: 1177, 1179-80
Hercules his son, 9: 1188
as High God, 9: 1205, 17: 2391
honey of, stolen by Celeus, 20: 2836
Io and, 9: 1180
Ixion and, 3: 379, 20: 2789
Jupiter the counterpart of, 11: 1460
Leda and, 2: 230, 18: 2515-6
Lycaeus (Lykaios), 17: 2356, 20: 2779
Melissa and, 14: 1900
Minos and, 8: 1076
Minotaur and, 20: 2864
Olympian and Cretan forms distinguished, 8: 1075
Olympic Games and, 14: 1920, 20: 2866
oracle of, see Dodona
Persephone and, 14: 2012
Philomela and, 13: 1868
Prometheus and, 15: 2095
ram and, 17: 2357, 20: 2864
Sagittarius and, 3: 379
Semele and, 5: 583, 13: 1791
shape-shifting by, 17: 2354
see also Danae, above; Europa, above; Ganymede, above; Leda, above
as sky god, 17: 2391
statue of, by Pheidias, 9: 1290, 20: 2866
subterranean (katachthonios), see Hades, above thunder and lightning, thunderbolts, and, 9: 1205, 20: 2862, 2862, 2866
Zagreus and, 6: 791, 14: 2014
Zevi, Sabbatai, 8: 1125
Cabala and, 3: 326
Zhob valley, clay figurines from, 5: 687
ziggurat, 16: 2180
Tower of Babel based on, 19: 2649
Zinzendorf, Count, 6: 763, 9: 1227
Zion (Sion), hill of (Jerusalem), 10: 1404, 13: 1783-4, 20: 2867
Zion Christian Church, 12: 1726-7
Zionism, 10: 1433, 20: 2867
Star of David the emblem of, 10: 1440
Zion's Watch Tower Tract Society, see Jehovah's Witnesses 10: 1401 zircon (jewel), 10: 1415
Ziusudra (Sumerian flood legend), 6: 755, 7: 913
Zizka, John, 17: 2328
zodiac, 1: 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 20: 2867
at Glastonbury, 8: 1027
Golden Dawn and, 8: 1042
medieval calendar with, 6: 770
precession of the equinoxes and, 1: 118
signs of, see Aquarius; Aries; Cancer; Capricorn; Gemini; Leo; Libra; Pisces; Sagittarius; Scorpio; Taurus; Virgo
Zohar (Book of Splendour, Cabala), 3: 323
zombies, 14: 1932, 20: 2868-9
Zoroaster (Zarathushtra), 13: 1752, 14: 1912, 1985, 20: 2870-5
in 15th cent. Flemish miniature, 20: 2875
writings of (the Gathas), 14: 1912, 20: 2876
see also Zoroastrianism Zoroastrianism, 20: 2870-5
bridge to the land of the dead in, 11: 1453, 20: 2873
creation myths of, 14: 1912, 20: 2873, 2880
death and, 4: 558, 14: 1912
dualism in, 1: 66, 5: 667-8, 6: 791, 20: 2872-3, 2876, 2880
end of the world in, 14: 1912
evil principle, darkness, in, see Ahriman fire temple of, 20: 2872, 2873
first man myth of, see Gayomart
free will in, 1: 66, 20: 2873
good principle, light, in, see Ohrmazd heaven in, 20: 2873-4
hell in, 9: 1171, 20: 2873-4
judgement of the dead in, 11: 1453, 20: 2873
life after death in, 12: 1612
see also hell, above; judgement of the dead, above
Mani as Zoroastrian heretic, 9: 1191
monotheism in, 20: 2813, 2872
Parthians and, 14: 1991
sacred plant (haoma) in, 20: 2875
sacred text of, see Avesta
soul in, 12: 1612
time personified in, see Zurvan
see also Parsees
Zoser (pharaoh), 10: 1304-5
Zosimus, homunculus and, 9: 1236
Zu (Anzu; Mesopotamian deity), 5: 630, 12: 1717
Zugrun, Eleonore (medium), 15: 2064
Zulus, 20: 2876-9
rainbow and, 15: 2153, 20: 2878
Zuni Indians (Pueblo), 14: 1883, 15: 2130
Zurvan (Zoroastrianism), 1: 66, 5: 667-8, 16: 2293-4, 20: 2876, 2880
Zwingli, Ulrich, 15: 2080

STUDY INDEXES

The following classified subject indexes relate directly to the major thematic areas of the encyclopedia, as detailed in the Bibliography, Volume 1, pages 18-45, and provide an invaluable selective guide for in-depth study and research

1. Magic: The Secret Lore

alexandrite, 10: 1413
alrunes (amulets), 12: 1618
amethyst, 10: 1413-4, 1414
amulets, 1: 97, 18: 2550-1
cowrie-shell, 4: 463
eagle (Germanic), 8: 995
Egyptian, 18: 2545, 2550, 2552-3
in Tutankhamen's tomb, 10: 1358
in Ethiopia, 6: 778
Inuit, 10: 1355
mandrake, 12: 1618-9
phallic, Greek, 17: 2344
Phoenician, 18: 2545
as protection against the evil eye, 6: 818
analogies, in magic, 15: 2058-9
anaphrodisiac, 11: 1557-8, 1561
aphrodisiac, 11: 1557-9
ambergris, 20: 2788
honey, 9: 1238
love potion (philtre), 11: 1556, 1557
Arapaho Indians, medicine pipes of, 8: 1072
arthame (athame; magic knife), 13: 1756

balance, concept of in magic, 14: 1924
Barrett, Francis (author of The Magus), 2: 199-200
black magic, 2: 233
distinguished from white magic, 4: 559
in Africa, 1: 60
Gurdjieff on, 8: 1095-6
Kikuyu and, 11: 1470
as the left-hand path, 11: 1514
black mass, 2: 235
Brazil, 2: 272-5
bone-pointing (Australian magic), 2: 170, 10: 1310
Bluebeard, 2: 249, 8: 1020

camphor, as an aphrodisiac, 14: 2011
Candlemas, 3: 340, 421
carnelian, 10: 1415
centre, the:
pentagram and, 14: 2002
symbolism of, 18: 2536
chalcedony, 10: 1414-5
charms, 3: 385, 18: 2508-9
hare's foot as, 5: 589, 8: 1116
in love magic, 11: 1557-9
sleep induced by, 17: 2401-2
Chintamani (wishing-gem), 10: 1416
chrysolite, sun associated with, 10: 1413
contagious magic, Frazer's use of term, 5: 590-1, 10: 1309
copper (metal), 4: 459
coral, 10: 1416
correspondences, 4: 459, 11: 1580-1
of jewels, 10: 1412-6
land and sea, 7: 909
macrocosm/microcosm and, 11: 1573
counter-charm, 4: 466
cowrie shell:
as fertility amulet, 4: 463
cross-correspondences, 2: 174-5, 4: 493-4, 12: 1686, 15: 2107,20: 2804
crossroads, 3: 315, 4: 495

days, 4: 546-7
finger-nails cut on various, 7: 883
planets associated with, 4: 459, 546
directions, 5: 588
cross and, as symbol of the world, 18: 2536
demons associated with, 5: 588
jade and, in china, 10: 1384
mountains and, 13: 1783
pentagram and, 14: 2002
dolls,
Kachinas, of Pueblo Indians, 14: 1885, 15: 2132

eight, 14: 1894
as number of Jesus, 8: 1066
elementals, 6: 743
artificial, magically created, 11: 1583,, 15: 2113
fairies as, 6: 832
emerald, 10: 1413, 1414
evocation (magic), 6: 797, 11: 1582
invocation and, 11: 1583
eye, 6: 813-22
black diamond and, 10: 1414
of dragons, 5: 630
in Egypt, 6: 814, 817, 822
of Re, 2: 258-9, 6: 733 Gorgons, eyes of, 8: 1053
of Marduk, 6: 1289
of Odin, sacrificed, 7: 946
in the peacock's tail, 6: 820, 821, 822, 14: 1998

fakir, 5: 713, 6: 835-6
Fian, John (Scottish wizard), 8: 1111, 14: 1886
fingernails, 7: 883
fingers, 7: 882-3
crossed for luck, 7: 996
Evil Eye averted by, 7: 996
of God, in art, 7: 996
to nose, 7: 997
in palmistry, 8: 1108
first, 7: 900-1
Janus as god of beginnings, 10: 1388
five, 14: 1895
forces, 7: 936-7
four, 14: 189, 19: 2613

garlic, 7: 980, 15: 2048-9
Hecate and, 7: 980
as protection against vampires, 19: 2704, 2705
garnet, (jewel), 10: 1414, 18: 2551
Golem, 8: 1047-8
film, 7: 872, 8: 1047
Grand Grimoire (Red Dragon), 8: 1090
on the magic circle, 3: 422
on the magic wand, 16: 2218
on pact with a demon, 14: 1961
green, 3: 432, 8: 1081
Aphrodite and, 4: 459
copper and, 4: 459
fairies and, 6: 830
spring and, 8: 1081
grey (eolour), Mercury and, 4: 459
Grimoire of Honorius the Great, 8: 1090
frontispiece of, 16: 2218
incantations from, 5: 588
grimoires (magical texts), 8: 1189-90, 16: 2217
demons described in, 16: 2194
Gundestrup (Jutland) cauldron of, 3: 363, 363, 374, 5: 708, 9: 1248, 20: 2791

hand of glory (charm), 3: 339-40, 8: 1112-4, 17: 2401
Hartmann, Dr Franz, 11: 1582-3, 16: 2243
head, 8: 1137-44
beans and, in invisibility formula, 10: 1356
brazen speaking head of Sylvester II, 14: 1961 Heptameron (Magical Elements; grimoire), 8: 1090, 16: 2217
hoodoo, 9: 1240
humours, 6: 742
Saturn and, 16: 2286
hunting magic, 9: 1265-8
Assyrian, 9: 1265
cave art and, 3: 367, 369, 9: 1267
dance and, 4: 530
of Zuni Indians (Shalako), 15: 2134

ill-wishing, 4: 520
image magic (witch dolls, wax images), 10: 1307-9
witches and, 4: 522, 10: 1307-10, 15: 2112, 20: 2816
Gowdie, 8: 1056
North Berwick witches, 10: 1309, 14: 1886-7
in the Ozarks, 14: 1951-3
Somerset witches, 17: 2414
imitative magic, 10: 1306-12
cave art as, 3: 367-9
origin of drama and, 5: 636
to obtain food, 7: 928, 20: 2793
iron (metal), 10: 1358, 17: 2404
Mars and, 4: 459
meteors and, 10: 1358, 17: 2404
as protection against jinn, 10: 1418
red and, 4: 459

jet (mineral), 18: 2551
jewels, precious stones, 10: 1412-6
John of Nottingham, image magic used by, 10: 1308

Key of Solomon (grimoire), 8: 1089, 1089, 1090, 11: 1583, 13: 1823
magic circle in, 16: 2219
planets in, 4: 547
purification of magician prescribed in, 16: 2220
sacrifice in, 16: 2220
Sunday, rituals appropriate to, in, 4: 459
white recommended in, 16: 2219
Knott Elizabeth, image magic used by, 10: 1308

Lee Penny (Scottish talisman), 18: 2552
left, 11: 1514
evil and, 5: 588, 11: 1514
left-hand path (black magic), 5: 588, 11: 1514
Lemegeton (Lesser Key of Solomon; grimoire), 8: 1089-90
incantations in, 16: 2220, 12: 1720
on the kings of the four quarters, 5: 588
names of power in, 13: 1824, 16: 2220
on the pentagram, 14: 2002
spirits and demons described in, 16: 2194, 2220
Asmodeus, 1: 131
on triangle and magic circle, 16: 2219
lemon, Evil Eye averted by, 10: 1358
love magic, 11: 1556-61
knots in, 18: 2492

macrocosm and microcosm, 11: 1572-3, 1580, 1582, 12: 1612, 16: 2191-2
Boehme's doctrine of, 2: 253, 254
great chain of being and, 8: 1067
magic and, 11: 1572, 1580
pentagram and, 14: 2002
magi, 11: 1576
Parthians and, 14: 1991
magic, 11: 1577-84
analogies in, 15: 2058
balance in, 14: 1924
Cabala and, 3: 326, 327
gesture used in, 7: 997
Great Plains Indians and, 8: 1072
mandala in, 12: 1614-6
names and, 13: 1822
numbers in, 5: 591
poetry and, 15: 2055, 2058-9, 2060
power as goal of, 11: 1579, 1584
priest and magician compared, 15: 2083-8
sound as foundation of, 12: 1627
in Tantrism, 18: 2557
magical papyri, 12: 1591-3
Seth in, 17: 2341
magic circle, 3: 422, 422, 16: 2219
of Agrippa, 11: 1583
arthame used to draw, 13: 1756
lead as material of, 11: 1513 .
names of power inscribed in, 13: 1823, 14: 2002, 16: 2219
in necromancy, 13: 1836
pentagram and, 14: 2002, 16: 2220
triangle used with, 16: 2219
magic squares, 12: 1593-4
of Abra-Melin, 12: 1595, 16: 2260
in Durer's Melancolia, 5: 592, 12: 1594
as protection against jinn, 10: 1418
magic wand, 20: 2766
of Aleister Crowley, 4: 500
Grand Grimoire's specifications for, 16: 2218
hazel and, 8: 1135, 1135, 16: 2218
main-de-gloire (magloire), 12: 1618
man, 2: 252, 12: 1606-13
marigold, 11: 1557
Mass (Eucharist, Holy Communion, Lord's Supper), 2: 276, 3: 408, 6: 782, 7: 929, 932-3, 12: 1668, 16: 2257, 2258-9, 2260
in magic, 12: 1668, 15: 2111
as sacrifice, 16: 2259, 2266
mass of the dead, 2: 235
mass of St Secaire, 2: 235
Melanesia, 12: 1694-8
magic in, 12: 1695
mana and, 12: 1613, 1694
Mephisto's Ring, 18: 2551
Mesopotamia, 12: 1714-22
magic in, 12: 1720
milpreve (Cornish charm), 4: 458
mirror, 13: 1749
moly (magic herb), 13: 1762
moon, 13: 1764-8
moonstone, 10: 1413, 1414
Myers, F.W.H., 13; 1800-2. 15: 2105, 2106, 2107

names, 13: 1822-4
in magic, 13: 1822, 16: 2220
necromancy, 13: 1834-7
Rome and, 9: 2606
Nigeria,
dried monkeys' heads in, 15: 2086
hunting magic in, 9: 1266

oath, 4: 519, 14: 1904-6
obeah, 20: 2751
omens, 14: 1921-3
Aztecs and, 2: 186
in the Ozarks, 14: 1952
sneezing as, 17: 2413
opposites, 14: 1924-5
black mass and, 14: 1932
Order of the Garter, 7: 981, 18: 2527, 19: 2607
Order of the Holy City, 12: 1647
ourobouros (snake swallowing its tail), 1: 72, 3: 422, 17: 2340
Crowley and, 14: 1895
Golden Dawn and, 8: 1042
oyster:
as aphrodisiac, 7: 909, 11: 1558

Palmer, John, image magic used by, 10: 1308
papyrus, 12: 1591
partridge, as aphrodisiac, 11: 1557
pentagram, 14: 2002-3, 16: 2220
peony, 9: 1184, 1186, 12: 1618
Pepys, Samuel, hare's foot charm and, 5: 589, 10: 1116
perfume, 14: 2007-11
in ritual magic, 14: 2011, 16: 2220
Petrus Cantor, on magical use of the Mass, 15: 2111
Picatrix (grimoire), 15: 2038
love magic in, 10: 1308
planets, 7: 937, 15: 2046
magic squares of (Agrippa), 10: 1412
plants and flowers, 15: 2047-50
as protection against the Evil Eye, 6: 818
as protection against lightning, 17: 2394
pointing, 7: 883
at rainbow and heavenly bodies, 15: 2155
power, as goal of magic, 11: 1579, 1584

red, 3: 431
Regardie, Israel: 16: 2170
on the Fool of the tarot, 18: 2569
Golden Dawn and, 8: 1045, 14: 2003
on triangle and magic circle, 16: 2219
Reisch, Gregor, on macrocosm and microcosm, 11: 1573
right (right-hand side), good associated with, 5: 588
ring, 16: 2206-9
ritual magic, 16: 2217-21
correspondences and, 4: 459
herbs in, 14: 2011
Sacred Magic of Abra-Melin, the Mage, The Book of the, 16: 2260

Volume numbers are in bold type. For encyclopedic articles, both volume and page references are in bold type. Illustrations are indicated in italic

magic squares in, 12: 1595, 16: 2260
sacrifice: 16: 2261-6
in ritual magic, 16: 2220
St John's Eve/Day, bonfires and, 16: 2269, 19: 2729, 20: 2813-4
St John's wort (Devil's Bane), 9: 1186, 11: 1557, 13: 1743, 16: 2269
salt, 16: 2282
as protection against jinn, 10: 1418, 16: 2282
sapphire, 10: 1413, 1414, 1415
satyricon (plant), as aphrodisiac, 11: 1557
sefiroth (emanations; Cabala), 3: 323
in magic, correspondence and, 4: 459
forces and, 7: 936-40
meditation on, 12: 1687
Tarot and, 14: 1992-3
seven, 1: 91, 14: 1894, 16: 2201
sex and sexuality, 2: 252, 17: 2342-8
in magic, 2: 252, 11: 1581, 14: 1925, 17: 2345
Crowley, 4: 500, 8: 1045, 15: 2078, 17: 2345-6
sign of the cross (magical protection), 4: 492
six, 14: 1894
Great Beast, 8: 1066, 12: 1593-4
names adding to, 14: 1894
in Pythagoreanism, 15: 2146
sleepers, 17: 2401-3
Snake-charmer, Indian, 17: 2409
South America, modern: 17: 2421-7
weather magic in, 1: 129
Spanish fly (cantharides), 11: 1560
spell, spells, 17: 2435
poetry and, 15: 2055
spheres, heavenly, 7: 936-7, 11: 1581, 17: 2435
spittle, 17: 2446
in Mesopotamian magic, 12: 1720
as protection against the Evil Eye, 6: 818, 17: 2446
storm, protection against:
acorn, 9: 1264
bells, 2: 213
owl, 14: 1949
sun: 18: 2499-506
correspondences with, 4: 459
magical papyri contain invocation to, 12: 1591
sympathetic magic, 5: 590, 10: 1309, 18: 2538
in the Ozarks, 14: 1952
synagogue (Judaism), 10: 1433, 1436

T (letter, as magical protection), 4: 492
talismans, 18: 2550-3
Agrippa on, 16: 2194
amulets distinguished from, 18: 2550
of Great Plains Indians, 8: 1072
thunder and lightning:
protection against:
acorn, 9: 1264, 14: 1903
hazel, 15: 2049
laurel, 11: 1511
oak, 14: 1902-3, 17: 2394
olive, 14: 1920
owl, 14: 1949
palm, 14: 1964
plants, various, 17: 2394
prehistoric stone axes, etc. ('thunder weapons'), 7: 995
Tiki (hei-tiki; Polynesian amulet), 10: 1382, 1384, 19: 2625
treasure magic, 13: 1836, 19: 2653-4, 20: 2766
Trfing (magic sword), 5: 674
triangle, 19: 2612
magic circle and, 16: 2219
True Black Magic (The Secret of Secrets; grimoire), 4: 547, 8: 1090, 16: 2217, 2218

weather magic: 20: 2777-8
ashes and, 1: 129
white, 20: 2791-2
moon and, 4: 459
Philosophers' Stone and, 12: 1705, 15: 2027
in ritual magic, 16: 2792
silver and, 4: 459
white magic, 20: 2792-5
distinguished from black magic, 4: 559
in Africa 1: 59
witchcraft and, 20: 2795, 2816
words, language:
in magic, 15: 2111
music and, in religion, 13: 1793

yellow, 2: 231, 3: 432, 4: 459, 5: 590

Zohar (Book of Splendour; Cabala), 3: 323

2. Alchemy

albedo (alchemical process), 15: 2027
Albertus Magnus:
on succubi, 6: 794
alchemy, 1: 71-7
four elements theory and, 1: 75, 6: 744
gold in, 1: 71-6, 6: 749, 751-2, 8: 1041
macrocosm and microcosm in, 11: 1573

blood: 2: 248-9, 252
homunculus and, 9: 1236

Corpus Hermeticum, 9: 1197-8

elements, 5: 594, 6: 742
in alchemy, 1: 75, 6: 744, 12: 1704
Chinese theory of, 3: 393, 6: 743
elementals and, 6: 743
pentagram and, 14: 2002
Elixir of Life, 6: 749-52

Fludd, Robert, 3: 326, 326, 327, 7: 917-8
blood distilled by, 9: 1236
Cabala and, 3: 326, 326, 7: 918
macrocosm/microcosm and, 2: 251, 7: 917, 918, 11: 1573, 12: 1612
Rose Cross and, 16: 2241
on the ruby, 10: 1413
on the universe, 3: 322, 19: 2370, 2371

gold, 8: 1040-1
in alchemy, 1: 71-6, 6: 749, 751-2, 8: 1041
sun and, 4: 459, 8: 1041
yellow and, 4: 459

Hermes Trismegistus, 1: 75, 9: 1197
Thoth identified with, 6: 733, 9: 1197
Hermetica, 9: 1197-8
Hermetick Romance, The (Rosicrucian text), 16: 2243
Hermetic Society, founded by G.W. Russell, 16: 2252
Hollandus, Johannes Isaac (alchemist), 15: 2027
homunculus (artificial human being; alchemy), 8: 1048, 9: 1236

Khunrath, Heinrich (alchemist), 15: 2027

lead (metal), 4: 459, 11: 1513

Melchior, Nicholas (alchemist), 1: 77
mercury (quicksilver; metal), 12: 1704-5, 15: 2148
in alchemy, 1: 72, 12: 1704, 14: 1925
mountain, hill: 13: 1783-4
of the philosophers (alchemy), 16: 2444

nigredo (alchemical process), 15: 2027
Norton Thomas (alchemist), 1: 71, 77

opposites, 14: 1924-5
in alchemy, 13: 1705, 14: 1925

panacea, 6: 749
Panacea Society of Bedford, 17: 2427, 2428
J.J. Jezreel and, 10: 1417
Paracelsus, 14: 1974-6
Pfenninger, Baron (alchemist), 1: 72
Philosophers' Egg (alchemy), 5: 719
Philosophers' Stone (alchemy), 1: 71, 12: 1704, 1705, 15: 2027-8, 16: 2167
descriptions of, 12: 1705, 15: 2028
Elixir of Life and, 6: 749, 15: 2027
as reconciliation of contradictions, 14: 1924
Philosophers' Tincture, 6: 750
planets: 7: 937, 15: 2046
metals associated with, 1: 75-6, 4: 459
Poimandres (Hermetic literature), 9: 1197-8, 18: 2480
Price, James (alchemist), 1: 72
prima materia (alchemy), 15: 2027
purification:
alchemy and, 6: 751, 15: 2027, 2027

raven: 4: 496, 15: 2160
in alchemical symbolism, 15: 2027
Reinburg, Wenceslaus von (alchemist) 1: 72

salt: 16: 2282
in alchemy, 12: 1704-5, 16: 2282
Shameer (alchemical symbol), 10: 1416
silver (metal), 17: 2371
Starkey, George (alchemist), 12: 1705, 15: 2028
Splendor Solis, 1: 74, 6: 744, 18: 2499

sulphur,
mercury and, in alchemy, 8: 1041

Tantrism: 9: 1216, 17: 2345, 18: 2556-61
alchemy and, 18: 2558
tin (metal, 4: 459

Undines (elementals), 6: 743

Wei Po-Yang (Chinese alchemist), 6: 749

3. Witches & Witchcraft

Ahadie, Jeannette d' (witch), 7: 961
Aberdeen witches, 1: 46-7, 89
Aelian (Elian), cursing well of, 4: 521, 18: 2473-5
Aradia (goddess of witches), 10: 1378, 1380
Armstrong Anne (witch), 19: 2607
Auldearne witches, see Gowdie, Isabel Azande (African people), 2: 178-9
witchcraft among, 2: 178-9, 6: 799, 7: 880, 20: 2815

Bamberg witches, 2: 193-4, 4: 513, 6: 787, 7: 990, 17: 2415
Basque witchcraft, 2: 201-3
Bayts, Margaret (witch), 15: 2082
bell, book and candle, 4: 522, 522
Blocula (Sweden), witches of, 6: 787, 7: 918, 18: 2521
Bothwell, Francis Hepburn, Earl of, North Berwick witches and, 14: 1816
Brocken (Harz Mountains), 2: 286, 17: 2435

Canewdon (Essex), 7: 1005
Canon Episcopi, 4: 576, 6: 785, 7: 918, 17: 2356
cat, 3: 355-7
in witchcraft:
as familiar, 3: 356, 356, 5: 691, 6: 796, 838-40, 15: 2112, 17: 2414
in shape-shifting, 3: 356, 17: 2356
Compendium Maleficarum (Guazzo), 1: 46, 9: 1275, 10: 1379, 13: 1837
Cotta, John (writer on witchcraft), 5: 615, 13: 1836
coven (of witches), 4: 467, 19: 2607
in modern witchcraft, 13: 1755-6
cunning men, 5: 690-1, 693, 8: 1109, 20: 2793

Damballa (Voodoo), 17: 2337
Dame Habonde (goddess of witches), 6: 785
Devil:
Basque witches and, 2: 201-2
French witches and, 7: 957, 960-1, 8: 1031
phallus, artificial, of, 8: 1056, 16: 2256
Swedish witches and, 18: 2520-1
witches and, 2: 235, 4: 573, 6: 784-8, 788, 16: 2283
Diana (goddess of witches), 4: 576, 10: 1380
Margaret Murray and, 4: 576
Dornheim, Prince-Bishop Gottfried von (the 'Witch Bishop'), 2: 193, 194
Duke, Alice (witch), 17: 2414
Duncan, Gilly (witch), 14: 1886, 1887

East Anglican and Essex witches, 5: 689-95
flying by, 2: 286
European witchcraft, 6: 784-8, 11: 3042, 15: 2111-4, 17: 2415-7, 20: 2816
axe and, 2: 176
bells as protection against witches, 2: 213
blood and, 2: 248-9
broomstick in, 2: 286-7, 6: 785, 839
in Bulgaria, 6: 796
candles and, 3: 340
in the Channel Islands, 2: 286
dancing by witches, 10: 1380, 16: 2255
dragon and, 5: 635
eggs used for transport, 5: 719
elder (tree) and, 6: 737, 15: 2049
in England, 6: 783-4, 786, 17: 2415
in Cornwall, 4: 458
witchcraft laws in, 5: 689, 693, 11: 1560, 19: 2654
evil eye and, 6: 817
finding of witches, 6: 785-6, 7: 880-1
in Finland, 7: 886
flying by witches, 6: 785, 16: 2255
frogs and, 6: 838, 7: 968
goat and, 2: 255, 4: 573, 6: 785, 788
Eliphas Levi, 2: 195, 195
hailstorm created by, 20: 2778
hair and, 8: 1110
hare and, 8: 1117
heart and, 9: 1161
herbs and, 9: 1182-6
horse and, 9: 1252
horseshoe and, 9: 1255
hysteria and, 9: 1273, 15: 2111
impotence caused by, 90: 1273, 10: 1356
in Ireland, 6: 783-4
St Patrick and, 6: 800
in Lapland, 11: 1506-9
lead, witches immune to, 11: 1513
mandrake and, 12: 1618
at Midsummer, 13: 1743
persecution of witches, 6: 783-8, 7: 988-9
plants as protection against, 15: 2048
possession and, 6: 800-1, 9: 1272-7
primitive societies compared with, 7: 880, 17: 2415-6, 20: 2816
psychology of witches and witchcraft accusations, 9: 1272
mental disorder as a characteristic of witches, 9: 1272, 14: 1917, 15: 2111, 17: 2416
sexual repression and, 9: 1274
social tension relieved by accusations, 9: 1274
rowan and, 16: 2247
in Scotland, 6: 783
in ballads, 17: 2313-4
goddess of witches, 4: 576
silver bullet, 11: 1513
Weir and, 20: 2779
shape-shifting and, 3: 357, 20: 2781, 2821
silver bullets and, 8: 1117, 11: 1513
in Spain, 2: 201-3
trials of witches, 6: 785, 7: 988-90
spectral evidence in, 5: 615, 20: 2817
white magicians and, 20: 2795, 2816
wolf and, 20: 2821
evil eye, 6: 816-22, 818, 819
Ewen, C. l'Estrange, on diseases caused by witches, 15: 2111

familiars (witches' imps), 6: 796, 838-41, 15: 2113, 20: 2817
in Africa, 20: 2817
cat as, 3: 356, 356, 5: 691, 6: 796, 838, 17: 2414
dog as, 5: 691, 693, 6: 839
in East Anglia, 5: 691, 693
ferret as, 5: 693
fish as, 7: 908
hedgehog as, 17: 2414
of Alice Kyteler, 6: 838
mouse as, 3: 356, 10: 1317
owl as, 3: 356
polecat as, 5: 691
rabbit as, 5: 691
spider as, 17: 2437
toad as, 5: 691, 6: 796, 838, 17: 2414, 19: 2637
ferret, as witch's familiar, 5: 693
floating (swimming) of witches, 6: 786
Flower, Joan (witch), 14: 1904, 15: 2112
Flower, Margaret and Philippa (witches), 6: 839
flying ointment (witchcraft), 7: 918-9
Basque witches and, 2: 201, 202, 203
bat's blood used in, 2: 205
broomstick and, 2: 286
French witches and, 7: 918, 957
Isabel Gowdie and, 8: 1056
Francis, Elizabeth (Chelmsford witch), 6: 840
French witchcraft, 2: 235f, 6: 783, 7: 918, 957-61, 8: 1031

Garnier, Giles (werewolf), 20: 2781, 2782
garter, 7: 981
in modern witchcraft, 13: 1756
German witchcraft, 6: 783, 787, 7: 988-90
Glanvil, Joseph, 17: 2414
on the Drummer of Tidworth, 15: 2065
scances conducted by, 13: 1837
on witchcraft, 9: 1210
Gowdie, Isabel (witch), 8: 1055-7
broomstick and, 2: 286, 8: 1056
cow's milk magically stolen by, 18: 2494
Devil and, 8: 1056, 16: 2255
Grinsett, Arbre, accused of witchcraft, 5: 693, 6: 839, 840

Hopkins, Matthew (Witchfinder General), 5: 691, 693, 6: 784, 786, 15: 2082

incubus and succubus, 6: 796, 10: 1330-4

James I (James VI of Scotland):
witchcraft and, 6: 785-6, 14: 1886-7, 16: 2255

jaundice, yellow in cure of, 5: 590
John XXII (pope), witchcraft and, 9: 1193

Kyteler, Alice (witch),
broomstick and, 2: 286
familiar of, 6: 839

La Mercuria (witch), 10: 1380
Lancashire witches:
image magic used by, 10: 1307
Lancre, Pierre de (witch-hunter), 2: 203, 211, 7: 958-9, 16: 2255
Lea, H.C., on witchcraft, 7: 960
le Clerc, Gentien (witch), 7: 961
Leland, Charles (writer on witchcraft), 10: 1378, 1380
Logrono, trial of witches at, 2: 202

Maclean, Euphemia (witch), 14: 1886-7
magic: 11: 1577-84
disease caused and cured by, 5: 589
psychic attack in, 15: 2111-4
Voodoo and, 20: 2751-6
Malleus Maleficarum (Hammer of Witches), 6: 783, 12: 1602
Malmesbury witches, (17th Cent.), 6: 817
Man, Andrew (witch), 1: 47
Maria of Ituren (witch), 2: 201
Marigrane, Marie d' (witch), 16: 2556
Mather, Cotton, Salem witches and, 16: 2281, 19: 2692
medicine man, 15: 2086
Merzhacher, Friedrich (writer on witchcraft), 7: 988 Midsummer eve: 6: 859, 13: 1743
witches and, 13: 1743
Minguet, Barthelemy (witch), 7: 961
modern witchcraft, 13: 1755-8, 16: 2254, 20: 2766, 2806, 2833-4
Montespan, Madame de, 1: 134, 2:235, 3: 340, 15: 2062
Montgomery, William (attacker of witches), 3: 356, 17: 2356
moon: 13: 1764-8
modern witchcraft and, 13: 1755, 1755, 1756
Morgan, Nanny (witch), 6: 817
mouse:
as witches' familiar, 3: 356, 10: 1317
mumia, 5: 591
Murray, Margaret, witchcraft theories of, 4: 576, 13: 1757, 16: 2256, 19: 2607, 20: 2815, 2833

Napier, Barbara (witch), 14: 1886, 1887
New Guinea: 13: 1846-50
ashes used to prevent snake-bite in, 1: 129
News (Newes) from Scotland (witchcraft pamphlet), 14: 1886-7
North Berwick witches, 3: 340, 10: 1309, 14: 1886-7
nudity: 4: 464
modern witchcraft and, 13: 1755, 1856-8

Ogg, Isobel (witch), 1: 47
Ogg, Margaret (witch), 1: 47
old age and witchcraft, 14: 1915-7
Orexa, Maria Miguel de (witch), 2: 202

paranoia, witchcraft and, 9: 1272
Perkins, William (writer on witchcraft), 13: 1836
pitchfork, witches and, 2: 286
plants and flowers, 15: 2047-50
as protection against witchcraft and sorcery, 15: 2048
poisoning, 15: 2060-3
witchcraft and, 10: 1379, 15: 2060
possession: 6: 799-801, 11: 1574, 15: 2075-8
witchcraft and, 6: 799, 800, 9: 1272-7
Prentice, Joan (witch), 5: 693
Prevotte, Catherine (witch), 16: 2254
pricking of witches, 15: 2082
priests: 15: 2083-9
in Voodoo, 20: 2754
psychic attack, 15: 2111-4
Dion Fortune and, 7: 939, 15: 2114

Quedlinburg (Saxony), witches burnt at, 6: 785

Remy, Nicolas, 7: 960, 961, 16: 2256
Ritchie, Isobel (witch), 1: 47
Rogie, Helen (witch), 1: 47
Rome (ancient): 16: 2230-5
witchcraft in, 10: 1377
Rose, Antoine (witch), 7: 958, 14: 1961

sabbath (witchcraft), 2: 233, 16: 2254-6
saga (Roman witch), 10: 1378
St Osyth (Essex), witches and, 5: 690, 691, 691, 694, 6: 796
Salazary Frias, Alonzo de, on Basque witchcraft, 2: 203
Salem witches, 6: 838, 9: 1277, 1308, 16: 2280-1
Sampson, Agnes (witch), 6: 839, 14: 1886-7
Sanders, Alex, modern witchcraft and, 13: 1757, 1758
Sawyer, Elizabeth (witch), 15: 2082
schizophrenia, witchcraft and, 14: 1917
Scot, Reginald (writer on witchcraft), 5: 690, 719, 6: 787
Scrutten, Mary (witch), 10: 1317
Secretain, Francoise (witch), 7: 961
sex and sexuality: 2: 252, 17: 2342-8
vampirism and, 19: 2610
Voodoo and, 20: 2754
witchcraft and, 9: 1274
impotence caused by witches, 9: 1273, 15: 2112
modern, 13: 1755-8
shape-shifting: 11: 1566, 17: 2354-8
by witches, 3: 356, 20: 2781, 2782
snail, 17: 2408
warts cured by, 17: 2408
Somerset witches, 17: 2414
Spain, witchcraft in, 2: 201-3
spectral evidence (witch trials), 5: 615, 20: 2817
Strachan, Isobel (witch), 1: 47
Style, Elizabeth (witch), 17: 2414
Swedish witchcraft, 6: 787, 7: 918, 18: 2520-1

toad: 19: 2637-9
as witches' familiar, 5: 691, 6: 796, 838, 17: 2414, 19: 2637
Tulouff, Martin (witch), 2: 286

urine, 3: 320, 14: 1976, 19: 2699

Valencia, Pedro de, on Basque witchcraft, 2: 203
Vallin, Pierre (witch), 7: 957
volantica (Roman witch), 10: 1378
Voodoo, 20: 2751-6
Dahomey and, 4: 524, 19: 2664
possession in, 5: 651, 15: 2078, 19: 2649, 2652, 20: 2754-6

warts, cure of:
ash tree, 1: 126
cat's tail, 3: 357
knotted string, 18: 2493
Lord's Prayer, 10: 1318
pins, 14: 1952
snails, 17: 2408
spider's web, 17: 2437
tobacco juice, 19: 2640
Waterhouse, Agnes (witch), 5: 689, 6: 840
Wenham, Jane (witch), 6: 796, 9: 1277
Wicca (modern witchcraft), 13: 1755-8
widdershins (anticlockwise), 3: 423, 20: 2796
witch balls, 6: 818
witch bottle, 2: 249, 4: 522, 19: 2699, 20: 2795
in East Anglia, 5: 691, 693
witchcraft, sorcery, 20: 2815-8
in America:
in the Ozarks, 14: 1951
finding witches, 6: 785
hysterical possession and witchcraft, 9: 1272
old age and witchcraft, 14: 1915
in primitive societies and in European history, comparison of, 20: 2816
pyschology of witches and witchcraft accusations, 9: 1272
mental disorder 9: 1272, 17: 2416
sexual repression, 9: 1275
social tension relieved by accusations, 7: 80-1, 14: 1917, 17: 2415, 20: 2817-8
sorcery and witchcraft distinguished, 20: 2878
in Southeast Asia, 17: 2430
women, witches seen as typically, 14: 1915, 17: 2416
witch-doctor, African, 1: 58-9
Azande, 2: 179
Bushmen, 3: 318
Congo, 4: 446, 452
divination by, 14: 1932
witches' mark, 6: 840, 15: 2082
woman, 20: 2822-31
witches seen as typically women, 14: 1915, 17: 2416
Wurzburg, witch trials of, 7: 998, 990

zombies, 14: 1932, 20: 2868

4. Devils, Demons & Angels

Ahriman (Zoroastrianism), 1: 66-8, 20: 2873
Aix-en-Provence nuns, 1: 69-70
angels, 1: 100-2
in the Bible, 1: 100-2
Daniel, 4: 542, 8: 1094
Revelation, 19: 2679
Antichrist, 1: 110
Beast of Revelation and, 8: 1066
archangel, 1: 102
Asmodeus (demon), 1: 131
Astaroth (Ashtoreth; demon), 1: 132-3, 133, 134

blood: 2: 248-9, 252
pact with the Devil signed in, 14: 1961

Cambrai (France), possessed nuns at, 9: 1274
Capeau, Sister Louise (possessed nun), 1: 69-70

Dashwood, Sir Francis, 12: 1690, 1691
Del Rio, Martin, on the Devil's mark, 15: 2082

Demandoix de la Palud, Madeleine de (possessed nun), 1: 69-70, 134, 16: 2255-6
Demons, 4: 564, 6: 793-6
Baal as, 2: 189
Francis Barrett and, 1: 131, 134, 196
bodily orifices penetrated by, 17: 2413
disease and, 15: 2111-2
of the four directions, 5: 588
Krishna and, 11: 1488, 1489
Devil, the (Lucifer; Satan; Christianity and Judaism), 4: 567-70, 6: 795-6
as dragon, 4: 572-3, 5: 622, 631, 6: 758
not a dualist concept, 5: 671
Levi and, 2: 195, 195
Lucifer, 4: 569, 570, 11: 1562
in the New Testament, 16: 2283
in the Ozarks, 14: 1951
Wild Hunt led by, 20: 2796
animal forms of, 4: 573, 6: 785, 788
Devil's mark:
Grandier and, 11: 1551
witches and, 6: 785, 786, 7: 958

evil, 6: 789-93
darkness and, 11: 15625
Hinduism and, 6: 7904, 19: 2712
exorcism, 6: 799-801, 1678
Christian, 6: 800-1
of Aix-en-Provence nuns, 1: 69-70
baptism and, 6: 800
in Brittany, 2: 284-5
foul smells used in, 14: 2010

Gabriel (angel), 1: 101
Koran dictated by, 7: 971, 15: 2100, 16: 2198
south and, 5: 588
ghoul :
origin of the word, 10: 1418
ghul (jinn), 10: 1418
Grandier, Urbain, 1: 129, 14: 1961

Hell-Fire clubs, 12: 1690

Kalbhairah (Indian demon), 6: 792

Lilith (demoness), 10: 1334, 11: 1532
Lucifer, 4: 569, 569-72, 6: 794-5, 11: 1562

Machen, Arthur, Angels of Mons and, 20: 2749
Mastema (evil spirit), 4: 570
Mephistopheles (demon), 6: 846, 12: 1702
Michael, St (archangel), 1: 101
Mons, Angels of, 20: 2749

New Testament:
angels in, 1: 101-2, 8: 1094
Dead Sea Scrolls and, 4: 550-3
the Devil in, 16: 2283

Orobas (demon), 6: 794

pact, Satanic, 14: 1959-61
Papini, Giovanni, on the Devil, 4: 567
possession, 6: 799-801, 11: 1574, 15: 2075-8
ecstasy and, 5: 713
hysteria and, 9: 1273
mesmerism and, 15: 2076
revivalism and, 6: 764
sex and, 17: 2344
trance and, 19: 2649
among the Veddas, 19: 2716
in Voodoo, 5: 651, 15: 2078, 19: 2649-50 2652, 20: 2751, 2753-5
Wesley and, 15: 2075-6, 2078
pride, fall of Lucifer due to, 4: 572
Proterius, Satanic pact and, 14: 1959
Pug (small devil), Puck identified with, 15: 2127

Raphael (angel), cast and, 5: 588
Ronwe (demon), 6: 794

Satan, 4: 568, 569-70
Job and, 10: 1424
Satanism, 16: 2283-5
Sylvester II (pope), Satanic pact and, 14: 1961

Toledo, Council of (AD447), Devil defined by, 9: 1246

Ukoback (demon), 6: 795
Uriel (angel), north and, 5: 588

Wier, John (Johann Weyer; demonologist), 2: 211, 9: 1274-5
on Faust, 6: 845

Xaphan (demon), 6: 795

5. Foretelling the Future

alectromancy (divination), 14: 1922
Apocalypse, 16: 2198
Apollo (Greek god), 1: 114-5, 8: 1075, 9: 2604
oracles of, 14: 1927, 1931-2
ashes: 1: 129-30
divination by, 1: 129, 9: 165
Aries (the Ram; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 119, 139, 140, 143
astrology, 1: 138-44, 5: 601-3
in Egypt,
Jung and, 1: 140, 11: 1460
macrocosm/microcosm theory and 11: 1573
augury, 2: 162, 5: 601
birds in, 2: 162, 4: 497, 507, 5: 601, 683-4, 6: 776
in Borneo, 2: 265
comets in, 2: 162
in Ethiopia, 6: 776
Etruscans and, 2: 162
omens, various in, 2: 162
Romans and, 2: 162, 5: 601, 683-4, 11: 1538, 14: 1922, 16: 2235
thunder and lightning in, 2: 162, 6: 780

Babylonia: 2: 189, 12: 1714
divination in, 5: 602, 11: 1538, 14: 1921
bibliomancy (divination by a book), 11: 1547
Birth Number, 14: 1892
body, 2: 251-2
omens from, 14: 1921
Boer, Walter (astrologer), 1: 143
bones, 2: 256
divination by:
Bushmen, 3: 318
Congo, 4: 450

calendar:
astrological, medieval, 6: 770
Aztec, 2: 185-6
Druids, 5: 659
lunar, 13: 1764-5
Maya, 12: 1670, 1672
Parsees and, 14: 1984
Peruvian, 6: 771
Cancer (the Crab; zodiac sign, in astrology), 3: 338, 14: 2001
capnomancy (divination by smoke from sacrifice), 14: 1923
Capricorn (the Goat; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 107, 142, 143, 3: 341
cards, playing, 3: 342-7
fortune-telling with (cartomancy), 3: 342-7
cat's eye (jewel), Sun and Leo associated with, 10: 1413
Chaldean Oracles, 13: 1842, 19: 2603
Chariot (Tarot card), 18: 2570, 2570

Volume numbers are in bold type. For encyclopedic articles, both volume and page references are in bold type. Illustrations are indicated in italic

chicken:
in augury, 2: 162
as oracle among the Azande, 7: 880
Claros, oracle of Apollo at, 14: 1931-2
cledonomancy (divination by chance happenings), 5: 602
cleromancy (divination by dice, etc.), 5: 602
comets, 14: 1921, 1923
in augury, 2: 162
Coombe, George (phrenologist), 15: 2037
corpses:
divination by (necromancy), 13: 1834-7
cylicomancy (method of scrying), 17: 2315

Death (Tarot card), 5: 601, 18: 2571, 2571, 2607
Desbarolles, Adolphe (palmist), 11: 1520
Deuson, Edmund van, 1: 144
Devil (Tarot card), 4: 569, 6: 814, 863, 18: 2570, 2571
de Wohl, Louis (astrologer), 13: 1380, 1381
diamond, 10: 1414, 1415-6
dice:
divination by, 5: 602, 7: 977, 11: 1548
Hittites, 9: 1224
divination, 5: 597-603, 15: 2058-9

Emperor (Tarot card), 18: 2569, 2570
Empress (Tarot card),18: 2569, 2570

Fool (Tarot card), 2: 278, 279, 7: 936, 18: 2568, 2569, 2570
fortune, wheel of, 20: 2789
in fortune-telling (cards), 3: 343-4
fortune-telling:
by cards (cartomancy), 3: 342-7
Tarot cards, 3: 344-7, 18: 2567, 2572
Gypsies and, 8: 1108
by scrying, 17: 2315, 2317
Fu Hsi, I Ching and, 9: 1282, 1282, 1285

Gall, Franz Joseph (phrenologist), 15: 2036
gematria, 3: 327, 7: 985-6, 8: 1066
Gemini (the Twins; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 142-4, 5: 587, 7: 986
Castor and Pollux and, 7: 986, 19: 2685
geomancy (divination), 7: 986-7
Bulwer Lytton and, 11: 1670

Hanged Man (Tarot card), 18: 2571, 2571
haruspicy (divination by entrails):
Hebrew alphabet:
numerology and, 7: 985
Tarot cards and, 1: 91, 3: 345, 18: 2567
Hermit (Tarot card), 18: 2570, 2571
High Priestess (Female Pope; Tarot card), 18: 2569, 2570
horoscope, 1: 138-44, 9: 1250
of Elizabeth I, by John Dee, 4: 559
of Hitler,13: 1831
of Karl Ernst Krafft, 1: 142, 144

I Ching (Yee King, Book of Change), 9: 1281-5

Judgement (Day of Judgement; Tarot card), 18: 2571, 2572
Jupiter (planet):
in astrology, 1: 139, 11: 1462
blue and, 2: 249, 4: 459
jewels associated with, 10: 1413-4

Lavater, Johann Kaspar, 11: 1512, 15: 2036, 2038
Leo (the Lion; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 10-7, 143, 11: 1516, 1516
cat's eye (jewel) and, 10: 1413
Leo, Alan (astrologer), 1: 140
Libra (the Scales; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 143, 144, 11: 1524
liver, 11: 1538
divination by (hepatoscopy), 11: 1538
lots, 11: 1547-8
Lovers (Tarot card), 18: 2570, 2570

Magician (Juggler; Tarot card), 18: 2568, 2570
Mars (planet):
in astrology, 1: 139, 143, 12: 1644
Mercury (planet), in astrology, 1: 141, 12: 1703-4
Mesopotamia: 12: 1714-22
astrology in, 12: 1722
metoposcopy (divination by the lines on the forehead), 5: 599
moles on the body, divination by (moleosophy), 5: 598
Monday, 4: 546
moon, 13: 1764-8
in astrology, 1: 143
Moon (Tarot card), 13: 1766, 18: 2571, 2572
mutable signs in astrology, 20: 2743

names: 13: 1822-4
numerology and, 14: 1892-5
Neptune (planet), in astrology, 1: 145, 13: 1844
nine, 14: 1894-5
names adding to, 14: 1895
nine heads of Hydra, 9: 1188
Nostradamus, 14: 1888-9, 15: 2100-1
numerology, 14: 1892-5
forces and numbers, 7: 936-7
gematria and, 7: 985
Pythagoras and, 14: 1892-5, 15: 2145-6

one, 1: 91, 14: 1892-3, 1895, 19: 2612
names adding to, 14: 1892
the One, as divine principle, 13: 1815, 14: 1924
two and, 14: 1892-3
oneiromancy (divination by dreams), 5: 644-5
onychomancy (divination by finger-nails), 7: 883
onyx (jewel), 10: 1414
opal (jewel), 10: 1413, 1415
opposites: 14: 1924-5
in numerology (male and female numbers), 14: 1895
oracles, 14: 1926-33
osprey, in augury, 2: 162

palmistry (chiromancy), 5: 600, 14: 1966-71
peridot (jewel), 10: 1415
Personality Number, 14: 1892-5
Personal Year Number, 14: 1892-5
Phinenas (Book of Numbers), 20: 2852
phrenology, 5: 598, 15: 2036-8
phrenomagnetism, 15: 2038
physiognomy, 11: 1512-3, 15: 2036, 2038
pi (mathematics), in pyramidology, 15: 2143, 2144
Pisces (the Fishes; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 143, 7: 908, 15: 2046
Jupiter and, 11: 1462, 15: 2046
planets, 7: 937, 15: 2046
Boehme on, 2: 254
colours associated with, 4: 459
days associated with, 4: 459, 546
hours associated with, 4: 547
jewels associated with, 10: 1412
Pluto (planet), in astrology, 1: 139, 143
Pope (Hierophant; Tarot card), 18: 2569, 2570
precession of the equinoxes, 1: 118
prophecy, 15: 2097-2101

ruby, 10: 1413, 1415

Sagittarius (the Archer; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 143, 16: 2267, 2267
Saturn (planet), 16: 2286
in astrology, 1: 143, 16: 2286
lead and, 11: 1513
Scorpio (the Scorpion; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 143, 17: 2311
scrying (crystal-gazing), 13: 1749, 17: 2315-7
sibyls, 5: 597, 17: 2368-9
six, 14: 1894
Smithers, Alan, 1: 144
Stanton, Mary Olmsted (physiognomist), 15: 2038
Star(s) (Tarot card), 18: 2570, 2572
Strength (Tarot card), 18: 2570, 2571
sun: 18: 2499-2506
in astrology, 1: 139-40, 142-4, 18: 2505-6
Sun (Tarot card), 18: 2571, 2572

Tarot, 3: 342, 344-5, 346, 5: 599, 18: 2567-72
Cabalist Tree of Life and, 3: 327, 14: 1993, 18: 2567
origin of, legend of, 3: 346-7, 18: 2573-4
Papus and, 14: 1973, 1973, 18: 2569
Taurus (the Bull; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 139, 143-4, 18: 2582
tea-leaf reading, 18: 2586
Temperance (Tarot card), 18: 2570, 2571
ten, as the Tetractys, 14: 1895, 15: 2146
thirteen, 19: 2606-7
three, 14: 1893, 19: 2612-5
topaz, 10: 1413, 1415
Tuesday, 4: 546, 547, 7: 994
turquoise, 10: 1413, 1415
twelve, 1: 91, 19: 2613, 2618
two, 14: 1893, 1895

Universe (World, Tarot card), 14: 1946, 18: 2571, 2572
Uranus (planet), in astrology, 1: 143, 19: 2699

Venus (planet), 19: 2727
in astrology, 1: 143, 11: 1524, 19: 2727
jewels associated with, 10: 1413
Virgo (the Virgin; zodiac sign, in astrology), 1: 143, 20: 2743

water divining, 5: 623
Wednesday, 4: 546
week, 4: 547
Wheel of Fortune (of Life; Tarot card), 18: 2571, 2571, 20: 2789
Witte, Alfred (astrologer), 1: 144
Wulff, Wilhelm (astrologer), Nazism and, 13: 1832

zodiac, 1: 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 20: 2867
Golden Dawn and, 8: 1042
precession of the Equinoxes and, 1: 118

6. Birds, Plants & Animals in Myth & Folklore

Airavata (elephant of Indra), 6: 745, 7: 913
alligator, in Mexican myth, 2: 183
All Souls' Day, palm tree and, 14: 1964
almond tree, origin of, in agdistis myth, 4: 523
aloes, 1: 89
animals, 1: 103-7
apple (tree and fruit), 1: 116-7
of the Hesperides, 1: 116, 117, 9: 1189, 1190
mistletoe and, 13: 1750
ass, 1: 131
Athene (Athena), 2: 153-5
owl and, 2: 153, 155, 14: 1949
Audumulla (cow; Scandinavian mythology), 4: 468, 475
aurochs (animal), 3: 305

barnacle goose, 2: 199, 8: 1051-2, 1052
bear, 2: 208-10
Ainu and, 2: 209, 210, 6: 859
Celts and, 2: 210
Inuit and spirit of, 10: 1353
North American Indians and, 2: 209 210, 4: 530, 6: 859
bennu (Egyptian mythical bird), 15: 2033
birds, 2: 226-31
in augury, 2: 230, 16: 1922
Borneo, 2: 263
Ethiopia, 6: 776
Romans, 2: 162, 16: 1922
in cave art, 2: 227, 3: 368
Celts and, 3: 378
in creation myths, 2: 228
blackbird:
St Kevin and, 16: 2276
as witches' familiar, 6: 838
Brazil, 2: 272-5
anteater and, 2: 274
jaguar and, 2: 273, 273, 274, 275, 4: 464, 10: 1307, 1384
broom (plant), as herb, 9: 1183
broomstick, 2: 286-7

carp (fish), in Japan, 7: 909
cat, 3: 355-7
as omen, 14: 1921
sacrifice of, 6: 839
caterpillar, 10: 1347
in Alice in Wonderland, 10: 1348, 13: 1791
Celts, 3: 372-8
animals and, 3: 377
centaury (herb), 19: 1183
China:
owl in, 14: 1949
peacock in, 14: 1998
tortoise in, 5: 63, 15: 2036
cicada, 10: 1347
cinquefoil, creeping (five leaf grass), 9: 1183-4, 15: 2048
clove, 4: 492
clover, 3: 425, 15: 2050
cock (bird), 3: 426
Dionysus and, 18: 2532
divination by (alectromancy), 14: 1922
in Ethiopia, 6: 776
Leto and, 20: 2864
at Ragnarok, 11: 2292
Slavs and, 17: 2400
Zeus and, 20: 2864
corn (wheat), 4: 455-6
dogs and, 5: 611
cow, 4: 468-9
in Egypt:
Hathor as, 1: 104, 2: 261, 4: 468, 468, 6: 732
Isis and, 10: 1364
Hera and, 9: 1180
in India, 4: 468-9, 9: 1208
crane (bird), 4: 470
Celts and, 3: 378, 4: 470
cricket (insect), 10: 1347
in Borneo, 2: 263
crow, 4: 496-7
in augury, 1: 162, 4: 497
as witch's familiar, 6: 838
cuckoo, 4: 507-8, 19: 2630
wryneck and, 20: 2839
Culpeper, Nicolas, 9: 1180
cypress, 5: 524
cross of Jesus and, 4: 524, 14: 1920, 1964, 18: 2551

danewort (elder tree), 6: 737, 15: 2049
deadly nightshade, 15: 2048, 2049-50 Devil's-bit scabious, 9: 1184
devil's coach-horse (beetle), 10: 1346
dog, 5: 607-11
of Culann, slain by Cu Chulainn, 4: 507
ghosts of, 7: 1005
Hecate and, 9: 1167
in Inuit myth, 10: 1351
mandrake and, 12: 1617, 1618, 1618, 1619
as omen, 14: 1921
Parsees and, 14: 1987
of Sango (Nigerian god), 9: 1266
as witches' familiar, 5: 691, 693, 6: 839
dolphin (animal), 5: 614, 614
dove (pigeon), 5: 620-2
Aphrodite and, 4: 459, 5: 620
Astarte and, 1: 134
in Babylonian flood legend, 7: 913
in Christian symbolism, 5: 622
as the Holy Ghost, 2: 228, 278, 5: 622
Jesus (alpha and omega) as, 7: 985
dragonfly, 10: 1345, 1347

eagle, 5: 682-4
Aztecs and, 1: 107, 19: 2643
in divination, 2: 162, 5: 683-4
in Mesopotamia, 5: 682
lion-headed (Imdugud), 12: 1716
Odin and, 8: 995
Pawnee Indians and, 8: 1072
Prometheus and, 15: 2095
Pueblo Indians, eagle dance of, 15: 2128-9
as symbol of St John, 9: 1292
Wodan and, 8: 995
Zeus and, 6: 683, 20: 2864, 2865
elder (tree), 6: 737, 15: 2049
elephant, 6: 745
conception of Buddha and, 19: 2733, 2733
in Ghana ceremonial, 1: 58
Krishna and, 11: 1469
Mohammed's enemies mounted on, 10: 137

falcon, 6: 836
in Egypt, 2: 231, 6: 836
fennel (herb), 9: 1184-5
Prometheus and, 15: 2094-5
Fenris wolf (Scandinavian mythology), 20: 2819
bound by Tyr, 7: 994, 20: 2820
Loki the father of, 8: 1017
Odin killed by, 6: 755, 16: 2291, 2292
fig (tree and fruit), 6: 863-4
fir (tree), 7: 891-2
fire-fly, 10: 1347
fish, 7: 906-9
as aphrodisiac, 11: 1558
Astarte and, 1: 134
Atargatis and, 8: 1119
in cave art:
Australian, 2: 169
European, 3: 365
Gods as, 7: 906
Vishnu, 20: 2746
Jonah and, 10: 1429
flea, 10: 1347, 14: 1964
foxglove (deadman's fingers), 9: 1185, 15: 2050
frog, 7: 967-8

goat, 8: 1031-3
the Devil as,
Eliphas Levi on, 2: 195, 195
Tarot card, 6: 863
witches and, 2: 195, 196, 235, 4: 573, 6: 785, 788, 7: 961, 8: 1031, 1032

Good Shepherd symbol and, 8: 1049
in Mesopotamia, 18: 2540
sacrificed, in Nepal, 16: 2265
goose, 8: 1050-2

hare, 8: 1116, 1117
as trickster, 19: 2663, 2664
hawthorn, 8: 1134-5, 16: 2049
last load of harvest and, 19: 2722
May Day and, 8: 1134, 12: 1673
hazel, 8: 1135-6
in dowsing, 5: 623, 8: 1135, 1136, 13: 1743
Midsummer and, 13: 1743
as protection against lightning, 15: 2049
hemlock (plant), 15: 2048
hemp, dervishes and, 13: 1814
henbane (plant), 15: 2048, 2050
herbs, 9: 1180-6, 15: 2048
in medicine, 9: 1180-6, 14: 2010
as protection against the Evil Eye, 6: 818
in ritual magic, 14: 2011
hoopoe, (bird), 2: 231
in Philomela myth, 13: 1868, 18: 2513
springwort and, 20: 2836
horse, 9: 1250-5
of Achilles, 8: 1118
of Alexander the Great (Bucephalus), 1: 82, 19: 2732
Celts and, 1: 104, 106, 2: 284, 9: 1250, 1255
Freyr and, 1: 106, 7: 966
Hades and, 15: 2054
Mars and, 12: 1643
of Odin (Sleipnir), 14: 1907, 1908
phantom, 7: 1005, 9: 1253
Poseidon and, 9: 1250, 15: 2074
sacrifice of, 7: 966, 9: 1251, 10: 1310, 1335
sun and, 18: 2502
Vishnu incarnate as, 17: 2354-5
winged, 20: 2806

insects, 10: 1345-8

jackal, 9: 1271, 10: 1382
jaguar, 10: 1384
in Brazil, 2: 272-3, 273, 274, 275, 4: 464, 10: 1307, 1384
in Mexico, 1: 107, 13: 1736
shape-shifting and, 10: 1384, 11: 1566

kite (bird), 8: 1133

lamb, 11: 1498
Easter and, 5: 696
Jesus as the lamb of God, 5: 696, 6: 814, 815, 11: 1498, 16: 2266, 17: 2357, 2359
Pythagoras and, 17: 2357
as witches' familiar, 6: 796
laurel (tree), 11: 1511, 15: 2048
leopard, shape-shifting and, 11: 1566
Leopard Societies, West African, 1: 60, 103
lesser celandine (plant), 15: 2049
lice, 10: 1347
lily, 11: 1532-3
lion, 11: 1535, 1536
St Anthony and, 16: 2276
Astarte and, 1: 134
in Christian symbolism, 1: 106, 9: 1292, 11: 1536, 16: 2279
of Cythaeron, killed by Hercules, 9: 1188
eagle, lion-headed, in Mesopotamia (Imdugud), 12: 1716
man-lion, Vishnu as, 20: 2745, 2746
Mohammed and, 10: 1374
Nemean, killed by Hercules, 9: 1188, 1188
in Samson's riddle, 16: 2204
topaz and, 10: 1413
unicorn and, 19: 2689, 2690
lizard, 11: 1539-40
Maori and, 5: 633
llama (animal), 10: 1325
locust, 10: 1347
love-apple (mandrake; tomato), 12: 1618

mandrake (mandragora; Circe's Plant), 12: 1617-20, 15: 2048
monkey, 13: 1763
moon: 13: 1764-8
hare and, 8: 1116
plants and, 13: 1766
mushroom, 5: 649, 13: 1789-91, 1790, 1791
myrrh (gum resin; tree), 13: 1802
myrtle (flower, shrub), 13: 1802

nightingale, 13: 1868-9
North American Indians:
animals and, 6: 859
bears, 2: 209, 210, 4: 530, 6: 859
serpent and, 17: 2338

oak, 14: 1901-3
mistletoe and, 14: 1901, 13: 1750
ocelot (wild cat), Aztecs and, 19: 2643
olive (tree and fruit), 14: 1920
opossum, in Brazil, 2: 274-5
orange (fruit and flower), 15: 2050
orchid, as herb, 9: 1186
orpine (plant), 13: 1743
ostrich, 14: 1940
feathers of, 6: 851
owl, 14: 1948-9
ox:
Enlil as, 1: 105, 3: 307
as symbol of St Luke, 9: 1292

palm (tree), 14: 1920, 14: 1963-4, 15: 2028
parsley, 9: 1186
peacock, 14: 1998-9
pearlwort (plant), 15: 2050
pelican, 2: 227, 14: 2002
pig (hog, swine), 15: 2039-40
pine (tree), 7: 891
true cross and, 18: 2251
pine cone, 7: 882
Dionysus and, 7: 892, 19: 2618
as virginity symbol, 7: 892
plaintain (herb), 9: 1186
poinsettia, Christmas and, 3: 421
polecat, as witch's familiar, 5: 691
pomegranate, 15: 2073
Persephone and, 14: 2012
potato, 11: 1560

radish, Easter and, 5: 699
ragwort (St James's herb), 15: 2050
raven, 4: 496, 15: 2160
reindeer:
horns of, at Abbots Bromley, 9: 1250
in Lapland, 11: 1506, 1507
robin (bird), 16: 2222-3
rook, 12: 1598
rose, 16: 2237-8
rosemary (herb), 9: 1184, 1186, 15: 2050, 16: 2238
rowan (mountain ash, quick beam, quicken, wicken, witch-wood), 8: 1134, 16: 2247

sage (herb), 9: 1186
salmon, 16: 2281
scarab (dung-beetle), 5: 671, 10: 1346, 16: 2294-5
scorpion, 9: 1182, 17: 2311
seal (animal), 17: 2324-5
self-sacrifice, pelican as symbol of, 14: 2002
serpent, snake, 1: 105, 17: 2336-40, 2408
sheep, 17: 2357-8
goats and (Christian metaphor), 8: 1033
shrew, folklore concerning, 1: 126
Solomon's seal (herb), 9: 1185, 1186
sparrow, sacred to Aphrodite, 4: 459
spider, 17: 2435-7
in Japan, 17: 2436, 2437
springwort (herb), 20: 2836
stag, 18: 2475-9
Artemis and Actaeon and , 4: 574, 18: 2475, 2477, 2478-9
Celts and, 1: 105, 3: 377, 9: 1248
stag-beetle, 10: 1346, 1346
stork, 18: 2490-1
sun:
crane and, 4: 470
goose and,8: 1050-1
hawk and, 8: 1133
horse and, 18: 2502
lizards and, 11: 1539
swallow (bird), 18: 2513-4
in Babylonian flood legend, 7: 913
in legends of Christ, 12: 1598, 18: 2514
in Greece, 18: 2513
Philomela myth, 13: 1868, 2513
in medicine, 18: 2513
swan, 18: 2514-6
Celts and, 3: 378
sycamore (tree), 19: 265

tansy (herb), Easter associations of, 5: 696
tarragon (herb), 9: 1186
tiger, 19: 2625
white, in China, 20: 2797
toad, 19: 2637-9
tortoise:
in China, 5: 633, 15: 2036
hare and, 8: 1117
invention of lyre and, 9: 1196
Vishnu incarnate as, 10: 1320, 1321, 20: 2746
tree, trees, 19: 2655-62
trout, 19: 2672

vervain (Cerealis, Demetria, Mercury's Blood, Persephonion, Tears of Juno/Isis), 19: 2728
vine, 19: 2732
Dionysus and, 5: 583, 584
viper's bugloss (herb), 9: 1185, 1186
vulture:
in augury, 2: 162
in the Bible, 14: 2002
in Egypt, 2: 231
founding of Rome and, 7: 944

wallaby, 1: 104
water-lily, as the lotus of mythology, 11: 1548
whale, 20: 2787-8
in the bestiary, 2:18-9, 20: 2787
St Brendan and, 2: 281, 282
Jonah and, 10: 1428, 1428, 1429, 1429, 1430, 1430, 20: 2787, 2787
willow, 20: 2805
Hasidism and, 8: 1125
wolf, 20: 2819-21
the Devil and, 20: 2821
Greek gods and, 20: 2819
Apollo, 1: 105, 114, 20: 2829
Inuit and, 10: 1352
in Scandinavian mythology:
Odin and, 7: 995, 14: 1907
sun and, 18: 2503
shape-shifting and, 20: 2821
woodpecker, 20: 2836
wren, 20: 2837
owl and, 14: 1949
robin and, 16: 2222, 20: 2837
wryneck (bird), 20: 2839

yarrow, (bloodwort, knight's milfoil, soldier's woundwort), 9: 1186, 13: 1743, 15: 2049,
yew, 19: 2661, 20: 2845-6

7. Nature, Fertility & Creation Myths

Adonis, 1: 53, 113, 5: 676-7
Good Shepherd symbol and, 8: 1049
by Michelangelo,3: 319
aetiological myths, distinguished from ritual creation myths, 4: 460, 471
Africa: 1: 54-61
creation myths of, 1: 61
Ashanti, 1: 126-8
agriculture,
dance and, 4: 530-1
fertility in, 6: 855-6, 859
its origin not established, 19: 2718
in Roman religion, 16: 2232-3
Ashanti:
creation myths of, 1: 127
Astarte:
as Mother Goddess, 13: 1779
Aztecs, 2: 180-7
creation myths of, 2: 182-5
end of the world, beliefs concerning, 6: 754, 755
human sacrifice and, 2: 182, 183, 184, 16: 2262, 2265

Baal:
as dying god, 15: 2031, 18: 2541
Beltane (Celtic festival), 1: 87, 3: 374
Bacchae (Bacchantes; worshippers of Bacchus), 2: 189,
ivy and, 9: 1228
Bacchanalia, 2: 189
Bacchus, 2: 189, 16: 2288
Dionysus identified with, 2: 189, 16: 2288
bonfire:
Balder and, 13: 1750
at Midsummer, 1: 129, 13: 1743
at onset of winter, 14: 2010, 20: 2809

carnival, 18: 2467-70
Mexican, 7: 934
castration, 13: 1797
of Attis, 4: 523, 5: 678
Ceres (Roman goddess), 3: 379, 4: 575-6, 16: 2230
acorn and, 14: 1902
Demeter identified with, 4: 563, 16: 2230
Janus and, 10: 1388
Cerialia (festival of Ceres), 4: 563
Cerne Abbas giant (Dorset), 6: 854
Cernunnos (Celtic god), 1: 105, 3: 377, 9: 1248, 18: 2475
China: 3: 392-400
creation myths in, 4: 476, 5: 717
corn dolly (corn sheaf), 4: 455, 456, 8: 1123, 20: 2792
cornucopia, 4: 456
cosmogony, 4: 460
creation myths, 4: 471-6
African, 1: 61
Ashanti, 1: 127
Australian, 2: 277, 4: 476
central Asian, 7: 967-8
Chinese, 4: 476, 5: 717
eggs in, 2: 227-8, 5: 717, 719, 7: 886
Egyptian, 2: 195, 4: 471-2, 5: 717, 6: 814-5, 7: 967, 12: 1608, 13: 1823
end of the world and, 6: 753-60
Etruscan, 6: 781
Finnish, 7: 886
giants in, 8: 1015, 1017
Ymir, 8: 1017, 16: 2290
Greek, 1: 111, 4: 476
Prômetheus and, 15: 2095, 2095, 2096
Gypsy, 8: 1101-2
Hittite, 9: 1224
Indian, 3: 354, 4: 476, 5: 717, 20: 2746
Inuit, lack of, 10: 1351
Jewish, 4: 475-6
Lapp, 11: 1509
Mexican, 2: 182-5, 4: 476
Micronesian, 15: 2072
North American Indian, 14: 1883
Algonquin, 1: 83
Kwakiutl, 14: 1954
Navaho, 13: 1783, 1825
trickster in, 19: 2664
Polynesian, 15: 2070
Scandinavian, 8: 1017, 11: 1526, 16: 2290
Shinto, 17: 2361
sky and earth in:
Egypt, 4: 472
Greece, 17: 2391
Polynesia, 15: 2070
Sumer, 5: 687
Sumerian, 4: 473-4, 5: 687, 12: 1717
two types of, distinguished, 4: 460, 471
water in, 2: 195, 4: 471, 473, 474
Zoroastrian, 14: 1912, 20: 2870, 2880
Cybebe (Lydian goddess), 4: 523
Cybele (goddess), 4: 523
Agdistis and, 4: 523
Attis and, 2: 161, 4: 523, 5: 678, 7: 891, 19: 2721

Demeter (Greek goddess), 4: 563-4, 8: 1078
Ceres identified with, 4: 563, 16: 2230
Cretan origin of, 4: 480, 8: 1079
as earth goddess, 5: 688
as mother goddess, 13: 1780
Persephone and, 4: 563, 6: 745, 14: 2012, 2014, 19: 2721-2
Plutus and, 4: 563
Triptolemus and, 4: 563, 6: 745, 747
dying god, 5: 676-80
Baal as, 15: 2031, 18: 2541
in Crete, 8: 1075
Osiris as, 5: 677, 14: 1940
Tammuz as, 5: 676, 18: 2554
Zeus as, 8: 1075, 1076

Earth, 5: 685-8
Ashanti spirit of, 1: 127
Aztec alligator myth of, 2: 183
as element, 6: 742-3
first man and, 7: 903
as mother goddess, 5: 685-6, 6: 680, 14: 1778, 19: 2719
in Finland, 7: 884
end of the world, 3: 348, 6: 753-9
Enuma elish (Babylonian creation myth), 4: 474, 5: 630, 6: 770, 12: 1633, 1718
eternal return, 6: 770-1, 859

February, in Les Tres Riches Heures, 20: 2810
fertility, beliefs and rites concerning, 6: 854-61
Fimbul winter (Scandinavian mythology), 6: 755, 20: 2809
first man, creation of man, 7: 902-5
African myths of, 4: 556
Melanesian myths of, 12: 1697
Sumerian myth of, 4: 473, 12: 1717
Floralia (Roman festival), 18: 2466

hamadryads (Greek tree spirits), 5: 666, 14: 1899
harvest, 8: 1120-4
fertility and, 5: 859, 8: 1122
first fruits of, 7: 900

Volume numbers are in bold type. For encyclopedic articles, both volume and page references are in bold type. Illustrations are indicated in italic

hare and, 8: 1116
harvest festival, 4: 456, 7: 929, 8: 1120, 1124
in Greece, 14: 1920, 19: 2669
last sheaf of corn, 4: 455, 456, 8: 1120, 19: 2722
Harvest May, 19: 2722
Hogmanay, 9: 1226, 13: 1865

ivy, 9: 1228, 10: 1380, 15: 2048
ivy doll (corn sheaf), 8: 1123

kelpies (Scottish water spirits), 6: 830, 11: 1468, 12: 1709
kern baby, kern doll (corn sheaf), 4: 456, 8: 1123
Khonds (Bengali tribe), harvest sacrifice of, 8: 1123-4
king, 11: 1474-80
dying god and divine king, 5: 676
fertility and, 11: 1474, 19: 2721

Ma (Bellona; Anatolian mother goddess), 5: 678, 13: 1782
maenads (worshippers of Dionysus), 5: 584, 587, 11: 1576
maiden (corn sheaf), 4: 456
maize, 12: 1602
Iroquois mask of, 10: 1361, 1360
in Mexican myth, 2: 185, 19: 2721
Mamertini (Italian people), 12: 1644
marriage:
sacred as fertility rite, 6: 859, 9: 1179
at Eleusis, 6: 748
Ishtar and, 10: 1364
Mars (Roman god): 12: 1642-4
fertility and, 12: 1643, 16: 2230
May Day, 5: 638, 12: 1673-4
maypole, 5: 638, 6: 861, 12: 1673, 18: 2467, 19: 2659-60, 2722
memory, 15: 2123-4
Mesopotamia: 12: 1714-22
creation myths in, 4: 473, 5: 687, 12: 1717
Mother Goddess in, 13: 1779-80
Midsummer, Midsummer Eve, 6: 859, 13: 1743
midwinter, 6: 859
Christmas and, 3: 418
halcyon breeding at, 8: 1111
wren hunt at, 20: 2837
modern witchcraft, 13: 1755-8, 16: 2554, 20: 2766, 2806, 2833-4
as fertility cult, 13: 1755
sex and, 13: 1757
mother:
city as symbol of, 11: 1504
garden as symbol of, 11: 1503
Mother Goddess (Great Mother), 13: 1777-82
mountain, hill, 13: 1783-4
primeval, in Egyptian creation myth, 4: 471, 13: 1828

nats (Burmese spirits), 17: 2429
Navaho Indians: 13: 1825-8
creation myth of, 13: 1783, 1825
navy* (Slav spirits), 17: 2400
neck (corn sheaf), 4: 456
crying the neck, 8: 1120-1
New Year, 7: 901, 13: 1862-5
night, 13: 1867-8
Ninhursag (Sumerian goddess), 6: 816
Ninmah (Sumerian goddess), 4: 474
Ninurta (Sumerian god), 12: 1716
nixies (German water spirits), 12: 1709
North American Indians, 14: 1879-85
creation myths of, 14: 1883
nose:
phallic symbolism of, 7: 997
Nun (Egyptian creation myth), 2: 195
nut (fruit), fertility and, 15: 2050

pace eggs, pace eggers (Easter), 5: 720, 7: 920, 922
Papa (Maori earth goddess), 12: 1631
penis:
bewitchment of, 9: 1273, 10: 1356, 15: 2112
phallic symbolism, 6: 860, 10: 1380, 15: 2023-6
Phouka (Irish spirit), Puck identified with, 15: 2127
pixies, 6: 830
Puck identified with, 15: 2127
plough, ploughing, 4: 455
woodpecker and, 20: 2836
prostitution, 15: 2102-4
pwca (Welsh spirit), Puck identified with, 15: 2127

rain:
Aztecs and, 2: 2394
ferns and, 17: 2394
frog and, 7: 968
at funerals, 17: 2394
Jupiter and, 11: 1460
peacock and, 14: 1998
woodpecker and, 19: 2618, 20: 2836
rain-making, 4: 455-6, 15: 2155
in Africa, 1: 59
rivers, 16: 2221
Nilotes and, 13: 1870
sacred, in Hinduism, 15: 2043
symbolism of, 11: 1504
as water of life (in Revelation), 16: 2170
Rome (ancient): 16: 2230-5
Isis cult in, 5: 677-8, 10: 1365, 13: 1780-1, 1810, 14: 1940
sacrifice and, 16: 2231, 2235
human, 16: 2235
sheep festival of (Parilia), 17: 2357
spring festivals of, 18: 2466
tree spirits, tree worship, in 19: 2658, 2660-1,
rusalki* (Slav water spirits), 17: 2400

Saturnalia (Roman festival), 5: 657, 16: 2285, 20: 2809
Christmas and, 3: 418, 5: 636
evergreens and, 9: 1229
Scandinavia:
creation myths of, 8: 1017, 11: 1526, 16: 2290
sea, ocean, 17: 2318-23
seasons:
cyclical character of, 6: 856
seasonal festivals as rites of passage, 16: 2211
vegetation spirits and, 19: 2719
Sedna (Arnquagssaq, Nerrivik, Nuliajuk; Eskimo sea spirit), 10: 1351, 1355, 17: 2324
sex, sexuality, 2: 252, 17: 2342-8
fertility and, 6: 860, 17: 2343
phallic symbolism and, 6: 860, 15: 2024, 2026
sky, 17: 2388-95
earth and, 5: 687, 19: 2699
in creation myths, 4: 472, 5: 687, 5: 2070, 17: 2391
spirit, spirits, 6: 855, 856, 859-61, 17: 2437
in Africa, 1: 55
Ashanti, 1: 126-8
Ethiopia, 6: 777
guardian spirits, 8: 1091-4
Kikuyu, 11: 1469
Nuer, 14: 1890-91
in Melanesia, 12: 1694, 1694, 1695
in New Guinea, 8: 1140, 12: 1695, 13: 1848, 1850
in Mesopotamia, 12: 1719
Nagas and, 13: 1737
Slav, 17: 2396, 2400
in Southeast Asia, 17: 2428
Veddas and, 19: 2716-8
spring (season), 18: 2465-71
sun, 18: 2499-2506
in Crete, moon and, 9: 1179-80
eclipse of, 5: 707, 18: 2505
gold and, 4: 459
Great Beast 666 and, 12: 1593-4
Hittite gods of, 9: 1222, 1223, 1224
hoopoe and, 2: 231

thunderbolt:
Donar and, 7: 995
Jupiter and, 17: 2392
thyrsos, 19: 2618
time, 19: 2627-34
tree spirits, gods; tree worship, 19: 2656, 2660-1, 2722
Ashanti, 1: 128
in Egypt, 16: 2170, 19: 2656
Osiris as, 7: 891
Greek, 19: 1656, 2660-1
Indian, 1: 108, 10: 1336, 19: 2657
Roman, 19: 2656, 2660-1

universe, cosmos, nature of:
Chinese view of, 12: 1612
god's role in, Graeco-Roman views on, 15: 2079
the sex act and, 15: 2026

Vanir (Scandinavian deities of fertility), 7: 965, 16: 2289
in Germanic mythology, 7: 995
vegetation spirits, deities, 19: 2718-23
Adonis as, 1: 113, 5: 676
Attis as, 2: 161, 4: 523, 7: 891, 19: 2721
Baal as, 2: 188, 189, 15: 2030-1, 18: 2541, 19: 2720-1
Janus as, 10: 1388
king and, 11: 1474, 19: 2721
Osiris as, 7: 891, 15: 1940, 19: 2719
Tammuz as, 18: 2554
Viracocha (Peruvian creator), 10: 1324-5
vodyanoy* (Slav water spirits), 17: 2400
Voluspa, end of the world in, 6: 755, 16: 2290

water, 20: 2771-6
in creation myths, 2: 195, 4: 471, 473-4
divination by (hydromancy), 17: 2315
dragon and, 5: 630
in Easter customs, 5: 699
in Egypt, 2: 195, 197, 16: 2169-70, 2170
as element, 6: 742
end of the world and, 6: 753
evil spirits and, 6: 800
fertility and, 6: 860
green and, 8: 1081
harvest and, 4: 456, 8: 1120-3
as mirror, 13: 1749
New Year and, 20: 2776
Slavs and, 17: 2400
symbolism of, 11: 1504
weather:
birds and, 19: 2617
at funerals, 17: 2394-5
lore of:
diver, 5: 596
oak and ash, 14: 1903
in the Ozarks, 14: 1952
pig, 15: 2040
rainbow, 15: 2155
robin, 16: 2223
rook, 12: 1598
wells, 18: 2472-5
cursing well of St Aelian, 4: 521, 18: 2473-5
dragons and, 5: 630
well-dressing, 6: 860, 18: 2472
holy, 18: 2472-3
Celts and, 8: 1144
hawthorn and, 8: 1135
saints and, 18: 2473
symbolism of, 11: 1504
wishing-well, 18: 2475, 20: 2814
wind, 17: 2391
controlled by knotted string, 18: 2494
Enlil and, 17: 2394
from the four quarters of the compass, 17: 2390
Varuna and, 17: 2392
winter, 20: 2809
bonfires lit at onset of, 14: 2010, 20: 2809
festivals of, 20: 2809
woman: 20: 2822-31
moon and, 13: 1765
uncleanness of, 20: 2825
water and, 20: 2776

8. Rites of Passage

All Hallows' Eve (Hallowe'en), 1: 87-9
bonfires and, 1: 87
divination on, 11: 1560, 17: 2408
fairies and, 1: 87-8
witches and, 1: 89, 6: 785
ashes, 1: 129-30
of cremated bodies, 4: 479

birth:
Bushmen and, 3: 320
Gypsies and, 8: 1103
Brazil, 2: 272-5
burial in, 10: 1314
hunting and taboo in, 9: 1267
incest taboo in, 2: 273
initiation rites in, 2: 273-4, 10: 1337

Canopic jars, 13: 1788
cicatrization, 18: 2576, 2580-1
in Africa:
Bushmen, 3: 320
Chad, 10: 1342
Ibo, 4: 1278-9
Kikuyu, 11: 1171
Sudan, 13: 1796
circumcision, 13: 1797-8
in Africa, 16: 2210-11, 2212-3
Azande, 2: 179
Bushmen, 3: 320
Kikuyu, 11: 1471, 1472
Masai, 12: 1654
in Judaism, 10: 1432
circumpolar stars, in the Pyramid Texts, 6: 734
coffins:
Egyptian, 2: 258-9, 6: 728-9, 13: 1788
cremation, 4: 477-9
burial and, 4: 477
in India, 7: 896
cult of the dead, 4: 509-16
in Brazil, 2: 272-3, 4: 510, 515
in Egypt, 2: 197, 4: 511, 7: 933
fairies and, 6: 832
harvest and, 8: 1121-2
in Papua, 4: 509
in Peru, 10: 1323
in Phoenicia, 18: 2544
prehistoric, 4: 510-11
in Uganda, cursing and, 4: 521
death, 4: 554-9
in Africa 1: 59, 4: 544-7
Bushmen, 3: 318
in Australia, 2: 170, 4: 516, 556, 557
in children's games, 3: 387, 4: 539
Christianity and, 4: 559, 6: 791-2
dove and, 5: 622
in Egypt, 4: 557, 12: 1606-8
in Greece, 4: 559, 12: 1608
Hebrews and, 12: 1608
house and, 9: 1261-2
initiation and, 10: 1337, 1343
Inuit and, 10: 1353-5
maze and, 12: 1674-5
in Mesopotamia, 4: 558, 12: 1608
night and, 13: 1868
North American Indians and, 4: 556, 557
origin of, 3: 317, 4: 554-8, 6: 790-4
as fourth horseman of the Apocalypse, 6: 7566-7, 9: 1251, 16: 2197, 2199
rose and, 16: 2237-8
salt and, 16: 2282
Stoicism and, 6: 790
white and, 20: 2791
will-o-the-wisp as warning of, 20: 2805
willow and, 20: 2805-6
in Zoroastrianism, 4: 558, 14: 1912
dolmen (chamber tomb; prehistoric burial), 3: 314, 18: 2489

embalming, in mummification, 13: 1785

grave goods:
ghosts and, 7: 1004
Inuit, 10: 1354
Neolithic, 4: 511
Paleolithic, 3: 314, 4: 510
Parthian, 14: 1991

Herodiade, Herodias (goddess of witches), 6: 785

incest, 10: 1328-9
Inuit myth of sun and moon, 10: 1328, 1351
Rumanian myth of sun and moon, 13: 1765
taboo in Brazil, 2: 273
initiation, 10: 1337
in Africa, 1: 60, 12: 1699-70
Bushmen 3: 320
Congo, 4: 338
Dahomey, vodun cult, 4: 524
in Australia, 2: 166, 166
in Brazil, 2: 273-4, 274, 10: 1337
in Crete, 20: 2862
in Greece, 8: 1076
of Irish heroes, 7: 888
to magic, 11: 1580
in Melanesia, 10: 1340, 12: 1695
to Mysteries of Isis, 10: 1365
Ndembu and, 16: 2214
in New Guinea, 5: 663, 13: 1848
of North American Indians, 10: 1344, 14: 1956
in Roman rites of Mithras, 13: 1752
of shamans, 17: 2546-8
to Voodoo, 20: 2753, 2754, 2869

marriage and betrothal, matrimony, wedding, 12: 1635-42
Melanesia: 12: 1694-8
initiation in, 10: 1340, 12: 1695
menstruation, 2: 248-9, 12: 1699-702

Neolithic (New Stone Age) period,
cult of the dead in, 4: 511
New Guinea: 13: 1846-50
initiation rites of, 5: 663, 13: 1848-9
marriage in, 12: 1640, 1642
North American Indians: 14: 1879-85
initiation and, 10: 1344

ordeal, 14: 1933

polygamy:

Kikuyu and, 11: 1473
pregnancy:
Bushmen, 3: 3320
forty and, 7: 941

rites of passage, 16: 2209-11
ritual, 16: 2212-6

urn, funerary:
Ashanti, 1: 128
Brazilian, 4: 514
Zapotec, 13: 1736

wedding-cake, 12: 1638
wedding ring, 16: 2207-9

9. Symbols & Meanings

Africa, masks in, 12: 1656-7, 1657, 1658
Altamira (Spain), 3: 305, 367
altar, 1: 92-3, 18: 2490
Aztec, 1: 93
Christian, 1: 92, 93, 19: 2607
Mesopotamian, 1: 92
Roman, 1: 92-3, 16: 2234
ankh (Egyptian symbol), 4: 490, 491 6: 727, 734, 10: 1313
archetypes, Jung's concept of, 11: 1457-8

bards, 2: 199
Celtic, 5: 657, 15: 2055-6
bells, 2: 212-3
Benin, mask from, 12: 1657
body-painting, 4: 464, 18: 2576, 2581

candle, 3: 339-40
hand of glory and, 8: 1113-4
Judaism and, 3: 339
carol (seasonal song), 3: 352
carole (dance), 3: 351-2, 4: 531
caduceus, 2: 279-80, 3: 328
castle:
in Grail legend, 8: 1058, 1061, 1065,
symbolism of, 11: 1505
catherine wheel, 16: 2272
cauldron, 3: 363
of Annwn (Arthurian cycle), 1: 122, 3: 363, 8: 1061
of Bran the Blessed, 3: 363, 8: 1061
Celts and, 3: 363, 8: 1059-60
of Goibniu, 8: 1059
cave art, 3: 364-9, 6: 859
dating of, 3: 364-6
Celtic cross, 3: 372, 4: 491
chain dances, 3: 351-2, 4: 534-5
chalice, 4: 516
Grail as chalice of the Last Supper, 8: 1062-3
Chester, mystery play cycle of, 13: 1804, 1805, 1806
children's games, 3: 387-90, 19: 2698
chi-rho monogram (Christian symbol), 4: 490
circle, 3: 422-3
in Celtic cross, 4: 491
coronation:
anointing and, 11: 1480, 14: 1914
of King Arthur (15th cent. MS), 16: 2216
crown and, 4: 504
oath, 14: 1906
sceptre and, 20: 2767
costume, clothes, dress, robes, 4: 462-6, 16: 2221
cross, 4: 489-92
Christian, 4: 490-2
of St Andrew, 13: 1854
Bogomils and 2: 256
Celtic, 3: 372, 375, 4: 491
symbolism of, 18: 2536
and the four directions, as symbol of the world, 18: 2536
pre-Christian, 4: 490
prehistoric, 4: 490
Touareg and, 19: 2645

dance, 4: 528-37
in Africa, 1: 56, 57, 4: 529, 533, 534
Congo, 2: 499, 452
Nigeria, 4: 528
Zulu, 20: 2877, 2878, 2879
Australian aborigines and, 2: 167, 10: 1309, 19: 2642
in Bali, 7: 997
in Brazil, 2: 274
crane dances, 4: 470
in Crete, 4: 482
fertility and, 9: 1250
Hindu, 7: 997
in Greece, 3: 351
Dionysus and, 5: 584-6
in India, 7: 883, 997
madness and, 11: 1575
masks in, 4: 536, 12: 1656-65
maze and, 12: 1675
Muses and, 13: 1789
music and, 4: 535-6, 13: 1793
of North American Indians:
Algonquin, 1: 83, 84
Great Plains Indians, 8: 1070-1
Iroquois, 4: 530, 532, 10: 1361-2
Pueblo, 15: 2128-9, 2130-2, 2133, 2134
Shakers and, 17: 2349
shamans and, 1: 83
Shiva and, 17: 2367
stilt dance, Nigerian 4: 528
Sufis and, 18: 2496
death masks, 12: 1660-3
double axe (Cretan; Labrys), 2: 176, 4: 483
drama, 5: 636-9
Greek, 5: 636-7, 12: 1664, 16: 2288, 18: 2466
Dionysus and, 5: 586, 636-7, 16: 2288
in Japan, 10: 1390
spring and, 18: 2466
drum, 5: 662-4, 13: 1792
Dahomey, 14: 1931
shamans and, 5: 6763, 7: 886, 887, 10: 1355, 11: 1507, 1508, 17: 2352, 2352

egg, 5: 717-20
in creation myths, 2: 227-8, 5: 717, 719, 7: 886
Egyptian, 2: 227-8, 279, 4: 472, 5: 717
Finnish, 7: 886
Dionysus and, 18: 2532
Easter and, 5: 699, 702, 717, 720
of ostrich, 14: 1940
of owl, 14: 1949

Faust, 6: 844-9, 14: 1961
Goethe and, 6: 846, 847, 847-8, 8: 1036, 1036-7, 1039, 14: 1960
grimoire attributed to, 11: 1513
Mephistopheles and, 6: 846, 12: 1702
Simon Magus and, 17: 2374
feather, 6: 851
in Egypt, in judgement of the dead, 6: 851, 851, 11: 1569
of the peacock, 14: 1998
shamans and, 7: 886
films, 7: 871-9
finding of witches, 7: 880-1
fire, 7: 893-9
as element, 6: 742
end of the world and, 6: 753, 756, 760, 16: 2292
Parsees and, 1: 93, 7: 894, 14: 1985
at Pentecost, 6: 761
in Persian religion, 1: 93
phoenix and, 7: 896, 15: 2033, 2036
robin and, 16: 4444, 20: 2837
sacred:
of Brigit at Kildare, 2: 284
sacrifice and, 1: 92f, 3: 318, 4: 970, 7: 894
Slavs and, 17: 2396
stolen from the gods, 15: 2094-5
by Prometheus, 7: 894, 15: 2094
Zoroastrian fire temple, 20: 2870
flute (musical instrument):
of Marsyas, preserved at Sicyon, 16: 2177
in Roman religion, 16: 2230
sacred, in Brazil, 2: 273, 275
flying saucers (unidentified flying objects, UFOs), 19: 2687
and alien visitors, 1: 85-6 and 'Men in Black', 12: 1698-9
foliate heads, in medieval churches, 14: 1903, 19: 2719, 2723
folkplays, 5: 638, 7: 921-2, 933
fountain, 7: 945-6
symbolism of, 7: 945, 11: 1504
of youth, 7: 946, 20: 2771
Frankenstein (novel), 9: 1236, 16: 2300
film of, 7: 872

games, 7: 974-8
psi ability in games of chance, 15: 2118
Roman, 11: 1461-2, 16: 2230
garden, 9: 1264, 11: 1500, 1501
Biblical, olive and, 14: 1920
Japanese, 20: 2856, 2857
as paradise, 14: 1977
Venus and, 19: 2723
gesture, 7: 996-7
Ghost dance (of Northern American Indians), 7: 999-1000
Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von, 8: 1036-9
Faust and, 6: 847, 847, 847, 8: 1036-7, 1039, 14: 1960
Good Shepherd, 8: 1049-50, 17: 2357, 18: 2534
Great Bear (Charles's Wain, Plough; constellation):
Charlemagne and, 3: 385
in Egypt, 17: 2341
Greek myth of, 2: 210, 4: 574
Mexican myth of, 2: 183
Greek cross (crux quadrata, equal-armed cross), 3: 422, 4: 490

halo, 8: 1112
in Buddhist art, 1: 96, 96
in Christian art, 5: 619
hammer, 8: 1112
hand, 2: 251
bronze, Roman, 7: 882
Buddha, ritual hand gestures of, 7: 997
in cave art, 3: 365, 366
in Hindu dance, 7: 997
in the Mass, 7: 997
Nigerian altar of, 1: 93
in salute, 7: 996
yoga, hand gestures in, 20: 2849
harlequin, 19: 2667
dervish source of, 4: 566
head-dress, 8: 1145-8
hearth, 9: 1163-5
Greeks and, 9: 1164
in India, 10: 1335
Romans and, 9: 1164, 16: 2234, 16: 2257
helmets, 8: 1147
herm, 15: 2025
hexagram, 9: 1204
in ritual magic, 9: 1204, 16: 2220
hobby-horse, 7: 920, 921, 9: 1225-6, 13: 1744
Morris dances and, 13: 1774, 1776
Hop Scotch (children's game), 3: 390
hora (ring dance), 3: 351, 4: 531, 531, 5: 699
horns, 9: 1241-50
on altars, 1: 92
Celts and, 3: 376, 9: 1246-50
crescent moon as, 4: 480
in Crete, 9: 1246, 19: 2602
cuckoldry and, 7: 997
in Egypt, 9: 1245, 13: 1765
as fertility symbols, 4: 480
of reindeer, Thermes and, 11: 1507
of unicorn, 19: 2688, 2689-90
house, 9: 1258-64
Lares and, 11: 1509-10

icon, 9: 1293
imagination, the, 18: 2583
Coleridge on, 3: 428-9
in magic, 11: 1582-3
incantation, 10: 1318-20
in Mesopotamia, 12: 1720
poetry and, 15: 2055-9
in ritual magic, 10: 1318, 16: 2220
incense, 2: 279, 10: 1328
burnt sacrifice and, 14: 2008

Java, mask from, 8: 1048
jester, medieval, 7: 933, 935
dervishes perhaps associated with, 4: 566
Jordan (river), symbolism of, 11: 1504

Katha Kali (Indian danced drama), 5: 636
Kerry, Great White Horse of (hobby-horse), 9: 1226
key, 9: 1260, 11: 1469, 18: 2534
knot, 11: 1484, 18: 2494-5
as Odin's symbol, 14: 1909, 1911
Shinto, symbolic, 17: 2361
in white magic, 20: 2793
in zombification rite, 20: 2869
Kolo (Yugoslav ring dance), 3: 351
Kono (tribe of Guinea), masks and, 12: 2656-7

landscape symbolism, 11: 1500-5
light, 11: 1525-31
ghosts and, 7: 1006
mandala, 12: 1614-7, 20: 2848
in meditation, 12: 1678
Tibetan, 11: 1459, 12: 1616
Mark, St, 10: 1409, 1410, 1412, 13: 1746
lion the symbol of, 9: 1292
masks, 12: 1656-67
maze (layrinth), 12: 1674-5
Milky Way, 14: 1992-3
miracle plays, 13: 1803-6
mitre (Christian headgear), 4: 466, 8: 1146, 1148
Moon, symbolism of, 18: 2536
Morris dances, 4: 532, 13: 1774-6
hobby-horse and, 13: 1774, 1776
May Day and, 12: 1673, 1674, 13: 1776
sword dances compared with, 18: 2529
mummers (guisers, guizards, geesers), 7: 920, 921, 922, 8: 1095, 20: 2811
music, 13: 1792-5
mystery plays, 5: 638, 13: 1803-6

Nazism, swastika and, 4: 490, 491, 18: 2517, 2517
New Guinea:
masks in, 12: 1657-8, 13: 1846
New Testament:
dreams in 5: 645
Nibelungenlied, 9: 1202, 13: 1865-7
Attila in, 2: 161, 13: 1867
Wagner and, 13: 1867, 20: 2758
Nigeria:
drum in, 5: 662
masks in, 12: 1266
nightmare, 10: 1332, 13: 1868
nimbus (halo), 5: 619
North American Indians, 14: 1879-85
harvest mask of, 8: 1123
scalp dance of, 11: 1575

Odyssey, 19: 2672
oreibasia (Dionysian dance rite), 5: 586

Passion plays, 5: 639
path symbolism, 10: 1430, 14: 1992-3
peach, as Chinese symbol of immortality, 3: 400
poets, poetry, verse, 15: 2055-9
Muses and, 13: 1789
Sufis and, 18: 2497
Punch and Judy, 15: 2135, 19: 2666

riddles, 16: 2204-6
ring dances (circle dances, wheel dances), 3: 351, 4: 531, 534

science fiction and fantasy, 16: 2297-304
in films, 7: 872, 875, 877
scythe, 17: 2317
Seven Deadly Sins:
by Bosch, 2: 268-9, 267, 269
devils associated with, 6: 794
13th cent, illustrations of, 17: 2376-7
Ship of Fools, 17: 2362
sickle:
hammer and, Communist symbol of, 8: 1111
Uranus castrated with, 19: 2699
skull, 17: 2385-7
Aztec, 2: 183
burial and:
Inuit at Ipiutak, 5: 596
separate from body, 8: 1131
crossbones and, 17: 2385-6
Crucifixion, skull depicted in, 7: 904
as drinking cup, 17: 2385
Great Plains Indians and, 8: 1072
healing and, 17: 2385, 2386
Mexican, modern, 1: 87, 7: 930, 13: 1742
of monks, on Mt Athos, 16: 2177
in New Guinea, 13: 1849, 17: 2385
in Renaissance symbolism, 16: 2189
Shiva and, 9: 1212
Tibetan drum made of, 5: 664
song:
of dying swan, 18: 2516
in magic, 10: 1319
Spare, Austin (artist), 2: 151, 151-2, 153
string, 18: 2491-4
Inuit string figures, 10: 1355
sun, 18: 2499-2506
cross as symbol of, 4: 490
wheels as symbols of, 20: 2788
swastika, 4: 490, 18: 2517
Ludwig Fahrenkrog and, 13: 1839, 18: 2517
in Greece, 18: 2517
Guido von List and, 13: 1839, 18: 2517
Nazism and, 4: 490, 491, 18: 2517, 2517
Navaho Indians and, 18: 2517
New Templars and, 13: 2852
Pictish, 4: 491
volkisch movement and, 18: 2517
sword, 18: 2522-31
symbolism, 15: 2023-4, 18: 2532-8

Tagore, Rabindranath, 9: 1221, 1221,
Ghandi and, 12: 1600
tower, symbolism of, 11: 1505
Tower of Babel, 6: 740, 19: 2648-9, 2648
French, 15th cent., 17: 2432
Nimrod as builder of, 19: 2649
seven and, 19: 2649
ziggurat as original of, 19: 2649
trumpet, 19: 2677-9

in Nepal, 19: 2621
T-shaped cross (crux commissa, St Anthony's cross, Tau cross), 4: 490, 492, 18: 2582

umbrella, 17: 2395, 2395
in Ethiopia, 6: 773
of peacock feathers, 14: 1998

valley, symbolism of, 11: 1504

Wakefield, mystery play cycle of, 13: 1804-6
Walpurgisnacht, witches and, 6: 785
wand, 20: 2765-7
weathercock, 3: 426
Wells, H.G., 16: 2300, 2301-2
wheel, 20: 2788-91
in fortune telling (cards), 3: 343-4
of life (Buddhism and Hinduism), 11: 1466, 1467, 1467, 20: 2789
Tarot and, 18: 2569
white, 20: 2791-2
as symbol of purity, 3: 431, 7: 973, 20: 2791
wings, 20: 2806-8
of Daedalus and Icarus, 18: 2506, 20: 2807
disk, winged, as sun symbol, 9: 1289, 1292, 20: 2788, 2808
of divine messengers, 2: 228
of angels, 20: 2807
world mountain, 18: 2536
Eurasian, 15: 2095
Hindu, 13: 1783, 16: 2188, 18: 2536
world tree and, 19: 2661
world serpent, cosmic snake, 17: 2337
world tree, cosmic tree, 18: 2536, 19: 2661
shamans and, 17: 2351-2
world mountain and, 19: 2661
wreath, 20: 2836
as crown, 4: 504, 11: 1511
death and, 4: 504

yoni (female symbol; India), 9: 1195, 18: 2560
lotus and, 11: 1548
York, mystery play cycle of, 13: 1804-6

10. The Hero's Quest

Aeneas (Trojan hero), 7: 942-3
Aphrodite and, 1: 112, 19: 2323
Harpies and, 8: 1119
as a Lar, 11: 1510
Aeneid* (Virgil), 4: 542-3, 7: 942
Hades in, 11: 1453
purgation of souls in, 15: 2135
Sibyl of Cumae in, 17: 2368-9
Argonauts (Greek mythology):
Argo built of oak, 14: 1901
eyes on prow of Argo, 6: 819
Orpheus and, 14: 1934, 17: 2382
Phineas and, 8: 1118
Arthur, King, 1: 120-5, 8: 1024, 9: 1203, 1248, 16: 2216

Bran (Celtic mythology), 2: 271, 3: 336
cauldron of, 3: 363, 8: 1061
Fisher king and, 8: 1061
head of, 2: 271, 8: 1143
in the Mabinogion, 2: 271, 11: 1571
Branwen, daughter of Llyr (Mabinogion), 2: 271, 11: 1571

Cu Chulainn (Celtic hero), 4: 506-7
cauldron of Mider and, 3: 363
Finn compared with, 7: 888
Lugh and, 11: 1541
Culhwch and Olwen (Mabinogion), 7: 890, 8: 1059-60, 11: 1569, 1570, 1572

Dream of Maesen Wledig (Mabinogion), 11: 1570
Dream of Rhonabwy (Mabinogion), 11: 1570, 1572

Excalibur (Caliburnus; sword of Arthur), 1: 122, 123, 125, 6: 797, 18: 2522
sword in the stone distinguished from, 18: 2526

Fisher King (Maimed King; Grail legend), 7: 909, 8: 1058-9, 1061, 1064, 14: 1988
Galahad (Arthurian knight), 7: 971-3
Lancelot and, 7: 971, 973, 11: 1498
Parsifal and, 7: 971, 14: 1989
Gareth (Arthurian knight), 1: 122
Gawain (Arthurian knight), 1: 122-3, 125, 7: 982-5
Grail and, 7: 971, 982-4, 8: 1062, 20: 2799
Green Knight and, 7: 982-5, 8: 1149, 14: 1903
Gereint, son of Erbin (Mabinogion), 11: 1570, 1572
Gilgamesh, 4: 558, 8: 1018-9
Grail, Holy, 1: 121, 122, 125, 3: 331, 333, 336, 8: 1058-65
appears to knights of Round Table, 7: 971
Gawain and, 7: 971, 982, 8: 1062, 20: 2799
Glastonbury and, 8: 1022, 1024
four Hallows seen by seekers of, 8: 2528
Joseph of Arimathea and, 8:1022, 1024, 1062, 1065, 10: 1403
Lancelot and, 8: 1065, 11: 1498, 1498
Parsifal and, 7: 973, 8: 1061, 1064, 14: 1988
sword and, 7: 982, 8: 1058, 18: 2528
Green Knight, Sir Gawain and the, 7: 982-4, 8: 1149, 20: 2799
Guinevere (Arthur's queen), 1: 122, 8: 1095, 11: 1498
Gwydion, 8: 1099, 11: 1540, 1572

hero, 9: 1200-4
Celtic, 3: 363, 4: 506
dragons and, 5: 633
giants and, 8: 1015, 1017, 1018
Greek, 1: 49, 50, 9: 1201, 1202
Jungian view of, 18: 2537
serpents slain by, 17: 2337, 2338-9
sleeping, 17: 2402-3
in United States folklore, 19: 2694-6

Kay (Arthurian knight), 1: 122, 124-5
knights, knighthood:
sword and, 18: 2527

Lady of the Fountain (Mabinogion), 9: 1248-9, 11: 1570-2, 20: 2801
lakes:
Lady of the Lake, Excalibur and, 1: 124-5, 125
Lancelot and, 11: 1498
symbolism of, 11: 1504
Lance, Holy, Grail quest and, 7: 973, 982, 984
Lancelot (Arthurian knight), 1: 122-5, 11: 1498-9, 1498, 1499
Brittany and, 2: 284, 11: 1498
Elaine and, 7: 973
in the enchanted forest, 20: 2800-1
Galahad and, 7: 971, 973, 11: 1498-9
Grail and, 8: 1065, 11: 1498-9, 1498
Guinevere and, 8: 1065, 11: 1498, 1498-9
Morgan le Fay and, 13: 1770
Venus and, 11: 1499
Lludd and Llefelys (Mabinogion), 11: 1570
Loathly Damsel (Arthurian legend):
Parsifal and, 14: 1988, 1990

Mabinogion (medieval Welsh tales), 11: 1569-72
Manawydan, son of Llyr (Mabinogion), 11: 1571-2
Meleagant (Arthurian legend), 11: 1498
Merlin (magician), 12: 1706-8, 1707
Mordred (Arthurian cycle), 1: 121-3, 125
Morgan le Fay (Arthurian legend), 1: 123, 6: 832, 12: 1768-9

Peredur (Mabinogion), 11: 1570, 1572
Pwyll, prince of Dyfed (Mabinigion), 11: 1570-1

Questing Beast (Arthurian legend), 6: 2799

Robin Hood, 9: 1202, 16: 2223-5, 20: 2803
May Day and, 8: 1082, 16: 2225
Round Table, King Arthur's, 1: 121, 124, 125, 3: 331, 8: 1060
earliest surviving reference to, 1: 123
Galahad and, 7: 971-3
Tudors and, 1: 124

Siegfried (Teutonic hero), 13: 1865
Fafnir killed by, 5: 633
sword of (Balmung), 18: 2522

Tristan (Tristram), 19: 2667-71
Twrch Trwyth (boar; Arthurian legend), 1: 106, 1: 122, 7: 890, 11: 1572

Valkyries, 7: 995, 14: 1907, 1911

Waste Land (Arthurian legend), 8: 1059, 1064

11. Legendary Lands & Beasts

abominable snowman (yeti), 1: 48
alicorn (horn of unicorn), 19: 2689-90

Bigfoot, 2: 225
bogies (Scottish spirits), Puck related to, 15: 2127

Cailleach (Scottish monster), 4: 497, 6: 830
caladrins, in the bestiary, 5: 592 Camelot and Arthurian Britain, 3: 330-6
centaurs, 3: 379
Lapiths and, 3: 379, 9: 1252-3, 19: 2601
Theseus and, 19: 2601
Ceryneian hind, captured by Hercules, 9: 1188, 18: 2475
China:
dragon in, 5: 631, 633-5, 15: 2036
four spiritual creatures of, 5: 633, 15: 2036
phoenix in, 5: 633, 6: 851, 15: 2034-5, 2036
unicorn (ki-lin) in, 5: 633, 15: 2036, 19: 2690
Chiron (centaur), 3: 379
Asclepios and, 8: 1150, 1151
Cormelian (giant), 10: 1382

dragon, 5: 629-35, 7: 896
Beowulf and, 2: 214
in China, 5: 631, 633-5, 15: 2036
the Devil as, 4: 572-3, 5: 622, 631, 6: 758
in Hittite mythology, 9: 1223
in Iranian mythology, 5: 631
in Japan, 5: 635
Midsummer and, 13: 1743
St Simeon Stylites and, 16: 2279
Tristan and, 19: 2668
wings of, 20: 2807

elf-bolts, elf-arrows, 6: 830, 18: 2490
Isabel Gowdie and, 8: 1056

fairies, the 'Little People', 6: 825-32, 11: 1537
on All Hallows' Eve, 1: 87-8
of Cornwall, 4: 457, 6: 832
hawthorn and, 8: 1134-5
of Scotland, 6: 830, 832
Isabel Gowdie and, 8: 1056
in Scottish and Border ballads, 17: 2313
tinkers and, 19: 2636
wings of, 20: 2807, 2808
Feathered Serpent (Plumed Serpent), 17: 2337
feng (feng-hwang*; Chinese mythical bird), 15: 2036

Garuda, 2: 228, 229, 9: 1212, 19: 2618
giants, 6: 830
Iroquois myth of, 10: 1362
in Lapland (Stallo), 11: 1509
Persian, 18: 2474
in Scandinavian mythology, 8: 1017
at Ragnarok, 16: 2292
Thor and, 8: 1017, 1112, 11: 1543
19: 2608-10
Glass Mountain, 8: 1021
Glastonbury (Somerset), 8: 1023-7
Arthurian legends and, 1: 125, 2: 391, 8: 1022, 1023, 1027
as Avalon, 1: 125, 2:176, 8: 1022, 1023, 1027
relics at, 16: 2179
holy thorn of, 8: 1025, 1026, 1026, 1135
gnomes (elementals), 6: 743
Gog and Magog (giants), 8: 1017, 1039
Goliath (Biblical giant, 8: 1017, 9: 1200
Gollinborsti (mythical boar), 2: 250, 5: 674, 7: 965
gremlin, 8: 1082
Grendel (monster), 2: 214
Grenier, Jean (werewolf), 8: 1082, 20: 2782
griffin (griffon, gryphon), 20: 2807
Alexander the Great and, 1: 80

hippogriff, 20: 2807
hobgoblin, 15: 2127
Hodening Horse, 9: 1253
Humbaba (Huwawa; Babylonian giant), 20: 2803
Hydra (water-snake), Hercules and, 9: 1188
Hymir (giant), Thor and, 19: 2608

Ker-Is (Breton lost land legend), 7: 916
knackers (knockers, mine fairies), 4: 457
kraken (sea-monster), 7: 908, 11: 1485

Lemuria, 11: 1514-5
leprechauns, 6: 829
Loch Ness Monster, 5: 637
lost lands, submerged towns and villages, 17: 2323
bells of, 17: 2323
Breton legends, 2: 285, 7: 916
Cornish legends, 7: 916
Welsh legends, 7: 915
Lyonesse (Cornish lost land legend), 7: 916, 17: 2323

mermaids and mermen, 12: 1709
Minotaur, 1: 106, 3: 307-8, 9: 1180, 13: 1744
Mu, 11: 1514, 1515
Musrussu dragon (symbol of Marduk), 12: 1634, 1634
Naiads (nymphs of running water), 14: 1899
Nereids (sea nymphs), 14: 1899
seals and, 17: 2324-5
with sea-monster (Roman mosaic), 16: 2232-3
Nessus (centaur), Hercules and, 9: 1189, 17: 2342

Oceanides (nymphs of the ocean), 14: 1899
Oreads (Orestiads, mountain nymphs), 14: 1899

Phoenix, 7: 896, 15: 2033-6
in China, 5: 633, 6: 851, 15: 2034-5, 2036
Puck, 15: 2126-7, 2126, 2127, 16: 2223

Roc (mythical bird), 2: 228, 20: 2807

salamander (mythical creature), 6: 743, 7: 897
satyrs (Greek mythology), 5: 637, 14: 1900, 16: 2287-8
sea-monsters, 2: 181, 17: 2319, 20: 2776
Baal and, 18: 2540
Morbidus and, 17: 2338-9
Nereids with, 16: 2232-03
Silenus, 13: 1811, 16: 2287, 17: 2371
Dionysus and, 13: 1808-9, 17: 2371
Simurgh (Persian mythical bird), 2: 228
Sphinx, 17: 2435
Egyptian, 17: 2435
of Gaza, 5: 644
Greek, 17: 2435
Oedipus and 16: 2205
Stubb (Stump), Peter (werewolf), 20: 2781

Thumb, Tom (dwarf), 5: 675
thunderbird, 19: 2617-8, 20: 2878
Tylwyth Teg (Welsh Fairies), 6: 830

Ullikummi (Hittite monster), 9: 1223
unicorn, 19: 2688-90
bear and, 2: 208
in China (ki-lin), 5: 633, 14: 2036, 19: 2690
of Mohenjo-daro, 10: 1334, 1335

werewolf (loup-garou), 20: 2779-83
Jean Grenier, 8: 1082, 20: 2782
in Petronius' Satyricon, 17: 2356

Yarthkins (Fenland fairies), 6: 830

Zamurrad (Persian giant), 18: 2474

12. Western Religions

Abdul-Baha (Bahai leader), 2: 190, 191
Abraham (Old Testament patriarch):
promised land and, 6: 739
sacrifice of Isaac and, 7: 900, 900, 17: 2357, 19: 2679
Adam (first man), 4: 476
Eve and, 6: 791-2, 7: 902, 903-4, 12: 1608, 17: 2344-5, 20: 2829
apple and, 1: 117
as hermaphrodites, 9: 1195
Manichean view of, 7: 905, 11: 1527, 12: 1612-3, 1621
Lilith and, 11: 1532
Martinists and, 12: 1646
meaning of the name, 2: 275, 7: 903
Adonai (name of God), 20: 2839
African Orthodox Churches, 20: 2769-70
Aga Khan, 10: 1374
agape (Christian love feast), 12: 1668
Ali, (cousin of Mohammed), 10: 1373, 12: 1601
Amos (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2098-9

anathema (excommunication ceremony), 4: 522
Andrew, St, 13: 1854, 1857
Anthony, St, 1: 109, 16: 2272
Anthony of Padua, 2: 226, 16: 2272, 2278-9
Apocrypha (Bible), 13: 1853-60
apostles (of Jesus), 19: 2681
Acts of the 14: 1994-5
Aquila of Pontus (Christian writer), 1: 117
Aquinas, St Thomas, 10: 1315-6, 16: 2270
Ark of Yahweh, 6: 778, 20: 2840-1
Ashkenazim (Jews), 10: 1432
Athanasius, St:
on St Anthony, 1: 109
Arian heresy and, 3: 408-9, 9: 1191
on the Virgin Mary, 12: 1649
Athenagoras (Christian Platonist), on immortality, 10: 1315
atonement, 2: 160
in Christianity, 2: 160, 12: 1610
Jewish day of (Yom Kippur), 2: 160, 10: 1438, 16: 2266
Augustine, St, (of Hippo), 16: 2270
Augustine, St (missionary to England), 18: 2473

Barabbas, 10: 1411-2
Barnabas, epistle of, 13: 1853
Becket, Thomas, 15: 2043
Bible, the, 2: 225, 9: 1222, 13: 1745-6
angels in, 1: 100-1
divination in, 5: 645
Judaism and, 10: 1433-4
light associated with God in, 11: 1526
olive in, 14: 1920
scorpion in, 17: 2311
sexual references in, 15: 2025
Black Muslims, 2: 236-8

caliph (Islamic title), 10: 1373
Calvin, John, 6: 784
on predestination, 6: 742, 15: 2080
canonization, 3: 341, 16: 2273
Carmel, Mount (Israel):
Bahai shrine on, 1: 190, 191, 191
cave burial on, 4: 510
Carmelite Order, 18: 2588-9
catacombs:
of Rome, 9: 1290-1
Christ in, 9: 1292
Good Shepherd symbol in, 8: 1049, 9: 1292
Catherine of Alexandria, St, 16: 2272
Catherine of Genoa, St, 15: 2137, 2148 18: 2484
Catherine of Ricci, St, 18: 2485
Catherine of Siena, St, 3: 361-2
Cecilia, St, 16: 2276
celibacy:
of Christian monks, 3: 410
of Christian priests 3: 411
Chalcedon, Council of AD 451, Jesus's dual nature defined by, 3: 409, 10: 1320, 12: 1649
Christ, meaning of the word, 3: 404, 14: 1914
Christianity, 3: 403-13
Celtic, 3: 333, 336
chastity, celibacy, and, 3: 410, 411, 17: 2332
Constantine and, 3: 408
death and, 4: 559, 6: 791-2
dying god myth and, 5: 679-80
election and, 6: 738, 740-1
end of the world in, 6: 753, 756-9
eternal return myth contrasted with, 6: 770, 771
evil and, 6: 791-2
guardian spirits and, 8: 1094, 12: 1621
Hinduism and, 9: 1218, 16: 2186, 2188
iconography in, 9: 1289, 1290-3
Iconoclastic Controversy, 3: 410, 9: 1293
incense and, 10: 1328
Judaism and, 3: 404, 5: 703-4
judgement of the dead in, 11: 1454
man, Christian view of, 12: 1610
marriage and, 3: 408
as a sacrament, 16: 2258, 2259-60
meditation and, 12: 1679-80
monasticism in, 3: 410-11
music and, 13: 1793-4
Mystery religions of Rome and, 13: 1811
St Paul and, 14: 1996-7
in New Zealand, 12: 1632-3
origins of, 3: 404, 5: 703-4
Jesus and, 10: 1406-12
St Paul and, 3: 407, 6: 740-1, 10: 1409-10, 14: 1994-6
priests in, 15: 2089
prophecy and, 15: 2099-100
relics and, 5: 594-5, 16: 2177-9
Renaissance and, 16: 2190-1
resurrection in, 12: 1610
revelation and, 16: 2197-8
rose and, 16: 2237
sacraments in, 16: 2257-60
sacrifice and, 16: 2266
salvation of the individual in, 15: 2080
science and, 3: 413
symbolism in, 18: 2536
Christmas, 3: 418-21, 20: 2811
holly and, ivy, 9: 1229
mistletoe and, 3: 419, 13: 1750
ciborium (container of the host), 8: 1059
Grail as, 8: 1059, 1060
Clement, St, 13: 1853, 17: 2406, 2406
Climax (Climacus), St John, 11: 1455
Compostela (Spain), pilgrimage to shrine of St James at, 3: 427
confirmation (Christian sacrament), 16: 2258, 2259
Crown of Thorns (of Jesus), 8: 1134, 1135, 18: 2514
Crucifixion (of Jesus), 4: 492, 9: 1292-3
clothed and unclothed representations of, 19: 2687
St Paul on, 10: 1410, 14: 1997
reasons for, 3: 405
in 16th cent, woodcut, 5: 6800
skull in representations of, 3: 904
swallows in legends of, 12: 1598, 18: 2514
tree as the cross, 4: 492
Curé of Ars (St Jean-Marie-Baptiste Vianney), 4: 517-9, 15: 2064

Daniel (Old Testament prophet), 4: 540-2, 541
angels and, 4: 542, 8: 1094
beast of Revelation and, 8: 1066
Dead Sea Scrolls, 4: 548-53
on the angel of darkness, 4: 567
Christianity and, 4: 551, 5: 703
on the baptism of Jesus, 2: 196
Judaism and, 4: 549-51
Dionysius of Alexandria, 16: 220
Dominic, St (Dominic Guzman), 3: 359-60, 359
Drusiana, Callimachus and (Christian legend), 13: 1857-60
Druzes (Moslem sect), 5: 665-6

Easter, 3: 696-702
origins of, 5: 680
Eliezer, Israel ben (Baal Shem Tov), 8: 1125
Elijah (Old Testament), 11: 1544, 13: 1745, 15: 2098
fed by ravens, 4: 497, 497
Elmo, St, 16: 2277, 20: 2805
Epiphany (Christianity), 11: 1576
Isis and, 5: 678
Epistle to Diognetus (Christian text), 13: 1853
epistles, apocryphal, 13: 1854, 1860
Eve (first woman), 6: 788
meaning of the name, 7: 903
Exodus (Jewish history), 20: 2840
Extreme Unction, 14: 1914, 16: 2258
Ezekiel, 6: 814, 823-4, 15: 2099, 20: 2790-1

fasting, 6: 841
in Islam, 6: 841, 10: 1370
Judaism and, 6: 841, 10: 1438
Fatima, Virgin Mary and, 12: 1652, 20: 2749
Fatimid Caliphate of Egypt, 10: 1374, 12: 1601
Feast of Tabernacles (Succoth, Feast of Booths: Judaism), 2: 188, 8: 1120, 10: 1438, 20: 2772
Feast of Trumpets (Judaism), 19: 2679
Feast of the Visitation (of the Virgin Mary), 11: 1534
flagellation, 7: 910
flight into Egypt, the (Holy Family):
in Bulgarian mural, 10: 1406
fig tree and, 6: 864
Francis of Assisi, St, 7: 947-8, 16: 2278
stigmata of, 7: 947, 948, 18: 2482, 2486
wolf of Gubbio and, 20: 2819, 2821
friars, origin of, 7: 947,949

Genesis, book of:
creation of man described in, 7: 903
creation of the world described in, 4: 471
Flood story in, 7: 912
twelve tribes of Israel in, 11: 1544
George, St, dragon and:
in Ethiopian MS, 9: 1203
in Ethiopian mural, 16: 2278-9
golden calf, worship of, 3: 308-9
Good Friday, 5: 700
bread and, 2: 276
gospel, 8: 1055, 10: 1409, 13: 1746
apocryphal, 13: 1853, 1854
grace (Christianity), 8: 1057, 15: 2080
Great Beast (of Revelation), 8: 1066, 1067

Hahakkuk (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2098, 2099
Haggadah (Judaism), 10: 1435
hajj (Islam), 10: 1372, 12: 1675-6
Hakim (founder of Druzes), 5: 665,
halcyon (bird), 8: 1112
Hamza (Druze), 5: 665, 666
Hanukkah (Feast of Dedication, Festival of Lights, Judaism), 3: 339, 10: 1438
harrowing of hell, 8: 1119, 9: 1175-6
in Christianity, 4: 558, 8: 1213, 9: 1175
Hegira (Islam), 9: 1167, 12: 1675, 13: 1760
Heilsgeschichte (salvation-history), 16: 2197-8
hell, 9: 1168-76
Chinese beliefs concerning, 3: 398, 399, 9: 1176
Dante on, 4: 542
heresy, 9: 1191-3
enthusiasm and, 6: 762
Gnosticism and, 8: 1028
Joan of Arc accused of, 10: 1420
Knights Templar accused of, 11: 1482, 1483
Hexateuch (Bible), 13: 1745, 20: 2840
Israel's election described in, 6: 739
Holy Ghost (Holy Spirit: Christianity):
dove as a symbol of, 2: 228, 278, 5: 622
enthusiasm and, 6: 762-4
holy orders (Christian sacrament), 16: 2258, 2259
Hosea (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2098, 16: 2266
host (Christianity), 12: 1668
in trial by ordeal, 14: 1904

Immaculate Conception, 10: 1312, 12: 1652, 19: 2736
St Bernadette of Lourdes and, 11: 1555
Inquisition (Holy Office), 10: 1344
founding of, 3: 358, 6: 785, 9: 1192, 10: 1344
Isaac (Son of Abraham), 6: 739
Isaiah (Old Testament prophet), 12: 1706, 15: 2098, 19: 2616
Islam 10: 1368-76
in Africa, 1: 56, 10: 1369, 1373, 1374, 1376
angels in, 1: 102, 102, 8: 1094
in China, 3: 399
dietary rules of, 7: 932
dogs and, 5: 607, 609
election in, 6: 741
fakirs in, 6: 836
fasting and, 6: 842, 10: 1370
incense and, 10: 1328
Jerusalem and, 10: 1404
paradise and, 14: 1981, 1983
pilgrimage in 10: 1370, 1372, 12: 1675-6, 15: 2043
predestination and freewill in, 6: 741, 10: 1372, 1373, 1374
prophecy in, 15: 2100
resurrection in, 12: 1610
revelation in, 16: 2198
rosary in, 16: 2236
Sikhs and, 17: 2369
sin and, 17: 2374
soul in, 12: 1610
in Southeast Asia, 17: 2428, 2430
Touareg and, 19: 2645
Israel (biblical country), Judah and, 11: 1544, 20: 2841

Jacob (Old Testament patriarch), 14: 1913
James, St (brother of Jesus), 15: 703, 704, 704
Jeremiah (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2099
Jerome, St, 3: 410
lion and, 11: 1534, 16: 2279
on reincarnation, 16: 2172
on the soul, 10: 1315
on virginity, 12: 1649-50
Jesus, 10: 1405-12
anointing of, 14: 1913, 1914
baptism of, 2: 197, 3: 409, 10: 1407, 20: 2774
blood of, 2: 248, 8: 1062, 1062
Bogomil view of, 2: 256
888 the number of, 8: 1066
his entry into Jerusalem, 10: 1410, 1411, 14: 1964, 1964, 1965
Gnostic view of, 3: 408, 8: 1030, 16: 2283
Good Shepherd symbol and, 8: 1049, 17: 2351, 18: 2534
healing by, 6: 834
Hercules compared with, 9: 1190
iconography of, 9: 1289, 1290
as the Lamb of God, 5: 696, 6: 814, 815, 11: 1498, 16: 2266, 17: 2357, 2359
life of, 3: 404, 10: 1406
apocryphal gospel accounts of, 13: 1854
magi and, 11: 1576, 19: 2615
as the Messiah, 3: 405, 10: 1409, 14: 1996
miracles of, 13: 1746, 1748
Nativity of, 10: 1406, 19: 2736
nature of, 3: 408, 409, 9: 1191, 12: 1649
Osiris compared with, 14: 1940
St Paul and, 3: 407, 5: 704, 10: 1409, 1412
pelican as symbol of, 14: 1996-8
as prophet, 15: 2100
resurrection of, 3: 407, 10: 1409, 12: 1610
Jonah as a symbol of, 10: 1430
in Revelation, 16: 2198
St Thomas as twin of, 19: 2684
Zealots and, 3: 405, 10: 1410, 20: 2852, 2853
Jews (Hebrews, Israel, Israelites):
exclusiveness of, Jonah and, 10: 1429
history of, 20: 2840
kingship among, 11: 1478
origins of, in Judah, 11: 1544
palm tree and, 14: 1963-4
Rome and, 3: 404, 16: 2266, 20: 2842, 2852
Star of David and, 9: 1204, 1204, 10: 1440
jihad (Islam), 10: 1374, 1418
Job, 3: 627, 10: 1424-5, 20: 2842
Joel (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2099
John, St (evangelist):
apocryphal acts of, 13: 1857
eagle the symbol of, 9: 1292
Revelation and, 16: 2201
John the Baptist, St, 2: 196, 3: 409
bonfires and, 16: 2269, 19: 2728, 20: 2813
dancing mania and, 4: 539
by El Greco, 2: 196
head of, 8: 1142
midsummer festival and, 4: 539, 13: 1743, 16: 2269, 20: 2789
as last Old Testament prophet, 15: 2099
John of the Cross, St, 5: 710, 10: 1426-8, 15: 2148, 17: 2344
Jonah, 10: 1428-30
book of, 15: 2099
Jewish exclusiveness typified by, 10: 1429
'whale' and, 7: 907, 10: 1428, 1428, 1429, 1429, 1430, 1430, 20: 2787, 2787
Joseph (father of Jesus), 19: 2732, 2734, 2736
apocryphal accounts of, 13: 1856
Joseph (Old Testament), dream of Pharaoh and, 5: 642, 645
Joseph of Arimathea, 10: 1430
Fisher King and, 8: 1065
Glastonbury and, 8: 1022, 1024
Grail and, 8: 1022, 1062, 1065, 10: 1430
holy thorn and, 8: 1024
Joseph Mary Desu, St (Joseph of Copertino), 18: 2487
Josephus (Jewish historian):
on Jesus, 10: 1409
on John the Baptist, 2: 197
on Pontius Pilate, 15: 2073
Zealots and, 20: 2852
Judah (biblical country), 11: 1544, 20: 2841
Judaism (Jewish religion), 10: 1424, 1425, 1431-40
altars and, 1: 92
angels and, 1: 100-1
Atonement Day of (Yom Kippur), 2: 160, 10: 1438, 16: 2266, 2293
Baal and, 2: 188, 189
baptism in, 2: 196
bull and, 9: 1245
circumcision and, 10: 1432
creation myths of, 4: 475
death and, 4: 558, 12: 1608
the Devil in, 4: 567, 5: 671
dietary rules of, 7: 931
dogs and, 5: 607
dreams and, 5: 644
dualism in, 6: 791
election and, 6: 738, 10: 1437, 20: 2840
end of the world in, 6: 756
eternal return myth contrasted with, 6: 770, 771
in Ethiopia, 6: 773
evil and, 6: 791
exorcism and, 6: 799-800
fasting and, 6: 841
festivals of, 10: 1437
Gnosticism and, 8: 1028-9
hell and, 9: 1170
iconography forbidden in, 9: 1290
incense and, 10: 1328
judgement of the dead and, 10: 1425, 11: 1453
Last Judgement, 11: 1453, 14: 1983
life after death in, 10: 1424

New Year in, 10: 1438
origin of the word Judaism, 11: 1544
original sin and, 7: 904
origins of Christianity and, 3: 404, 5: 703, 8: 1128, 14: 1995
paradise and, 14: 1981, 1983
prophecy and, 15: 2099, 2100, 16: 2197
prophetic books, 10: 1434
ram and, 9: 1246, 17: 2357
resurrection of the body and, 10: 1437, 11: 1453, 12: 1610
sacrifice and, 16: 2266
soul in, 10: 1437, 14: 1983
Trinity rejected by, 10: 1433
trumpet and, 19: 2679
Judas of Galilee, 20: 2852
Judas Iscariot, 10: 1440
suicide of, 10: 1440
elder tree and, 6: 737, 737
fig tree and, 6: 864
Judas Maccabaeus, 4: 549, 15: 2136

Kaaba (Islam), 12: 1675, 1676, 1676, 13: 1759, 18: 2490
Mohammed and, 13: 1760
pilgrimage to, 10: 1372
prayer directed to, 10: 1369
Koran (Islamic sacred text), 10: 1369, 1372, 11: 1484, 13: 1759
dictated by Gabriel, 15: 2100, 16: 2198
jinn in, 11: 1468
judgement of the dead in, 10: 1349
light and darkness in, 11: 1527
Medina suras of, 13: 1760-1
Mohammed as God's messenger in, 16: 2198
Queen of Sheba in, 15: 2146
Sufism and, 18: 2496

Last Judgement,
in Christianity, 11: 1453, 1454, 14: 1983
in Islam, 12: 1610
in Judaism, 11: 1453, 14 1983
Last Supper, 17: 2374
by Damaskinos, 19: 2607
Grail as chalice used at, 8: 1062
Lazarus, raising of, 20: 2794
Lent (Christianity), 5: 697
lost tribes of Israel, 11: 1544-6
Mormons and, 13: 1771
Persia, myth of their living in, 15: 2136
Lourdes, 6: 834-5, 11: 1553-5, 1553, 1554, 13: 1748
Luther, Martin, 3: 411
music and, 13: 1793
pilgrimage to Rome by, 15: 2043-4
predestination and, 15: 2080

Macarius, St, 17: 2332
Mahdi, 12: 1601-2, 1724, 1726
Ismailis and, 10: 1376
al-Mahdi, Mohammed, 12: 1602, 1724, 1726
Maimonides, Moses, 10: 1433-4
Malachi (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2099
Maliki school (Islam), 10: 1369
Malo, St:
wren and, 16: 2276, 20: 2837
Mamas, St, 11: 1537
Maronites (Christian sect), 3: 410
martyrs, 12: 1647
Mary, the Virgin, 12: 1647-52, 13: 1858-9, 1860
assumption of, 13: 1795
St Bernadette and, 11: 1553
breath and, legends concerning, 2: 277-8
Great Mother's attributes transferred to, 13: 1782
lily and, 11: 1532, 1533, 1534
Mary of Agreda, Blessed, 2: 226
Mary Frances of the Five Wounds, St, 18: 2484, 2485
'Mary of the Gaels' (St Brigit of Kildare), 2: 284-5
Mary of Jesus Crucified, Sister, 18: 2485
Mary Magdalen of Pazzi, 18: 2486
Masada, 20: 2852, 2853
Mass (Eucharist, Holy Communion, Lord's Supper), 2: 276, 3: 408, 6: 782, 7: 929, 932-3, 12: 1668, 16: 2257-9, 2260
Matthew, St, 10: 1409
Mecca (Arabian city), 12: 1675-6
Mede, Joseph (theologian), 17: 2328
Medina (Yathrib: Arabian city), 12: 1676
Menorah (candlestick: Judaism), 10: 1438
Messiah:
Jesus as, 3: 405, 10: 1409, 14: 1996
in Jewish belief, 3: 404, 10: 1434-7
Methodism:
Holiness movement and, 9: 1227
Mezuzah (Judaism), 10: 1438, 13: 1742
Micah (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2098
mihrab (mosque), 16: 2188
millennium (Christianity), 17: 2326, 2328
minaret (mosque), 13: 1776, 16: 2188
miracles, 13: 1744-8
of Jesus, 13: 1746, 1748
in childhood, apocryphal, 13: 1856
of the Old Testament, 13: 1745
Miriam (biblical), 15: 2097
Mishna (Judaism), 3: 323
Mohammed (Muhammed, Mahomet: the prophet of Islam), 10: 1368, 1374, 13: 1759-61, 17: 2393
his ascension to heaven, 14: 1979, 20: 2806
Mecca and, 10: 1368, 13: 1759
Medina and, 9: 1185, 10: 1368, 12: 1675, 13: 1760
Ramadan instituted by, 13: 1761
Moharram, 13: 1761-2
monism, in Islam, 9: 1278
monotheism, 13: 1763
Moses, 13: 1776
Moslem (definition), 10: 1368
mosque (Islam), 10: 1369, 1370, 1372, 1373, 13: 1776, 16: 2188
Muhammed, Elijah (Black Muslim), 2: 236, 237, 238
mujtahids (Islam), 10: 1374
Mukhtar (Islamic rebel), 12: 1601
al-Muntazar, Mohammed (imam), 10: 1373
Mutazilitism (Islam), 10: 1372-3

nabhi (Old Testament), 15: 2097, 16: 2197
Nahum (Old Testament prophet), 15: 2099
Nativity (birth of Jesus), 10: 1406, 19: 2736
Neoplatonism: 13: 1840-2
Christianity influenced by, 13: 1842
New Testament Apocrypha, 13: 1853-60
Noah (Old Testament):
his Ark, 7: 912, 20: 2775-6
Nusayrites (Islam), 10: 1374

odour of sanctity, 18: 2485-6
oil, 14: 1913-4
Old Testament:
altars in, 1: 92
angels in, 1: 100-1
Dead Sea Scrolls and, 4: 549-51
miracles in, 13: 1744, 1745
oil, ointment, in, 14: 1913-5
promised land in, 6: 739
prophecy in, 15: 2097-9
Queen of Sheba in, 15: 2146
sacrifice in, 16: 2265-7
Abraham and Isaac, 7: 900, 900, 16: 2263, 17: 2357, 19: 2679
symbolism of, adopted by Christians, 18: 2538
wisdom literature of, 20: 2814
Origen:
castrates himself, 13: 1797, 17: 2384
Gnosticism and, 8: 1030-1
on hell, 9: 1175
on Jesus and the Roman empire, 13: 1811
meaning of his name, 13: 1823
on sin, 4: 567
on the Song of Solomon, 13: 1818
on the soul, 10: 1315
original sin, 6: 793, 818, 12: 1610

Palm Sunday, 5: 700, 14: 1964
Patrick, St, 16: 2270
Paul, St, 3: 407, 14: 1994-6
Paul III (pope), Holy Office founded by, 9: 1193
penance, 14: 2002, 16: 2258, 2259
on Good Friday, 3: 406, 5: 698
in Hinduism, 17: 2376
Pentateuch, 10: 1433-4
Pentecost (Christian festival),
by El Greco, 6: 761
in French 15th cent. Book of Hours, 17: 2434
by Pinturicchio, 17: 2431
Pentecost (Jewish festival), 10: 1438
Peter, St, 3: 404
apocryphal acts of, 13: 1857
crucifixion of, 13: 1855
Jerusalem community of Christians and, 5: 703, 14: 1997
keys of heaven and, 6: 741
St Paul and, 14: 1996
Pharisees, 3: 404-5, 15: 2026
Philip, St (apostle), apocryphal acts of, 13: 1875
Philippians, St Paul's epistles to, 14: 1994
pilgrimage, 15: 2041-4
to Ars (tomb of Curé of), 4: 518
to Compostella, shrine of St James at, 3: 427
cures sought by, 5: 594, 15: 2042-4
Gypsy, 8: 1099, 1100, 1102
Pilgrimage of Etheria, 5: 700
pilgrim festivals (Judaism), 10: 1438
Pius IX (pope), Immaculate Conception dogma promulgated by, 12: 1652
Pius XII (pope), Assumption of the Virgin Mary dogma promulgated by, 12: 1652
Polycarp, St, 16: 2273
epistle of, 13: 1853
martyrdom of, 13: 1763, 16: 2179, 2273
pontiffs (Roman priests), 15: 2089, 16: 2234-5
Pontius Pilate, 10: 1406, 1410, 1412, 15: 2073-4
prayer, 15: 2079
magical incantation distinguished from, 10: 1319-20
rosary and, 16: 2236
priests, 15: 2083-9
Primitive Methodists, 6: 764
promised land, Israelites and, 6: 739
Protestantism, 3: 412
pilgrimage and, 15: 2044
Protoevangelium (Book of James), 12: 1649, 13: 1856
purgatory, 11: 1454, 15: 2135-7
Purim (Jewish festival), 10: 1438
Puritanism (Christianity: in England), 3: 412
names, uplifting, of Puritans, 13: 1823

qibla (mosque), 16: 2188
qiyas (Islam), 10: 1369
Queen of Sheba, 6: 775, 15: 2146-7

rabbi, 10: 1433
Ramadan (Islamic fast), 6: 841, 10: 1370
instituted by Mohammed, 13: 1761
Reformation (Christianity), 3: 411-2
refrigerium, 16: 2169-70
relics: 16: 2177-9
Christian, 5: 595, 15: 2043-4, 16: 2177-9
repentance, atonement and, 2: 160
Rephaim (Biblical giants), 8: 1015
resurrection (of the body):
in Christianity, 12: 1610
in Egypt, 2: 195
in Islam, 12: 1610
in Judaism, 10: 1437, 1453, 12: 1608
in Zoroastrianism, 12: 1612
revelation, 16: 2196-2203
Revelation, book of (Apocalypse of St John), 16: 2198-2203
Roman Catholic Church, 3: 411
ecstasy in, 5: 710
Freemasonry and, 7: 951
pilgrimage and, 15: 2043-4
predestination and, 15: 2080
relics and, 16: 2179
rosary and, 16: 2336
sacraments of, 16: 2257
vestments in, 4: 465-6
Rome (medieval and modern):
Christian pilgrimage to, 15: 2042, 2043
by Luther, 15: 2043-4 15th-cent. plan of, 7: 943
rosary, 16: 2236

sabbath (Christian), 4: 547
sabbath (Jewish), 4: 547, 10: 1437
sacraments, 16: 2257-60
sacrifice: 16: 2261-6
Sadducees, 3: 404, 405, 16: 2266
St Peter's (Rome), 16: 2190
saints, 16: 2270-9
salvation (Christianity), 15: 2080
Samson (Old Testament),
riddle asked by, 13: 1791, 16: 2204
al-Sanusi, Mohammed Ali (Mahdi), 12: 1601-2
sarcophagi, early Christian, 9: 1292
al-Sayyid, Mohammed Ahmad (Mahdi), 12: 1602
scapegoat, 2: 160, 16: 2266, 2293-4
Sebastian, St, 16: 2272
Second Coming, 6: 7759, 17: 2326-30, 20: 2770
Christadelphians and, 17: 2329
Sefardim (Jews), 10: 1432
seraph, 17: 2335
in the Old Testament, 1: 101
Seven Sleepers of Ephesus, 17: 2403
Shema (Judaism), 10: 1433
Sheol (Old Testament land of the dead), 9: 1170, 10: 1313, 11: 1453
Shia, Shiites (Islam), 10: 1373-4, 17: 2358
al-Husayn and, 13: 1761
Mahdi and, 12: 1601
Mohammed, Shiite view of, 13: 1761
Moharram and, 13: 1761
Shroud, Holy, of Turin, 19: 2680
Shrove Tuesday, 7: 976, 18: 2467
Simeon Stylites, St, 11: 1575, 17: 2372
dragon cured by, 16: 2279
sin, 17: 2374-7
Sinai, Mount, 17: 2378
Israelites and, 6: 739, 11: 1526, 13: 1783, 16: 2197, 20: 2840
al-Sirat (bridge over hell; Islam), 10: 1349, 1349
Sodom and Gomorrah, 17: 2413
Solomon, King, 17: 2414
Ethiopia and, 6: 775
hoopoe and, 2: 231
jinn commanded by, 10: 1418
as magician, 1: 131, 8: 1089, 17: 2414
peacock and, 14: 1998
Queen of Sheba and, 6: 775, 15: 2146-7
Temple built by, 17: 2414, 20: 2841
Spanish Inquisition, 9: 1192, 10: 1344
Basque witchcraft and, 2: 201-3
speaking in tongues (glossolalia), 17: 2431-5
Pentecostalist movement and, 14: 2003, 2006, 17: 2431, 2433
Stephen, St, 5: 703, 12: 1647
stylites (pillar saints), 11: 1574-5, 17: 2372
Sunnites (Islam), 10: 1369, 1374
Mahdi and, 12: 1601
Mohammed, Sunnite view of, 13: 1761
Swithin, St, 17: 2395

Talmud (Judaism), 10: 1434
taziya (Islam), 12: 1761-2
tefillin (Judaism), 10: 1438
Teresa of Avila, St, 18: 2588-90, 20: 2749-50
ecstasy and, 5: 709
John of the Cross and, 10: 1426
levitation of, 18: 2487
on the untrustworthiness of visions, 20: 2749
Teresa of Lisieux, St, 16: 2270, 18: 2485
Tertullian (Christian writer), 13: 1761
on the absurdity of Christianity, 11: 1576
on the Christian cross, 4: 490
on Pontius Pilate, 15: 2073
on the evilness of woman, 7: 904
Testament of Solomon, 8: 1089
Tetragrammaton (YHWH, name of Yahweh), 3: 326, 13: 1824, 18: 2590, 20: 2839
Thecla, St, 13: 1804
martyrdom of, 13: 1854
Theism, 13: 1744
Theophilus of Antioch (Christian writer), on immortality, 10: 1315
Thomas, St (Didymus; apostle), 13: 1857, 19: 2684
Torah (Judaism), 10: 1433, 1437, 1438, 19: 2640
transubstantiation, 12: 1668, 16: 2258
Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil, 4: 476, 6: 791, 7: 903
Trinity, the (Christianity), 19: 2613-4
in baptism, 2: 197
fingers symbol of, 7: 996, 997
in 14th cent. MS, 9: 1290
Virgin Mary and, 12: 1650
rejected by Judaism, 10: 1433
triple head representing the, 8: 1140
True Cross (Christianity), 4: 490, 16: 2179
Tugdual, St, 20: 2767, 2768
Turin shroud, 19: 2680
Twelfth Night, 3: 421, 19: 2681
twins, 19: 2682-6

Ubahdallah (Mahdi), 12: 1601
unction, anointing, 14: 1932
Urban VI (pope), 3: 362
Urban VIII (pope), 10: 1378
Ursula, St, and the 11,000 virgins, 19: 2687

Veneration of the Cross ('Creeping to the Cross'; Good Friday ritual), 5: 702
vigil, 19: 2731
virgin births, 19: 2732-6
of Jesus, 10: 1320, 12: 1647, 19: 2732

Wahhabi sect, (Islam), Sufism banned by, 18: 2497
Wailing Wall (Jerusalem), 10: 1403, 15: 2042
Walsingham, 20: 2753-4
Wandering Jew (Ahasuerus), 20: 2770
Watchers, the, 4: 572, 8: 1015, 1033
Whitsun, 20: 2796
wisdom literature, 20: 2814
woman, 20: 2822-31
Christian attitudes to, 20: 2829
Virgin Mary as ideal woman, 12: 1652
Xavier, St Francis, 16: 2270

X-shaped cross (crux decussata; St Andrew's cross), 4: 470

Yahweh (YHWH, Jehovah), 20: 2839-42
Gnostic view of, 16: 2283
as High God, 9: 1206
Israelites as chosen people of, 6: 739, 20: 2839
promised land and, 6: 793, 20: 2840
sacrifice of the first-born to, 7: 900
as storm god, 5: 631
Zealots and, 20: 2852

Zachary (pope), anathema and, 4: 522
Zealots (Jewish history), 3: 404, 20: 2852-3
Jesus and, 3: 405, 10: 1410-12, 20: 2852-3
Zion (Sion), hill of (Jerusalem), 10: 1404, 13: 1783-4, 20: 2867
Zionism, 10: 1433, 20: 2867
Star of David the emblem of, 10: 1440

13. Eastern Religions

Abhidharma schools (Buddhism), 18: 2507
Agni (Indian fire god), 3: 307, 10: 1335
Ahura Mazdah (Zoroastrianism), 1: 66, 68, 14: 1912, 1912, 20: 2873, 2873, 2875
Aksobhya (Buddha), 3: 301
Amida, Amidaism (Japanese Buddhism), 1: 95-7, 10: 1394
Amitabha identified with Amida, 3: 301
Amitabha (Amitayus; Buddhism), 3: 301, 13: 1872
Angad (Sikh leader), 17: 2370-1
Artha (Hinduism), 9: 1217
Arya Samaj (Hindu reformist sect), 9: 1218
Asoka Emperor, Buddhism and, 3: 299-300
Atman (Indian religion), 2: 160, 270, 9: 1211
Brahman and, 2: 160, 270, 19: 2711-2
union with (yoga), 19: 2712
Avesta (Zend-Avesta; Zoroastrian sacred texts), 7: 981, 14: 1912, 1985, 20: 2870, 2872, 2874-6

Bahais, 2: 190-1
Baha-Ullah (Mirza Hussain Ali; Bahai leader), 2: 190-1
Bhagavad Gita, 2: 220-5, 9: 1215, 13: 1818, 20: 2746
sacrifice in, 9: 1209, 16: 2264
Bhagavata Purana, 9: 1216, 11: 1488, 1491-2
Bhaiji (Indian holy man), 1: 97
Bhairava (Shiva), 18: 2561
bhakti (Hinduism), 9: 1216, 1218, 11: 1491-2
Christianity and, 11: 1468
bhakti yoga, 19: 2712-3, 20: 2846
Bhavani (Kali), 19: 2616
Bombay (India), Parsees and, 14: 1984
Bodhisattva (Buddhism), 2: 253, 3: 301, 302, 19: 2622
in Ceylon, 17: 2380, 2381
in Tibet, 11: 1496, 19: 2619, 2620
in Zen, 20: 2857
Brahma (Hindu god), 2: 271, 271, 20: 2746
goose and, 8: 1050, 1051
Rod of, 11: 1494
brahmacharya (yoga), 20: 2849
Brahman (Hinduism), 2: 224-5, 270-1, 9: 1211-6, 20: 2744-5
Atman and, 2: 160, 270, 19: 2711-2
hearth and, 10: 1335
threefold concept of, 19: 2614-5
Brahmanas (Hindu sacred texts), 6: 1209-10
Brahmins (caste; Hinduism), 2: 271, 3: 353-4

caste, 3: 353-4, 9: 1217
Indian Jews and, 14: 1933
in Sinhalese Buddhism, 17: 2380-1
China, 3: 392-400
Buddhism in, 3: 299, 300, 393, 395, 399, 4: 558, 11: 1549, 16: 2174
Confucianism, 3: 393-5
Confucius (Kung Fu-tze), 3: 393, 4: 445, 18: 2562, 2563
on Lao Tze, 18: 2562

Dalai Lama, 4: 527, 11: 1496, 1497, 1497, 16: 2176, 19: 2623, 2624
as incarnation of Avalokitesvara, 16: 2174
meaning of 'Dalai', 19: 2624
Das, Amar (Sikh leader), 17: 2371
Das Ram (Sikh leader), 17: 2371
dharana (concentration; yoga), 12: 1677, 19: 2715, 20: 2850
dharma, 9: 1209
in Buddhism, 3: 397
in Hinduism, 9: 1209, 1217, 19: 2714
in Jainism, 10: 1385-6
dhyana (meditation; yoga), 12: 1677, 19: 2715, 20: 2850
origin of the word 'Zen', 20: 2854
dhyana yoga, 20: 2846-7
Dundhi, King, horse of (Indian mythology), 9: 1254
Durga (wife of Shiva; Hinduism), 9: 1216, 13: 1781, 17: 2367
goat sacrificed to, 16: 2265
Kali and, 11: 1464
Dyaus (Indian god), 1: 105, 10: 1334, 17: 2391
bull and, 3: 307

Eightfold Path (Buddhism), 3: 296
Emma-O (judge of the dead; Japanese Buddhism), 4: 556, 558, 11: 1452

Ganesha (Ganapati, Hindu god), 6: 745, 9: 1212, 12: 1599
Ganga (Indian deity), 7: 979
Ganges (river), 7: 979-80
pilgrimage to, 7: 980, 13: 1864, 15: 2043
Gathas (Zoroastrian sacred texts), 7: 981, 14: 1912, 20: 2872-5, 2880
Gayomart (first man; Zoroastrianism), 1: 68, 7: 903, 905, 14: 1912
Gouranga (Krishna Chaitanya; Indian saint), 8: 1115

Hanuman (Hindu monkey god), 8: 1114, 9: 1216
in Katha Kali dance, 5: 636
haoma (sacred plant; Zoroastrianism), 20: 2875
hatha yoga, 2: 279, 20: 2847-51
Hinayana (Buddhism), 3: 300, 9: 1206
Hinduism, 9: 1207-21
altars and, 1: 93
ancestor worship and, 4: 513
asceticism in, 17: 2331-3
Buddhism and, 3: 301, 9: 1211
Christianity and, 9: 1218, 16: 2186, 2188
cow and, 4: 468, 9: 1208
creation myths in, 3: 354, 5: 717, 11: 1514, 20: 2746
dance, sacred in, 7: 997
death personified in, 4: 558
dogs and, 5: 611
dragon and, 5: 631
dualism in, 5: 669, 670
elephant in, 6: 745
Kama and, 11: 1464
Krishna and, 11: 1491
end of the world and, 6: 755
evil and, 6: 793, 19: 2712
fate and, 6: 843
God, Hindu concepts of, 20: 2846
hell and, 9: 1176, 11: 1466-7
incarnation (avatara) in, 10: 1320
lotus in, 9: 1207, 11: 1548
man, Hindu view of, 12: 1611
mandala in, 12: 1614
Nirvana in, 2: 224-5, 13: 1817-8, 1872
paradise and, 11: 1466-7, 14: 1980, 1982
pilgrimage in, 15: 2043
rainbow in, 15: 2153
reformist sects of, 9: 1218
rivers, sacred, of, 15: 2043
rosary in, 16: 2236, 19: 2710, 2712
sexual abstinence and, 17: 2332
Sikhs and, 17: 2369
six recognized systems of, 20: 2846
in Southeast Asia, 17: 2428
temples of, 16: 2186, 2188, 2264
erotic carvings of, 6: 857, 9: 1219, 18: 2504, 2555
third eye and, 6: 814
time in, 19: 1628, 1629
trinity (Brahma, Vishnu, Shiva) in, 2: 271, 20: 2746
woman, place of, in, 20: 2822
Holy Spirit (Zoroastrianism), 20: 2572-3
houses of eternity (Parthian tombs), 14: 1991
Hsi Wang Wu (Chinese deity), 18: 2564
Huang Ti (the yellow Emperor), 9: 1181, 18: 2564

Indra (Indian god), 10: 1334, 17: 2391, 20: 2744
bull and, 3: 307
Izana-gi (Shinto god), 17: 2361
Izana-mi (Shinto goddess), 17: 2361

Jains, 10: 1384-7
reincarnation and, 9: 1211, 10: 1387
wheel as symbol of time among, 20: 2788
japam (Hinduism), 19: 2710, 2712
Japan, 10: 1389-1400
altars in, 1: 93
Buddhism in, 3: 300, 10: 1391-1400, 14: 2088
Chinese influence on, 10: 1391
judgement of the dead in, 4: 556, 558, 11: 1452
carp in, 7: 909
dragons in, 5: 635
emperor of, 11: 1478-9, 17: 2262
flower arrangement in, 20: 2860
fox in, 10: 1395, 14: 1941
ghosts in, 7: 1002-3
I Ching in, 11: 1548
modern religious sects of, 10: 1397-1400
Divine Principles, 5: 606
pine tree in, 7: 892, 892
spider in, 17: 2436, 2437
tea ceremony of, 10: 1394, 1396, 1400
theatre of, 10: 1390, 12: 1664
jnana yoga, 19: 2713, 20: 2847
Jodo (Pure Land) sect (Japan), 1: 95, 10: 1394, 13: 1872, 14: 1982
juggernaut, 15: 2043

Kadmis (Parsee sect), 14: 1984
Kailasa, Mount (Indian mythology), 14: 1980
Kali (Indian goddess), 1: 99, 4: 556, 558, 6: 861, 11: 1462-4, 18: 2556, 2557
Anandamayi Ma and, 1: 97-8
iconography of, 9: 1290, 19: 2628
lotus held by, 11: 1548
time personified by, 19: 2628
Kaliya (serpent; Hinduism), 17: 2336
Kalkin (incarnation of Vishnu), 20: 2746
kama (Hinduism), 9: 1217, 11: 1464
Kanphala ('ear-torn' yogis), 2: 252
karma, 11: 1466-8, 12: 1611, 19: 2714
caste dependent on, 9: 1217
sin and, 17: 2376
in Sinhalese Buddhism, 17: 2381
karma yoga, 19: 2714, 20: 2847
Karttikeya (Hindu god), 9: 1212
Kitamura Sayo (Japanese religious leader), 10: 1398
Kobo Daishi (Kukai; Japanese priest), 10: 1308
Konarak, Indian temple at (the Black Pagoda), 18: 2504, 2555
Krishna (Hindu god), 2: 220, 229, 9: 1213, 1215, 11: 1486-92, 13: 1812, 1818, 15: 2043, 20: 2744, 2746
cow and, 4: 469
demons and, 6: 1581, 11: 1488, 1489
flood legend and, 7: 913
hell and, 9: 1176
Kaliya and, 17: 2336
Radha and, 9: 1216, 11: 1492
sexuality and, 9: 1216
kriya yoga, 20: 2847
Kshatriyas (caste; Hinduism), 3: 253

Lakshmi (wife of Vishnu; Hinduism), 6: 843
riding Garuda, 2: 229, 9: 1212
lotus and, 11: 1548
lamas, 11: 1496-7
Nepalese, 15: 2185
Tibetan, 11: 1496-7, 15: 2089, 18: 2560,, 19: 2622-5
Lao Tze (Chinese philosopher), 11: 1506, 13: 1872, 18: 2562, 2562, 2563
laya yoga, 20: 2847
lingam (phallic symbol; Hinduism), 6: 858, 860, 9: 1195, 11: 1534, 14: 1914, 2025

Madanotsava (Hindu festival), 11: 1464
Madhyamika school (Buddhism), 18: 2507
Mahabharata (Indian epic), 2: 220, 220, 222-3, 225, 3: 353, 9: 1202, 1214, 11: 1488
Mahatmas, 12: 1599-1600
Madame Blavatsky and, 2: 245, 12: 1600
Mahayana (Buddhism), 3: 300, 12: 1600
Nirvana and, 13: 1817, 1819
in Tibet, 11: 1496
Maitreya (Bodhisattva), 20: 2855
Manasa (Bengali snake goddess), 17: 2337
Manjusri (Bodhisattva), 12: 1611, 20: 2855
mantra yoga, 20: 2847
Manu, code of (Hinduism), 3: 354
Maya (Vedanta), 19: 2712
Maya, queen (mother of Buddha), 19: 2733, 2733
Meru (Hindu world mountain), 16: 2186, 18: 2536
Mihr (Parsee deity), 18: 1985
Mithras (Mithra), 13: 1751-4
Mohammed, Mirza Ali (founder of Bahai sect), 2: 190
monks, Buddhist, 3: 298, 299
mudras (gestures; yoga), 20: 2849, 2850
mukti (Hinduism), 2: 279

Nagarjuna (Buddhist teacher), 10: 2726, 18: 2507
Nakano Yonosuke (Japanese religious leader), 10: 1398
Nakayama Miki (Japanese religious leader), 10: 1397
Nanak (founder of Sikhism), 17: 2369-70
Nandin (bull of Shiva), 17: 2367
Nao Deguchi (Japanese religious leader), 10: 1398
Narayana (Hinduism), 10: 1320, 20: 2744
Navsari (India), Parsees and, 14: 1984
Nirvana, 13: 1872
in Buddhism, 2: 221, 3: 298, 9: 1211, 12: 1612, 13: 1814, 1817, 1819, 1872
in Ceylon, 17: 2381
in Hinduism, 2: 224-5, 13: 1817, 1818, 1872
niyama (yoga), 19: 2715, 20: 2848-9

Ohrmazd (Ormuzd; Zoroastrianism), 14: 1912
Ahriman and, 1: 66, 5: 667, 11: 1527, 14: 1912, 20: 2876, 2880
Ahura Mazdah and, 1: 66, 14: 1912
cypress symbol of, 19: 2657
Parsees and, 14: 1985
om (mantra), 12: 1628
om mani padme hum (Tibetan prayer), 10: 1415
Omoto (Japanese religious sect), 10: 1398-9

Pahlavi (language), Parsees and, 14: 1984
Parsees, 14: 1984-8
the dead, disposal of, 3: 314, 14: 1986, 1986, 1987-8, 20: 1873
fire and, 1: 93, 7: 894, 14: 1985
haoma and, 20: 2875
marriage and, 14: 1985, 1987
Parsva (Jain prophet), 10: 1384, 1386
Persepolis:
Ahura Mazdah relief from temple at, 14: 1912
Median nobles relief at, 20: 2873
sack of, 16: 1912
polytheism (definition), 15: 2073
Prajapati (Hinduism), 20: 2744
prana (breath; Hinduism), 2: 279, 20: 2850
pranayama (breath control; yoga), 2: 279, 11: 1494, 19: 2715, 20: 2849-50
pratyahara (yoga), 19: 2715, 20: 2850
prayer wheel, 20: 2789
in Nepal, 10: 1319
in Tibet, 19: 2624, 20: 2789
priests: 15: 2083-9
Parsee, 14: 1984, 1987
Punjab (India), Sikhs in, 17: 2369
Puranas (Hindu texts), 11: 1488
Purusha, Vedic creation myth of, 3: 354
Pusan (Indian god), 10: 1335

Radha, Krishna and, 9: 1216, 11: 1492
raja yoga, 19: 2740, 20: 2847
Rama (Indian god, incarnation of Vishnu), 9: 1209, 1215, 19: 2711, 20: 2744, 2746
Ramakrishna Paramahamsa, 9: 1218, 15: 2155-6
on sainthood, 11: 1574
Ramakrishna Mission, 9: 1219, 19: 2709
Ramayana (Indian epic), 20: 2746
giant demoness in, 8: 1015
Hanuman, fiery tail of, in, 9: 1210
Indra as peacock in, 14: 1998
Rashu (Parsee deity), 14: 1985
relics, 16: 2177-9
of the Buddha, 15: 2043, 2044, 16: 2177
Ridvan Festival (Bahais), 2: 190
rosary, 16: 2236
in Hinduism, 16: 2236, 19: 2710, 2712
Rudra (Indian god), 10: 1335

sacrifice, 16: 2261-6
in the Veda, 9: 1209, 10: 1335, 16: 2264
sadhu (Indian fakir), 6: 836, 836, 837, 11: 1574, 12: 1680, 16: 2266, 17: 2331
Sai Baba (Indian saint), 16: 2267
saints, 16: 2270-9
Buddhist, 3: 298
samadhi (yoga), 2: 279, 12: 1677, 19: 2715, 2652, 20: 2850
Samhitas (Hindu sacred texts), 2: 177, 9: 1209
Samkhya (Hinduism), 20: 2846

Samskaras (Hinduism), 19: 2714
Sangha (community; Buddhism), 3: 298
Sankara (Indian philosopher), 9: 1212
Sannyasin (Hinduism), 9: 1218, 19: 2715
Sarasvati (Indian goddess), 14: 2000
Sarasvati (river), 7: 979
Sarasvati, Swami Dayananda, 12: 1600
satori (Zen Buddhism), 13: 1814, 20: 2854
Savitri (Indian sun god), 18: 2504
sex and sexuality, 2: 252, 17: 2342-8
Shiva/Shakti and, 9: 1216, 18: 2556, 2559
Shakti (sakti; Hinduism), 9: 1216, 11: 1464, 17: 2367
Shehenshais (Parsee sect), 14: 1984
Shesha (cosmic serpent; Hinduism), 17: 2337, 20: 2746
Shingon (Japanese Buddhist sect), 10: 1391
Shinto, 17: 2358-62
Buddhism and, 10: 1390, 1391, 1394, 1397, 17: 2362
Shiva (Siva; Hindu god), 9: 1212, 1215, 1216, 1217, 10: 1335, 1336, 17: 2366-7, 20: 2746
as Bhairava, 19: 2561, 2628
bisexuality of, 9: 1195, 17: 2367
consort of, various names of, 9: 1216, 17: 2367
as destroyer, 2: 271, 4: 558, 17: 2367, 19: 2628, 20: 2746
Kundalini and, 2: 279, 11: 1494, 1495
madness and, 11: 1574, 17: 2367
Pasupati and, 10: 1335, 1336
phallic symbolism and, 6: 858, 860, 11: 1534, 17: 2366-7
Rudra and, 9: 1215, 10: 1335, 17: 2366
siddhis (yoga), 20: 2851
Sikhs, 17: 2369-71
sin, 17: 2374-7
Buddhism and, 17: 2376
karma and, 17: 2376
Singh, Gobind (Sikh leader), 17: 2371
Sinhalese Buddhism, 3: 300, 379, 15: 2043, 2044, 2044, 17: 2379-81
Sivananda, 17: 2383-4
soma (Sacred plant), 5: 649, 9: 1182, 10: 1334, 13: 1790, 16: 2266, 17: 2414
Southeast Asia, 17: 2428-30
Sraosha (Zoroastrian god), 20: 2875
Srosh (Parsee deity), 14: 1985
stupa (Buddhism), 3: 299, 16: 2188, 17: 2381, 19: 2621
Dhamek stupa at Sarnath, 16: 2188
Sudras (caste; Hinduism), 3: 353
sun, 18: 2499-2506
Indian gods of, 18: 2504
Mithras and, 13: 2501, 2502
Shinto goddess of, 17: 2434
Sunyavada (Buddhism), 18: 2507
Surya (Indian sun god), 19: 1208, 1217, 10: 1335, 18: 2502, 2504
Susa-no-o (Japanese god), 5: 635, 17: 2361
suttee, 18: 2511-2
Svetambaras (Jain sect), 10: 1385
Swami (svami), 18: 2514

Taka Shima Kaemon (Japanese seer), 11: 1548
Tao, Taoism, 3: 93, 18: 2562-65
meditation in, 12: 1678
Tao Te Ching*, 11: 1506, 17: 2334, 18: 2562-3
Tendai (Japanese Buddhist sect), 10: 1391, 1394
Tenri-kyo (Japanese religious sect), 10: 1397
Tensho Kotai Jingu-kyo (Japanese religious sect), 10: 1398
Theravada (Buddhism), 3: 300
in Ceylon, 3: 300, 17: 2379
in Conjeevaram, 3: 302
in Southeast Asia, 17: 2379, 2430
Thugs (Indian secret society), 11: 1464, 19: 2616-7
Tibet, 19: 2619-25
breath, as the soul, in, 2: 280
Buddha, 9: 1291
drum, made of skulls, from, 5: 664
exorcizing dagger of, 20: 2795
harvest festival in, 8: 1124
judgement of the dead and, 9: 1176
mandalas of, 11: 1459, 12: 1616
masks of, 12: 1662, 1663
oracles of, 19: 2649
prayer wheel in, 19: 2624, 20: 2789
pre-Buddhist religion of (Bon), 19: 2620
reincarnation and, 11: 1496, 16: 2174, 19: 2622-3
rosary in, 16: 2236
wheel of life in, 11: 1466, 1467, 20: 2789
Tipitaka (Buddhism), 17: 2379
Tooth, Temple of the (Ceylon), 15: 2043, 2044, 17: 2379, 2380, 2381
towers of silence (Parsees), 14: 1986, 1986, 1987-8, 20: 2872, 2873
trataka (yoga), 20: 2850
trinity, 19: 2667
in Hinduism (Brahma, Vishnu, Shiva), 2: 271, 20: 2746
Trita (Hindu god), 5: 631
Truth (cosmic order), in Zoroastrianism, 20: 2873

Uma (wife of Shiva; Hinduism), 9: 1216, 17: 2367
'unknown gods', 6: 824
untouchables (India), 3: 354, 9: 1221
Upanishads (Hindu sacred texts), 9: 1209, 1211, 2710-1
Brahman in, 2: 270, 9: 1211
dualism in, 5: 669
mysticism and, 13: 1815

Vaikuntha (paradise of Vishnu), 14: 1980
Vairocana (Buddha), 3: 301
Vaisheshika (Hinduism), 20: 2846
Vaisyas (caste; Hinduism), 3: 353
Vajrapani (Bodhisattva), 19: 2620
Varuna (Indian god), 6: 814, 10: 1335, 17: 2392
Vasudeva (Hinduism), 20: 2746
Vasudhara (Buddhist earth goddess), 12: 1615
Vedanta, 13: 1819, 19: 2709-15, 20: 2846
as a dualist system, 5: 669
Vedas (Hindu sacred texts), 2: 270, 9: 1209, 10: 1334, 19: 2710-1, 2716
creation myth of Purusha in, 3: 353-4
dragon myths of, 5: 631
eagle in, 5: 682
god of the dead in, 4: 558
sacrifice in, 9: 1209, 10: 1335, 16: 2264
social divisions in, 3: 353
yoga study of (jnana yoga), 20: 2847
Vena (wicked king; Hindu mythology), 5: 670
Vishnu (Indian god), 9: 1215, 1216, 10: 1335, 11: 1531, 20: 2744-6
asleep, on the serpent Ananta, 17: 2402
Ganges and, 7: 979
garuda and, 2: 229, 9: 1212
Indra and, 20: 2744
in mandala, 12: 1614
Narayana and, 10: 1320, 20: 2744
paradise of, 14: 1980
as sustainer of the universe, 2: 2271, 20: 2746
time and, 19: 2628
in trinity with Brahma and Shiva, 2: 271, 20: 2746
Vishvamitra (yogi), 17: 2332
Vishvarupa (Vishnu), 12: 1607
Visvarupa (serpent; Indian myth), 5: 631
Vivekananda, Swami (Hindu reformer), 9: 1218-9

woman, 20: 2822-31
Hindu view of, 20: 2822
in the Mahabharata, 20: 2825

Yama (Indian god):
as first man, 4: 558, 19: 2683
as god of the dead, 14: 1982, 19: 2683
Yama (Tibetan god), 9: 1176
yama (yoga), 19: 2714, 20: 2848
Yellow Hats (dGe-lug-pa; Tibetan religious order), 19: 2623-4
yoga, 12: 1677, 17: 2333, 19: 2620, 20: 2846-51
astral body and, 1: 136
breath control (pranayama) in, 2: 279, 11: 1494, 12: 1677, 20: 2849
concentration (dharana) in, 12: 1677, 20: 2850
meditation (dhyana) in, 12: 1677, 20: 2850
Tantrism and, 18: 2556
trance and, 19: 2651, 2652
types of, 19: 2712, 20: 2846
in Vedanta, 19: 2712
Yugas (world ages; Hinduism and Buddhism), 6: 755

Zen Buddhism, 10: 1394, 20: 2854-61
Bodhisattvas in, 20: 2855
enlightenment (satori), 13: 1814, 20: 2854
meditation in, 12: 1678, 20: 2855, 2858-60
origin of the name, 20: 2855
riddle (koan) in, 20: 2859-60
Samurai and, 10: 1394
tea and, 10: 1394, 1396, 1400, 20: 2855
Zoroaster (Zarathustra), 13: 1752, 14: 1912, 1985, 20: 2870-5
in 15th cent. Flemish miniature, 20: 2875
writings of (the Gathas), 14: 1912, 20: 2876
Zoroastrianism, 20: 2870-5
bridge to the land of the dead in, 11: 1453, 20: 2873
creation myths of, 14: 1912, 20: 2873, 2880
death and, 4: 558, 14: 1912
dualism in, 1: 66, 5: 667-8, 6: 791, 20: 2872-3, 2876, 2880
end of the world in, 14: 1912
free will in, 1: 66, 20: 2873
heaven in, 20: 2873-4
hell in, 9: 1171, 20: 2873-4
judgement of the dead in, 11: 1453, 20: 2873
life after death in, 12: 1612
Mani as Zoroastrian heretic, 9: 1191
Parthians and, 14: 1991
sacred plant (haoma) in, 20: 2875
soul in, 12: 1612
Zurvan (Zoroastrianism), 1: 66, 5: 667-8, 16: 2293-4, 20: 2876, 2880

14. Ancient Myths & Legends

Abraxas (god), 1: 48, 7: 1029
Acheron (river), 3: 385
Achilles, 1: 49-50
Aesculapius (Roman god), 8: 1150
Asclepios identified with, 8: 1149
Aesir (Scandinavian deities), 7: 965, 966
Aeternitas (Roman personification of time), 19: 2629
Ajax (Greek hero), Athene and, 2: 154
Alecto (Greek mythology), 7: 968
Amalthea (nymph), Zeus and, 5: 456, 14: 1900
Amphion and Zethus (Greek mythology), 19: 2685
Amphitrite (nereid), 16: 2235
Amun (Egyptian god), 4: 473, 6: 736
Ikhnaten and, 6: 732, 9: 1296
ram and, 6: 730, 17: 2357
Re and, 6: 731, 9: 1296, 17: 2357
temple of, at Karnak, 16: 2183
An (Anu, Anum; Mesopotamian god), 5: 682, 687, 12: 1714-5, 17: 2394
Anahita (Iranian goddess), 13: 1780, 20: 2876
Anat (Phoenician goddess), 1: 132-3
Andromeda, (Greek mythology), 5: 633, 634, 9: 1201
Antiope (Amazon), 1: 95, 19: 2601
Anubis (Egyptian god), 1: 110, 4: 558, 6: 734
Aphrodite, 1: 111-3
Apollo (Greek god), 1: 114-5, 8: 1078, 9: 1289, 12: 1611, 19: 2604
Argus (Greek mythology), 6: 821, 14: 1998
Ariadne (Greek mythology), 19: 2600, 2601
Arion (Greek mythology), 5: 614, 615
Artemis, 4: 574-6, 8: 1078
Asclepios (Greek healing god), 1: 137, 8: 1079-80, 1149-50, 13: 1748
Astarte (goddess), 1: 132-4, 6: 856
Athene (Athena), 2: 153-5
Aztecs, 2: 180-7

Baal (Adad, Hadad; Phoenician god), 1: 133, 2: 188-9, 15: 2030-1, 17: 2392, 18: 2542, 2545
Balder (Scandinavian god), 2: 192, 11: 1542, 13: 1750, 16: 2289, 2292
Bast (Egyptian cat goddess), 1: 104, 3: 354, 357, 6: 732, Beowulf, 2: 214, 9: 1202, 13: 1867
bear and, 2: 209, 214
sword and, 18: 2522, 2524, 2526
Bes (Egyptian god), 6: 733, 814, 18: 2552-3
Bifrost (rainbow bridge, Scandinavian mythology), 15: 2153, 16: 2290
Bodvar Bjarki (Scandinavian champion), 14: 1909-10
Book of the Dead (Egypt), 2: 257-61
Thoth and, 16: 2196-7
Bragi (Scandinavian god), 16: 2289
Brittany, 2: 284-5
Arthurian legends and, 2: 284, 11: 1498
Bluebeard legend of, 8: 1020
life after death, beliefs concerning, 2: 285
lost land legends of, 2: 285, 7: 916

Cabiri, 4: 460, 20: 2849
Cadmus (king of thebes), Dionysus and, 5: 584
Cartaphilus (Wandering Jew legend), 20: 2770
Cassandra (Trojan princess), 1: 115, 17: 2368
Celts:
gods of, 3: 376-7
triple gods, 2: 283, 3: 377, 7: 898, 8: 1143
Cerberus (three-headed dog: Greek mythology), 5: 611, 9: 1168, 1176, 1189
Cercyon (Greek mythology), 19: 2600
Chac (Maya rain god), 12: 1672
Chalchihuitlicue (Aztec goddess), 20: 2777, 2778
chthonian deities, 5: 688
Hades as, 13: 2054
serpents and, 5: 688, 17: 2336-7, 2340
Charon (Greek mythology), 3: 385, 11: 1505
Charun (Etruscan god), 3: 385, 6: 782
Circe, 3: 422
Cinteotl (Mexican god), 1: 185
Clotho (Greek mythology), 6: 842
Coatlicue (Aztec goddess), 2: 187, 5: 688, 19: 2720
Conn of the Hundred Battles (Irish hero), 8: 1062, 18: 2565
Coronis (nymph), Apollo and, 4: 496, 8: 1150
Corybantes (Greek mythology), 4: 459-60
Cronus (Greek god), 4: 484-5, 5: 687
Golden Age myth and, 4: 484, 14: 1980, 19: 2630
Saturn and, 16: 2285
Uranus and, 1: 111, 4: 484, 19: 2699
Cumae, Sibyl of, 5: 597, 17: 2368-9
Cupid (Amor; Roman god), 4: 516, 6: 766-7
Apollo and, 6: 767
Eros identified with, 4: 516, 6: 766
Psyche and, 6: 766, 767, 15: 2105, 16: 2231
Venus and, 6: 767
Curetes (Greek mythology), 4: 459-60, 480, 11: 1514
Cyclops, 4: 524, 6: 814

Dactyls, Idaean (Greek mythology), 4: 460
Daedalus (Greek mythology), 3: 307, 9: 1180
Dagon, (Dagan; Phoenician god):
as corn god, 15: 2030, 18: 2542
fish and, 7: 908, 8: 1146
Danu (Ana; Celtic goddess), 3: 377
Daphne (nymph), Apollo and, 6: 767, 11: 1511, 1511
Deianeira (wife of Hercules), 9: 1189, 17: 2342
Delphi (Greece), 4: 562
oracle of Apollo at, 1: 114, 4: 562, 14: 1930
as the centre of the earth, 13: 1828
priestess of (Pythia), 1: 114, 17: 2337
Deucalion and Pyrrha (Greek mythology), 7: 915, 15: 2095
Dhat Himyam (Shams; Ethiopian sun god), 6: 774
Diana (Roman goddess), 4: 574-6
Artemis identified with, 4: 574
moon and, 4: 574, 576, 6: 742
sacred grove of, at Nemi, 4: 574, 13: 1838, 19: 2722
water and, 6: 742
Diarmait mac Duinn (Irish legend), 7: 888
Diarmuid and Grania (Irish Legend), rowan and, 16: 2247
Didyma, temple of Apollo at, 14: 1928-9, 1931, 1932
Diktynna (Cretan deity), 4: 480
Dilbat (Venus; Mesopotamia), 10: 1364
Dionysus (Greek god), 5: 583-7, 678-9, 8: 1076, 13: 1810, 14: 1933, 18: 2532
dismemberment of, 5: 583, 584, 678, 14: 1937
drama and, 5: 586, 636-7, 16: 2288
flagellation in cult of, 5: 584, 7: 911
ivy and, 9: 1228, 19: 2618
mushroom and, 13: 1791
mysteries of, 13: 1807-8, 14: 1938
Osiris identified with, 14: 1938
Pan and, 14: 1972
satyrs and, 16: 2287-8
Titans and, 5: 678, 6: 791, 14: 1937
underworld and, 14: 2012
Zeus and, 5: 583, 6: 791, 8: 1075, 1076, 9: 1228
Dioscorides, 9: 1182, 11: 1558
Dioscuri (Castor and Polydeuces (or Pollux); Greek mythology), 5: 587, 19: 2683, 2684
dismemberment:
of Dionysus, 5: 583, 584, 678, 14: 1937
of Pentheus, 5: 584
of shamans, 5: 652, 17: 2351
Dodona (oracle of Zeus at), 5: 606, 14: 1930-1
Domovoy (Slav spirit), 17: 2400

Donar (Germanic god), 7: 996
Draupnir (ring of Odin), 5: 639, 674
dryads (Greek tree spirits), 5: 666, 14: 1899
Dryope (mother of Pan), 14: 1972-3

Ea (Enki; Mesopotamian god), 4: 473-4, 5: 682, 12: 1714-5, 13: 1823
flood legend and, 7: 912-3
Edda (Poetic Edda and Prose Edda), 5: 714
Poetic Edda, end of the world in, 6: 755; 16: 2290
Prose Edda, 16: 2289
Egypt, 6: 677, 727-36
El (Phoenician god), 1: 132-3, 6: 737, 15: 2028-30, 18: 2540-2, 2542
bull and, 6: 737, 15: 2028
dreaming by, 5: 644, 18: 2541
Eleusis, Eleusinian Mysteries, 4: 563, 6: 745-8, 13: 1780-1807
Orphism and, 14: 1935, 1937
sacramental drink in, 16: 2257
sexual symbolism in, 15: 2025
Elysium (Elysian Fields), 14: 1980, 1982
Endymion (Greek mythology), 13: 1764, 17: 2330
Enkidu (Mesopotamian mythology), 5: 558, 8: 1019, 20: 2829
Enlil (Mesopotamian god), 5: 630, 12: 1714
in creation myth, 5: 687
flood legend and, 7: 912
as ox, 1: 105, 3: 307
sack of Ur and, 17: 2394
Epona (Celtic goddess), 1: 104, 106, 9: 1250
Rhiannon equated with, 11: 1571-2
Erato (Muse), 13: 1789
Ereshkigal (Mesopotamian goddess), 12: 1608
Eros (Greek God), 1: 111-2, 6: 765-7, 17: 2347
Cupid identified with, 4: 516, 6: 766
dolphin and, 5: 614
Plato's myth of the birth of, 15: 2052
Erra (Mesopotamian pestilence god), 12: 1719
Erythrae, Sibyl of, 17: 2368
Eryx, Mt (Sicily), goddess of, 19: 2723
Eshmun (Phoenician god), 15: 2031, 2032, 18: 2545, 19: 2542
Etna (volcano), Hephaestus and, 9: 1178
Etruscans, 6: 780-2
divination and:
augury, 2: 162
haruspicy, 11: 1538
hepatoscopy, 6: 780, 11: 1538, 1538
gods of, 6: 781
Saturn, 16: 2285
life after death, beliefs concerning, 6: 780, 781, 782
phallic symbolism and, 15: 2023, 2024
Roman religion influenced by, 16: 2232
satyr, 16: 2287
Euphrosyne (Greek mythology), 8: 1057
eurhythmy, 18: 2481
Europa, 3: 307, 18: 2582, 20: 2864
Hera identified with, 9: 1180
Euryale (Gorgon), 8: 1053
Eurydice, Orpheus and, 14: 1934
Eurylochus, Circe and, 3: 422

Fata Morgana (mirage), 13: 1770
fate, 6: 842-4
Greek view of, 12: 1609
Isis and, 10: 13466
Fates, the (Aisai, Moirae, parcae; Greek mythology), 6: 842-3, 13: 1762, 18: 2492-3
in 15th cent. tapestry, 19: 2692-3
Hittite forerunners of, 9: 1289
Fenian Cycle, 7: 888,890
Finn mac Cumaill (Irish hero), 2: 271, 7: 888-91
head and, 8: 1143
salmon and, 7: 890, 16: 2281
shadow of Cuirrech and, 17: 2348
shape-shifting by, 1: 103
flamen (Roman priest), 15: 2089, 16: 2234
Flamen Dialis, 11: 1460-1
Freyja (Scandinavian goddess), 7: 965-6
Freyr (Scandinavian god), 7: 965-6, 16: 2289
horse and, 1: 106, 7: 966
at Ragnarok, 16: 2292
Frigg (Scandinavian goddess), 7: 965-6
Frija (Germanic goddess), 7: 965
Furies (Erinyes, Eumenides, the 'kindly ones', Maniai), 6: 842, 7: 968-70

Ganymede (Greek mythology), 20: 2865, 2866
Ge (Gaia; Greek goddess), 5: 687, 688, 19: 2699

Geb (Egyptian god), 4: 472, 472-3, 6: 732, 9: 1257
Gefion (giantess; Scandinavian mythology), 7: 965
Geirrod (giant; Scandinavian mythology), 11: 1543, 19: 2608
Germanic (or Teutonic) mythology, 7: 993-6
dwarfs in, 5: 672
giants in, 8: 1017
Grimm brothers and, 8: 1084
Gleipnir (Scandinavian mythology), 5: 674
Golden Age, 14: 1980, 19: 2630-3, 2631
Cronus's reign as, 4: 484, 14: 1980, 19: 2630
Golden Fleece, 8: 1046, 17: 2357
Gorgons (Greek mythology), 8: 1053-4
Gordian knot, cut by Alexander the Great, 1: 82, 18: 2492, 2522
Graces (Charites: Greek mythology), 8: 1057
in Botticelli's Primavera, 16: 2194, 2195
Gungnir (spear of Odin), 5: 674, 7: 995, 14: 1911

Hades (Aidoneus, Plouton), 8: 1107, 15: 2053
as god, 5: 688, 9: 1169, 15: 2054
cap of darkness and, 15: 2054
Persephone and, 4: 563, 6: 748, 9: 1168, 14: 2012, 15: 2054, 19: 2721-2
Pluto identified with, 5: 688, 15: 2054
as underworld, 9: 1169, 11: 1453, 12: 1608
Hercules and, 9: 1176, 12: 1789
Orpheus and, 14: 1934
Theseus and, 9: 1176, 14: 2014, 19: 2601
Harpies (monsters; Greek mythology), 8: 1118-9, 20: 2806-7
Hathor (Egyptian goddess), 6: 732
Hatshepsut temple of (Deir-el-Bahari), 1: 92
Healing gods, 8: 1149-52
Graeco-Roman, 5: 592, 8: 1149-52, 13: 1748
Hermetica and, 9: 1197
Imhotep as, 8: 1152, 10: 1305
Hecate (goddess), 9: 1166-7
Artemis and, 4: 576, 9: 1166, 1167
Persephone and, 14: 2012
Hector (Trojan hero), Achilles and, 1: 49
Hecuba, 19: 2672-3
Heimdall (Scandinavian and Teutonic god), 16: 2289
Bifrost defended by, 15: 2154
at Ragnarok, 16: 2292
Heket (Egyptian goddess), 7: 967
Hel (Scandinavian mythology), 9: 1176
Balder and, 2: 192
Loki the father of, 8: 1017
Helen of Troy, 9: 1167
hatched from egg, laid by Leda, 2: 192, 5: 718
Theseus and, 19: 2601-2
Heliopolis (Egypt):
Atum-Re and, 4: 471, 6: 731, 735
as the centre of the earth, 13: 1824
phoenix and, 15: 2033
Pyramid Texts and, 2: 257, 4: 471
Helios (Greek sun god), 18: 2502
Circe the daughter of, 3: 422
Hephaestus, 9: 1177-8
Aphrodite and, 1: 113, 9: 1177
thunderbolts made by, 8: 1111
volcanoes and, 9: 1177, 1178, 17: 2408
Etna, 9: 1178
Zeus and, 8: 1111, 9: 1177
Hera, 8: 1075, 1078, 9: 1179-80
Zeus and, 2: 1271, 4: 460, 5: 583, 8: 2049, 9: 1179, 1180, 14: 1913
Hercules (Herakles), 9: 1187-90
Hermaphroditos (Greek god), 9: 1194, 1194
Hermes (Greek god), 8: 1078, 9: 1196, 17: 2337
cap of darkness worn by, 15: 2054
the dead guided to Hades by, 3: 385
Thoth identified with, 9: 1197
trickster compared with, 19: 2665
Hesiod (Greek poet), 8: 1075
Hesione (princess of Troy), saved from sea monster by Hercules, 9: 1189
Hesperides (Greek nymphs), 1: 116, 117, 9: 1189, 1190
Horus, 6: 732, 9: 1256-7
eye of, 6: 814, 16: 2294
Hrungnir (giant), Thor and, 19: 2608
Hrunting (sword of Beowulf), 18: 2524, 2526
Huitzilopochtli (Aztec god), 1: 107, 2: 181, 182

Idun (Norse mythology), 5: 672, 7: 965, 11: 1543

Ikhnaten (Akhenaten, Amenhotep IV; pharoah), 6: 732, 735, 9: 1191, 1294-6
Imhotep (Imouthes), 8: 1152, 10: 1304-5
Inanna (Innin; Sumerian goddess), 9: 1176, 10: 1364, 12: 1715
Ea (Enki) and, 12: 1718
Ishtar identified with, 10: 1363, 12: 1715
as Mother Goddess, 13: 1779
Tammuz and, 12: 1716, 1718, 18: 2554
underworld visited by, 12: 1717, 13: 1779, 18: 2554
Incas, 10: 1322-7
sun god and, 10: 1311, 1324
Io (Greek myth), 9: 1180
Iolaus, Hercules and, 9: 1187, 1188
Iphicles (twin brother of Hercules), 9: 1188
Iris (Greek goddess of rainbow), 15: 2153
Ishtar (Mesopotamian goddess), 10: 1363-4
Isis (Egyptian goddess), 6: 732, 10: 1364-7, 13: 1807
Mysteries of, 10: 1365, 13: 1810, 14: 1940, 15: 2104
Nile and, 10: 1364
Osiris and, 5: 677, 10: 1364, 1365, 14: 1938, 1940
Isles of the Blest (Fortunate Isles), 10: 1376, 14: 1980
Ixion, 3: 379, 20: 2789

Janus (Roman god), 1: 118, 10: 1387
Jason (Greek hero), 9: 1167, 15: 2112
folktale parallels with, 7: 925
Jotunheim (Scandinavian mythology), 16: 2290
Judgement of Paris (Greek mythology), 1: 117, 117, 16: 2191, 2194
Juno (Roman goddess), 11: 1460, 16: 2230
Hera identified with, 9: 1180, 11: 1460
Jupiter (Jove; Roman god), 11: 1460-2, 16: 2230, 20: 2862
Etruscans and, 11: 1461
as High God, 9: 1205
sky and, 11: 1460, 17: 2391
thunderbolt and, 17: 2392

Kukulcan (Maya god), 17: 2337

Lachesis (Greek mythology), 6: 842
Lailoken (Scottish legend), 20: 2802
lapiths, centaurs and, 3: 379, 9: 1252-3, 19: 2601
Leda (Greek mythology), 2: 230, 5: 718, 18: 2515-6
letters to the dead (Egypt), 11: 1519
Leucippus (Greek mythology), 20: 2864
Lleu (Welsh god), 8: 1098, 11: 1540-1, 1572
Loki (Scandinavian god), 11: 1542-4
Balder and, 2: 192, 11: 1542, 1543
father of Fenris wolf, World Serpent and Hel, 8: 1017
giants and, 8: 1017, 11: 1543
at Ragnarok, 16: 2292
Thor and, 11: 1542, 1543, 19: 2608, 2610
as trickster, 11: 1543, 19: 2665
Lycaeon (Greek mythology), 20: 2779

Maat (maat, Mat, Mut; Egyptian deity), 2: 277, 279, 6: 736, 851, 851, 11: 1569
Macha (Celtic goddess of war), 8: 1143
Manoa (El Dorado), 6: 737
Marduk (Babylonian god), 4: 474, 5: 630, 12: 1633-4, 1716-8
Mars (Roman god), 12: 1642-4
founding of Rome and, 7: 943, 944, 12: 1644
Marsyas (satyr), 1: 115, 16: 2177
Maya (Mexican people), 12: 1670-3
mead of inspiration, Odin and, 14: 1909, 1910
Medea (Greek witch):
Circe and, 3: 422
Jason and, 9: 1167, 15: 2113
Medusa (Gorgon), 8: 1053-4, 1108
Megaera (Greek mythology), 7: 968
Melissa (nymph), Zeus and, 14: 1900
Melkart (Phoenician god), 15: 2031, 2032
Melpomene (Muse), 13: 1789
menhir, in Brittany, 4: 512, 5: 656, 12: 1693
Menrva (Menerva; Etruscan goddess), 6: 781
Mercury (Roman god), 12: 1702-3, 1704
Mesopotamia, 12: 1714-22
flood legends of, 6: 755, 7: 912, 8: 1019
gods of, 18: 2540
Tower of Babel and, 19: 2649
Messenia (Greece), Zeus born in, 8: 1076
Midas (Phrygian king), 1: 115
Mimir (Scandinavian god), 16: 2289, 17: 2408
Min (Egyptian god), 8: 1122
Minerva (Roman goddess), 2: 155, 13: 1744

Minos (Cretan king), 3: 307
Misenus (Greek myth), 19: 2679
Mjolnir (hammer of Thor), 5: 674, 8: 1111, 11: 1152-3, 19: 2608, 2609
Mnevis (Egyptian god), 3: 307, 9: 1245
Mot (Pheonician deity), Baal/Anat and, 2: 189, 15: 2030, 18: 2541, 19: 2720-1
mummification (Egypt), 6: 733, 13: 1785-8, 1786, 1787, 1788
Muses (Greek mythology), 13: 1789
Myrrha (Greek mythology), 1: 113
mystery religions, 6: 770, 13: 1807-11

Nahus (Mesopotamian god), 12: 1716
Nefertiti (Egyptian queen), 20: 2830
Nehalennia (Germanic goddess), 7: 995
Nekhebet (Egyptian goddess), vulture and, 2: 231
Nemesis (Adrastcia: Greek goddess), 6: 842, 20: 2807
Nephthys (Egyptian goddess), 4: 472, 14: 1938, 17: 2341
Neptune (Roman god), 13: 1843-4
Amphitrite and, 16: 2235
Nergal (Mesopotamian god), 12: 1608, 1634, 1716
Nerthus (Scandinavian deity), 7: 965, 18: 2466
Nimrod, Tower of Babel built by, 19: 2649
Nórns (Scandinavian mythology), 6: 830, 843
Nut (Egyptian sky goddess), 4: 468, 472, 472-3
nymphs (Greek mythology), 14: 1899-1900
Odin, 14: 1907-11, 16: 2289
Odysseus (Ulysses; Greek hero), 14: 1911
Oedipus (Greek mythology), 10: 1329, 14: 1911
Old Kingdom (Egyptian history), 6: 730
Olympia (Greece):
Hera and, 9: 1179
Zeus born at, 8: 1076
Olympic Games, 7: 978, 14: 1920
Endymion and, 17: 2330
Hercules and, 9: 1179
Zeus and, 14: 1920, 20: 2866
Olympus, Mount (Greece), 8: 1076, 13: 1783, 14: 1920
Ops (Roman goddess), 16: 2231-2
Orestes (Greek mythology), 6: 842, 7: 969
Orpheus and Orphism, 14: 1934-8
Osiris, 5: 677, 6: 732, 14: 1938-40

Pan (Greek god), 14: 1972-3
Pandora (first woman: Greek mythology), 14: 1973, 20: 2828-9, 2830
Parnassus, Mount (Greece), Dionysian dance rite on, 5: 586
Pasiphae (mother of the Minotaur), 3: 307, 9: 1180
Patroclus (Greek hero), 1: 49
Pegasus (horse of Bellerophon), 3: 391, 8: 1053, 20: 2806
Peleus (father of Achilles), 1: 50, 14: 1899
Penates (Roman deities), 14: 2002, 16: 2234
Penthesilea (Amazon), 1: 49-50, 95
Pentheus (king of Thebes), Dionysus and, 5: 584
Periphetes (Greek mythology), 19: 2600
Persephone (Greek goddess), 14: 2012-4
Peru:
calendar from, on gold plate, 6: 771
masks from, 8: 1140, 10: 1326-7
Perun (Slav god), 17: 2396
Phaedra (Greek mythology), 19: 2601, 2602
pharaoh, 6: 730-1, 11: 1477-8
Pheidippides (Greek runner), Pan and, 14: 1973
phlegm (theory of the humours), 6: 742
Phoenicians and Canaanites, 18: 2028-32, 2540-5
Phoroneus (Greek hero), 15: 2094
Pirithous (Lapith), 14: 2014, 19: 2601
Plato, 15: 2051-2, 2051,
his myths, 15: 2051-2, 19: 2631
of Er, 9: 1170, 16: 2174
Orphism and, 14: 1935-6
Pythagoreanism and, 14: 1936, 15: 2135
ploiaphesia (festival of Isis), 10: 1366
Pluto (Dis, Orcus; Roman god), 9: 1168, 15: 2054, 16: 2230
Hades identified with, 5: 688, 15: 2054
Plutus (Greek god, son of Demeter), 4: 563, 6: 748
Polyhymnia (Polymnia; Muse), 13: 1789
Polyphemus (Cyclops), 4: 524, 6: 814
Porcnutius (Slav god), 17: 2399
Porevit (Slav god), 17: 2399
Poseidon (Greek god), 8: 1078, 15: 2074, 2074

Pothos (Greek mythology), 6: 766
Praxiteles (Greek sculptor), Cnidian Aphrodite of, 1: 113
priests, 15: 2083-9
Roman, 15: 2089, 16: 2231, 2234
Procne, Philomela and (Greek mythology), 13: 1869, 18: 2513
Procrustes (Greek mythology), 19: 2600
Prometheus (Greek mythology), 15: 2094-6
Proserpina (Roman goddess), Persephone identified with, 4: 564, 15: 2097
Ptah (Egyptian god), 6: 732
Pyramid Texts, 2: 257, 16: 2184
Pythia (priestess of Delphi), 1: 114, 5: 597, 17: 2337
Quetzalcoatl (Feathered Serpent, Plumed Serpent, the Morning Star; Mexican deity), 2: 181, 184, 186, 15: 2148, 17: 2337

Ragnarok (Doom of the Gods, Twilight of the Gods, end of the world; Scandinavian mythology), 6: 755, 15: 2153, 16: 2290
Re (Ra; Egyptian sun god), 2: 257, 6: 731, 9: 1296, 15: 2160, 18: 2504
Rhea (Greek mythology), 4: 459, 484
Robigus (Roman deity), 16: 2232
Rome (ancient), 16: 2230-5
Romulus and Remus, 6: 864, 7: 943, 19: 2684
by Rubens, 7: 942
Rugievit (Slav god), 17: 2399

Sahians, 8: 1119
sacrifice:
Rome and, 16: 2234-5
in Scandinavia, 16: 2266, 2290
in Sweden, 14: 1909, 16: 2265
Saehrimnir (boar; Scandinavian mythology), 2: 250
Salii (Salians; Roman priests), 16: 2234
Mars and, 12: 1642
Saturn and, 16: 2285
Saturn (Roman god), 16: 2285-6
Scandinavia, Scandinavian (Norse, Nordic) mythology, 16: 2289-93
Scylla and Charybdis, 17: 2317
Sebek (Egyptian crocodile god), 1: 104, 6: 732
Semele (mother of Dionysus), 5: 583, 13: 1791
Serapis (Serapis; Graeco-Egyptian god), 8: 1152, 1152, 10: 1365, 1366, 14: 1940
Seth (Set; Egyptian god), 4: 557, 6: 732, 17: 2341
Sethlans (Etruscan god), Vulcan identified with, 6: 781
Shamash (Utu; Mesopotamian sun god), 12: 1715, 1721
Shu (Egyptian sun god), 4: 472
Si (Peruvian moon god), 10: 1324
Sif (wife of Thor), 5: 674, 19: 2608
Sigmund (Scandinavian hero), 9: 1202
Sigurd (Scandinavian hero), 9: 1202
Sin (Nannar; Mesopotamian moon god), 8: 1119, 12: 1715, 17: 2363
Sinis (Greek mythology), 19: 2600
Sirens (Greek mythology), 17: 2382-3
Skrymir (giant; Scandinavian mythology), 8: 1017, 19: 2610
Slavs, 17: 2397-2400
vampire legend and, 19: 2703
Sleipnir (horse of Odin), 14: 1907, 1908
soul:
Greek views of, 10: 1313, 14: 1982-3
Orphic myth of Dionysus and, 6: 791
Plato on, 1: 136, 10: 1313
Stymphalian lake, Hercules and birds of, 6: 1188
Styx (river), 3: 385, 9: 1170
Sumatar Harahesi (Mesopotamia), 8: 1119
Sumer, Sumerians (Mesopotamia), 2: 189, 5: 630, 12: 1714
sun:
Incas and, 10: 1311, 1324
in Scandinavia, 18: 2502-3
Slavs and, 17: 2398
Suovetaurilia (Roman festival), 13: 1753
Surt (giant; Scandinavian mythology), 16: 2292
Svarozhich (Slav god), 17: 2399
Svetovit (Svantovit; Slav god), 17: 2398, 9: 2399

Tages (Etruscan deity), 11: 1538
Tammuz (Dumuzi; Mesopotamian god), 5: 676, 18: 2554
Inanna/Ishtar and, 12: 1716, 1718, 18: 2554
Tanit Pene Baal (Carthaginian goddess), 15: 2032
Taurt (Egyptian goddess), 1: 103, 104
Tefnut (Egyptian goddess), 4: 472, 6: 733
Telchines (Greek mythology), 4: 460
Telegonus (son of Odysseus and Circe), 3: 422
Telemachus (son of Odysseus and Penelope), 3: 422
Telephus (son of Hercules), 18: 2477
Telipinu (Hittite god), 9: 1224
Tellus (Roman deity), 16: 2230
Tenochtitlan (Aztec capital, now Mexico City), 2: 182, 3: 303
Teotihuacan (Mexican city), 2: 180, 18: 2503
Tereus, Philomela and (Greek mythology), 13: 1868, 18: 2513
Terpsichore (Muse), 13: 1789, 1789
Teshub (Hittite/Hurrian weather god), 2: 189, 9: 1222-3
Tezcatlipoca (Mexican god), 2: 183, 185
colours of, 5: 588
as jaguar, 1: 107,
Thalestris (Amazon), 1: 95
Thalia (one of the Graces), 8: 1057
Thalia (Muse), 13: 1789
Thanatos (Greek god of death), 4: 559, 5: 648
Thebes (Egypt):
Amun-Re and, 6: 731, 9: 1296
creation myth of priesthood of, 4: 473
Thebes (Greece), Dionysus and, 5: 584
Theseus (Greek hero), 19: 2599-2603
Thesmophoria (festival of Demeter), 4: 563, 7: 892
Thespiae (Greece), cult of Eros at, 6: 765-6
Thespis (Greek drama), 5: 637
Thetis (nereid, mother of Achilles), 1: 49-50, 14: 1899
Thjazi (giant; Scandinavian mythology), 11: 1543
Thor (Scandinavian god), 16: 2289, 19: 2608-10
Thoth (Egyptian god), 6: 733, 734
Thothmes IV (Pharaoh), Sphinx of Giza and, 5: 644
Thracian Rider god, 19: 2610-11
Tiamat (Mesopotamian mythology), 4: 474-5, 5: 630, 12: 1634, 1717-9, 19: 2618
Tisiphone (Greek mythology), 7: 968
Titans (Greek mythology), 4: 484, 5: 688
Dionysus killed by, 5: 678, 6: 791, 14: 1937
Tlaloc (Mexican god), 2: 185-6, 20: 2778
Tonatiuh (Mexican sun god), 2: 180-1, 182, 183, 184
Triglav (Slav god), 17: 2399
Triptolemus (Greek mythology), 4: 563, 6: 745, 746
Trojan War, 19: 2672, 2673, 2674-5
Troy (Ilion), 19: 2672-7
founding of, by Dardanus, 7: 915
mazes and, 12: 1675
Tyno Helig (Welsh lost land legend), 7: 915-6
Tyr (Scandinavian god), 7: 994, 16: 2289

Ucuetcotl (Mexican god), 2: 183
Ugarit (Phoenician city, near modern Ras Shamra), texts from, 1: 132, 2: 188, 5: 644, 15: 2028, 18: 2540
Uggae (Babylonian death god), 4: 558
Urania (Muse), 13: 1789
Uranus (Greek god), 1: 111, 17: 2391, 19: 2699
Utnapishtim (Babylonian flood legend), 6: 755, 7: 912, 8: 1019, 16: 2264

Vafthrudnir (giant; Scandinavian mythology), 20: 2809
Väinämoinen (Finnish hero), 7: 884
Valhalla (Scandinavian mythology), 14: 1911, 1982, 19: 2702
Venus (goddess), 13: 1782, 16: 2230, 16: 2723-7
Vesta (Roman goddess), 9: 1164, 19: 2729
Hestia identified with, 16: 2234, 19: 2729
Vestal Virgins, 9: 1164, 19: 2729
Volos (Veles; Slav god), 17: 2398
Volsungs (Scandinavian heroes), 9: 1202
Frigg and, 7: 965

Wodan (Wotan; Germanic god), 7: 994-5
eagle and, 7: 995
meaning of the name, 7: 995
neo-pagan Germanic cults and, 13: 1838
Odin and, 7: 995
Wild Hunt and, 7: 995, 20: 2796
Woden (Anglo-Saxon god), 7: 995
Wolfdietrich (Teutonic hero), 7: 946

Xanthus (horse of Achilles), 8: 1118
Xipe Totec (Texcatlipoca), 2: 185, 19: 2721
Xiuhtecuhtli (Toltec fire god), 7: 894

Yggdrasill (ash tree, the World Tree; Scandinavian mythology), 1: 126, 126, 16: 2290, 2292, 20: 2846
Ymir (giant; Scandinavian mythology), 4: 468, 475, 8: 1017, 16: 2290
Yucatan (Mexico), Maya in, 12: 1672

Zagreus (Greek mythology), 6: 791, 14: 2014, 20: 2862
Zapotecs, 2: 180, 17: 1736
Zeus, 8: 1074, 1075, 20: 2862-7
ziggurat, 16: 2180
Tower of Babel based on, 19: 2649
Ziusudra (Sumerian flood legend), 6: 755, 7: 913

15. Folklore, Primitive Beliefs & Customs

Adena Indians, 14: 1880
Aldebaran (star), Dakota Indian legend of, 14: 1883
Algonquin Indians, 1: 82-4
death, myth of origin of, 4: 556
High God of, 9: 1206
reincarnation belief of, 2: 277
ancestor worship, 7: 1001, 4: 512-6
in Africa, 4: 513-4
animism, 1: 108
Arnim, Joachim von, 8: 1082
Association of Invisible Aryans, 16: 2251
Association for Rune Research, 16: 2251
Athol, earls of, 20: 2802

beating the bounds, 14: 1903
blood, 2: 248-9, 252
elder-tree and, 6: 737
four humours, blood in theory of, 6: 742
Brazil, 2: 272-5
cannibalism in, 2: 272-3
carnival in, 18: 2469, 2469-70

cannibalism, 3: 341
instead of burial, 3: 315
in Kwakiutl initiation rite, 10: 1340
cargo cults, 3: 348-50, 12: 1698, 20: 2816
Cetshwayo (Cetewayo; Zulu chief), 20: 2876, 2878
Chan Chan (Peru), 10: 1324
Cheyenne Indians, 8: 1069, 1072
Chimu culture (Peru), 10: 1324, 1326-7
China, 3: 392-400
ancestor worship in, 3: 393, 395, 4: 513
gods of, 3: 392, 393, 400, 14: 1983, 18: 2564
guardian spirit of, 8: 1094
Choctaw Indians, 14: 1884
churinga (Australia), 19: 2642, 2642
Cinderella, 7: 923, 20: 2828
Comanche Indians, 8: 1069, 1072
Congo, 4: 446-52
gods of 4: 449-50
initiation rites in, 4: 448-9
life after death, belief in, 4: 450
myth of origin of death of, 4: 557
secret societies in, 4: 452
spirits and ghosts in, 4: 450
taboo in, 18: 2549
witches and witch-doctors in, 4: 452
Cornwall, 4: 456
corn dolly (neck) in, 4: 456
fairies of, 4: 457, 6: 832
rocking stones (logans) of, 4: 568
standing stones, 4: 458, 458, 18: 2489
wells in, 18: 2472, 2473
Costa Rica, 13: 1736-7
Coyote (trickster), 5: 668, 8: 1069, 15: 2132, 19: 2663, 2664, 2665
Cree Indians, 1: 83, 8: 1072
Creek Indians, 14: 1884
Crockett, Davy, 14: 1950-1, 19: 2693, 2694, 2695
Crow Indians, 19: 2640, 2663
curandera* (Mexican wise woman), 13: 1740

Dahomey, 4: 524-6, 20: 2756
ancestor worship in, 4: 524-5
drumming to summon spirits in, 14: 1931
human sacrifice in, 4: 516
lizard myth of, 11: 1539
possession, spirit in, 4: 524
serpent deity of (Dan), 4: 526, 17: 2337
Voodoo and, 4: 524, 19: 2664-5
Dakota Indians, 8: 1071, 14: 1883
Dan (Da; Dahomean spirit), 4: 526, 17: 2337
Dekanawida (Iroquois law-giver), 10: 1359-60
Desana (South American tribe), 9: 1267
disease, illness, sickness, 5: 589-95
African view of, 5: 594
Ethiopia, 6: 777-8
Zulus, 20: 2878
Australian aborigines and, 2: 170
demons and, 15: 2111-2
forty and, 7: 941
Inuit view of, 10: 1353
divine right (of kings), 5: 606, 11: 1474
Dogon (Sudanese tribe), 5: 612, 613
Drake, Sir Francis,
his drum, 5: 663
Wild Hunt associated with, 20: 2796
Dravidians, 5: 639, 9: 1211
Dreamtime (Dreaming; Australian aborigines' myth), 2: 166-70, 19: 2641-2
dried bodies (other than Egyptian mummies):
of North American Indians, 14: 1881
in Peru, 10: 1323
Druids, 5: 655-61
Celtic priests, 3: 373, 374, 375-6, 5: 657-9
human sacrifice and, 3: 375-6, 5: 658
mistletoe and, 5: 657, 13: 1750
oak and, 3: 375, 5: 657
'snake's egg' badge of, 4: 458
Stonehenge and, 5: 660, 18: 2487
midsummer (summer solstice) and, 13: 1743
oak and, 14: 1902
Stonehenge and, 5: 659, 659, 13: 1743, 14: 1902, 18: 2487

Eisteddfod, 2: 199, 5: 660, 6: 737
Ethiopia, 6: 772-8
drum in, 13: 1794
Nilotes of, 13: 1869
possession in, 6: 777, 15: 2078
Queen of Sheba and, 6: 775, 15: 2146-7
Rastafarian movement and, 12: 1728

faceless goddesses, 6: 824
Greek, 6: 824
Paleolithic (Venus figures), 6: 824, 869
of Laussel, 6: 824, 9: 1241, 1234, 1287
of Malta, 12: 1603, 1604
of Willendorf, 6: 824
Fahrenkrog, Prof. Ludwig, 13: 1838-40, 1839, 18: 2517
False Face society (Iroquois), 8: 1123, 10: 1359, 1361-2 Father Christmas, 3: 418-21, 7: 920
fetish, 6: 862-3
First Foot (New Year custom), 7: 901, 13: 1865
evergreens and, 9: 1229
salt and, 16: 2282
first fruits, 7: 900, 16: 2211
Swazi ceremonies of, 16: 2213
flood, deluge, 7: 912-6
Australian legend of, 7: 968
Greek legends of, 7: 715, 15: 2095
Indian legends of, 7: 915
Mesopotamian legends of, 6: 755, 7: 912-3, 8: 1019, 16: 2264
North American Indian legends of, 4: 496, 7: 968, 14: 1883-4
Fo-hi (legendary founder of Chinese empire), 19: 2733
folktales, 7: 923-5
lion in, 11: 1536
fool, 7: 933-6
in Abbots Bromley horn dance, 9: 1250,
in folkplays, 7: 920-2
North American Indians and, 7: 934-5
Pueblo, 7: 934, 15: 2132, 2134

Germanen Order, 8: 991-2, 11: 1537
Nazism and, 8: 991-2, 13: 1829
runes and, 16: 2251
Germanic Belief Fellowship, 13: 1838
Gilles de Rais, 2: 246, 4: 1107-8, 8: 1020-1

Gonds (Indian tribe), 17: 2419, 18: 2580
Gottfried von Strassburg, 19: 2667, 2668
Great Plains Indians, 8: 1068-72, 14: 1884
Sun Dance, 8: 1070, 18: 2503
peyote used by, 6: 652
tobacco and, 19: 2640
visions sought by, 5: 711, 8: 1070
Green Man (Jack in the Green), 7: 892, 8: 1081, 1081, 10: 1381
hawthorn and, 8: 1134
at Knutsford (Cheshire), 19: 2722-3

oak and, 14: 1903
Gresham, Sir Thomas, pearl drunk by, 14: 2001
Grimm, Jacob and Wilhelm, 8: 1082-8
Guarayo Indians (Bolivia), path symbolism and, 14: 1993
guardian spirits, 8: 1091-4
Gypsies, 8: 1099-106
tinkers and, 19: 2635, 2636

Handsome Lake (Iroquois prophet), 10: 1361
Harranian religion, 8: 1119
Hawaii (Polynesia), 5: 635, 15: 2070, 2071, 2072
Hawaii (Polynesian afterworld), 15: 2071
headhunting, 8: 1137
in Borneo, 2: 264, 264, 8: 1138, 1139
in Melanesia, 12: 1694
Nagas and, 8: 1138-9, 13: 1821, 18: 2579
in Peru, 10: 1325
in the Philippines 8: 1138, 18: 2579, tattooing and, 18: 2579
headless spirits, 8: 1149
at New Year, 13: 1862
healing:
North American Indians and:
Iroquois, 10: 1362
Navaho, 4: 530, 13: 1826-8
Pacific North-West, 14: 1957-8
Hiawatha (Iroquois hero), 9: 1202, 10: 1359, 1359
Longfellow and, 1: 82-3, 10: 1359
High Gods, 6: 859, 860, 9: 1205-6
hill-billies, 14: 1950-3
Hill Reddi tribe (India), 15: 2084-5
Hina (Hine; Polynesian goddess), 15: 2070, 2072
Hittites, 9: 1222-4
Babylonia and, 9: 123, 12: 1633
gods of, 9: 1222
Mithras, 13: 1751
Good Shepherd symbol and, 8: 1049
Hopewell Indians, 14: 1880
Hopi Indians (Pueblo), 15: 2130, 17: 2338
human sacrifice, 4: 516
Abraham and Isaac, 7:900, 900, 16: 2663, 17: 2357, 19: 2679
blood and, 2: 248, 16: 2265
in building rites, 3: 303
Carthaginians and, 7: 900, 15: 2032, 18: 2544
Celtic, 3: 363, 363, 375, 5: 658
Etruscans and, 6: 782
in Greece, 2: 210
at harvest, by Khonds, 8: 1123-4
Kali and, 11: 1464
in Melanesia, 12: 1694
in Mexico, 2: 182, 182, 183, 184, 12: 1672, 16: 2262, 2265
Odin and, 14: 1909
by Pawnee Indians, 14: 1882, 16: 2265
the sea and, 17: 2319
Slavs and, 17: 2399
in Sweden, 14: 1909, 16: 2265
Husk Faces (Iroquois), 10: 1361, 1362

Iho (Nigerian tribe), 9: 1278-80
ice, 20: 2813
in Scandinavian creation myth, 8: 1017
Iceland, poets of, 15: 2057
Iemanja (Nigerian/Brazilian goddess), 17: 2421, 2426, 2427
ifreet (jinn), 10: 1418
Ifugao tribe (Philippine Islands), 15: 2087
Inuit, 10: 1350-5, 14: 1882
burial among, 5: 596, 10: 1355
death, beliefs concerning, 4: 557, 10: 1353-5
ill-wishing among, 4: 520
incest myth of sun and moon, 10: 1328, 1351
marriage and, 12: 1637
masks and, 10: 1353, 12: 1660, 1665
moon and, 10: 1328, 1351, 1352
seal and, 17: 2321
shamans of, 10: 1351-5, 11: 1531, 12: 1660, 17: 2352
sun and, 10: 1328, 1351, 1355
taboos of, 10: 1352, 1353, 17: 2321
whale and, 20: 2788
Iroquois (North American Indians), 10: 1359-62, 14: 1880, 1884
dances of, 4: 530, 532, 10: 1361

Jack, 10: 1381-2
in the Ozarks, 14: 1951
Jack and the Beanstalk, 10: 1381
Jack the Giant-Killer, 8: 1016, 10: 1381, 1382
jade, 10: 1382-4, 18: 2551
Jamaica, Rastafarian movement in, 12: 1728
jinn (genie; spirit), 10: 1418-9
Berber belief in, 2: 216
Jivaro Indians, shrunken heads of, 8: 1139, 1141

Kalanga (of Botswana), guardian spirits of, 8: 1091-3, 1092
Karens (Burmese people), rainbow and, 15: 2152
Keres Indians (Pueblo), 15: 2130
Kikuyu (African tribe), 10: 1340, 11: 1469-73
king, 11: 1474-80
anointing of, 11: 1480, 14: 1913-4
in China, 11: 1480
costume, royal, 4: 465
in Ireland, 3: 373, 18: 2565, 2566
in Japan (emperor), 11: 1478-9, 1480
killing of, 11: 1474, 19: 2721
Nilotes and, 13: 1869
in Persia, 11: 1479-80, 13: 1752
in Phoenicia, 18: 2541
in Rome, 11: 1485
Emperor, 11: 1480, 13: 1810-11, 16: 2234
mystery religions and, 13: 1810-1
Swazi and, 16: 2213
Ku Klux Klan, 1: 63, 8: 1148
Kwakiutl Indians, 14: 1955
flood legend of, 4: 496
initiation rites of, 10: 1344
masks of, 14: 1879
salmon and, 16: 2281
totemic carving of, 19: 2644
winter and, 20: 2812

laibon (Masai medicine-man), 12: 1654
Lapland, 11: 1506-9
hammer sacrifice in, 8: 1111
mountains and, 13: 1784
shamanism in, 5: 663, 11: 1507-8, 1508, 17: 2352
leaping and jumping, 11: 2105
Curetes and, 4: 459, 11: 1514
Midsummer bonfires and, 13: 1743, 1743
Lechler, Dr Adolph, stigmata and, 18: 2483-4
Legba (Dahomean spirit), 4: 526, 19: 2664-5
luck:
thirteen and, 19: 2606-7
three and, 19: 2612

magpie, 12: 1598
in augury, 4: 497
in legends of Christ, 12: 1598, 18: 2514
Ma-Kuh (Chinese fairy), 6: 831
mammoth, Inuit legends that may refer to, 14: 1880
manitou, 12: 1625
Maori (New Zealand), 12: 1628-33
Masai (African people), 12: 1653-5
Mawu-Lisa (Dahomean spirits), 4: 526
Melanesia, 12: 1694-8
totemism in, 19: 2645
Mentawei (Indonesian island), tatooing and, 18: 2577
Mexico and Central America (modern), 13: 1735-42
shamanism in, 13: 1738
Micronesia, 15: 2069-72
Midewiwin (society of shamans), 12: 1625
Miru (Polynesian deity), 15: 2072
moon: 13: 1764-8
North American Indians and, 14: 1880
Morning Star:
North American Indians and, 14: 1882-3
Pawnee Indians, 8: 1069, 14: 1882-3
mutilation (of the body), 2: 252, 13: 1796-1800
of fingers, 7: 883-4

Nagas (people), 13: 1821-2
headhunting by, 8: 1139-40, 13: 1821, 18: 2579
tattooing and, 18: 2579
Nagas (serpent deities), 17: 2336, 2337, 2337
Natchez Indians, 14: 1881, 1884
Navaho Indians, 13: 1825-8
bisexuality and, 9: 1195
disease and, 4: 530, 13: 1826, 1827-8
divination and, 13: 1828
taboos of, 13: 1828
Ndembu (of Zambia):
guardian spirits of, 8: 1091, 1093
hunting magic of, 9: 1267
Ndengei (Fijian snake god), 1: 105
need fire, 9: 1164, 14: 1903
neo-pagan German cults, 13: 1838-40
Nazism and, 13: 1840
swastika and, 18: 2517
New Guinea, 13: 1846-50
ancestor worship in, 12: 1657, 13: 1848
Ngai (Kikuyu sky god), 11: 1469
Nicholas, St, 6: 821
as Santa Claus, 3: 421
Nigeria:
sacrifice in, 16: 2294
twins in, 19: 2683, 2686
Yoruba of, 17: 2421-2
Nilotes (African people), 13: 1869-71
North American Indians, 14: 1879-85
flood legends of, 7: 968, 14: 1883-4
totemism and, 14: 1885, 19: 2641, 2643, 2643, 2644
Nuer (Nilotic people), 13: 1869, 14: 1890-1
nursery rhymes, 14: 1896-8
Jack in, 10: 1381, 13: 1765
Ring A Ring o' Roses, 7: 2417
Nyame (Ashanti god), 1: 126, 128

Odomankoma (Ashanti god), 1: 126
Old Man of the Sea, Sinbad and, 17: 2322, 2378
Oro (Polynesian god), 15: 2070
Orolum (Nigerian god), 17: 2421
Orungan (Nigerian god), 17: 2421-2
Otomi Indians (Mexico), 13: 1714
Ozarks, 14: 1950-3
rain-making in, 4: 456
witchcraft in, 14: 1951

Pacific North-West Indians, 14: 1884-5, 1954-8
dance societies of, 14: 1956
initiation and, 14: 1956
masks and, 12: 1658, 14: 1883, 1958
myth of origin of death of, 4: 557
potlatch ceremony of, 14: 1956-7, 17: 2334
raven and, 13: 1658-9, 14: 1945, 1958, 19: 2663
shamans of, 14: 1957-8
totemism and, 14: 1885
Papua, cult of the dead in, 4: 509
Pawnee Indians, 8: 1069
first man myth of, 7: 903
High God of, 9: 1206
human sacrifice and, 14: 1882-3, 16: 2265
Morning Star and, 8: 1069, 14: 1882-3
sex confusion myth of, 9: 1196
'storm eagle' of, 8: 1072
tobacco and, 19: 2640
peyote cults, 5: 652-4, 14: 2014-6
Philippine Islands:
headhunting in, 8: 1139, 18: 2579
Ifugao priests of, 15: 2087
psychic surgery in, 15: 2115-6
tattooing in, 18: 2579
pipe (tobacco), 8: 1072, 19: 2640
Pleiades (Seven Sisters; stars):
Australian myth of, 20: 2813
Iban of Sarawak and, 2: 265
Plough Monday, plough plays, 5: 638, 7: 920, 933
Po (Polynesian underworld), 15: 2070, 2072
Pocahontas (Indian princess), 1: 82
Pole Star, 5: 588
sacred mountain and, 13: 1783
Polynesia, 15: 2069-73
lizard in, 11: 1539
mana in, 12: 1613, 5: 2070, 18: 2547
Melanesia compared with, 12: 1697
15: 2069
religion and magic in, 15: 2070
sacrifice in, 15: 2071
taboo in, 15: 2070, 18: 2547
tattooing in, 18: 2577
totemism not found in, 19: 2643-5
potlatch (American Indian ceremony), 14: 1956-7, 17: 2334
prehistoric religion, 16: 2180
priests, 15: 2083-9
Ashanti, 1: 128
Maori, 12: 1631
in Micronesia, 15: 2072
North American Indian, 14: 1884
in Philippine Islands, 15: 2087
in Polynesia, 15: 2071
Puchlo Indians, 14: 1880, 15: 2128-34
Pulotu (Palyesian afterworld), 15: 2071
Puluga (sky god of Andaman Islands), 17: 2391
pygmies, 15: 2138-42

quartz, 10: 1412, 15: 2146, 17: 2315

race myths, 20: 2792
New Templars and, 13: 1852
rainbow, 15: 2153-5
Rangi (Maori sky god), 12: 1631
raven: 4: 496, 15: 2160
North American Indians and, 4: 496, 12: 1658-60, 14: 1954, 19: 2663
Red Book of Hergest (Welsh tales), 11: 1570
rock crystal, 10: 1412-3, 15: 2146, 18: 2551
rocking stones (logans), of Cornwall, 4: 457-8
rock paintings, in Africa, 16: 2226-9
Romany (Gypsy language), 8: 1102

sacrifice, 16: 2261-6
altars used for, 1: 92
ancestor worship and, 4: 515
of bears, 1: 92, 2: 210, 19: 2638
blood and, 2: 248-9, 16: 2265
of bulls, 2: 196, 5: 678, 13: 1751, 1752, 1753
burning as method of, 1: 92, 3: 318, 7: 894
incense and, 14: 2008
at Carthage, 15: 2029
of cats, 6: 839
Saghata (Dahomean spirit), 4: 526
Sahara desert, Touareg of, 19: 2645-7
Saintes-Maries-de-la-Mer (France), Gypsy pilgrimage to, 2: 232, 8: 1100, 1101, 1102
St Michael's Mount (Cornwall) giant of, 10: 1382
Samain (Samhain; Celtic festival), 1: 87, 3: 374, 375
sand-paintings, Navaho Indian, 13: 1825, 1826, 1827, 1828
Sango (Nigerian god), his piper and dog, 9: 1266
scalping, 16: 2288
Scottish and Border ballads, 17: 2312-4
Scythians:
burial among, 4: 512, 10: 2356
shape-shifting by, 17: 2356
shadow, 17: 2348
builders' rites and, 3: 303, 17: 2348
in China, at funerals, 17: 2348
divination by, 17: 2348
Finn and, 17: 2348
in Haiti, 20: 2752
soul and, 5: 615, 17: 2418
Shaka (chaka; Zulu chief), 20: 2876, 2887-8
shaman, 17: 2350-3
in Borneo, 2: 265
in Brazil, 2: 275
in central America, 13: 1738
costume of, 4: 464, 7: 886
drugs and, 5: 650, 652
in Finland, 7: 866, 877
fir tree and, 7: 892
in India, 17: 2354
Inuit, 10: 1354, 1354, 1355, 1355, 13: 1660, 17: 2352
in Lapland, 5: 663, 11: 1507, 1508, 17: 2352
light, illumination, and, 11: 1531
North American Indian, 5: 596
Algonquin, 1: 82-4, 12: 16215-6
Pacific North-West, 14: 1957-8
Siberian, 5: 596, 663, 17: 2350
shape-shifting, lycanthropy, metamorphosis, 11: 1566, 17: 2354-6
berserkers and, 14: 1909-10, 20: 2780
ship, 17: 2363-5
of Fryr (Skipbladnir), 7: 965
ghost ships, 17: 2321, 2323
shrunken heads (of Jivaro Indians), 8: 1139, 1141
Sila (Silap Inua: Eskimo god), 10: 1351
Sinbad, 17: 2378
Old Man of the Sea and, 17: 2322, 2378
sin eater, 17: 2378
Sioux Indians, 8: 1069, 1070
Ghost Dance and, 7: 1000, 14: 2016
High God of, 9: 1206
Sitting Bull (North American Indian leader), 7: 1000
smith, 17: 2404-8
sneezing, 17: 2413
snowshoe dance, of Chippewa Indians, 14: 1884
soul: 17: 2418-20
Australian aborigines' beliefs concerning, 4: 516, 14: 1992, 19: 2642
blood and, 2: 248
Brazilian beliefs concerning, 2: 275
Finnish beliefs concerning, 7: 885
Inuit beliefs concerning, 10: 1353
Naga beliefs concerning, 13: 1821
Polynesian beliefs concerning, 15: 2071
shamans and, 17: 2353
in Voodoo (gros bon ange), 20: 2752, 2753, 2754
wandering of, in primitive belief, 5: 594, 17: 2348, 2418, 2420
will-o'-the-wisp as, 20: 2805
soul-catcher, of Pacific North-West Indian shamans, 14: 1958
South America, modern: 17: 2421-7
ashes in, 1: 129, 130

body-painting in, 18: 2581
coca in, 5: 652
head trophies in, 8: 1139, 1141
tattooing in, 18: 2580
Southeast Asia, 17: 2428-30
spear:
of Cu Chulainn, 4: 506
in Germanic mythology, 7: 995
of Lugh, 11: 1541
of Odin (Gungnir), 5: 674, 7: 995, 14: 1911
spiritism (or spiritualism) in Brazil, 17: 2421-7
spriggans (Cornish fairies), 4: 457
Stallo (Lapp giant), 11: 150
standing stones:
in Brittany, 2: 285, 4: 512, 5: 656, 12: 1693
in Cornwall, 4: 457-8, 458
stone, stones, 18: 2489-90
Celts and, 18: 2489, 2566
stone circles, 3: 422, 11: 1522-3, 12: 1692-3
at Castlerigg (Cumberland), 5: 656
in Co. Meath (Ireland), 3: 423
subterranean races, 18: 2494-5
Bulwer Lytton and, 11: 1568
Sucellos (Celtic god), 3: 377, 8: 1111
Suibne Gelt (Irish legend), 20: 2802
sun: 18: 2499-506
folktales as solar myths, 4: 459, 8: 1041
Ibo cult of, 9: 1279
Inuit and, 10: 1328, 1351
moon and, 11B: 2501, 2502
in Australia, 18: 2501-2
in Crete, 9: 1179-80
in Inuit incest myth, 10: 1328, 1351
in Rumanian incest myth, 13: 1765
North American Indians and, see Sun dance
Sun dance (of Great Plains Indians), 8: 1070, 18: 2503
superstitions, 18: 2507-10
Swazi, first fruits ceremonies of, 16: 2213
sylphs (elementals), 2: 278, 6: 743

taboo (tabu), 18: 2546-9
beans, 8: 1119
hunting, in Brazil, 9: 1267
incest, 10: 1328
Brazil, 2: 273-4
Inuit and, 10: 1352-5, 17: 2324
among the Maori (tapu), 12: 1630, 1631-3
in Micronesia, 15: 2072
Navaho Indians and, 13: 1828
in the Ozarks, 14: 1952-3
in Polynesia, 15: 2070, 18: 2547
Tagaro (Melanesian spirit), 12: 1697
Tahaki (Polynesian hero), 15: 2072
Tahiti (Polynesia), 15: 2070, 2071
taigheirin* (Highland ceremony), 3: 357
Tane (Polynesian god), 15: 2070
Tangaroa (Tangaloa, Ta'arna; Polynesian god), 12: 1697, 15: 2070, 2070
Tara (Ireland), 7: 889 890, 18: 2565-6
Taranis (Celtic God), 3: 376
Tattooing, 4: 464, 9: 1163, 13: 1799-800, 18: 2575-81
Tewa Indians (Pueblo), 15: 2130
thorn, holy of Glastonbury, 8: 1025, 1026, 1027, 1135
threshold, doorway, 9: 1260-1, 16: 2209, 19: 2615-6
Janus and, 10: 1387
tinkers, 19: 2635-7
Tiwa Indians (Pueblo), 15: 2130
tobacco, 14: 2010-1, 19: 2640
in medicine, 19: 2640
North American Indians and, 14: 1883, 19: 2640
shamanism and, 5: 650
Toltecs, 2: 180, 182
carved figures of, at Tula, 2: 158-9
Maya and, 12: 1672
totem, totemism, 1: 104, 19: 2641-5
in Australia, 1: 104, 2: 166, 7: 928
Nilotic, 13: 1871
North American Indians and, 14: 1885, 19: 2641, 2643-4, 2643
Touareg, 19: 2645-7
treasure:
dwarfs and, 5: 673
giants and, 10: 1381-2
sleeping heroes and, 17: 2402-3
trial by ordeal, 14: 1905, 1933
bread in, 2: 276
Congolese, 4: 452
host in, 14: 1904
Masai, 12: 1654
trickster, 19: 2663-7
Ananse as, 1: 98, 17: 2435
Loki as, 11: 1543, 19: 2665
North American Indians and, 8: 1069-70, 19: 2663-4, 2666
Trobriand Islands, yam harvest festival in, 8: 1121
Tsimshian Indians, moon and, 9: 1194
Tuonela (Finnish land of the dead), 7: 885
twins, 19: 2682-6
birth of, 19: 2683
Brazilian myth of, 2: 274
Kwakiutl Indians and, 16: 2281
mani, twin self of, 8: 10-27, 19: 2684
Ohrmazd and Ahriman as, 20: 2880

Umbanda (Macumba: Brazilian spiritism), 17: 2422, 2424, 2426-7, 20: 2574, 2575
United States of America: 19: 2691-8
Up-helly-aa (Shetland fire festival), 7: 893, 13: 1864

Veddas (forest tribe of Sri Lanka), 19: 2716-8
virginity, 19: 2736
unicorn captured by a virgin, 19: 2688, 2689
vodun (spirits; Dahomey), 4: 524

Wathatotaro (American Indian chief), 10: 1360
Wayland the Smith, 7: 994, 17: 2408, 18: 2522
White Book of Rhydderch (Welsh tales), 11: 1569
Wihio (Cheyenne trickster), 8: 1069
Wild Hunt, 20: 2796
Holda as leader of, 9: 1226
Odin as leader of, 7: 995, 20: 2796
wildwood, 20: 2797-2803
will-o'-the-wisp (corpse candle, corpse light, elf light, fairy fire, fetch candle, fetch light, foolish fire, fox fire, friar's lantern, ignis fatuus, Jack of the Bright Light, jack-o'-lantern, William with the little flame), 6: 829, 9: 1294, 15: 2127, 20: 2805, 2845
Winnebago Indians, trickster of, 19: 2663, 2666
wish, 20: 2814
wish-bone, 8: 1051, 20: 2814
wishing-well, 18: 2475, 20: 2814
witchety grub (Australian totem), 7: 928
woman, 20: 2822-31
Berbers and, 2: 215
in the Congo, 4: 447
evilness of, 7: 904, 20: 2822
Zulu, 20: 2878
Kikuyu and, 11: 1471
in Peru, 10: 1327
Pueblo Indians and, 15: 2130
pygmies and, 15: 2139
Touareg and, 19: 2645
woodwouse (wodewose, woodhouse; wildman of the woods), 7: 892, 20: 2799
Wovoka (North American Indian prophet), 7: 999

Yiyi (West African spider myth), 1: 98, 4: 557

Zulu, 20: 2876-9
rainbow and, 15: 2153, 20: 2878
Zuni Indians (Pueblo), 14: 1883, 15: 2130

16. Psychology & the Paranormal

Abrams' Box (Black Box, Oscilloclast), 15: 2151
acupuncture, 1: 51-2
apportation (Teleportation), 12: 1687, 14: 2012, 18: 2588
Apollonia, St, toothache and, 5: 594, 16: 2272
Aristides, Aelius, 8: 1150
astral light (Akasha), 11: 1531
madame Blavatsky and, 2: 245
Eliphas Levi on, 15: 2114
astral plane, 11: 1531, 15: 2113-4
automatic writing, 2: 171-5
automatisms, 14: 1942

Balfour, Arthur, Catherine Mary Lyttelton and ('Palm Sundayh' case), 20: 2804
Balfour, Gerald W., cross-correspondences and, 18: 2554, 20: 2804
Bermuda Triangle, the, 2: 217
breath, 2: 277-80
in acupuncture, 1: 52

C, Eva (Marthe Beraud; medium), 5: 715, 12: 1688, 15: 2108
C., Stella (medium), 12: 1688
Carrington, Hereward (psychical researcher), 14: 1963, 15: 2067
Census of Hallucinations (S.P.R.), 15: 2107
clairaudience, 3: 424
clairvoyance, 3: 424, 6: 803, 806-9
collective unconscious, 3: 429-30, 11: 1457
Yeats and, 20: 2844
Crandon, Margery (medium), 12: 1687, 15: 2107, 2109
Curran, Mrs J.H., 2: 171, 15: 2108

Davenports (mediums), 4: 545-6
displacement (psychical research), 6: 804-5
doppelgänger, 5: 615
double, 5: 615-9
animal, in New Guinea, 9: 1267
Finnish beliefs concerning, 7: 885
in out-of-the-body experiences, 14: 1945-8
soul and, 5: 615, 17: 2418
in witch trials (spectral evidence), 5: 615, 20: 2817
dowsing, 5: 623-6
extra-sensory perception and, 5: 625, 6: 804
hazel used in, 5: 623, 8: 1135, 1136
Doyle, Sir Arthur Conan, 5: 626-8, 17: 2441
dreams, 5: 640-8
Coleridge on, 3: 429
extra-sensory perception and, 6: 803, 15: 2110, 18: 2455-64
in Mesopotamia, 5: 644, 12: 1722
out-of-the-body experiences and, 14: 1947
astral body and, 1: 137
in Polynesia, 15: 2071
visions compared with, 20: 2748
Wundt on, 11: 1575
drugs, 5: 649-54
in Mexico, 5: 649, 13: 1740
North American Indians and, 14: 1883
trance and, 19: 2649
yoga powers compared with drug-state experience, 20: 2851
Drummer of Tidworth (poltergeist), 5: 664, 15: 2065
Duke University, 6: 807-12, 808, 15: 2109, 2118-9
Duncan, Helen (medium), 17: 2441
Dunne, J.W., 15: 2081, 2101, 19: 2634

ectoplasm, 5: 714, 7:1788, 1789, 8: 2277, 2278
Eddy, William and Horatio, 2: 244, 245
Eglinton, William (medium), 15: 2107
ego (Freudian term), 7: 963
Emmerich, Anne Catherine (stigmatic), 18: 2482
extra-sensory perception (ESP), 6: 803-12
classification of ESP experiences, 18: 2455
the dead, active part played by, in ESP, 18: 2457
dowsing and, 5: 625, 6: 804
dreams and, 6: 803, 15: 2110, 18: 2455-64
Freud and, 7: 963
ganzfeld in, 6: 809, 15: 2110
hallucination and, 6: 803, 18: 2457
intuition and, 6: 803, 18: 2457
psychical research and, 6: 805-12, 15: 2109-10
psychokinesis and, 6: 804, 806-12, 15: 2117, 2118-22, 18: 2464
faith healing, spiritual healing, 6: 833-5, 13: 1746-8
pilgrimage and, 5: 594-5, 15: 2043
saints and, 5: 594-5, 6: 834-5
New Thought and, 13: 1861
psychic surgery, 6: 835, 15: 2115-6
fly agaric (Amanita muscaria), 5: 649, 652, 15: 1790, 1790
Forgione, Father Pio (Padre Pio), 14: 1961-2, 18: 2483, 2485, 2485
Forwald, Haaken (PK researcher), 15: 2120
Fox, Oliver, out-of-the-body experiences and, 14: 1947
Fox family (Spiritualism), 17: 2438, 2438
Freud, Sigmund, 7: 962-4
bisexuality and, 9: 195
on dreams, 5: 646-8, 7: 963
Jung and, 11: 1456, 1458
'oceanic feeling' named by, 13: 1814
Oedipus complex and, 7: 963, 10: 1329, 16: 2212

Galton, Sir Francis:
apparitions, visions, and, 20: 2747, 2748
Sir William Crookes and, 4: 485
Goligher, Kathleen (medium), 12: 1690
Graham, James (quack-doctor):
celestial bed of, 8: 1110
earth-paths of, 5: 689

Gurney, Edmund, 8: 1097, 15: 2105-7

hallucination, 18: 2457
apparitions as, 20: 2747, 2748
ghosts, 7: 1008
phantasms of the living, 8: 1097, 15: 2107
Census of Hallucinations, 15: 2107
drugs and, 5: 649-50, 652
ESP and, 6: 803, 18: 2457-9
Hardinge-Britten, Emma (medium), 17: 2442
Hodgson, Dr Richard (psychical researcher), 15: 2107
Society for Psychical Research and, 15: 2105, 2106
Eusapia Palladino, 14: 1962-3
Mrs Piper, 15: 2045, 2107
Home, Daniel Dunglas (medium), 9: 1232-3, 12: 1689, 17: 2438
hypnotism, 9: 1272
in medicine, 12: 1711-3, 1712
Freud and, 7: 963
psychical research and, 8: 1097, 15: 2105, 2107
in research into reincarnation, 16: 2176
hysteria, 13: 1748
dancing mania and, 4: 540
Freud on, 7: 963, 15: 2068
inedia and, 18: 2485
poltergeists and, 15: 2067
stigmata and, 18: 2482-5
witchcraft and, 9: 1272-6, 15: 2111

introvert, extravert distinguished from, by Jung, 11: 1457
intuition, ESP and, 6: 803, 18: 2457

Jahenny, Marie-Julie (stigmatic), 18: 2484, 2485
James, William (psychologist), 15: 2106
on automatic writing, 2: 171
on ghosts, 7: 1008
on opposites, 14: 1924
Mrs Piper and, 15: 2045, 2046
Johnson, Alice, Society for Psychical Research and, 15: 2107
Johnson, Douglas (medium), 12: 1289
Jung, Carl Gustav, 11: 1456-60
alchemy and, 1: 77, 11: 1458
archetypes, his concept of, 11: 1457
astrology and, 1: 140, 11: 1460
dragon and, 5: 635
on dreams, 5: 645
on ghosts, 7: 1008
on God, 12: 1680
on the I Ching, 9: 1283
on opposites, in creation myths, 14: 1925
on symbolism, 18: 2537
synchronicity, his principle of, 11: 1460, 1548, 19: 2730
on trickster, 19: 2667
on the unconscious, 20: 2776
vision experienced by, 20: 2748
Kirlian photography, 11: 1481
Kluski, Franek (medium), 15: 2427
Kretschmer, Ernst (psychologist), 15: 2038

Lateau, Louise (stigmatic), 13: 1845, 18: 2482
Leadbeater, C.W., 20: 2770
on the aura, 2: 163, 15: 2150
Mrs Besant and, 18: 2592
on elementals in psychic attack, 15: 2113
Krishnamurti and, 18: 2591
Leaf, Walter, Society for Psychical Research and, 15: 2105
Lefebure, Dr Francis, astral body and, 1: 135-6
Leonard, Mrs Gladys Osborne (medium), 11: 1516-7, 1517, 12: 1685, 1686, 15: 2107, 2109
levitation, 11: 1521, 17: 2445, 18: 2485-7
Kathleen Goligher and, 12: 1611-2
by D.D. Home, 9: 1233
W. Stainton Moses and, 12: 1687
libido (psychology):
Freud's concept of, 7: 963
Jung and, 11: 1456
Lodge, Sir Oliver, 15: 2106
LSD (drug), 20: 2851

madness, 11: 1573-6
moon and, 13: 1767
shamanism and, 11: 1573-4, 15: 2086
Shiva and, 11: 1574, 17: 2367
magnetism, animal magnetism, 12: 1595-7
Christian science and, 3: 414, 416
disease treated by, 12: 1595, 1711
Mesmer and, 12: 1595, 1711

materialization (spiritualism), 12: 1686
mate tea, as drug, in Brazil, 5: 650
Maury, Alfred, on dreams, 5: 646
McDougall, William (psychologist), ESP and, 6: 806, 15: 2109
meditation, 12: 1677-80
mediums, 12: 1681-8, 15: 2109, 17: 2444, 2445
memory, psychology of, object reading and, 15: 2123-4
miracles: 13: 1744-8
faith healing and, 13: 1748
laws of nature and, 13: 1744
causality and 13: 1746
Montgeron, Louis-Baptiste Carre de, Convulsionaries and, 4: 454
Moyes, Winifred (Spiritualist), 17: 2441
Muldoon, Sylvan, astral body and, 1: 136, 137, 137, 14: 1947

Navaho Indians: 13: 1825-8
peyote and, 14: 2016
neurosis, poltergeists and, 15: 2068

object reading see psychometry
Odyle (Od, Odic force: aura), 2: 163, 12: 1596, 15: 2150
Oedipus complex (psychology), 7: 963, 10: 1329, 16: 2212
out-of-the-body experiences, 14: 1945-8
in primitive belief, 5: 594, 17: 2348
shamans and, 17: 2353
two types of, 14: 1945
ouija boards, 12: 1681, 14: 1941-4

Palladino, Eusapia (medium), 6: 807, 12: 1686, 1689, 14: 1962-3, 15: 2106
'Palm Sunday' case (Society of Psychical Research), 20: 2804
parapsychology, 6: 804
penis envy (psychological theory), 20: 2823
phantasms of the living (wraiths), 8: 1097, 15: 2026, 20: 2836
Piddington, J.G., Society for Psychical Research and, 15: 2107
Piper, Mrs Leonora E. (medium), 2: 173-4, 12: 1689, 15: 2045-6
planchette, 14: 1941, 1942, 15: 2046
Podmore, Frank, 8: 1097, 15: 2105-6
precognition, 6: 803-4, 15: 2079, 18: 2455-64
in mice, 15: 2122
psychokinesis and, 15: 2118
premonition, 15: 2081
Price, Harry, 15: 2108, 2108, 2109
Stella C. and, 12: 1688
Schneider brothers and, 16: 2295-6
Price, Prof. H.H., on mediums, 12: 1684
psi, 6: 803-12, 15: 2105, 2117
in games of chance, 15: 2118
Psyche, 6: 766, 15: 2105, 16: 2231
psychical research, 15: 2105-10
psychology:
of dreams, 5: 646-9
see also Freud, Jung
psychokinesis (PK, telekinesis, 'mind over matter'), 6: 803, 15: 2109-10, 2117-22, 18: 2455, 2457, 2459-60, 2462
psychometry 15: 2123-6

Quimby, Phineas P., 5: 713, 13: 1361, 1861

radiesthesia, 5: 626, 15: 2150-3
Reich, Willhelm, aura and, 16: 2172
Reichenbach, Baron Karl von, 12: 1596, 15: 2150
Reilly, Margaret (stigmatic), 18: 2485
Rhine, J.B., 15: 2109

sado-masochism, 2: 910
Saint Denis, Hervey de, on dreams, 5: 646
Schmidt, Dr Helmut (ESP researcher), 15: 2110, 2119, 2120
Schneider brothers (Willi and Rudi), 5: 714, 15: 2108, 16: 2295-6
Rudi, 12: 1689
scance, 12: 1682
second sight, 17: 2330
sex and sexuality: 2: 252, 17: 2342-8
mediumship and, 12: 1688
Sidgwick, Prof. Henry, 15: 2107
cross-correspondences and, 4: 493
Society for Psychical Research and, 13: 1801, 14: 1962, 15: 2106
Slade, Henry (medium), 12: 1688, 1689
Smith, G.A. (hypnotist), 8: 1097
Society for Psychical Research, 15: 2105-9
apparitions and, 15: 2106-8, 20: 2748
phantasms of the living, 8: 1097, 15: 2106-8
Mme Blavatsky and, 2: 247
cross-correspondences and, 4: 493, 15: 2107, 20: 2804
Edmund Gurney and, 8: 1097, 13: 1801, 15: 2105-7
poltergeists and, 15: 2106
telepathy and, 15: 2106
spirit photography, 17: 2444
Spiritualism, 17: 2438-45
spontaneous psi experiences, 18: 2455-64
stigmata, and other psychical phenomena of mysticism, 13: 1844-5, 18: 2482-7
suggestion, in healing, 13: 1748
superego (Freudian term), 7: 963
synchronicity, Jung's principle of, 11: 1461, 1548, 18: 2539, 19: 2730

table-tilting, 14: 1942, 1943, 1944, 18: 2546
D.D. Home and, 9: 1232-4
Eusapia Palladino and, 14: 1962, 1963
Willi Schneider and, 16: 2295
telepathy, 3: 424, 6: 805, 806-12, 18: 2456, 2588
clairvoyance and, 6: 803
Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's experiments with, 5: 626
mediums and, 12: 1684-5
Mrs Piper, 15: 2046
Gilbert Murray and, 15: 2108
Society for Psychical Research and, 15: 2107
in twins, 19: 2685-6
theurgy, 19: 2603-6
Tomlinson, Dr H. (physician and radiesthetist), 15: 2150, 19: 2730-1
Tomczyk, Stanislawa (Hon. Mrs Everard Feilding; medium), 12: 1688
trance, 19: 2647-52
twins: 19: 2682-6
telepathy and, 19: 2685
vibration, 19: 2729-31
visions, 20: 2746-50
apparitions, hallucinations, compared with, 20: 2746
of St Bernadette of Lourdes, 11: 1555
of Blake, 2: 241, 20: 2748
Great Plains Indians and, 5: 710, 8: 1070
of St Hildegard of Bingen, 20: 2749
Virgin Mary, 20: 2750, 2763

Weishaupt, Adam (founder of the Illuminati), 10: 1303
William Charles Edward (medium), Sir William Crookes and, 4: 486
Wundt, Wilhelm (psychologist), on dreaming, 11: 1575

17. The Soul

Banerjee, Prof. Hemendra, reincarnation investigated by, 16: 2176

China: 3: 392-400
hell, beliefs concerning, 3: 398, 399, 4: 558
soul, beliefs concerning, 3: 395, 396
Christianity: 3: 403-13
reincarnation and, 16: 2172
soul in, 10: 1315-6, 12: 1610
Congo: 4: 446-52
life after death, belief in, 4: 450

immortality, 10: 1313-6
in Egypt, 13: 1785-8
in Greece, 10: 1313
in Polynesia, 15: 2071
Walworth Jumpers' belief in, 20: 2764
incarnation, 10: 1320-1

judgement of the dead, 11: 1447-55
in Christianity, 11: 1454
in Egypt, 6: 733, 9: 1169, 11: 1447
Greece and, 11: 1453
in Japanese Buddhism, 4: 558, 11: 1452
in Judaism, 10: 1425, 11: 1453
Last Judgement, 11: 1453, 14: 1983
paradise as reward after, 14: 1981

life after death:
African beliefs concerning, 1: 55, 4: 450
Aztec beliefs, 2: 183
Breton beliefs, 2: 285
Celtic beliefs, 3: 374
Etruscan beliefs, 6: 780, 781, 782
Finnish beliefs, 7: 885
ghosts and, 7: 1101-8
in Judaism, 10: 1424
Melanesian beliefs, 12: 1697-8
Mesopotamian beliefs, 9: 1169, 12: 1608
Phoenician beliefs, 18: 2544-5
psi as evidence of, 18: 2463-4
Plato: 15: 2051-2, 2051, 2052
on the soul, 1: 136, 10: 1313, 12: 1610, 15: 2051
pneuma, 1: 136-7, 15: 2055
in ophitism, 5: 669
predestination and free will, 6: 842, 844, 15: 2079-80
in the ancient world, 15: 2079
in Christianity, 6: 842, 15: 2079-80
in Islam, 6: 741, 10: 1373
in Zoroastrianism, 1: 66, 20: 2873

reincarnation (metempsychosis, transmigration of souls), 15: 2110, 16: 2171-6
Algonquin Indians and, 2: 277
in Buddhism (samsara), 2: 221, 3: 297-8, 9: 1211, 12: 1611, 16: 2172
in Greece, 12: 1609-10, 16: 2172
in Hinduism (samsara), 2: 221, 9: 1211, 11: 1467, 12: 1611, 16: 2173
hypnosis in recent research into, 16: 2176
in Jainism, 9: 1211, 10: 1387
Jews and, 16: 2172

soul, 17: 2418-20

18. Ghosts, Vampires & Hauntings

apparition, 1: 116
astral body and, 1: 136

Baron Samedi, 20: 2753
Bettiscombe Manor (Dorset), skull at, 8: 1132, 9: 1263
Borley Rectory, 15: 2064
Bosworth Hall, haunting of, 8: 1127

Charmouth (Dorset), haunted house at, 5: 628
Clifton Hampden (Oxfordshire), ghost at, 8: 1131

Dracula (vampire), 5: 628, 19: 2702, 2703-4
film, 7:874*, 875, 876, 19 2706, 2707

fetch (double), 5: 615-9, 674
Fletcher, Sarah, ghost of, 8: 1131
fye (double), 5: 615
ghosts, 7: 1001-8, 8: 1071, 14: 2015, 2016
burial and, 3: 315, 7: 1004
Bushmen and, 3: 318
divination by (necromancy), 13: 1834
in films, 7: 872-4
horses, 9: 1253
Inuit beliefs, 10: 1353-4
Japanese, 7: 1002-3
Navaho Indians and, 13: 1826
in New Guinea, 13: 1848
Nuer and, 17: 2420
in the Ozarks, 14: 1951
psychical research and, 7: 1008
Pueblo Indians and, 15: 2132
in Scottish and Border ballads, 17: 2313

Haigh, John (the 'vampire of London'), 19: 2704
haunts, haunted houses, 7: 1005, 8: 1127-33, 9: 1261

Lemures (ghosts; ancient Rome), 18: 2466
Lew Trenchard (Devon), ghost at, 8: 1131-2
Lisgar, Lady, ghost of, 8: 1127
Longleat (Wilts), haunting of, 8: 1130-1

Mannington Hall (Norfolk), haunting of, 8: 1129-30

Navaho Indians: 13: 1825-8
ghosts,belief in, 13: 1826
New Guinea: 13: 1846-50
ghosts in, 13: 1848
hornbill in, 13: 1848

poltergeists, 7: 1007, 15: 2064-7
Sir William Barrett and, 15: 2107
at Borley Rectory, 15: 2064
Cure of Ars and, 4: 519, 15: 2064, 2066
hysteria and, 15: 2067-8
psychons (ghost theory of), 7: 1008

Reculver (Kent), ghost at, 3: 303
revenant, 16: 2203
as werewolf, 20: 2782
Swifte, Edmund Lenthal, ghost seen by, 8: 1113

vampire, 19: 2702-8

19. Mystics

Abulafia, Abraham (Jewish mystic), 13: 1823-4, 19: 2615
Ahmad, Ghulam (Mahdi), 12: 1602
al-Alawi, Ahmad (Sufi), 18: 2496
Anandamayi ma (Indian sage), 1: 97-8
Angela of Foligno, Blessed, 20: 2748
asceticism, self-denial, 17: 2331-4
Athenagoras (Christian Platonist), on immortality, 10: 1315
aura, 2: 163, 5: 619, 15: 2150, 2150

Bernières, Jean de (Quietist), 15: 2149
Boehme, Jacob (mystic), 2: 253-4, 11: 1531

Cabala (Cabbala, Kabbalah, Qabhalah; Jewish mystical system), 3: 321-7
Cloud of Unknowing, 3: 425
Columba, St, 16: 2270
crane and, 4: 470
St John's wort and, 16: 2269
St Ronan buried by, 3: 303
Columban, St, 16: 2276

Denck, Hans (mystic), 11: 1527
Dendrites (ascetics), 11: 1574
dervish, 4: 564-6
hemp used by, 13: 1814
origin of the word, 4: 564, 18: 2496
diamond, in Tantric Buddhism, 10: 1414, 1415-6

Eckhart, Meister, 5: 705-7, 11: 1527, 15: 2148
ecstasy, 5: 709-13, 11: 1574
Christian, 5: 709-13
St Catherine of Siena, 3: 361
Cure of Ars, 4: 519
levitation and, 18: 2486-7
mysticism and, 5: 709-13, 18: 2480-7
orgies and, 14: 1933
priests and, 15: 2086
shamans and, 15: 20-86, 17: 2352-3
spirit possession and, 5: 713
emanation(s):
in Cabala (sefiroth), 3: 323
Empedocles (Greek philosopher), 5: 669
four elements theory advanced by, 6: 742
reincarnation, his belief in, 16: 2174
Essenes (Jewish sect), 4: 551, 6: 769
secret lore of, 3: 323

Ficino, Marsilio, 6: 863, 16: 2190, 2194

al-Ghazali (Algazel), 4: 564, 7: 998, 10: 1349, 11: 1531
Gnosticism, 8: 1028-31
Cabala and, 3: 323, 324
creation of man and, 7: 905
demiurge in, 4: 564, 5: 668, 8: 1028, 1029
dualism and, 5: 668, 669, 6: 791, 8: 2018
Hermetica and, 9: 1197
Jesus and, 3: 408, 8:1029-30, 16: 2283
light and darkness in, 11: 1527
Manicheans and, 12: 1621-4
St Paul and, 14: 1996-7
Satanism and, 16: 2283
self, selfhood, in 12: 1613
Simon Magus and, 8: 1029, 17: 2372
great chain of being, 8: 1067
Gurdjieff, George Ivanovitch, 8: 1095-6

Haranath, Sri, 8: 1114-5
Hasidism (Jewish mysticism), 3: 323, 326, 8: 1125-6, 10: 1434
Hebrew alphabet:
Cabala and, 1: 91, 3: 323, 13: 1823
Hilton, Walter (mystic), 3: 425, 9: 1206, 11: 1456

Iamblichus (Neoplatonist), 13: 1842, 15: 2093, 19: 2604, 19: 2605
Ibn Arabi (Islamic mystic), 9: 1277-8
Irving, Edward; Irvingites, 10: 1362-3, 17: 2433

Jewish Gnosticism, 8: 1028
Joseph, R. Jacob (Hasidism), 8: 1126
Julian of Norwich (mystic), 3: 425, 11: 1456

koan* (Zen riddle), 20: 2859
Krishnamurti, Jeddu, 2: 218, 219, 9: 1221

Kundalini (Hinduism), 2: 279, 11: 1493-5, 1531

Law, William (mystic), 11: 1531
Lull (Lully), Raymond, 4: 564, 9: 1198, 11: 1564-5

Madyan, Abu, 9: 1277
Magharians (Jewish sect), 8: 1029
Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, 9: 1221, 12: 1679, 19: 1652
Mansur al-Hallaj (Sufi), 9: 1191
mantra, 12: 1627-8
Kundalini and, 11: 1494-5
in Tantrism, 17: 2345, 18: 2558
Mevlevi dervishes (dancing dervishes), 4: 530, 564, 16: 2249, 2250, 2250
mysticism, 13: 1812-20
love and, 5: 710, 13: 1816, 1818
paranormal phenomena and the occult distinguished from, 13: 1812
sex and, 5: 710, 13: 1816, 1818, 17: 2343-7
mystic ring, 18: 2484, 2484

nature mysticism, 13: 1814-5
Neoplatonism, 13: 1840-2
Cabala influenced by, 3: 324, 13: 1842

ophitism (Gnosticism), 5: 669
Ouspensky, Peter Demianovich, 8: 1095, 1096, 14: 1944-5, 18: 2568-9

pantheism, 14: 1973
in Stoicism, 15: 2079
Teihard de Chardin and, 18: 2588
Vedanta not pantheistic, 19: 2711
Pascal, Blaise, 12: 1615, 17: 2332
Plotinus (founder of Neoplatonism), 13: 1840-2, 15: 2053-4, 2093
Gnosticism and, 8: 1031, 13: 1841
Plutarch of Athens (Neoplatonist), 15: 2092
Porphyry (Neoplatonist), 13: 1841, 15: 2053
Proclus (Neoplatonist), 13: 1942, 15: 2092-3, 19: 2603-4
Ptolemaeus (Gnostic), 8: 1029-30
Pythagoras, 14: 1935, 15: 2145-6

al-Qadir al-Jilani, Abd (Sufi), 18: 2498

Rabiah (Islamic saint), 18: 2496
Ramana Maharshi, 15: 2156
reason:
Coleridge on, 3: 429
gnosis not a product of, 8: 1028
mysticism and, 3: 425
Reuchlin, Johann (Christian Cabalist), 16: 2190
Ricci, Paul (Cabalist), 3: 324
Richard of St Victor (Christian mystic), 13: 1819, 1820
Rolle, Richard (mystic), 3: 425
Rufai dervishes (howling dervishes), 4: 530, 564
Rumi, Jalalu'd-Din, 16: 2248-50

Sefer Yetsirah (Book of Creation; Jewish mystical text), 1: 91, 3: 323, 8: 1047-8
self, selfhood, 13: 1872
Buddhism and, 12: 1611
in Gnosticism, 12: 1613
magic as search for, 11: 630
mystical experience and, 13: 1814
sex and sexuality: 2: 252, 17: 2342-8
mystical experience and, 5: 710, 13: 1816, 1818, 17: 2344
opposites, reconciliation of, in, 14: 1924, 17: 2343
in Tantrism, 9: 1216, 18: 2556, 2558, 2560
Shadhili, Abu'l-Hasan ash- (Sufi), 18: 2498
Shakti:
Kundalini and, 11: 1495
in Tantrism, 9: 1216, 18: 2556, 2559
soul: 17: 2418-20
Neoplatonist view of, 1: 136-7, 13: 1841, 15: 2053
spine (body), 2: 251
Kundalini and, 11: 1494
Sufis (Islam), 5: 713, 10: 1373, 13: 1873, 18: 2495-8
meditation and, 12: 1687
Swedenborg, Emanuel, 18: 2518-9, 20: 2748
reincarnation rejected by, 16: 2176
Syrianus (Neoplatonist), 15: 2092, 2093

Tantrism (Shaktism), 9: 1216, 17: 2345, 18: 2556-61
diamond and, 10: 1415
magic in, 18: 2557
mandala and, 12: 1616
mantras and, 17: 2345, 18: 2558
sex and, 9: 1216, 18: 2556, 2558, 2560
Tantric Buddhism, 3: 302
yoga and, 18: 2556
Tauler, Johann (mystic), 15: 2418
Eckhart and, 5: 705
Teilhard de Chardin, 18: 2587-8
throne mysticism (Merkabah), 3: 322, 6: 824, 12: 1706, 19: 2616
Tijani Order (Sufism), 18: 2498
tsaddikism (Hasidism), 8: 1126

Valentinus (Gnostic), 5: 668, 8: 1028

woman: 20: 2822-31
in Tantrism, 18: 2557

yantra (mandala), 12: 1616
Yin and Yang, 1: 52, 3: 393, 12: 1612, 20: 2846
dragons and, 5: 634
I Ching and, 9: 1282
Taoism and, 18: 2564

20. Unorthodox Christians

Abode of Love (Spraxton, Somerset), 12: 1723, 15: 2091, 2091
Adamites (heretics), 7: 905
Agapemonites (messianic sect), 12: 1723, 1725
Albigenses, Albigensian heresy, 3: 358-60, 9: 1192
Amana Society (Community of the Truly Inspired), 4: 440, 442-3
Amish sect, 4: 440
Amorites, 1: 132, 2: 188
Arius, Arian heresy, 3: 408-9, 9: 1191
Arnold, Eberhart; Arnoldites, 9: 1270
Avvakum, Archpriest, Old Believers and, 14: 1918

Barlaam and Joasaph, Saints, 19: 2687
Barratt, T.B., Pentecostalism and, 14: 2004, 17: 2433
Basilides, 1: 48, 2: 277, 5: 668
Beale, Mgr Herbert, 20: 2767
Beghards, 6: 763, 15: 2148
Beguines, 6: 763, 15: 2148
Bekker, Balthasar, 6: 796
Bell, Arthur L., Mankind United and, 12: 1625
Bogomils, 2: 255-6
Booth, William (founder of Salvation Army), 9: 1227
Boston (Mass.), Christian Science church at, 3: 414, 415, 417, 5: 716
Bridges, William (founder of Plumstead Peculiars), 3: 427, 14: 2001
British Israelites, 11: 1545-6, 15: 2144
Buckels, John (John Bockelson, John Leyden), 6: 762, 17: 2329

Cathars, 3: 358-60, 9: 1192, 16: 2283-5
Basque witchcraft and, 2: 202
Bogomils and, 3: 358
dualism of, 3: 358-9
charismatic movement (Christianity), 17: 2435
Children of Light (associates of George Fox), 7: 947
Children of the Resurrection (Agapemonites), 15: 2092
Christadelphians, 6: 761, 17: 2329
Christian Israelites, (Southcottian sect), 10: 2646
Christian Science, 3: 414-7
animal magnetism and, 3: 414, 416
Mrs Eddy and, 3: 414-7, 5: 715-7
healing and, 3: 414, 416, 5: 715, 716
P.P. Quimby and, 13: 1861-2
Church of the Ark of the Covenant, (Clapton, London), 12: 1724, 15: 2092
Church of the Carmel (sect), 2: 206
Church of the Cheruhim and Seraphim (West Africa), 4: 445, 5: 713
Church of God of Prophecy, 9: 1231
Church of God (Tomlinson), 9: 1231
Church of the Lord, Aladura, 5: 713
Church of the Nazarene (Holiness sect), 9: 1228
Cokelers (Society of Dependants; Puritanical sect), 3: 427
communistic religious movements, 4: 440-5
Convulsionaries (Jansenist group), 4: 454

Copts, Coptic Christianity, 3: 409, 15: 2085
Egyptian influence on, 6: 730, 734

demiurge, 4: 564
in Gnosticism, 4: 564, 5: 668, 8: 1028, 1029
Manichean, 12: 1621
Dispensationalism, 6: 797
Divine Life Society, 17: 2383
Divine Principles (millenarian sect), 5: 604-6
Docetists (Christian heretics), 9: 1191
Doukhobors (religious sect), 4: 445, 5: 620
dualism, 5: 667-71, 6: 791
asceticism and, 17: 2332
Bogomils and, 2: 256, 5: 668
Cathars and, 3: 358-9
Christianity and, 5: 671, 6: 791
Gnosticism and, 5: 668, 669, 6: 791 8: 1028
Manicheans and, 5: 668, 6: 791, 12: 1621
Dunkers (Christian sect), 5: 671

Ebenezer (Amana Society settlement), 4: 442
Ebionites (Nazarenes; Christian sect), 5: 703-4, 12: 1621
Exclusive Brethren (Closed Brethren), 6: 797-8

Father Divine (George Baker), 12: 1724, 1725, 1726
Fenelon, Abbé de, Madame Guyon and, 15: 2150
Fifth Monarchy Men, 4: 542, 17: 2329, 2330
Finney, Charles G., (revivalist), 6: 764, 9: 1227, 1230
Firstborn Church of Christ, 14: 2016
flagellants, 7: 910, 910, 17: 2331
Fox, George (founder of the Quakers), 7: 946-7, 11: 1531
Friends of Truth (associates of George Fox), 7: 947
Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International, 17: 2435

Girling, Mary Anne (founder of Walworth Jumpers), 8: 1021, 20: 2764

Harmony Society (Rappites; religious sect), 4: 441
Heddle, Bishop William (of the Peculiar People), 14: 2001
Hedrickites (Mormon sect), 13: 1773
Hensley, George Went (snake-handler), 17: 2411-2
Hofmann, Melchior (founder of Melchiorites), 6: 762
Holiness movement, 4: 445, 9: 1227-8
enthusiasm and, 6: 762, 763
Methodism and, 9: 1227
Pentecostalist movement and, 9: 1228, 14: 2003
Holy Rollers, 9: 1230-1
Huss, John (Christian preacher), 3: 411, 9: 1193
Hutter (Huter), Jacob, 9: 1269
Hutterian Brethren, 4: 441, 9: 1269-70, 17: 2328

Jacobites (Monophysite sect), 3: 409
Jansenists (Christian heretics), 4: 454
Jeffreys, George and Stephen (Pentecostalists), 14: 2006
Jehovah's Witnesses, 10: 1401-2
baptism and, 2: 198, 10: 1401
Second Coming and, 10: 1401, 17: 2329-30
Jezreel, James Jershom, 10: 1416-7, 17: 2428
Judaizers (Russian heretical sect), 5: 620

McGee, John and William (revivalists), 6: 764
McGready, James (revivalist), 6: 764
McGuire, Bishop George Alexander, 20: 2769
Malaval, Francois (Quietist), 15: 2149
Manicheans, 12: 1621-4
dualism of, 5: 668, 6: 791, 12: 1621
Mankind United, 12: 1625-6
Mariavite Church, 20: 2768
Mathijs, John (Anabaptist), 6: 762
Melchiorites (religious sect), 6: 762
Mennonites (Protestant sect), 4: 441, 12: 1698
messianic movements, 6: 762, 12: 1723-8
Mgijima, Enoch, (African religious leader), 17: 2330
millenarian religious movements:
Jehovah's witnesses as, 10: 1401
messianic movements compared with, 12: 1723
in the Middle Ages, 17: 2326
modalism (Christian heresy), 3: 409
Monophysites (Christian sect), 3: 410
in Ethiopia, 6: 731
Monothelitism (Christian heresy), 3: 410
Montanists (Christian heresy), 6: 762, 13: 1763
Moody, Dwight L., 9: 1227, 1230, 14: 2005
Moravian Brethren (religious sect), 6: 763-4, 9: 1227
Mormons (Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints), 6: 763, 13: 1770-3
Münster (Germany), Anabaptists at, 1: 97, 4: 441, 6: 762-3, 17: 2328, 2329
Myerscough, Thomas (Pentecostalist), 14: 2006

Native American Church, 14: 2016
Nayler, James (Quaker), 6: 763
Nazareth Baptist Church (African messianic sect), 12: 1726-8
Nestorianism, 3: 410, 9: 1191, 12: 1649

Old Believers, 14: 1918-9
Oneida Community (Perfectionists), 4: 440, 445, 6: 764

Parham, Charles F., (Pentecostalist), 14: 2003, 2005
Parr, J. Nelson (Pentecostalist), 14: 2006
Pasqually, Martinez de (founder of Martinists), 12: 1646, 1647
Paulicianism (Christian heresy), 2: 256
Peculiar People (Plumstead Peculiars), 14: 2001
Pentecostalist movement, 14: 2003-6
perfectionism (Christianity), 6: 764, 9: 1227
Pietism (Christianity), 6: 763, 9: 1127
Plymouth Brethren (Open Brethren), 6: 797, 15: 2055
Priscillianism (Christian heresy), 9: 1191

Quakers (Society of Friends), 7: 946-7, 966
Quietism, 15: 2148-9
meditation in, 12: 1680

Rapp, George (founder of Harmony Society), 4: 441-2, 17: 2329
Rastafarians, 12: 1728, 16: 2167
revivalism, 9: 1227, 11: 1575
enthusiasm and, 6: 764
spirit possession and, 6: 764
Rinck, Melchior (Anabaptist), 6: 762
Rothman, Bernard (Anabaptist), 6: 762

sacramentism, 6: 762

Salvation Army, 9: 1227
Second Coming:
Jehovah's Witnesses and, 10: 1401, 17: 2329-30
Plymouth Brethren and, 6: 797
Seventh Day Adventists and, 17: 2329
Shakers and, 17: 2350

Servetus, Michael (Christian heretic), 9: 1193
Seventh Day Adventists, 17: 2329
Shakers (religious sect), 4: 441, 443, 17: 2349-50
Simon Magus, 17: 2372-4
Faust and, 17: 2374
Gnosticism and, 8: 1029, 17: 2372
homunculus and, 9: 1236
singing in the Spirit (Pentecostalism), 17: 2434
Skoptsy (religious sect), 13: 1797, 17: 2331, 2384
Smith, Joseph (founder of Mormons), 11: 1525, 13: 1770-3
Smyth-Pigott, John Hugh (leader of Agapemonites), 12: 1724, 1725-6, 15: 2091, 2092
snake-handling cults, 17: 2409-12
Southcott, Joanna, 17: 2427-8
J.J. Jezreel and, 10: 1416, 17: 2428
supposed pregnancy of, 17: 2329, 2428
Strang, James J. (Mormon leader), 13: 1771
Suso, Heinrich (mystic), 5: 705

Taborites (adventist sect), 17: [illegible]
torture:
of heretics, 9: 1192

Waldenses (Valdesi, Vaudois, Poor Men of Lyons), 3: 411, 20: 2759-62
Walworth Jumpers (Girlingites, Bible Christians, Children of God, English Shakers), 8: 1021, 20: 2764
wandering bishops (episcopi vagantes),

20: 2767-70
Wardley, James (Shaker), 17: 2350
Welsh Revival (1904-5), 14: 2004, 17: 2433
Wesley, John, (preacher), 6: 763-4, 9: 1227
Willermoz, Jean-Baptiste, Order of the Holy City founded by, 12: 1647

21. Occultists & Theosophists

Ammonius (philosopher), 13: 1841
A.M.O.R.C. (Ancient and Mystic Order Rosae Crucis), 16: 2243
Andreae, Johann Valentin, 16: 2247
Anthroposophy, Anthroposophical Society, 18: 2480-1
Ariosophie (esoteric system), 13: 1852
Arundale, Dr George S. (Theosophist), 18: 2590-1, 2591, 2592

Bacon, Roger, 4: 564, 14: 1960-1
Besant, Annie, 2: 218-9, 246
hand of, 14: 1970
Theosophy and, 2: 218, 18: 2590, 2591, 2592
Besold, Christoph, Rosicrucians and, 16: 2245
Blake, William: 2: 172, 239-43, 15: 2100
Golden Dawn influenced by, 2: 242
Swedenborg and, 2: 242, 18: 2519
Blavatsky, Helena Petrovna, 2: 244-7, 18: 2591
Atlantis and, 11: 1514, 20: 2784
Mrs Besant and, 2: 219
Lemuria and, 11: 1514
Mahatmas and, 2: 245-7, 12: 1600
Society for Psychical Research's report on, 2: 247
writings of, 2: 245-7, 20: 2784

Cagliostro, Count Alessandro, 3: 328-9, 10: 1380
Churchward, Colonel James, Mu and, 11: 1514-5
Crawford, Dr W.J., Kathleen Goligher and, 12: 1687
Crookes, Sir William, 4: 485-6
D.D. Home and, 4: 485, 9: 1233, 12: 1687
Spiritualism investigated by, 4: 485-6, 15: 2105
Crowley, Aleister, 4: 498-503, 11: 1583-4, 13: 1758, 16: 2176
Beelzebub invoked by, 2: 211
Cabala and, 3: 327, 4: 459
Dion Fortune and, 7: 940
Gnostic Catholic Mass of, 20: 2757
Golden Dawn and, 4: 499-500, 8: 1044-5
magic defined by, 11: 1578
Mathers and, 2: 211, 4: 499-500, 8: 1044-5
Victor Neuburg and, 17: 2345-6, 19: 2651
Papus and, 14: 1974
Theodor Reuss and, 4: 500-1, 20: 2768
sexual magic and, 4: 500-1, 8: 1046, 15: 2078, 17: 2346-6
trance and, 19: 2650-1
Cummins, Geraldine, 2: 171, 20: 2804

Dee, John, 4: 559-62
scrying by, 4: 560-1, 13: 1749, 17: 2315
Devi, Shrimati Rukmini, 18: 2591, 2592

Fama Fraternitas (Rosicrucian text), 16: 2240-7, 2243
Felkin, Dr R.W., Golden Dawn and, 8: 1045, 16: 2246
Fortune, Dion (Violet Mary Firth), 7: 939-40
on artificial elementals, 11: 1583
on the Devil, 4: 573
on the magic circle, 3: 423
psychic attack and, 7: 939, 15: 2114
Frederick the Great, Freemasonry and, 7: 954
Freemasonry, 7: 950-6
Cagliostro and, 3: 328
French Revolution and, 7: 954
Golden Dawn and, 8: 1043
Illuminati and, 10: 1303-4
Mormonism and, 13: 1773
Nazism and, 13: 1829
Papus and, 14: 1974
Rosicrucians and, 16: 2245

Golden Dawn, Order of the, 8: 1042-6
Blake and, 2: 242
Crowley and, 4: 499-500, 8: 1044-5
Dion Fortune and, 7: 939
holy guardian angel invoked by, 16: 2221
invisibility ritual of, 10: 1356
Mathers and, 8: 1043-6, 12: 1670f, 20: 2843
pentagram and, 14: 2002, 2003
Rosicrucians and, 8: 1043, 1044, 1046, 16: 2245-6
Greater World Christian Spiritualist League, 10: 2660
Guaita, Stanislas de (Rosicrucian), 2: 207
Papus and, 14: 1973

Hitler, Adolf:
astrology and, 13: 1829, 1830, 1831, 1831, 1832
Adolf Lanz and, 13: 1851, 1852
Hoomi, Koot (Mahatma), Mme Blavatsky and, 2: 246, 12: 1600

International Institute of Universal Research and Administration, 12: 1625
International Legion of Vigilantes, 12: 1625
International New Thought Alliance, 13: 1862

Jinarajadasa, C. (Theosophist), 18: 2590, 2591, 2592
Judge, W.Q. (Theosophist), 2: 246

Kummer, Siegfried Adolf (rune occultist), 16: 2251

Levi, Eliphas (Abbe Louis Constant), 10: 1318, 11: 1519-20, 1579
Apollonius of Tyana invoked by, 11: 1519, 13: 1837, 14: 2003
on the astral light, 15: 2114
on Baphomet, 2: 195, 195
on breath, in sexual conquest, 2: 279
Cabala and, 3: 327
'mystery of universal equilibrium', 16: 2218
necromancy and, 13: 1836, 1837
Papus and, 14: 1973, 1974
on the pentagram, 14: 2002, 2003
on the Trinity, 19: 2612
Wronski and, 11: 1519, 20: 2839
Lewis, H. Spencer (Rosicrucian), 16: 2247
List, Guido von, 11: 1537
Armanen sect founded by, 11: 1537
Germanen Order and, 7: 992, 11: 1537
Nazism and, 11: 1537
runes and, 1: 1537, 16: 2251
swastika and, 11: 1537, 18: 2517
Lytton, Sir Edward Bulwer, 11: 1567-8
D.D. Home and, 9: 1233
Eliphas Levi and, 11: 1519-20
Wagner influenced by, 20: 2757

Mackenzie, Kenneth (Masonic Rosicrucian), Eliphas Levi and, 11: 1520
Marby, Friedrich Bernhard, 16: 2251
Martinists, 12: 1646-7
Masters, 12: 1669
Mathers, Samuel Liddell (Macgregor mathers), 2: 211, 4: 499, 8: 1043-6, 1045, 12: 1670

Order of the Gold and Rosy Cross (Richter), 16: 2245
Order of the Templars of the East, 4: 501, 16: 2217, 17: 2346
Osmont, Anne (occultist), 1: 135

Papus (Dr Gerard Encausse), 14: 1973-4
Peladan, Josephin, 7: 207, 14: 1974, 16: 2246, 20: 2757
Peter of Palermo (Italian sorcerer), 10: 1380
Pohl, Hermann, 7: 991, 992, 11: 1537, 13: 1829, 16: 2251

Ram, N. Sri (Theosophist), 18: 2591, 2592
Rasputin, 15: 2157-60
Reuss, Theodor:
Crowley and, 4: 500, 20: 2768
Illuminati and, 10: 1304
Papus and, 14: 1974, 20: 2768
Wagner and, 20: 2758
Richter, Sigmund (Sincerus Renatus: Rosicrucian), 16: 2245
Rose Cross, 16: 2238
Fludd and, 16: 2241
Rosicrucians and, 16: 2238
Rosenkreutz, Christian, 12: 1669, 16: 2241-2
Rosicrucians, 12: 1669, 16: 2240-7
rune occultism, 16: 2251
Russell, G.W. (A.E.), 16: 2252-3

Secret Chiefs, 16: 2241-2
Secret Doctrine, The (Blavatsky), 2: 247
Societas Rosicruciana in Anglia (Soc. Ros.), 8: 1043, 16: 2240, 2246
Stauff, Philipp, 7: 991, 11: 1537
Steiner, Rudolf, 18: 2480-1
Anthroposophy and, 18: 2480
Rosicrucianism and, 16: 2247
Theosophy and, 18: 2480
Stella Matutina (esoteric order), 8: 1045-6, 16: 2246
Stonehenge, 11: 1522, 12: 1692, 18: 2487-8
aerial view, 5: 656
Apollo and, 5: 659
astronomical aspects of, 5: 659, 18: 2488
Druids and, 5: 659, 18: 2488
modern, 5: 655, 659-61, 13: 1743
Merlin and, 12: 1706, 1708
syncretism (definition), 18: 2538

theosophy, Theosophical Society, 2: 218-9, 245, 246, 18: 2590-2
Mrs Besant and, 2: 218-9, 18: 2590-2
Mme Blavatsky and, 2: 217, 245, 18: 2590
Golden Dawn and, 8: 1043
Krishnamurti and, 2: 219, 18: 2591-2
Papus and, 14: 1973
G.W. Russell and, 16: 2252
St-Germain and, 16: 2269
Rudolf Steiner and, 2: 217, 18: 2480
Thomas Taylor and, 18: 2585
A.E. Waite and, 20: 2759
Yeats and, 20: 2843
Tree of Life, 19: 2654, 2661
Cabalist (sefirotic tree), 3: 324-5, 325, 14: 1993
in modern magic, 3: 327

United States of America: 19: 2691-8
Rosicrucianism in, 16: 2247

Vollrath, Hugo (occultist), 13: 1829

Waite, A.E., 20: 2759
Cabala and, 3: 327, 20: 2759
Golden Dawn and, 8: 1045, 20: 2759
Tarot and, 3: 345, 18: 2568-71
Westcott, Dr Wynn, Golden Dawn and, 8: 1043-5, 19: 2731
Wirth, Oswald (occultist), 2: 207, 3: 344, 14: 1974, 18: 2568
Wood, Ernest (Theosophist), 18: 2590-1
Wronski, Joseph Maria Hoene, 11: 1519, 20: 2838-9

Yeats, W.B., 8: 1045, 1045, 20: 2842-4
Blake and, 2: 241-2, 20: 2843
on Mme Blavatsky, 2: 247
collective unconscious and, 20: 2844
Golden Dawn and, 3: 242, 8: 1044-5, 20: 2843
S.L. Mathers and, 20: 2843
G.W. Russell and, 16: 2252
Theosophical Society and, 20: 2843